KUNJU'S MOTHER.

By Mrs. W. T. Reid.

The worker lies stricken; one of the brave women of Korea is doomed to work no more. Paralysis and a stroke are the sequel of a bad attack of flu this winter, and Ugami is obliged now to lie down indefinitely, cut off in the midst of her usefulness by the disease inflicted by an overtaxed heart on the body and brain that have worked too lavishly and generously. It is the punishment of the toiler who gives himself for others.

She is in her daughter's home, Kunju. For her, Ugami sacrificed all her earnings, only keeping herself alive, and Kunju is an example of what an unselfish Korean mother can make of her daughter. She is young, attractive, equipped with the culture and technical requirements that make her a good kindergarten teacher. In that profession she has an assured position and steady income at Holston Girls' School. About six years ago, Kunju was married according to Korean custom, and married well, her husband being a relative by marriage of Kital, the pillar of the church in Songdo, contractor and the missionaries' business friend. Kunju thus became well connected and enjoys a pleasant and cultured social circle.

During the last two years, Kunju lost both her husband and father-in-law. She has two little boys who are quite attractive, and always clean and nicely dressed. There are no husband's relatives to share the house, so it belongs to her, and it is a very good one, which has four rooms, woodshed, kitchen and all conveniences, and there is an outer yard which surrounds the house, and that in turn is outlined by a hedge. Thus double privacy is provided, which is the Korean's ideal.

With those who live from hand to mouth in one room of course the ideal is sadly violated, and we all know ideals depend on money to support them.

I have been to see Ugami. Of course Kunju loves her and will do her best to make her life endurable, but how much is the question. She is young, she may marry again, the two babies are her chief concern. These things take their place in the scales against Ugami, who is now a burden to herself, and she is worrying now that she cannot "work."

The husband who abandoned Ugami long ago came back in recent years, when she had regular work and a roof over her head in the hospital yard. He condescended to share the roof, the warm floor and the rice, but that is all. Like many other Korean men, he feels no obligations. He had money at one time, but spent it on dancing girls. He has no money now but a tiny dole of wages for literary work he does downtown. He is one of the Korean men who is passing with the old Korea. He is between the "close up" and "fade away." He exists, that is all, so he is negative.

I cannot probe into the intimate reasons why Ugami has to work; there are reticenses which lie in the way when love and money are discussed. We took her word for it and promised her an old stove and I was becoming active in getting up a bakery trade for her, which she might carry on at home, for she is a good cook. Several Korean gentlemen were interested, for so many of them would like to buy foreign food.

Thus disappointment will often check the best efforts, and we must resign ourselves to the inevitable.

THE OLD CHURCH BELL.

By Margaret E. Sangster, in the Christian Herald.

The old church bell is silent, now,
Forgotten, cast aside,
And from the hurried, daily life
A something sweet has died.
A something subtle and remote,
That yet told, every hour,
That heaven is a garden place
Where love is all a-flower.

The old church bell once rang for joy,
And once it rang for pain,
Its message sang across the town
Like cooling, summer rain.
It gave a promise and a prayer,
It spoke of swift release—
It murmured through the clouds of war,
And thrilled, at last, to peace!

It touched the town in times of fear,
Of want and agony—
It made God's message very clear,
There was no mystery
In its clear voice, there was no doubt,
Its song brushed care aside—
It whispered to the weary ones,
"His love is deep, and wide!"

The old church bell lies grimed with dust,
Folk pass it, heedless, by—
And yet it still tells, silently,
Of love that cannot die.
It tells of service and of faith,
That, nothing daunted, live,
And if its voice might speak, I know,
It would chime, "I forgive!"

POLICY OF GREENWOOD DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE.

1. We urge that each League have a written policy and that the League follow the policy faithfully when adopted.

2. We would suggest that in making out a policy the League make it to suit the local conditions, and practical. Make the program fit the field with the program.

3. Furthermore, we would suggest that each League consider the value of the study of the doctrines peculiar to Methodism, and that each League study to some extent the history of our church.

4. We urge that all Leagues carry out the Standard of Efficiency, hold the Council and business meetings with regularity each month, and a program of wholesome entertainment and recreation be arranged for the year.

5. Have a simple and practical plan, and work out the plan.

Adopted by the Greenwood District Epworth League Institute, Greenwood, Miss., Sept. 12.

JUNIOR LEAGUE GIVES PLAY.

The Junior Epworth League of the McDonoghville Methodist church, under the direction of Mrs. F. B. Hill, gave a Japanese play last Friday on the parsonage lawn. It was thoroughly appreciated, and the program was filled in with travel post cards and snapshots taken by the pastor and his wife on their recent trip to Europe. A machine lent by the Harcol Company, of New Orleans, displayed the views on a screen. Forty dollars of the net proceeds were donated to the amount needed for the superannuate fund.

By request, the play was given by the Junior League to the inmates of the Algiers Naval Station. The large auditorium was filled with men who fully appreciated the visit. The naval staff say that when the McDonoghville Leaguers visit the station there is no need to heat up a crowd to listen, as they know some good, enjoyable program is in store.

F. B. HILL.

HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT IT?

One of the latest demonstrations of the fact that Leaguers do things well and in a strictly up-to-date manner, is the October number of the Epworth Era, which is written largely by the Leaguers themselves. This is strictly a Leaguers' number—"nuff" said. You know it is good and is something of which every one of us should be justly proud.

Some of its other interesting features, aside from the fact that most of the articles are written by the Leaguers, are the Epworth Cross, a new department containing new ideas and suggestions for handling the various work of your chapter more efficiently. The Era pays for all material which it accepts for publication in this department. Send in some trial plan of yours; if adopted, it will mean a check for you, and your helpful suggestion is passed on to the other fellow. All Leaguers are invited to help make this department one of the best.

Listen to this: "A Missionary Play, complete," is another interesting feature for the October number. Use this play for your own League entertainment. It is a "hit." This issue will contain a list and review of all the Mission Study books. You will want to see this list of books and learn of their contents.

Now last, but in no wise least, is another department of the Era, and it's a "hummer." Here's the name—"Cracks from a Dumb Bell, by the office Dumb Belle." You will be surprised at the large number of "dumb Bells" in this world when you read this page. All kinds of "dumb bells" are contributors to this page, big, little, old, young, fat, lean, and some just plain "dumb bells"—and "dumb belladonnas," too.

Send in your jokes and cracks for this page. $5 will be paid for the best joke, $2 for next best, and $1 for third choice. You can ring one of these choice. You can ring one of these prizes. Try it and convince yourself.

The flowers of knowledge are not gathered in one big bunch, but rather plucked from the garden of life one at a time.—Exchange.

SUFFERED SINCE YOUNG GIRL

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Texas.—"Words cannot express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, sleepy feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine."—Mrs. J. B. HOLLEMAN, 2214 E. Marshal Street, Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age.

It is a dependable medicine for troubles common to women. Such symptoms as Mrs. Holleman had are relieved by correcting the cause of the trouble. For sale by druggists everywhere.

FROM BYHALIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On the night of last Easter Sunday, Rev. John W. Robertson, of our Conference, came to our help at Byhalia, and for ten days gave us some stirring messages. He did not fail to attack sin as sin, and made clear what he was talking about. It is said, "a hint to the wise is sufficient," but if that is true, then many are not wise when it comes to preaching, for it takes plain facts, repeated and repeated again, to stop some things. Those things most common among church folks, some church folks are seemingly satisfied not to heed the gospel of Christ, or ever seem to think that they may be in the way of any one. If a hint should face them, they will say, "O well, there is no harm in this," and, as Robertson said, to make folks understand he is talking about them, yes, their own sins, he reminded them it became necessary to strike often in the same place, until they are aware he means for them to know they are the offenders. A thing practiced among them became a target, and although it was engaged in often before the meeting, it has since waned and seems no more, and it is a joy to us all.

At an early stage of the meeting a Young People's choir was organized, and although some rebuff came to it, there were enough resolute young ladies who felt the need of its life and interest in its progress to organize a weekly practice, which was continued until after a few weeks, when Mrs. Charlie Partee came home from Biloxi, and was asked to take charge of the choir, which she did with much interest, and not only taught the young ladies who played, but also the young men on the cornet and saxophone, the music; but also voice as well, to the whole membership of the choir. All the young people of all three of the churches of the town are members, and work in perfect union, and seeming delight. It is a great treat to hear them sing, and I am safe in saying there is no better in our country than this choir.

Our thanks are greatly due Mrs. Partee for her great interest and loyalty shown our young people in this great kindness, which is a gratis work; but its value is of great worth to our town, and should have the highest place in our worship, for who among us can excel them? They sing every Sunday morning for our Sunday school, that is the Methodist part of them, and it has proved a drawing card to our church in this capacity.

Our meeting at Fountain Head was begun on the fourth Sunday in July, and was limited to one week, as other neighborhood churches followed as an old custom for many years. But the Lord was with us, and the people co-operated, and it seemed they became reconciled to the fact that they were willing for the pastor to do his own preaching, as I heard no complaint against it. I baptized seven into the church, organized a weekly prayer meeting, some new family altars were erected, and an Epworth League was begun, which seems to be full of interest and good progress.

At Emory, we began on the second Sunday in August, and again limited as at Fountain Head, we were busy, with God's help and the co-operation of the folks here, so that the few days were greatly filled with rich blessings from our heavenly Father's bounty. I baptized four here, and received one by letter into the church. We have several family altars, organized a weekly prayer meeting, and the people seem happy, and I am sure I am. God has greatly blessed us this year, and we are happy because we know it. To him be all the praise.

us: 'What did you do, what did you do when you saw men, women and children go down?'" Will we, like this man, say: "I did not do anything," and be driven from the presence of God, or will it be said of us, as of Mary of old, "she hath done what she could?"

—G. A. Perkins,
Of the American Bible Society.

AT THE CAPITAL OF A CHRISTIAN NATION.

"Sunday Parties in Capital Gain in Favor," reads the headline on a society page. The news printed beneath shows that everything, from dinner parties to dancing parties, is being given by persons who are presumed to be respectable, but who are not respectable enough to show respect for one of the distinctive Christian Anglo-Saxon institutions, the Sabbatical day of worship and rest.

Dancing parties in high circles at Washington on Sunday are a disgrace to those who participate in them. The excuse given for this is that they may squeeze in all the society functions they can before Lent! To keep Lent they dishonor the Christian Sabbath, because it is more fashionable to keep Lent, and rapidly becoming less fashionable to keep the Sabbath. We are glad to say that, so far as the society news discloses, none of our government officials have lent their presence to these affairs.

In France, for example, they hold their elections on Sunday. But, then, look at France! It is probably no mere coincidence that the nations freest from the world blight to-day are those nations which have reverently observed the first day of the week.—The Watchman-Examiner.

We American Christians had better observe well how we regard God's holy day!

CHURCH INSURANCE.

The National Mutual Church Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill., has appointed Rev. J. H. Shumaker, of Nashville, Tenn., as general agent, southern department, to represent the company for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Mr. Shumaker is well known to all Southern Methodists as the general secretary of the Methodist Benevolent Association since its organization, twenty-one years ago. The "Methodist Mutual," as it is called for short, had as its first agent for the Southern department Rev. J. J. Lafferty, D.D., of Virginia. After his death, Judge Wilhur F. Barclay, of Louisville, Ky., was appointed, and at his death his widow, Mrs. Alice Hargrove Barclay, succeeded to the agency. Since her death, which occurred a few months ago, the company has secured the services of Mr. Shumaker, who will conduct the affairs of the Agency from the offices of the Methodist Benevolent Association, 808 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

As evidenced by the numerous inquiries coming to the Methodist Benevolent Association, our Methodist people have long wanted Nashville to be headquarters for a dependable insurance company for fire insurance for Methodist churches, parsonages and property.

Both the "Methodist Benevolent" and the "Methodist Mutual" are entirely mutual, are not stock companies, have no special agents, make no personal profit, carry on their business by correspondence, give insurance at cost; the Methodist Benevolent, Life, Annuity and Casualty for the members of the Southern Methodist Church; the Methodist Mutual insures against fire, lightning and windstorm for the Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Methodist churches, parsonages and other church property, and ministers' libraries, and homes of our people who build and sustain our plants.

The Methodist Mutual was incorporated by order of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1896. It carries, at this time, about $70,000,000 of insurance on church property, over $9,000,000 of which is carried on the property of the Southern Methodist Church.

Address—"The Centennial Celebration," President George S. Sexton.

The formal program given above is but an indication of the interest manifested in this momentous event in the life of a historic institution. The people were there—great numbers of them from the city of Shreveport, from neighboring communities, from all over the State of Louisiana, and from other States. The spacious chapel, in which the opening exercises were held, was crowded to its capacity, and those who arrived late had to be content with standing room. The campus was covered with automobiles, reminding the alumni and former students of the "Old Centenary" at Jackson, La., of the days when the campus was similarly crowded with vehicles—but in those days with carriages, buggies, and wagons. Mingling with the visitors was a host of students just entering upon the work of the one hundredth session—more than 300 of them already enrolled, with others constantly arriving. It is the confident prediction of President Sexton that the attendance for this session, including that of the summer term, will exceed 500.

There was nothing connected with the occasion to suggest the feebleness of old age; on the other hand, there was an atmosphere of joy, of hopefulness, of eager anticipation of greater things yet to be. The president, the members of the faculty, the student body, the visitors were eager, expectant, enthusiastic. To be sure, there was a feeling of solemn and reverent appreciation of the noble history of the century-old institution; but people were thinking and talking of the century to come, rather than of the one that has passed.

There is no getting away from the fact that Centenary College has made a great contribution to the life of Louisiana and Mississippi, and, in a general way at least, to even a larger constituency. In a day when educational institutions were all too few, Centenary was recognized as a great center of learning, and it drew students from hundreds of miles around. Some of these students became known throughout the nation, and many of them achieved distinction within more limited areas. As is well known, Jefferson Davis and Judah P. Benjamin at one time attended its classes; and a great multitude of men who made their mark in the ministry, in the professions, and in business received their education in its classic halls. Measured by what it has actually done, Centenary deserves to be ranked with our greatest colleges.

There is no getting away from the fact, either, that Centenary is entering upon—has already entered upon—a new era of greatness. Its growth within the past five years is perhaps without parallel in the educational history of the nation. After a period of readjustment in its new location, during which it almost seemed at times that it could not weather the storms of financial adversity, it has arrived at a period where the outlook is altogether encouraging and inspiring. At one time, as was so aptly said by President Scales of the Board of Trustees, about all those who were directly related to the institution could do was to "stand fast," and hope for the coming of a better day. It is to the everlasting credit and honor of those upon whom thus rested heavy responsibilities that they did stand fast; it was they who made possible the notable achievements of the present and the greater possibilities of the future. They have won for themselves an imperishable place in the history of religious education in Louisiana—they are among the founders of the "Greater Centenary."

But due credit to those who have gone before does not detract from the credit due the present president, Dr. George S. Sexton, for the marvelous results he has accomplished within the few years he has been at the head of the institution. By his complete consecration to the task to which he was called, by his indefatigable efforts, by his financial genius, by his unfailing optimism, by his ability to make friends for the cause of Christian education, he has added hundreds of thousands of dollars to the endowment fund, added several buildings, largely increased the equipment, enlarged and strengthened the faculty, and brought the student enrollment to a point where

CENTENNIAL OF CENTENARY.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

One hundred years of service,
One hundred years of toil—
Our Alma Mater liveth,
Through travail and turmoil.

Old Centenary College,
Sits proudly on her hills,
Dispensing truth and knowledge,
And destiny fulfills.

Her star of hope still shineth,
O'er fields of glory won;
No loyal son repineth,
Nor counts the task yet done.

More grandeur and more glory,
Lie hid in years before,
Her past is but a story,
What Time yet holds in store.

Her classic halls aboundeth
With youth and maidens fair,
Whose hurrying feet swift soundeth
To scale her altar-stair.

Old Mother, dear, we greet thee,
On this, your natal day;
May all great blessings meet thee
Forever and for aye!

MY PRAYER.

By Aubrey Wooton.

How excellent, Almighty Lord, is thine own matchless name;
To-day and yesterday thou art forever just the same;
Thou hast a lien upon my life that I can never pay,
But let me work it out, O, Lord, in my own humble way.

I'm sorry for these sins of mine, forgive, O, Lord, forget;
I want to prove my gratitude, if thou wilt let me yet;
I come to pay thee homage, Lord, let me thy servant be,
And dedicate and consecrate my life anew to thee.

Thou art the Author of my gifts, I give thee all the praise,
For thou hast been so good to me, and in so many ways;
I thank thee for thy blessings, Lord, thy mercy and thy care,
Be with me now and evermore—this is my humble prayer.

A NEW EMPHASIS UPON CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

By Charles L. Goodell, Secretary, Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism.

To further the spirit of worship and devotion, many denominations are uniting to stress the period from Oct. 5 to Easter as a period of emphasis on Church Attendance and Enlistment for Church Membership. The first Sunday in October is to he observed as Rally Sunday, this date being suggested by the Federal Council of the Churches because it had already been decided upon by more than one denomination. On that date it is recommended that from all our pulpits a message be sent forth, by lips that burn with the ardor of it, which shall remind the people that man does not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. It will be a challenge to the ministers of America to realize that a waiting community is hanging upon their word, not asking simply for a human message, but inquiring, "Is there any message from the Lord?" They do not want to see a little man and hear only a human message; they want to hear a message from the heart of God and see Jesus only. A service that meets this need will arouse the dullest heart and bring back to the careless and indifferent the challenge which they felt in the days when life was young and holy impulses filled their souls.

One of the methods especially urged in this movement is a systematic plan in the local churches for the friendly visitation of the entire community by Christian men and women whose hearts the Lord has touched. These visitors will welcome back those who have been away during the summer, will urge those who have become indifferent to the church to return, and invite those outside into its fellowship. In many cases they are to go out two by two, as the first seventy were sent, and they will have the same note of achievement as that which gladdened the Master's heart.

In the days when the open saloon filled the land—a day which, thank God, our children can hardly remember—there used to be a sign over the side door, "Family Entrance." Let us take that sign off the saloon and put it on the church door. Let the children and the old folks walk into the house of God together. Let them fill the family pew as in the old days. It will give us a sense of solidarity—a sense of united purpose—in spiritual things, of which we have been losing sight.

It is easy for men to drift, to go with the crowd, to travel in the line of least resistance, to do the things which require least of purpose and conviction. So it has happened that in the winter it was too cold to go to church; in the summer it was too hot; in the spring it was too wet; and the golden days of autumn challenged men to the golf links and the fields. So the days passed and the sense of worship and of duty atrophied and life was one round of the secular with no touch of uplifting forces to break the sordid ties of a selfish life.

It is to challenge the average man that this movement is being put on foot by those who love the church. The church of God ought to be the dearest place on earth to any man, outside of his own home. If he had any Christian training at all, he himself was dedicated to God in his infancy. At the altars of the church he took the most solemn pledge which human lips can utter, and when he chose the dearest heart on earth to be his own, he stood with her at the altars of the church and asked the benediction of God, at the hands of God's minister, to rest upon the new life; and when his own little children came, if he had not utterly forgotten the training of his youth, he also dedicated them to God. And if, in the passing of the years, the orange blossoms changed to immortelles and the wedding march to a funeral dirge, he halted his dead for a little time at God's altar before he carried the sacred dust to God's acre. One would think that a church consecrated by such memories would be a dear and sacred thing, and that no man would turn from it unless direst necessity forced him to.

Here is an institution connected with the most sacred things of life. Let us make men see that they cannot shirk it or ignore it without being incalculably poorer for such slight. The greatest of scientists lost his love for music and poetry because he ignored them, and any man who plays fast and loose with the holiest things of the soul will grow poorer and poorer thereby in those values which are infinitely greater than those current in the market place.

Now, as of old, men will find the answer to prayer in a changed countenance. Life seems different with the eternal in view. Many a man in God's sanctuary has felt the iron leave his soul, and the breath of new hope and cheer has brought him solace and stirred him to nobler life. Can anything be bigger business than the cultivation of such an attitude in the minds of men?

The response which is coming to this special effort of the churches is most heartening. Many of our governors, judges, educators and financiers have already sent articles expressing their conviction of the importance of the church and its services. One of the great Chicago papers has been publishing through the last few days successive messages from the great leaders of American thought—full-page advertisements, which have been gladly paid for by those who realize the importance of this movement and wish to help it forward. Messages from Washington, Lincoln, Wilson, Roosevelt, Harding and Coolidge have been sent out under their portraits, and others are to follow. Thus millions of people are listening to the driving conviction which moved the lives of the men who made America what it is.

Messages are being put into the hands of pastors throughout the country on such themes as "Has the Church a Place in Your Life?" "The Builder of Better Lives," "Why Attend and Support the Church?" "The Church Our Home," "The Church Indespensable to Human Welfare," and similar topics. The secretaries of Federations of Churches in the various cities are joining heartily in this concerted movement.

If the church is to be a church for democracy, it must show itself democratic. Its invitation must be to all sorts and conditions of men; it must know no high and no low, and it cannot be indifferent to anything that concerns humanity. Its Master was a lover of men and he went about doing good. He exhorted men to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and the church that is to be his interpreter to men must have his passion and his yearning to bless and serve. It is this thought which is behind this whole movement to bring the people under the influence of a Gospel that is athrob with human interest and spiritual power. It will not stop with a "Go to Church Sunday," it will go on for Tuesday and Wednesday and every other day of the week and of the month, a great movement which shall reach its culmination on Easter Day and still go forward to deepening convictions of spiritual things, marking, please God, a new day in the history of his church.

MEMBERSHIP PLANS FOR SOUTHERN METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOLS THIS AUTUMN.

By Rev. John W. Shackford, D.D., Secretary, General Sunday School Board.

What Jesus said of the institution of the Sabbath, that it is made for man and not man for the institution, is true of every institution, of every plan, of every program. Loyalty to Jesus Christ means loyalty to his brethren and to his little ones. The church must never forget this. Its teaching, its preaching, its organization, its methods are all that folks may come into the fullness of the life that is in Christ.

No church in America has a finer Sunday school program than our own. Nowhere are there signs of more earnest effort to make the Sunday school all that it ought to be. In no church are there so many officers and teachers devotedly trying to equip themselves for the service which the church has committed to their hands. But all of this has its central purpose in the pupil, and this means not only the pupil who is in the Sunday school, but also the pupil who ought to be in the Sunday school and is not. To be sure, we must first attempt to do our duty by those who are already members of the Sunday school, yet the Christian church can never stop short of trying to reach the last man, the last woman, and the last child.

It is true that our Sunday school growth has shown an encouraging increase during recent years. But has this increase been what it ought to have been? What of the vast numbers of spiritually destitute and religiously illiterate boys and girls growing up all around us? That is the problem that stares us in the face wherever there are unshepherded multitudes. At the sight of them the heart of the Master is moved to compassion. With little children growing up who are denied their spiritual inheritance, can we be content, even though our own Sunday school is first-class in every way?

It is this problem of the unreached that the General Sunday School Board is seeking to place upon the conscience of our workers everywhere. We are saying to our army of faithful Sunday school workers, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields that are white but neglected."

The organized Sunday school will not find it a difficult task to survey its community and discover those within its reach who ought to be brought into its membership. Nor will it find it in any wise impossible through personal influences of one sort and another to reach most of those who are discovered and to bring a large proportion of them into the membership of the Sunday school.

It stands to reason that this must be done not only thoroughly but wisely. Provision must be made for those who are brought in and care must be taken not to embarrass the Sunday school work that is already under way by bringing in large numbers who cannot be assimiliated into the organization. On the other hand, provisions must be made to enlarge the organization, to select and equip teachers who can take care of new classes, and to distribute new members with such care as to prevent deterioration of the work already being done while the proper service is rendered to the new recruits.

During the last few years followiug the rapid increase in membership at the close of the war, many of our Sunday schools have been busily occupied with the effort to assimilate and develop the pupils already enrolled. It is not unlikely that in many instances there has not meanwhile been the proper effort to enlist new members. In the opinion of the General Sunday School Board, the time has come to call special attention to the need for increased emphasis upon ingathering, and, to urge our pastors, our superintendents, and all of our Sunday school workers to give due consideration to the importance of this matter. The Board suggests that plans be made for this membership campaign, proper surveys taken, that the Sunday school organization be strengthened to take care of the possible increase, that there be provided if necessary additional room in which to house new members, and that a thoroughgoing and persistent effort be made to bring into the Sunday school those for whom the local school is properly responsible and to take care of them in the school and assimilate them as rapidly as possible into the work and life of the school.

Let us see that this movement for an increased enrollment in our Sunday schools is carried forward with thoroughness and vigor. Let us bear in mind that this campaign for new members has large significance, not only for the future strength of our Sunday schools, hut also for the future increase in our church membership, as well as for the strengtheniug of all the lines for which the church stands.

We must not he coutent to reach thirty or forty or even fifty per cent of the people and teach them the things of Christ. If we are to build a Christian civilization and establish the foundations of a triumphant Kingdom of God, we must not be content with anything that stops short of reaching all the people and teaching them the things of Christ Jesus.

Those who are interested in plans for Sunday school membership increase should write to the General Sunday School Board for special pamphlet literature giving practical suggestions for the campaign.

AT THE PRISON CONGRESS IN SALT LAKE CITY.

By Rev. H. S. Johns, Chaplain, Louisiana State Penitentiary.

Mormonism is a spectacular religion—spectacular in its origin; spectacular in the visions of Joseph Smith, the founder; the plates of gold; Smith's desire to run for the presidency of the United States in 1844, his ambitions, etc., all appeal to certain people.

Salt Lake City is a spectacular city, with the widest streets and longest blocks of any city in the world; its magnificent temple, which cost $4,000,000; its tabernacle, seating 10,000 people, and its great pipe organ, the largest in the world.

Then other buildings might bo mentioned—the executive building for the president of the church, trimmed inside with transparent onyx, which, it is said, cost $10,000.

Delegates were invited to call on President Huber J. Grant, and in a party of ten or twelve I called one morning. The president happened to be out, but his secretary was the pink of politeness, and handed to each one a short history of the Mormon church, from the first visions of Joseph Smith as a mere boy of 15, to the present time. It was quite interesting.

Of course, most of the delegates visited the tabernacle, and saw all the sights, had rides, and also an opportunity to float in the great salt lake, all free. For myself I declined the swim in the lake, as the weather had turned quite cool, and I was willing to take the word of the others about floating in the briny water. To see was sufficient.

The Prison Congress was instructive, entertaining, and enthusiastic. It is good to he a prison worker, and assist in salvaging human souls. In spite of fearful crimes committed, it is evident that but for humane and religious work in prison, more crime would be committed.

Having been elected at Boston the president of the Chaplains' Section, it fell to me to prepare the program for the general session of Sunday night. The general session is when all the sections unite in a general program. Each section had a general session, as well as its own section meetings. My program for Sunday evening, Aug. 17, was an address hy Dr. Hastings H. Hart, of New York City, on "Reforming the Criminal," and an address by Rt. Rev. Arthur W. Moulton, Episcopal bishop of Utah, on "Breaking Bands." They were both great addresses.

The sermon for Sunday morning of the Prison Congress was a double-barreled affair, a sermon hy Rev. Dr. Klein, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Apostle Richards, of the Mormon Church. Dr. Klein was very brilliant, oratorical, and pleasing; the sermon by Apostle Richards was plain, slowly delivered, and full of truth, aiming to state that the cure of crime lies in reaching the children. He said most children are either marred or made by the time they are 8 years old.

Perhaps the most telling address made at the Congress was delivered by Hon. Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrant, Assistant Attorney General, of Washington, D. C., on "Co-ordination of Effort in Crime Reduction." She represented the prosecution of offenders in illegal rum and opium traffic, and the way she flayed those who tried to sidetrack her by irrelevant questioning was delightful.

Altogether, the session was one of the best I ever attended. Besides myself, Mrs. Dr. Maud Loeber, of New Orleans; Prof. G. C. Gill, Superintendent of the Reform School of Monroe, La., and Miss Charlotte MacLeod, of Lake Charles, La., social worker, attended.

Rev. J. L. Sutton, of Jackson, Miss., was also in attendance, who captured the next session for Jackson, Miss., and I take this method to invite all the ministers and social workers of our section to plan to attend in October or November, 1925.

Rabbi Moses L. Sedar, of Aliston, Mass., Jewish Welfare Chaplain for Massachusetts, was elected president of the Chaplains' Association for the next year. Dr. Frank Moore, Superintendent, New Jersey Stato Reformatory, Rahway, N. J., was elected president of the Prison Congress for the next year. He is a former minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church (perhaps still in orders), who took up prison work many years ago, and has found it "worth while."

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

By Payton A. Sowell.

When one is "on the grounds," and sees the beach, the trees, the highway, the electric cars, hears the hand-clapping of the waves, and the messages of good cheer coming in from the Gulf stream, it is easy to think, "surely this is none other than the house of God." And when in the face of every child and adult, he sees "peace" written, some way he believe these are the "children of God." Yet, when 500 miles separate from the place, it is as easy to see all this in the smoothness and artistic flow, as if it were a dream.

On the grounds, every day is as Sunday. Still, there is one day of the seven that is thoroughly marked and differentiated from the other six—and on the Camp Ground that day is Sunday.

The past summer seemed fuller and richer in good things than for many years. It is true, nothing will, for a few years yet, hide or obliterate the memories of the "good old camp meeting days"—days of Keener, McFerrin, Jones, Matthews, Marvin, Carter, Parker, and hundreds of as worthy preachers, who stood as ambassadors, in those vanishing years. And so a few yet can see the faces of the saints of long ago, from New Orleans, Mobile, and the interior of Mississippi, as they sang and prayed here.

With the early days of June came the Divinity School, conducted by Dr. Carley. Though disappointments came because certain men could not be present, there has scarcely been a better session or finer sermons and lectures.

The camp meeting came with its appointed hour, and Elder Roberts' heart was gratified at good results.

Through many quiet Sunday mornings there came, while the sea sang on, unpretentious hours of sincere worship. Every man who spoke seemed to have been closeted with some "invisible instructor," who gave him the message to deliver from the pulpit where the "giants" of other times had stood.

The bell every Sunday morning called the quiet dwellers on the ground to Sunday school, where Mrs. (Dr.) Brown conducted the program for over a hundred people.

At the evening hours on Sundays scores of children and elder persons watched the clocks, and listened for the bell, that they might not miss Mrs. Brown's inimitable "Story Hour"—and many were the happy faces and pleasant words at the close of these "story hours."

Every child was ready at the word of Mrs. Brown, to sing or speak; to them the hours came slowly to that evening hour.

WHY I BELIEVE WE OUGHT TO REACH 250,000 ADDITIONAL SCHOOL MEMBERS WITHIN THE NEXT TWELVE MONTHS.

By J. R. Pepper.

First—Because 250,000 and more are ready to he reached if the proper effort is put forth in the communities where the unreached are.

Second—Because if the Sunday school and church does not reach the great numbers yet unreached, some other agency will reach them, and quite probably for evil rather than good purposes.

Third—Because, in reaching the yet unreached, scores of communities would be actually transformed from places of vice and temptation to youth, to scenes of constructive service to God and ministry of good to fellow-men.

Fourth—Because the participants in such service would find many surprises of success and blessing to their own lives that would minister encouragement to continuous effort.

Fifth—Because the added strength to the Sunday school and church would impress non-members in any community with the earnestness of those engaged in such work, and in the end win many to the cause hy the very impact made by such large and increasing force.

Sixth—Because it will enable many a Sunday school, on account of increased financial ability, to secure equipment and methods hitherto unknown; and project its work far beyond anything yet undertaken.

Seventh—Last and most important of all, because the Lord has plainly commanded his teachers and preachers to reach every creature everywhere with his saving gospel message, and we will fail to keep holy covenant with him if we do not seek with much earnestness the last one that can be reached in every community.

He who climbs above the cares of the world and turns his face to his God has found the sunny side of life. The world's side of the hill is chill and freezing to a spiritual mind, but the Lord's presence gives warmth of joy which turns winter into summer.—Howard Crosby.

THE CENTENARY OF CENTENARY COLLEGE, SHREVEPORT, LA.

By Rev. Frank B. Hill.

An announcement was made to the members of the Louisiana Annual Conference, held at Bogalusa, La., that next year, 1925, the centenary of our college at Shreveport would be celebrated. This year, 1925, will also be the centenary year of the establishment of Methodism in New Orleans. It is of the college that I wish to write.

My interest in the college really began with my appointment as pastor in charge to Jackson, La., in 1920. Of course I responded before that to appeals made, that if there were any prospective pupils in my charge, I would round them up. And I did so with all the earnestness I could, using one argument above any other. I knew little about the faculty at that time, but I did know Dr. R. H. Wynn and his wife. And the argument I used was that any pupil sent to Centenary College under the supervision of Dr. Wynn would be safely guarded as far as morals and Christian education went. I always think the face a pretty reliable index of disposition and character; I am no flatterer, but sincere in saying that I never looked into Dr. Wynn's face without being convinced he was not only a scholar, but possessed every trait required of a Christian gentleman. I used the same argument with Mansfield College and friend Bobbit. I knew more about Mansfield College than Centenary, because I had visited Mansfield at that time oftener, preached there, and addressed the college students twice. I can use the same argument to-day with Dr. George Sexton and Mrs. Sexton, as I know them best of all those mentioned.

But to return to Jackson, La. The parsonage there, first used by the parents of the honored editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, where Henry T. played and romped as a little boy, overlooks the grounds of old Centenary College. You can see the ruined building from the parsonage front gallery; but the professors' houses (now pulled down) were directly opposite. The street on which the parsonage stands runs parallel with the college grounds. The students christened that street with the name of "Silk Stocking Avenue." They say it combined the fashionable Rotten Row of England, the Fifth Avenue of New York, and Deauville of France. The fair sex of the town and ladies' college pandered to their vanity and natural instinct to promenade up and down that street, a sort of dress parade, to the delight of themselves and the male students of the college. The college grounds comprise seventy acres of land, contain a million feet of pine lumber, and such pines as make the Pelican pines of Sam Steel as matches in comparison. If the buildings were utterly demolished and the bricks sent to Baton Rouge to supply the demand of building that is going on there, those bricks would be worth $50,000. Dr. Clarence Pierson is my authority for these figures.

I have nothing to say about the transfer of the college from Jackson to Shreveport. In visiting the homes of my church members, I listened with delight and interest to stories they told of those wonderful college days, when four hundred students attended the church services.

Jackson at that time was peopled with the most refined, cultured families of the South. A very few members of those families are left there today. There is still Mrs. Schwing; though she is very frail, she is as sweet and gracious as ever, and still retains her wonderful gift of music. Some members of the Toombe family are there. Mr. Toombe, who used to keep the bakehouse and sell delicious pastry and candy to the students, walks daily to and fro from his home to town. Dr. and Mrs. Holcombe died last year. Hon. David Pipes still has a beautiful home on the avenue. Mr. Richardson has gone to live at Beauregard, making himself very useful in our church at Alexandria. Mr. Toombe has told me of many an escapade indulged in by the students, and their love affairs. Dr. Lutz, Tug Atkinson, and Nick Joyner can tell a lot more. I believe two of the Pharr brothers found good wives from the belles of Jackson. I know W. Roumaine, jeweller, of Baton Rouge, and his son, Ben, also went to Jackson for their life partners. The Dudley brothers' livery stable came in very usefully in those days. Uncle Bob Austin and his wife regaled me with stories of visiting bishops and the great men of our church and what delightful services were held there. Mr. Henry Pond, of Ethel, La., was one who could tell me of scenes he remembered in the big auditorium on commencement and graduation days. Mr. Henry Pond taught Greek at the college when he was very young; he was an orator, as many can testify, and though to-day he is very frail in body and infirm, his voice is one of the clearest, musical and charming enunciation that is peculiar to our Southland. (Mr. Pond has died since this was written.—Editor.)

I often rambled over the college grounds, climbed the broken staircase, at great risk, into the auditorium, and allowed my imagination to people the platform with those eloquent speakers they told me about, the crowded house, and eager listeners. Sometimes brother ministers called at the parsonage, inviting me to accompany them to see the ruined college, most of them old students. Here, says one, was my bedroom; here our class studied; here is our dining-room; there professor so and so lived, etc. It was all so interesting, yet sad. I began to feel it a very sacred place, haunted with sacred memories, and associated myself with the place in a strange way.

Then there was the burial ground of many Confederate soldiers adjoining the college. Uncle Bob Austin and Henry Ponds were my chief historians of Civil War days, not forgetting that sainted lady of Gurley, La., Mrs. Martha Gayden, whose colonial home was the center of exciting incidents. Just for a brief time I incurred the displeasure of a few persons in preventing the auditorium from being used as a dance hall. It was too sacred a place in my estimation to be thus desecrated. In justice to those who were annoyed, I wish to say they came to me before I left Jackson to tell me I was right in my protest.

The education campaign was started during my stay in Jackson, and at the Annual Conference I did a bold thing in asking the bishop, during the education discussion, to invite those members present who were associated with Old Centenary College to stand. Without disparaging any minister or laymen of our church, I was surprised to find that many of the most prominent ministers and laymen stood up. And yet on consideration I was not really surprised, because wherever I went, city or town, and was asked where my charge was, and answered Jackson, so many would say, "I was a student at Jackson in Old Centenary College."

And now the interest is focussed on Shreveport. It has been my privilege and honor to number amongst my friends in that city Judge W. G. Banks, whose guest I have been four times. I mention this because I select W. G. Banks, Jr., as one of the finest specimens of young manhood that the present college is moulding into a Christian citizen. I have plied him and his visiting school fellows with questions about his college, and their replies confirm my own personal testimony after visiting the college twice, under the present management, seeing the wonderful additions to the building, the re-organized faculty, and the curriculum set forth. I know we have a college safe for our people to send their children to. The success already achieved under Dr. George Sexton and the Divine help is an augury for far greater things. I pay this humble tribute with every good wish for continued success.

CHOOSE YOUR MODEL.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

"Then came to Him the mother of Zebedee's children, worshiping Him, and desiring a certain thing of Him. And He said unto her, What wilt thou?" (Matt. 20:20, 21.)

This mother makes a most diplomatic approach to Jesus to accomplish her high ambition for her two sons. It looks as if it had all been thought through and thoroughly planned out. So far as she and the two sons could work it, it was executed to a nicety. The three approach Jesus in the most approved and fervent manner, not only greeting but worshiping Him—to make a good impression and dispose Him to favor them. Then, in her most winning and compelling manner, the fond mother said: "I want you to do a certain thing for me." Surely He will answer, "Why, of course. What is it?"

But, no. He will not pledge Himself to an unstated request. He must know the full import of the pledge He makes before it can be intelligently and conscientiously given. So, with a kindly, but not to be trifled with, and instant response, he demands: "What wilt thou?" There is intelligence inquiring for the evidence, and there is conscience in its judgment seat. And there is supreme example for the intelligent and conscientious.

It was Herod, drunk with wine and inflamed with passion, who could rashly pledge, with an oath, to a mere dancing girl to give her whatsoever she might ask; and, in spite of Herod's "sorrow," the head of the saintly and heroic John the Baptist was soon passing around the banquet hall to furnish a new thrill to wicked Herodias and the other revelers. (Matt. 14:6-11.)

Brother, you who are honestly considering your vote on the proposed undeveloped and blind unification plan, with no constitution to examine, no adjustment of differences, no abatement of the causes of friction, no assured end of hurtful and un-Christian competition nor of the sinful squandering of God's money therein—merely postponing putting off the necessary and inevitable settlement of all these till the pledge has been given, the compact sealed, the bonds welded—choose your model. Whom will you follow—the intelligent, cautious and conscientious Jesus; or the rash, impulsive and brutal Herod?

MY EXPLANATION.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

"My Dear Dr. Steel: Your article in the New Orleans Christian Advocate pained me beyond measure. Many of your friends are shocked at your abject surrender. I cannot understand how you could bring yourself to write such an article. When I compare your recent utterance with your former articles it is hard to understand just what you mean. I think you owe it to your friends to give us an explanation."

That is a letter from a friend whose good opinion I value, taking me to taw for taking up for Bishop Mouzon. Well, this is my explanation: I oppose mesures, not men, and am resolved that this unification discussion shall not make me blind to the merit of those whom I oppose. I've made no "surrender" at all, much less an "abject" surrender. But I am fighting, not Bishop Mouzon, but his policy of unification. I always liked the benevolent old lady who was always saying something kind about even people she did not like. "Grandma," said her little grandson, "I believe you would find something good in the devil." "Yes," she replied, "my son, if you will be as industrious as the devil, you will get along." I'm hunting for the good in folks, and I find a whole lot in Bishop Mouzon, wrong as I think he is about unification. The Lord may have made me little, but it is up to me not to be mean. I am camping at Galatians 6, 1. It is a sunny spot; a refreshing fountain flows there, and birds of paradise sing in the trees that grow there. The truth is I am too near heaven to let this conflict sour my spirit. I hope my disappointed friends will pray for me that I may remember Paul's statement: "Though I speak with the tongue of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal." Any charge that knowingly misrepresents an opponent is a poisoned arrow, and honorable warfare forbids the use of such weapons.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: I wish to call your attention to plans for a great ingathering of new pupils in our Sunday schools.

The work has been mapped out along the lines of systematic ingathering rather than high pressure methods. To this end all of the Central Office Staff has been enlisted in preparing material for pamphlet and periodical use. Already this matter is beginning to appear, and will continue to do so more and more from now on to the close. We are wishing to give particular emphasis to such matters as the following:

1. A careful survey of the inner conditions of the school for the purpose of seeing whether additional pupils could be cared for if secured. If they can, then the conditions of the present organization should be studied to see if strengthening is needed at any point.

2. A community survey should then be made for the purpose of discovering systematically the unreached people. This survey should be analyzed and the facts studied. The information should be arranged so that it will be easy of access and then the facts should be distributed to the respective groups of classes into which the prospective members would naturally go if they should unite with the school.

3. Rally Day should be appropriately observed in October, and invitations to prospective new members painstakingly extended.

4. Efforts should be made to associate Methodist members of union schools with some Methodist organization, even though they are enrolled only as associate members.

5. Particular care should be made by pastors to report accurately all Sunday school members within their charges.

We now have approximately 2,085,000 members in the schools of our church and approximately 2,400,000 church members. Should we not make these equal within the next two years?

Enlist Louisiana's share of the more than 400,000 Methodist church members not now enrolled in Methodist Sunday schools.

Your helpful co-operation will be appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

W. S. HOLMES, Chairman,
Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board.
Baton Rouge, La.

CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

West Point will very cordially welcome the North Mississippi Conference on Oct. 29. A folder will be printed in advance and mailed to every member and delegate, containing information of interest—list of all ministers and lay delegates, with local hosts and addresses, welcomes from the city and churches, railroad schedules, and a brief outline of the Conference program. This instead of cards usually sent out.

Any who expect to come in cars will please notify the pastor-host at once. It will help in placing the guests, and a few might thereby find entertainment for their wives also, if willing to be placed in easy reach of the Conference by automobile.

Brides of not more than twelve months' heavenly bliss in ministerial fellowship will be welcome, and homes will be provided for such if notification is sent at once. Our theory is that a bride ought to attend her first Annual Conference as a kind of honeymoon; but beyond that we cannot go in making provision for other than the actual members of the Conference and those officially connected therewith. We regret this, but such restriction is universally recognized as necessary. All are of course welcome to attend all the sessions of the Conference.

West Point is enthusiastic over receiving you, and looks forward with pleasure to your coming. May great blessing attend you, and abide long after you have gone forth again into the great harvest field.

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB, P. C.
West Point, Miss.

CLEARING THE WAY.

It was the crowded avenue of a great city. A large limousine passed quickly by. "Gee, I wisht I was him!" remarked a street urchin, as he noted the result of wealth in its luxurious environment.

I happened to know the history of the man who drew this remark. I knew that he had once been very poor. He had worked for any wage at any job. He always sought to do the best that he knew how. He liked to finish things—in the right style. Those were the days when he cleared the way.

Honor and glory always seek out the fit. But it takes the sweeping away of many things to bring us to solid ground.

The clearing-away process is tedious, back-bending, and quite thankless. But it is not only necessary, but essential. Continents must first be cleared by the pioneers. Ground must be broken by the heavy-armed diggers and drillers before the great structures of commerce are able to open their life to the world.

Clear the way for your better self! It may blister your hands and furrow your brow; but clear the way.

There is work in every part of every day that must first be cleared away before that which is more important may be tackled and done.

There is work for us all. But there is nothing more important at the start of days—and of life itself—than to clear the way for that which we hope we shall some time be and do.—Selected.

The Centenary has sent out 274 new missionaries in four years, lacking but 25 of doubling our force.

The Sunday School MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN CALLS YOU!

DO YOU KNOW THAT THERE ARE NOW APPROXIMATELY 165,000 SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS AND TEACHERS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF OUR DENOMINATION?

DO YOU KNOW THAT THERE ARE 2,086,000 SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS?

DO YOU KNOW THAT THERE ARE 16,700 SUNDAY SCHOOLS?

AND DO YOU KNOW THAT

THERE ARE ABOUT 700,000 METHODIST CHURCH MEMBERS NOT IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF OUR CHURCH?

THERE ARE NEARLY THREE THOUSAND CONGREGATIONS IN THE METHODIST CHURCH WHICH ARE WITHOUT SUNDAY SCHOOLS?

THERE ARE TEN MILLION PEOPLE IN THE SOUTHERN STATES NOT ENROLLED IN ANY SUNDAY SCHOOL?

THERE ARE NOT LESS THAN THREE MILLION WHITE BOYS AND GIRLS AND YOUNG PEOPLE FOR WHOM WE ARE DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE WHO ARE NOT NOW REACHED EVEN IN A NOMINAL WAY?

AND DO YOU KNOW THAT

THERE ARE IN YOUR OWN COMMUNITY MANY PEOPLE WHO LOGICALLY BELONG TO YOUR OWN CHURCH WHO ARE NOT NOW ENROLLED?

THERE ARE MANY OF YOUR OWN CHURCH MEMBERS WHO DO NOT ATTEND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT ALL?

AND DO YOU KNOW THAT

WE NOW HAVE A SPECIAL EFFORT TO REACH THE UNREACHED AND TO TEACH THE UNTAUGHT?

WE HAVE SPECIAL CLASSES FOR EVERY AGE AND SPECIAL LESSONS ADAPTED TO EACH GROUP?

YOU CAN HELP TO MAKE YOUR SCHOOL BETTER BY ATTENDING?

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE STREET OF BY AND BY LEADS TO THE HOUSE OF NEVER.

You cannot go any place as long as you put off starting on the journey. The way to accomplish a task is to begin it. The quicker one starts toward an appointed goal, the sooner one can expect to arrive. The Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is not an exception to the rule. You cannot raise your quota for the first year or any year without a special effort.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE SPECIAL EFFORT HEART THROBS.

Up to Sept. 1, 1924, the Annual Conferences had paid on their Special Effort quotas as follows: Alahama, $13,952.54; Arizona, $877.70; Baltimore, $670.25; Central Texas, $10,451.25; Denver, $2,573.96; East Oklahoma, $5,592.02; Florida, $33,062.61; Holston, $26,923.72; Illinois, $3,023.76; Kentucky, $26,698.18; Little Rock, $11-219.20; Louisiana, $24,144.44; Louisville, $33,-709.07; Memphis, $12,830.95; Mississippi, $14,-757.97; Missouri, $24,553.14; New Mexico, $1,-732.42; North Alahama, $14,041.26; North Arkansas, $11,957.11; North Carolina, $32,474.23; North Georgia, $29,111.86; North Mississippi, $12,287.04; North Texas, $24,620.88; Northwest, $2,429.27; Northwest Texas, $6,583.91; Pacific, $8,623.90; St. Louis, $19,426.67; South Carolina, $11,939.58; South Georgia, $11,188.29; Southwest Missourl, $30,505.83; Tennessee, $33,593.58; Texas, $6,-782.12; Upper South Carolina, $16,435.56; Virginia, $37,972.82; West Oklahoma, $5,488.99; West Texas, $26,327.95; Western North Carolina, $16,-167.70; Western Virginia, $26,232.83; Brazil Mission, $10; Congo Mission, $270; Japan Mission, $185; Belgian Mission, $55.93. Total, $631,485.49.

Since Sept. 1, 1924, the Annual Conferences have paid enough more on their quotas to push the grand total received in cash hy the Board well over $700,000.

THEY CARRY HIGH THE STREAMING FLAG.

Hundreds of charges throughout the church have won a notable victory by paying one-fifth or more of their total quota the first year. Those doing this good thing have been puhlished on this page from week to week. It is easy to write ahout thelr accomplishments, but words cannot describe the joy which thrills them as they march up to Conference with the Forgotten Man flag of victory streaming in the hreezes.

MEANING OF WORDS.

Keep a watch on your word, my friends,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet like the bees' fresh honey—
Like bees they have terrible stings.
They can bless like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut in the strife of anger,
Like an open two-edged knife.

Let them pass through the lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind;
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them be unsaid;
They may flash through a brain like lightning
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back if they're cold or cruel,
Under bar and lock and seal;
The wounds they make, young people,
Are always slow to heal.
God guard your lips and ever
From the time of your early youth,
May the words you daily utter
Be the words of beautiful truth!

JACK'S DAY OFF

By Kate S. Gates.

"Thank goodness, school is over for this year!" said Jack Graham, tossing his books down on the piazza floor. "I'm tired of studying. I only wish I hadn't a blessed thing to do all vacation but just have a good time."

"You have never seemed particularly overworked to me," said Uncle Jack dryly.

"Probably you folks do not think I do anything," replied Jack impatiently, "but somebody is usually wanting something every other minute. Dad wants me to mow the lawn, I have to go after the milk and do a hundred other errands for mother and Sue. The garden has to be hoed every few days. Oh, there are a million things I have to do!"

"You certainly are badly treated, but how about yourself, don't you ever call upon the family to help you in return?"

"Why, no—that is, only once in a dog's age for some little thing," answered Jack complacently.

Mother looked up from her sewing.

"Jack," she said quietly, "if I promise you that not one of the family shall call upon you for anything, will you agree in return not to expect or ask any favor of any of us?"

"Do you mean I wouldn't have to mow the lawn, or do errands, or—anything?" asked Jack, eagerly.

"We will not call upon you for a single thing; only remember you are not to ask for anything to be done for you either."

"It's a bargain," shouted Jack. "Glory be, but won't I have one gorgeous time of it! When do we begin? And how long does it last?"

"We will start to-morrow morning, and I will leave it to you to say how long we will keep it up."

Accordingly, the next morning when Jack heard the rest of the family getting up, he smiled and turned over for another nap.

"Isn't this simply great!" he said to himself.

About 10 o'clock he walked leisurely down to the dining-room to find all signs of breakfast removed. "Make me some toast and cook me an egg, will you please, Nora?" he asked, going to the kitchen door.

"You forget your agreement, don't you, Jack?" asked mother, who was passing through the hall. "I guess you will have to forage for yourself."

Jack foraged, but the result was not quite satisfactory. "Guess I'll go over to Dick's and play tennis awhile" was his next thought. "My but isn't it glorious not to have anything to do! Oh, Sue," he called from the head of the stairs a minute later, "sew a rip in my sweater up for me, will you please?"

"I would, only mother said we were not to ask anything of you, nor you of us," was Sue's reply.

"Bother!" muttered Jack as he went out the house.

"Oh, say, mother," said Jack, as he finished his dinner, "put me up one of your nifty little lunches will you? Some of us are going over to Shaker Pond this afternoon, and we will be sure to want to eat."

"I am sorry to refuse, Jack, but you know we have agreed not—"

Jack did not wait for her to finish, but rushed off, slamming the screen door after him, and was not seen again until tea-time.

In the evening some of the young folks gathered on the lawn, and presently Jack came rushing up to Uncle Jack.

"May we use your radio, please? There's a concert over to the Country Club and we want to listen in."

"Sorry, old man, but you know we have agreed to go it alone—for the present."

Jack's face crimsoned. "Nothing doing," he said briefly to his friends.

Jack was the first one up the next morning and had the lawn mowed before breakfast.

"Any errands you want done after I get the milk?" he asked. "And, by the way, yesterday was not exactly a howling success—as far as I was concerned, anyway. So, if you don't mind, we will call that agreement off, and you can all call on me when you like. I'll be no end glad to have you."

"Thank you, Jack," said his mother with a loving smile, "and remember we shall be glad to have you call on us freely."—In Zion's Herald.

"NUMBER ONE."

"He is a Number One boy," said grandmother proudly, "a great boy for his books. Indeed, he would rather read than play, and that is saying a good deal for a boy of 10."

"It is, certainly," returned Uncle John; "but what a pity it is that he is blind!"

"Blind!" exclaimed grandmother. And the Number One boy looked up, too, in wonder.

"Yes, blind, and a little deaf also, I fear," answered Uncle John.

"Why, John, what put that into your head?" asked grandmother, looking perplexed.

"Why, the Number One boy himself," said Uncle John. "He has been occupying the one easy-chair in the room all forenoon, never seeing you or his mother when she came in for a few moments' rest. Then, when your glasses were mislaid, and you had to climb upstairs to look for them, he neither saw, nor heard anything that was going on."

"Oh, he is so busy reading," apologized grandmother.

"That is not a very good excuse, mother," replied Uncle John, smiling. "If Number One is not blind or deaf, he must be very selfish, indeed, to occupy the best seat in the room, and let older people run up and downstairs while he takes his ease."

"Nobody asked me to give up my seat or to run on errands," said Number One.

"That should not have been necessary," urged Uncle John. "What are a boy's eyes and ears for, if not to keep him posted on what is going on around him? I am glad to see you fond of books; but if a pretty story makes you forget all things except amusing Number One, better run out and play with other boys, and let grandmother enjoy the comfort of her rocker in quiet."—Church Progress.

THE PERSEVERANCE OF GREAT MEN.

It is not tools that make the workman, but the trained skill and perseverance of the man himself. Indeed, it is proverbial that the bad workman never yet had a good tool. Some one asked Opie by what wonderful process he mixed his colors. "I mix them with my brains, sir," was his reply. It is the same with every workman who would excel. A pan of water and two thermometers were the tools by which Dr. Black discovered latent heat; and a prism, a lens, and a sheet of pasteboard enabled Newton to unfold the composition of light and the origin of color. An eminent foreign savant once called upon Dr. Wallaston, and requested to be shown over his laboratories, in which science had been enriched by so many important discoveries; then the doctor took him into a little study, and, pointing to an old teatray on the table, containing a few watch-glasses, test papers, a small balance, and a blow pipe, said, "There is all the laboratory I have." A burnt stick and a barn door served Wilkie in lieu of pencil and canvas; and Benjamin West made his first brushes out of the cat's tail. Watt made his first model of the condensing steam engine out of an anatomist's old syringe; whilst Rittenhouse, the astronomer, first calculated eclipses on the plow handle.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is hereby called to meet in regular annual session in the office of the Advocate, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La., at 10 o'clock a.m., Thursday, October 16, 1924.

JNO. F. FOSTER, Chairman.

Lake Providence, La., Sept. 19, 1924.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The attendance at the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on Sept. 21, was more than 2,600. The attendance at the Four Square Men's Bible Class, taught by Dr. R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, was 1,632.

Dr. A. P. Parker, missionary to China since 1875, died at Oakland, Calif., on Sept. 10, being in the United States on furlough. His last message to the church was: "I gave up my life for China. Send more missionaries."

Emory University opened on Wednesday, Sept. 24, with more than 2300 students enrolled, with many others to arrive later. Dr. J. B. Mitchell, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, delivered the opening address.

We learn from the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss., that the Licensing Committee of the Sardis District met recently and licensed Marvin McCall, of Coldwater, to preach and recommended him for admission on trial.

The Big Brothers' Class, Greenville, Miss., will begin a campaign on Oct. 1 to increase the attendance to a minimum of 150 each Sunday. The campaign will be known as the "Go Get 'em Drive," and the class will be divided into two sections, the "Pushers," and the "Pullers."

The fourth quarterly conference of the Booneville charge, North Mississippi Conference, passed appropriate resolutions in recognition of the splendid service rendered during the quadrennium by Rev. Jos. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District.

The dedicatory exercises of the Francis Asbury Monument, Washington, D. C., will be held at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 8 p.m., and at the site, Sixteenth and Mt. Pleasant Streets, Wednesday, Oct. 15, at 2:30 p.m.

The Intermediate Epworth League of the Epworth Methodist Church, this city, paid a visit to the Intermediate Epworth League of the Felicity Methodist Church on last Sunday evening, and conducted the service. The occasion was a delightful and profitable one.

Rev. Henry T. Young, chairman of the Committee on Evangelism of the Louisiana Conference, writes us that the Wisdom sisters, known throughout the church for their sweet singing, have two open dates, beginning Oct. 20, which they could give to Louisiana. Those interested in this announcement can get in touch with these young ladies by addressing them at Macon, Mo.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth is having a great year on the Louise charge, Mississippi Conference. All finances are in full, there have been several additions to the membership of the church, and the work is prosperous in every way. The best report that has been made in years will be carried to Conference.

Rev. J. A. Baylor has resigned the office of Architectural Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, and Mr. H. M. King has been elected to succeed him. Mr. King is well qualified for the position, being a graduate in architecture from the University of Minnesota and from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

We take the following from the latest issue of the Texas Christian Advocate: "Bishop John M. Moore has been confined to his bed at his home in this city for the past eight or ten days. Following the extraction of a tooth, he has been running a temperature. It is expected that in a few days he will be up and about his work."

The Sunday school of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., will observe its annual commencement exercises at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 5. This has come to be a great occasion in the community. Brother A. M. Mayo has been for many years the faithful and efficient superintendent of the school.

Bishop Sam R. Hay was a prominent figure at the opening of the one hundredth session of Centenary College on Thursday of last week. Bishop Hay is thoroughly convinced of the important place Centenary occupies in the work of the church in Louisiana, and he is giving enthusiastic and inspiring leadership to the cause of Christian education in Louisiana.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Sallis, Miss., calls our attention to an error in his report from his charge in last week's Advocate. Instead of "seventy-four" additions at Zemuly, the number should have been "twenty-four." We greatly regret this error in our proof reading department. The record as correctly given, however, shows that Brother Carisle is doing a great work.

Bishop Sam R. Hay spent Monday and Tuesday of this week in New Orleans. On Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, he dedicated St. Mark's, our great mission plant in this city. He attended the Methodist Preachers' Meeting on Monday morning, and was the guest of the preachers at a luncheon at the St. Charles Hotel at 12:30. This was Bishop Hay's first official visit to New Orleans.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Amory charge, North Mississippi Conference, was an unusual occasion, nearly 200 people being present. The reports showed that 178 members had been received during the year, that 900 visits had been made by the good women of the Missionary Society, and that the Sunday school had had an average attendance of 316. That is a record that is hard to beat.

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Many, La., writes: "Our work on the Many charge is pleasant and prosperous. Our Sunday schools and prayer meetings are good. The revival meetings have been glorious. Rev. J. M. Alford assisted me here at Many, and I held the others. I have received 107 members so far, and have some more to receive. Nearly half these members have been received by baptism."

Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Ruston, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. The long continued drouth in North Louisiana interfered very greatly with the farming operations of the Orphanage, which makes it imperative that the offering on Work Day this year be generous. We are sure our people will remember this and provide adequately for the needs of this great institution.

OPENING OF THE ONE HUNDREDTH SESSION OF CENTENARY COLLEGE.

dormitory facilities are insufficient to meet the demand. In every requirement of an A-Grade institution, Centenary College now compares favorably with any other institution of the church.

Credit, too, must be given to the Board of Trustees, led by President John L. Scales, a strong group of business men of Shreveport who have been generous in their gifts to the college, and to the general community for their interest in and support of the institution which they have come to recognize as one of their greatest assets—intellectual and moral as well as material. The citizenship of Shreveport is solidly behind Centenary College.

Methodism throughout Louisiana is likewise to be commended for manifesting an interest in this institution of the church greater than for many years in the past. It is sending its sons to be educated there, and there are signs that it is purposing to rally to its support in a financial way that will make it possible to maintain and carry on the great work now being done. It is significant that a large number of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference were in attendance upon the opening of the one hundredth session. We are not sure that we saw all those who were there, but we noted the following: R. H. Wynn, W. W. Drake, J. B. Williams, K. W. Dodson, W. D. Kleinschmidt, H. N. Brown, C. C. Wier, W. W. Holmes, H. W. Rickey, C. D. Atkinson, R. F. Harrell, H. W. Ledbetter, B. T. Crews, W. E. Akin, S. J. Davies, Briscoe Carter, C. W. Crisler, J. A. McCormack, William Schuhle, F. M. Freeman, J. G. Snelling, W. L. Doss, Jr., W. L. Duren, R. H. Harper, A. J. Gearheard, J. W. Faulk, J. B. Grambling, A. W. Waddill, R. E. Goodrich, Alonzo Early, R. W. Tucker, L. I. McCain, J. M. Alford, W. F. Henderson, W. F. Henderson, Jr., J. B. Peters, O. W. Bradley, W. C. Childress, W. H. Jordan, H. W. Jordan, J. G. Sloan, H. L. Johns, J. T. Holladay, A. S. Lutz, H. T. Young, H. B. Thomason, C. C. Miller, G. D. Anders, Louis Hoffpauir, J. F. Dring, A. L. Harper, Ellis Smith, A. W. Turner, R. W. Vaughan. In addition to the preachers, there were many laymen present. The remark was frequently made that the assemblage looked like an Annual Conference. This large attendance of preachers and laymen is significant of an awakened interest in Centenary College.

What of the future? The possibilities of the future are limited only by the vision, loyalty, and generosity of the Methodists of Louisiana who have entered into such a noble heritage. The suggestion that the completion of the one hundredth session of Centenary College in June, 1925, would be fittingly celebrated by the laying down of one million dollars as a thank offering in recognition of the blessings of the past and as a token of greater things to be in the future, is one to be thought about, prayed over—and adopted. A hundred years of service, a million dollars to continue the good work—how well the two go together!

APPROVED LIST OF PREACHERS' INSTITUTES GIVING THE UNDERGRADUATE COURSE OF STUDY.

By Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D., Secretary, Ministerial Supply and Training.

We are pleased to report another good year of work by our Summer Institutes for Preachers giving the undergraduate course of study. Indeed, the present year's work seems to be the best done yet in this valuable department of the training and studies of our young preachers.

With the improved and increasing opportunities offered by our church to our young ministry, we are gratified to believe that the educational equipment of our pastors is steadily improving, and we are looking forward and working to the desired standard under which every undergraduate preacher who cannot take a full college and seminary course of study in residence, shall avail himself of both the helpful and extended study through the Correspondence Schools at Emory and Southern Methodist Universities, and also the inspiration and fellowship of the Summer Institutes. As is well known, the law of our church is that no undergraduate preacher can be passed from a lower to a higher class at his Annual Conference unless he has taken the course of study—and the entire course—either in one of the Correspondence Schools or in a Summer Institute. Under this law, he may take a part of the course through the Correspondence School and a part at the Summer Institute, but the entire course must be taken through these two agencies. It is the province of the Anuual Conference examining committees to see that all undergraduates do their work in accordance with this law.

As the work of no Institute can be accepted by a Conference committee unless the said Institute is approved by the General Conference Board of Education, in accordance with the directions of the Board, a list of approved Institutes for the guidance of the Annual Conference examining committee follows:

Conferences—Where Institute Was Held.

Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi Conferences—Held at Seashore Divinity School, Biloxi, Miss.

Central Texas, Texas, North Texas and West Texas Conferences—Held at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex.; Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex.

East and West Oklahoma Conferences—Held at Oklahoma City, Okla.

Florida Conference—Held at Southern College, Lakeland, Fla.

Holston Conference—Held at Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.

Missouri, Southwest Missouri and St. Louis Conferences—Held at Central College, Fayette, Mo.

North Carolina and Western North Carolina Conferences—Held at Trinity College, Durham, N. C.

Tennessee and Memphis Conferences—Held at Lebanon, Tenn.

Western Virginia Conference—Held at Barboursville, W. Va.

INCREASING OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP.

By Prof. C. A. Bowen.

The statistics of our church reveal that there are 400,000 church members who do not belong to the Sunday school. The discovery of a fact like this arrests us and causes us to find out the reason and to discover a way to correct the defect.

Several things may be contributing to this deficit in our Sunday school membership. For one thing, the reports on Sunday school membership made by the pastors to the Annual Conference do not sometimes tally with the Conference Sunday School Superintendent. The pastor's report to the Annual Conference usually underestimates the Sunday school enrollment. We, as Methodists, are not strong for padded figures that create a false impression of our numerical strength, but in some cases we may be doing ourselves an injustice by not getting all the membership figures of the Sunday school into our reports. We also have a considerable number of Methodist people who belong to union Sunday schools and yet have not enrolled them as associate members in our Methodist Sunday schools. Besides the ones who are not being reported, there are many church members who have not been located by the Sunday school. And then a fair-sized multitude lose contact with the Sunday school during the summer months, and are not brought back in when activities reach their height again in the fall. And outside the membership of the church, there is that large group of unreached folk for whom we are responsible and yet whom we have not effectively gotten hold of.

Several ways of correcting the defect are being suggested to us by those giving special study to this problem. This is promotion time in the graded Sunday school. It is a fine time to emphasize the importance of bringing in the stragglers and hunting up the ones who have dropped out. Rally Day comes the second Sunday in October and affords us a special occasion to make use of in getting the membership up to its proper figure. We must get some reckoning on our Methodist people who are in union schools, too. We can get them enrolled as associate members of some Methodist Sunday school and report them to Annual Conference in this way. Let us put into our plans for the next few months a special effort to get the Sunday school into the center of the church's attention, at the same time trying to get all the members of the church to become members of some department of the Sunday school. We are asking our pastors to watch this item of Sunday school membership in their reports and get reported all of the people in their charge who belong to the regular Sunday schools or to the Home Department and Cradle Roll.

We would give special emphasis to the need of reaching the people who are not in the church. A survey of your community will disiose surprising results. You will find numbers who need to be gone after for the Sunday school. This, of course, is just one step in getting them to the Savior.

The Sunday school workers of our Conferences will be glad to furnish information to those who take seriously the efforts that are being made to correct this membership deficit.

THE "THRILL" BUSINESS.

Up in Grand Rapids a woman—a wife and mother—is under arrest because she stole dresses from a department store—not because her circumstances influenced her to do so, but because she wanted the "thrill of it."

In Maine a fine young boy was caught while driving a bootlegger's automobile. He wasn't a member of the gang. He cared nothing about liquor and did not drink himself, or sell drink to others. He liked "the thrill" of being chased by the prohibition officers and just "stepping on 'er."

In a little town of the Middle West, a boy of 14 is in the hands of the constable because he has been scattering tacks and screws along a much-traveled highway adjacent to town, much to the damage to automobile tires and otherwise comparatively good dispositions. He had no feeling of ill-will against machine or driver, just liked to hear the hiss and pop of air-filled tires and the vocal outbursts of outraged autoists. He liked "the thrill" of it.

A young man in New York has been caught by the police, after a long quest. He had set fire to some twenty-odd empty houses. He was possessed by an irresistible desire to hear the clatter of fire apparatus, the shouts and screams of men and women, and to see the rush of crowds and the roll of the ominous smoke. He liked "the thrill" of it.

The "thrill" business seems to be on the increase, but, even at that, is stands out distinctively and repulsively because it is exceptional. Reaction from it will come in due time, as always is the case, and law and good order will prevail.

As a matter of fact, people everywhere, in a vast majority, are now going about their usual affairs soberly and sedately, and their influence for even and level living cannot be neutralized by tangents in crime or otherwise.

Common decency never will be and never has been entirely out of fashion.—Nashville Tennessean.

ANNOUNCEMENT CONCERNING LITERATURE DEALING WITH UNIFICATION.

The friends of unification had hoped that for the months just preceding the session of our fall Annual Conferences, the mind of the church might be turned in the direction of the regular work of the church. This will explain why so little has been written for the church press in further advocacy of the plan approved in Chattanooga. However, so many inquiries have come to us asking for unification literature that we are making this formal announcement. Literature covering fully every aspect of the question is now in process of preparation, and in due time our people will have in their hands answers to all questions of interest touching the plan of unification now pending before American Methodism.

On Sunday, June 1, 1924, MRS. SALLIE V. THORNTON passed through the pearly gates into the blessed eternity prepared for those who live as we know she did. She was 54 years, 10 months, and 6 days old, and was the wife of Mr. C. A. Thornton. To this union were born three boys—Carlie C., Durward G., and Lawrence G., whom, with their father, one grandchild, one daughter-in-law, and one sister, she leaves to mourn. Sister Thornton joined the Methodist church at 15 years of age, while Brother V. D. Skipper was helping at Hickory Ridge church. She lived a quiet, consistent Christian life, wielding an influence over those in whose company she was thrown, for the kingdom of God. Her home was the preacher's home, being always ready to help in any way to further the cause of Christ. She was a faithful wife, a model mother, having reared three good boys to be grown. Dear mother, so patient and good, we are reminded of you when we look at your flowers and other things in the home which were yours. We are sad, yet rejoice in the translation. We can only say, "Thy will be done."

A friend,

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased God, in his wisdom, to transplant from earth to heaven the beautiful soul of our most highly esteemed friend and co-worker, MRS. W. W. HICKS; be it resolved:

1. That we, as a Sunday school, extend our deepest sympathy to her loved ones in the irreparable loss we have thus sustained.

2. That we, as a Sunday school, tender her bereaved ones this tribute of respect in recognition of one of the loveliest characters with whom it has been our pleasure to associate. Her life was an inspiration and benediction to all with whom she came in contact.

3. That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will ever be indelibly impressed upon the minds and hearts of her legion of friends.

4. That the intelligence received, on the night of Aug. 29, that this saintly woman was no more, seemed more than we could comprehend, but while we bowed in unspeakable grief, we knew the angels sang their sweetest song of welcome as the portals were thrown open to receive this beautiful spirit whose mission in life was to let others see Jesus in her, and whose very presence carried the assurance of her daily walk with God.

5. That the only alleviation to our grief is the expression of our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by him who doeth all things well.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Sunday school, a copy printed in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Meridian Star, the Clarke County Tribune, and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

Very respectfully submitted,

Mrs. H. T. Tedder, Mrs. H. W. Pearson, Miss Minnie Otis Hand, committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Death, who knocks with equal hands at the cottage door and the portals of the palace gate, has again been busy about his appointed work, and claimed for his victim MRS. C. C. GUNN. On the morning of July 13, 1924, God, in his infinite wisdom, called home this our beloved sister and co-worker.

Mrs. Gunn was a charter member of the Noxapater Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society. She was always ardent and enthusiastic in the work. Her forceful personality, her intellect and wise counsel contributed much to the upbuilding of the Auxiliary.

As a friend, she was hospitable and true; in disposition, she was ever helpful, charitable, and forgiving.

The keynote of her wonderful character was her devotion to her Saviour, in whom she believed and whom she loved with a deep, abiding reverence. Her life is worthy of imitation by those who seek to attain things that make the world better and heaven more to be desired.

Therefore, be it resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Gunn an irreparable loss has been sustained by the church, the Missionary Society, and the community.

Be it resolved, That our heartfelt sympathy be extended the family.

Be it resolved, That a copy of these resolution be sent the family, a copy spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Winston County Journal, and Missionary Voice, with request for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. Wren Coleman, Mrs. J. H. Wright, Mrs. E. W. Leeke, Mrs. C. C. McLoeel, committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

On Sept. 7, 1924, at Holly Springs, Miss., the weary spirit of MISS HATTIE WRIGHT winged its flight to realms above. The guerdon won, and now free from pain, she stands among those whom love of God has blessed.

After weeks of illness, through which willing hands, prompted by loving hearts, strove in vain to turn aside the dread visitant, there came to her that "sleep from which no pain can waken."

In her family she had always been a comfort and a blessing; honored and respected in the community; in her church useful, and ever devoted to its work.

From the Methodist church she was buried, Sept. 8, service being conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. A. Parke.

The same afternoon, at a meeting of the Holly Springs Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, a committee appointed to draft resolutions returned the following expression of love and sorrow:

Resolved, first, since our Heavenly Father, in his wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, we extend to the bereaved family our warmest sympathy in this hour of trial, and would remind them that she is not lost to them, for in the "better land" we may hope some time to meet her glorified spirit.

Second, That in her passing from us, the church has sustained a loss that must long be felt. Always in her place at every service, her "vacant chair" will bring a pang to many hearts; especially in the Woman's Missionary Society will this be felt. Yet as Christians we shall remember that "death is but a path that must be trod if man would ever pass to God."

Third, That a copy of this tribute shall be spread upon the minutes of the Auxiliary, one be sent to the family as a faint expression of our love and sympathy, and one copy forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. Rosa B. Tyler, chairman; Mrs. Horace Brown, Miss May Randle, committee.

JABUS BENJAMIN RAWLS, JR.—A TRIBUTE.

My warm, personal friend, and the friend of every man, passed away in the death of Jabus Benjamin Rawls at his home in Mount Olive, Miss., March 3, 1924. If asked by one who knew him to give a definition of "a man," my reply would be, "You knew Jabus Rawls—there was one." In his personality were combined a splendid body, a vigorous intellect of rare poise, a great and tender heart, all controlled by a Christ-permeated spirit. If all men were like him the locksmith would lose his trade, the cash-register would not be needed, the peace officer could abandon his beat, the sheriff would never call to order the criminal court, jail doors would rust off the hinges, and courthouses would dwindle into offices of record. If all men were like him, no unfortunate human being could honestly complain of oppression, no competitor need fear unfair means or methods, and no worthy object of charity would have its claims denied. If all men were like him, every youth would have a fair chance for an education, no church would languish for support, no pastor would preach to empty pews, and the poor everywhere would have the gospel preached to them.

Without seeking or wishing it, he became, in a large measure, the leader in the circle of his activities. His associates trusted his head and his heart, and were glad to allow him a large influence. He had a courage that would undertake hard tasks, but he moved with a cautious spirit that avoided the breakers. His upright character, unquestioned integrity, unswerving devotion to duty, and splendid business methods attracted the Lampton brothers, whose interests have played an important part in the mercantile business of Mississippi. At the age of 25 he became associated with the firm of J. W. Lampton & Brother, and two years later this firm established a branch business at Monticello, under the firm name of Lampton & Rawls Co., with Mr. Rawls as manager. Immediately following the completion of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad, this firm moved its domicile from Monticello to Mount Olive, where it has continued to prosper, and has long been a necessity to the fine agricultural interests surrounding this good town. Prior to the death of Brother Rawls, this firm had no other manager.

At his burial, a number of fine tributes to his life and character were spoken by those who knew and loved him, but the most eloquent tribute was not spoken, but seen. About the church there gathered many times as many people as the building would contain, and these were from every walk of life. Men with their families had come in their high-powered cars of the latest model, and weather-stained men had come with their families in their rattling buggies and wagons. About one hundred and fifty Negroes had come, and during the service these stood on one side of the church with uncovered and bowed heads. Before the casket was closed and carried from the church, these Negroes were allowed to pass through and get a last look at their dead friend and give expression to their tears and sobs.

Apart from his family circle, no group of his associates have felt more keenly and sadly his going than the members of the Methodist church, with whom he had labored so long, so earnestly, and so well. As steward, Sunday school teacher, and as a member of the church, he served devotedly and effielently. Soon after his business career began, he heard some preacher say, in discussing our stewardship under God, "If he cannot trust you with little, he cannot trust you with much." This remark fixed a rule in his life that guided him to the day of death, and made him a large contributor to the claims of Christ's kingdom. For many years his firm has devoted to the orphans a liberal per cent of its sales on Work Day, and this has heen no inconsiderable sum. His church has lost a great friend.

No tribute to this man would be complete without opening the front door of his home, sitting down in the family circle, and being a sharer of its most thoughtful and generous hospitality. On Nov. 21, 1887, he was married to Miss Ella Elizabeth Baylis, of Graves Creek, Miss., the daughter of George Baylis and Mrs. Carolyn Fenn Baylis. Surely God had joined them together, for they lived together for more than thirty-six years in perfect trust of each other, with almost perfect unity of plan and purpose, and with a rare devotion. One has said, "His home-life was the most beautiful we have ever seen." To this union four children were born—two sons and two daughters. The sons, Lucius and James, are now members of the firm of which their father was manager. Lucy is the wife of Dr. J. S. McIntosh, one of the leading physicians of Covington County. Miss Sarah Lou is the only unmarried child, and is now devoting her time to brightening the sorrowful days of her mother. All of them were at the bedside of their father at the time of his unexpeeted death, except Miss Sarah Lou, who was on a visit to Clermont, Fla., accompanied by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lampton, of Columbia, Miss.

He was born March 8, 1865, the son of James Rawls and Mrs. Sarah Marnes Rawls, of Spring Cottage, Miss. His brother and sisters are: John Barnes Rawls, of Columbia; Mrs. Clarissa Rawls Ford, now dead, wife of Hon. T. S. Ford; Mrs. Sallie Rawls Rankin, wife of the late George Henry Rankin, of Columbia, and Mrs. Lizzie Rawls Lovett, deceased, the wife of Rev. J. J. Lovett, now dead, at one time a member of the Mississippi Conference.

Brother Rawls was suddenly stricken on the night of March 2, soon after returning from church. From the beginning it was evident that his sickness would be fatal, and the end came at 5:30 in the afternoon of the next day. We buried his body in the Mount Olive cemetery in the late hours of Mareh 5. Soon the shadows of night had fallen over his flower-covered grave, but a deeper shadow had fallen over the town he loved so well.

The burial service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. H. Foreman. Other ministers present and taking part in the service were: Dr. A. F. Watkins, Yazoo City; Rev. W. M. Williams, Magee; Rev. J. A. Moore, Columbia; Rev. George H. Thompson, Crystal Springs, and Rev. A. S. Johnston, pastor of the Baptist church of Mount Olive.

The words of an employee of our departed friend will furnish a fitting close to this tribute: "A model employer is gone. No more shall we see his cheerful countenance or listen to his gentle voice, but death cannot kill what never dies. Often in lonely moments we will feel the presence of his purified spirit calling us onward and upward to finer and better things.

"'So let us wipe the tears away,
Since the prize he has won,
And ask for strength to say,
God's will, and not ours, be done.'"

GEORGE H. THOMPSON.

FROM THE BOONEVILLE CIRCUIT.

Dear Mr. Editor: Just a little report from our work this year.

Our work on the Booneville circuit has heen a pleasant and profitable (we trust) one. We have five churches on this charge, and we have held five revivals, with very good results.

Our first revival was at Liberty. W. W. Jones, of Iuka, did some real gospel preaching. It was a raw field. We did not see visible results expected, but great good was done. There were about five conversions, with four additions.

Our next meeting was at Blythe's Chapel, with W. C. McCay, of Baldwyn, doing the preaching. The gospel messages given by this young preacher were greatly enjoyed. There were about twenty-four conversions and reclamations, with eight additions to the church.

The next campaign took us to our society at Carolina, under the leadership of J. A. George, our pastor of Ripley. Some real constructive work was done, with nine additions to the church.

We went from there to Oak Grove. God gave us a blessed season of services here, under the [illegible] leadership. Brother George is being effectively used of God in preaching the old gospel doctrines of our church. We had around fifteen conversions, with eleven additions. May the tribe increase!

The final campaign of our concentrated revival effort was at Blackland, under a large tent which belongs to our district, with the "war horse" of Mississippi as leader, W. M. McIntosh, with his faithful wife and his wife, relations, and efficient singer, Prof. E. S. Herman, of Millport, Ala. God honored our efforts there with conversions, consecrations and additions to membership. There were around forty conversions or reclamations, with thirty-seven additions all told.

We have had about, in all, ninety-four conversions or reclamations, and sixty-five additions to the church.

This is our first year on probation in the Conference, and we feel greatly encouraged.

Need a Tonic?

When Run-down or Recovering from the Grip—or if It Left You in a Weakened Condition, Here's Good Advice

Atlanta, Ga.—"I became acquainted with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery some years ago. I had contracted malaria and the 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me and then kept me in good health.

"My husband had the 'flu' and it left him weak and scarcely able to be around. He took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it helped him wonderfully. We find it is a great tonic for the blood."—Mrs. J. D. Thompson, 209 Dalvigny St.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a well known tonic and builder that can be procured in tablets or liquid from your neighborhood druggist or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for a trial pkg. of the tablets and write for free medical advice.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. G. Lord.

I have recently consented to be Superintendent of Missionary Instruction in the Sunday schools of our Conference. The aim of this work is to put definite and constructive missionary education in the Sunday schools. The need of this sort of instruction is very apparent. We have put on missionary drives and campaigns and made assessments and have taken pledges and subscriptions, but we have not been able to collect that which has been promised or assessed. Our church is adopting the budget plan for raising finances, which is a good system; but in many places the budget has refused to "budge," and failure is the result. We have failed in these things because the people do not have missionary education. If we desire to give to our church missionary training, we have but one agency through which it can be done, and that is the church school. The Discipline provides for a missionary program, with a special missionary collection on the fourth Sunday of each month. Here is a plan for making this effective:

1. Put some person definitely in charge of missions in the Sunday school.

2. See that the graded missionary instruction is used in all the classes of the school.

3. Have a missionary program each month; in the large school, in every department; and in the small school, for the whole school.

4. As a part of the program, take a special collection for missions and send it to the treasurer of the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

5. Take a missionary special for the Sunday school and direct the collection to that purpose.

6. Have training classes in missions and groups of adults studying the missionary elective courses for adults.

I am sending out to all the pastors questionnaires concerning the Sunday schools on their charge. I am doing this to get this information to work with. The pastors can greatly help me in the work by returning these questionnaires promptly. Be sure to give me the name of the one in charge of this work, so that as soon as we get our machinery set up we can pass to them the literature and helps. Each month you will find good missionary programs in the Sunday School Magazine. If you would like to take a special for your school, write me and I will send you a list to select from.

Let us all pray and work together to bring our Conference to the front in this important work.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

By C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

The following telegram reached us Sept. 25: "Department School Administration hopes for two thousand schools checked, and at least five hundred ranking under program of work for 1924. Alabama, North Arkansas, and Virginia in the lead, but totals are small at this time. Advise me special delivery the number you can count on in your Conference."

Every Sunday school that has a Program of Work chart on its wall should have this chart checked up before Annual Conference. Every district in the Conference has one or more authorized and approved Sunday school workers for this work. Let us set our goal for fifty. New Orleans District leads all other districts in this special work.

The New Orleans City Elementary Council meeting, Sept. 14, was held at First Church at 3 o'clock. The leading subject before this council was "Children's Week."

A large number of our Sunday schools observed Promotion Day last Sunday, Sept. 28.

It is expected that every school in our State will put on this fall a membership campaign. Recently the Sunday school at Alexandria co-operated with the church in a campaign of city-wide survey and visitation. Their Standard Training School is in session this week, with a bright promise of being the largest Standard Training School in the State. The recent survey will mean much towards making Children's Week a great event in that school.

Sunday, Sept. 21, was a red-letter day in First Church Sunday school at Shreveport. This day might be called a membership campaign, for they had 2,862 present, counting the Four Square Bible Class, which had an attendance of 1,632. This school reported a total enrollment to the last Annual Conference of 2,464. This included Home Department of 291 and a Cradle Roll of 180. If we should add this to 2,862, it would give this school an increase over last year of 879. What is true of First Church is true of many of our Sunday schools this year. We hope that the preachers will give special attention to the reports they make at Annual Conference concerning the membership of their Sunday schools.

Dr. W. W. Drake, Conference Superintendent of Missionary Education and Extension, is very much interested in his great department. He will visit the Alexandria Training School Wednesday, Oct. 1, and will deliver an address at the assembly period, 10 a. m., on "The Missionary Message, and Methods That Will Make Our Sunday School Missionary."

Dean R. E. Smith, Superintendent of Adult Work, and teacher of the great Bible class at Shreveport, will visit the Training School at Minden and present the Adult Work at one of the morning assembly periods.

Rev. H. L. Johns, another Conference-wide superintendent of Sunday school work, will have charge of the assembly period in the Training School at Alexandria on Thursday, Oct. 2, which will be given over to Intermediate-Senior work.

There was a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Shreveport Standard Training School last week at the Chamber of Commerce, and definite plans were laid out to make the school of 1924 one of the best. Dr. Lutz is director of this school, and Dr. R. H. Wynn will have charge of the devotional period each day. The courses in this school are three general and four special.

GOOD WORK AT MENDENHALL AND D'LO.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Mendenhall and D'Lo charge of the Methodist church, in session at Mendenhall on this the 22d day of September, 1924, with Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder of the Jackson District, present and presiding.

The report of W. M. Lofton, Conference secretary of the Methodist church at Mendenhall, would most respectfully represent and show to the conference the following facts, to-wit:

Since making my report on the 12th day of January, 1924, there has been no change made in the personnel of any of the committees of the church.

It was not my good fortune to be present at either the second or third quarterly conference, and so my report will date from the first quarterly conference, held on the 12th day of January, 1924. From that date up to the beginning of our revival meeting, which was recently held, there had been five accessions to the church, and all by certificate.

Our revival meeting was held, beginning on the 25th day of August, 1924, and ending on the 4th day of Septemher, 1924, and resulted in the accession of nineteen members to our church, seventeen being by haptism, one by vow, and the other by certificate. So, during this Conference year, we have received twenty-four members into the church. During our revival meeting, our pastor was assisted hy Rev. Earl B. Moll, and the church was considerably revived.

This ought to have resulted in an increased attendance at our Sunday school, hut such is not the case. We still have about 40% of our membership in the Sunday school, and this should be increased. Our church roll shows a membership of 204, and there is no good reason why most of them could not he in the Sunday school. During the entire Conference year, our pastor, Rev. J. L. Greenway, has been loyal to his charge, and his sermons on each and every occasion have always been deeply spiritual and of a high intellectual order. We commend him for his high Christian character and his devotion to the Master's work.

We understand that this will be the last quarterly conference over which you, our beloved presiding elder, will preside, and we cannot conclude this report without expressing to you what you have meant to us during your present service. As you go to other fields of labor, we would have you know that you carry with you the personal love and esteem of those who have been thrown with you here, and it is our earnest wish and prayer that the great Father above will rebuke your physical infirmities and make you strong and well.

Respectfully submitted this the 22d day of September, 1924.

W. M. LOFTON,
Conference Secretary.

On motion, the foregoing report of W. M. Lofton, conference secretary, was adopted by the fourth quarterly conference as a tribute of said conference to the retiring presiding elder, and also the pastor in charge, and it is sent to the Christian Advocate with request that same be published.

W. M. LOFTON,
Conference Secretary.

NEW HOME LAMP MAKES ITS OWN FUEL.

Brilliant 300 Candle Power Light Turns Night Into Day.

A new home lamp which makes its own fuel, gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights and costs only one cent a night is the latest achievement of Mr. W. C. Fowler, 221 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. According to experts the new lamp literally "Turns night into day." It has no wick or chimney and makes no smoke nor odor.

It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light and he will send one of his new lamps free to any reader of N. O. Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person in each community to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Write him today.—Adv.

SMOTHERING SPELLS

LADY SAYS SHE SUFFERED FROM A BURNING SENSATION, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, UNTIL SHE TOOK BLACK-DRAUGHT

Signal, Miss.—"For a year or longer I had indigestion, and had it bad," says Mrs. E. S. Holman, of this place. "Everything I ate hurt me. I would have burning in my stomach and smothering spells, and after meals feel right dizzy. My head would begin to ache, and I would want to lie down, but felt I couldn't for I would smother.

"Unless one has had such trouble, they don't know what it is. I was talking to a neighbor one day and told her how I had been affected. She told me it was indigestion and to try Black-Draught, which I did. I took a few large doses and then a pinch after meals, and for fully four months now I haven't had indigestion. I eat whatever I please and when I please, but keep up the Black-Draught—just an occasional dose."

When you have a feeling of discomfort after meals, try the suggestion above. Thousands of people have found that Black-Draught promotes relief in indigestion by stimulating the liver and stomach to perform their normal functions.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, held its annual meeting in the Brookhaven church, Sept. 17, 1924, with Mrs. Mamie Meyer, district secretary, presiding.

This was a great and inspiring meeting, with more than one hundred in attendance.

We had as honored guests our very own Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, now Council officer, with headquarters in Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Mahel Porter, Mrs. L. W. Alford, and Mrs. C. L. Lampton, Conference officers; Revs. J. T. Abney, A. M. Broadfoot, H. L. Norton, A. S. Oliver, and J. L. Sells, pastors of the district; Rev. W. T. Griffin, representative of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., and two Chinese girls, students at Whitworth College.

The program for the day was as follows:

Devotional, conducted by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot.

Encouraging and optimistic message from the district secretary, Mrs. Meyer.

Little Miss Smith, of the Junior Auxiliary, Centenary Church, McComb, and Mrs. Harkey, of Meadville Adult Auxiliary, told in a most interesting way "How we made the Honor Roll."

Mrs. Sam Coleman, of the Brookhaven church, sang sweetly, "My Redeemer and My Lord."

Miss Porter gave many helpful suggestions in a talk on, "How an Auxiliary Can Be a Good Samaritan."

Brief statements were made by Auxiliary representatives of general conditions and work done in their respective Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Lipscomb told of the new provision now being made for the solitary, isolated woman of the church, giving her opportunity for missionary service through the "Gibson Auxiliary."

Miss Porter explained the plan for taking eare of reports, etc., of this new work.

Mrs. L. W. Alford talked in her impressive way of the very urgent need and great importanee of Junior Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Lipscomb emphasized the fact that it is the definite responsibility of the Adult Auxiliaries to organize and nurture the Young People's and Junior Auxiliaries. She also explained some of the newer and very important phases of the Woman's Missionary Society; as the "Carry On Plan," the new "Bible and Mission Study Coures," etc.

Prayer was voiced by Rev. H. L. Norton, and the morning session adjourned.

A most bountiful and dellghtful luncheon was served in the sub-story of the chureh.

Afternoon session: Song, "O, Zion, Haste;" prayer, hy Rev. A. S. Oliver; roll call.

The elimax of interest was reached when Mrs. Lipscomb, in a special message, talked to us in her magnetic way of "Our Love Gift for the Belle Bennett Memorial." Even the mere mention of our sainted leader's name brings precious memories of her great and good life that inspire and urge us to carry on in her name for the Master.

Miss Porter explained the "Work Plan of the Belle Bennett Memorial."

Mrs. L. W. Alford talked with reference to the "Belle Bennett Prayer League."

Rev. W. T. Griffin told us something of the splendid work heing done by the Orphanage, of some of the needs, suggesting ways in which we can encourage and help.

Mrs. L. H. Bowen gave an interesting and forceful talk on "Stewardship and Tithing."

Mrs. C. L. Lampton, in a touching, sympathetic way, talked of the "Kind of Social Service Work Needed in Our Community."

Miss Porter reminded us of our "Membership Contest" now on with the North Mississippi Conference Society, and urged every Auxiliary and member to exert their very best efforts to win this contest.

Minutes were read, after which Rev. W. T. Griffin closed the meeting with prayer and henediction.

Be sure to count your attendance on your Methodist reports of Study classes.

MRS. D. BEACH CARRE,
Corresponding Secretary, Louisiana Conference; Chairman, School of Missions.

FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. J. B. Randolph is closing out a successful four-year term as presiding elder on the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference. Since his eoming to us, ten new churches have been erected, and eight new parsonages. Assessments for pastors' salaries have been increased twenty per cent, Epworth Leagues have increased from four to twenty-one. Four years ago there were only thirteen Missionary Societies; there are thirty-five now. There have been 4,400 additions to the ehurch. He takes great interest in evangelizing the masses. That is the secret of his success. Ho owns two district gospel tents, which he bought and paid for with his own money, and turned them, and every evangelist he could agreeably help secure, over to his preachers, and said, "Save the people." We can tell what a man loves by where he puts his money. He looks well after the details of the work. He is a safo adviser for the bishop in appointing the preachers.

During my revival eampaign, I had the pleasure of heing with another very fine presiding elder, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of the Columbus District. Brother Mayo, the pastor of High Point charge, had arranged for a circuit-wide revival, including four churches. We located the tent at old Center Ridge, and continued the meeting twelve days, part of the time three services daily. We had at least one hundred and fifty eonversions in and out of the ehurch. One night we made a special appeal to those whose names were on ehureh registers, but were unsaved; about one hundred men and women came forward to the anxious seats, and after prayers in their behalf, one hundred and seven professed to have found the Savior during the hour. That is the seeret of the worldly condition of many church people to-day—they are not saved, and need the mourners' beneh.

I never saw it done before, but Brother McIlwain held the third qnarterly conference of three eharges under our tent at ono and the same time—Louisville, Noxapater, and High Point. He did it with success and without confusion. During the preaching hour he said he never saw so many come forward before to a proposition to pay tithe. He made the writer preach. I learned the secret of his success. The people love him. It was uplifting to be among that great multitude of people and hear so many nice things said of their beloved presiding elder. He knows how. The appreciation of the people is easily won. Most people have sense. A preacher owes it to God and souls so to conduct himself in the work of the ministry that tho people become his willing followers. Some preachers ought to study how this is done. It is easily learned. It can never be done by showing partiality. Treat all kindly and nice. Speak to every member everywhere, whether he has on good clothes or not. Be sincere in living a pure, godly life. People watch you. Don't have many pets, lest some might feel inclined to let your pets pay your salary. Never tell merchants that you as a preacher ought to buy goods at reduced prices. Leave that up to them absolutely. You are not filling a beggar's position. Don't slander your job. You do the cause an injustice and lose dollars and cents in the long run. God is your Father.

Brother Mayo is doing a good work. His people love him. We have had some fine meetings this year.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

An Appeal to Leaguers.

Dear Mississippi Conference Epworthians: Vacation days are over. During the summer months there has been a tendency to let up in the work, much to the shame of us workers; but with the bright, crisp autumn days before us, it is high time that (if you will pardon the slang) we make the work hum in the Master's vineyard.

One quarter of the Epworth League year has already passed, and we should begin actively, if we have not already done so, the raising of our African Special subscriptions. When we make these pledges we have made a sacred promise to raise this fund, and I hope that there will not be a League, either Junior, Intermediate or Senior, in the Conference that will fall short of going over the top in this respect before next June.

Are you measuring up to the Standard of Efficiency? If not, you should begin this work. The gold and blue seals in your chapter meeting place stand out as a memorial of the work you are doing. What will your record be at the end of the year?

The young people of to-day in the Epworth League are the church people of to-morrow. Are you co-operating with your pastor, helping him in his efforts to carry up a good report at the meeting of the Annual Conference in Canton on Nov. 5? Your willingness to help him will serve as a great inspiration as he is winding up the final month's work at your church.

As a result of the vacation fever striking me about the middle of July, I have shamefully neglected the work of sending in material to the Advocate. However, it is impossible for one person alone to gather the news of seven districts, and I want to urge that all Conference and district officers, as well as local Leaguers and pastors, mail into me at Box 711, Hattiesburg, just the activity at the present. What you are doing may serve as a bolster to some other League, and the Advocate column is the best way I know of to exchange ideas "Leagueally." Let me hear from you.

RALPH HAYS.

Letter from Conference Junior Superintendent.

Mrs. W. E. Potts, our Conference Junior Superintendent, has returned from what she terms the "Land of the Sky—Junaluska," and she gives below an account of her visit:

Dear Conference President and Fellow Leaguers: First of all, I wish to thank each and every one of you for bestowing upon me the honor of being one of your Mississippi Conference representatives to the Epworth League Assembly at Lake Junaluska, N. C. I'm sure I deem it a great privilege as well as a responsibility to have represented such a fine bunch of young people.

Go with me for a few minutes and I shall try to tell you about the things that impressed me most.

I arrived at Lake Junaluska Thursday afternoon, the 14th, in time for one of those "noted Cherokee suppers." At 7 p.m. our series of Vesper services was begun, conducted by Rev. W. B. Garrett, of Charlotte, N. C. May I say that these services were indeed a spiritual feast throughout the Assembly?

Dr. Arthur J. Moore, of San Antonio, Tex., brought stirring messages from the Assembly theme, "And Ye Shall Receive Power," at the evening services. Dr. Moore captivated his audience of young people, and I believe every life was made better by the preaching of the good old gospel of Jesus and his love. Dr. Clovis Chappell, of Memphis, Tenn., brought us the last three evening messages, and it is needless to say how much we enjoyed them.

I wish that all our officers and Leaguers throughout our League connection had the opportunity of taking class work in the Assembly. I'm sure that I have never seen a better corps of consecrated men and women, and after two weeks of study under these experts in their particular line, all of us feel that we are better prepared to do more efficient work for the Master.

No, we didn't work quite all the time, for Southern Methodists' "Phunology Man" provided wholesome recreation, and we Mississippians must say, "Hat's off to Mr. Harbin, the phun maker."

By way of parenthesis, Leaguers, "Ole Miss" won second place Stunt Night—do you feel proud of your Mississippi Conference? I do, and let's work harder for a larger representation next year.

Our Junior and Intermediate work was stressed more than anything else, realizing that our Junior boys and girls of to-day will be our Senior young men and women of to-morrow, and if they have had proper Junior training they will come to us as real leaders. Our leaders are waking up to the fact that if our Senior Leagues' difficulties are overcome, we must direct our attention to the training of the Juniors and Intermediates, and, as your Conference Superintendent of Juniors, I am appealing to each of you to rally to the front and let's make the Junior work the biggest work of all, for it is, and let us realize we have a wonderful field for service in shaping and moulding these young lives of our church.

How we wish that all of you could have been with us in the "Land of the Sky!" The scenic view of the great mountain chain moves us to recognize the wonderful and mysterious creation of the Almighty, and more than once I had to exclaim: "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

Leaguers, go to Junaluska for inspiration, training, and wholesome recreation. A trip to Eagle's Nest Mountain will do you good. "Be a Junaluska booster!"

Again I must thank you for these two weeks of mountain top experiences and I assure you that I shall do everything in my power to promote the Junior work of our Conference.

MRS. W. E. POTTS.

FROM INDIAN BAYOU, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: If you will permit, I shall be glad to give an account of our labors and work this year on the Indian Bayou charge. The outlook for a good closing up of the Conference year is encouraging indeed. This church has full time, which is a very uncommon thing for a country church.

We have two afternoon appointments, Bethel and Hebron. Brother J. W. Faulk, pastor of the Dubach church, assisted us at Hebron, and did some great and helpful preaching. In this community is where Brother Faulk was reared. He is loved and appreciated by his people, who have always known him. I hope to begin a meeting at Bethel on next third Sunday night. I will do the preaching myself.

Brother H. T. Young, the pastor at De Ridder, did the preaching for us in the Indian Bayou meeting. His son, Harold, played the trombone for us, and did it well—he was a great help in the meeting. Brother Young's preaching attracted our people and got hold of their hearts. We had a great revival. Signs following are evidence that we did have a revival, for our people are on the job since. Some one said: "Look for a lull after the revival;" not so this time. The congregations are good and the people have a mind to work. We had forty-six accessions to the church on profession of faith. Young will go into the evangelistic work after Conference as general evangelist. We regret to see him leave the pastorate, but undobtedly the evangelistic work is his field. I am sure his labors in this field will mean much to the church as well as to the kingdom.

We have a great and interesting people throughout the bounds of the Indian Bayou charge. Some of the salt o' the earth are among them. We only wish that all could get the vision of the possibilities here—how the kingdom would go forward!

The writer assisted in other meetings off his charge this summer; first, at Reeves, with Brother J. I. Hoffpauir, pastor. The meeting lasted only five days, but was good for the time—few accessions, but quite a number blessed. Next, with Brother J. W. Faulk, at Lisbon, on the Dubach charge—a short meeting but good. Interest was fine day and night. The folks were blessed. There were ten or twelve accessions to the church. Kindness and hospitality abound in these people. I believe they will clean up this year with their pastor on the finances. Next, we assisted in a tabernacle meeting at Center Point, which is a project Dr. John Paul, president of Taylor University, started for the purpose of taking care of our people in that section. It is an independent institution, but Methodist doctrine is put forward. The doctrine of full salvation as taught by John Wesley and John Fletcher is preached intelligently and sanely, without frills or fanaticism. Dr. Paul was there right from Indian Springs camp meeting, where he was one of the leading preachers this year. The congregations were good and the meeting was helpful. Let the gospel be preached and the people be reached.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauscaless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boshmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

Why You Need Iron—

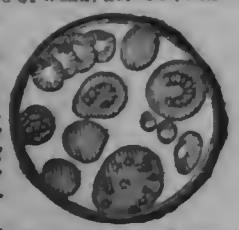
To Make You Strong and "Brainy" and Put the Power Into Your Blood To Overcome Disease Germs

The food you eat contains carbon. When your food is digested it is absorbed from the intestines into the blood. When the carbon in your food comes in contact with the oxygen carried by the iron in your blood, the carbon and oxygen unite and by so doing they give off tremendous energy, thereby giving you great force, strength and endurance. Without iron your blood carries no oxygen and without oxygen there is nothing to unite with the carbon in your food, so that what you eat does you no good—you do not get any strength from it—it is like putting coal into a stove without a fire. You cannot get any heat unless the coal unites with the fire.

Impoverished blood corpuscles highly magnified.

The strongest weapon with which to prevent and overcome colds, pneumonia, kidney trouble, rheumatism, nervous prostration, in fact almost any disease or disease germs is plenty of good rich, pure blood, strength, energy and endurance and the greatest energy carrier in the body is organic iron, not metallic iron which people usually take, but organic iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron contained in what is known as organic Nuxated Iron, which may be had from almost any druggist. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength, energy and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

It has been used and highly recommended by former United States Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of U. S. Courts, many physicians and prominent men.



Healthy blood corpuscles highly magnified

Over 4,000,000 people are now using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed or the manufacturers will refund your money. Sold by all druggists in tablet form only.

A VISIT HOME.

Dear Mr. Editor: If you will give me a little space in your good paper, I will give your readers a brief report of my recent visit to my old home in Mississippi. It embraced my fiftieth anniversary as a licensed preacher in the Methodist church. It was a real pleasure for me to be permitted to preach and hold a meeting in the church where I was converted, where I offered my first public prayer and preached my first sermon, and to hold another meeting in the church where I was given license to preach fifty years ago.

While there, I was entertained in my brother's home, who, with his consecrated Christian wife and interesting sons and daughters, made my stay with them exceedingly pleasant. I also enjoyed the hosupitality of many of my old friends and schoolmates of other days. Besides this, I was associated in revival work with Revs. B. F. Bullard, D. H. Crowson, A. A. Martin, and Brother Carter, who treated me with real brotherly consideration and whose companionship I enjoyed very much.

The quarterly conference of Calhoun City charge was held at Big Creek while I was there, and that princely presiding elder, Rev. L. P. Wasson, was in charge and preached a great sermon on Saturday at 11 a. m. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney was also present, and gave us a strong talk on Sunday school work. It was a real pleaure to see and hear Brother Gladney, who, with four others who became ministers, was received into the church under my ministry while I was serving on the Buena Vista circuit in 1880-81-82. They became useful ministers and have filled some of the best appointments in North Mississippi and other Conferences. Thus the good work goes on.

When I was licensed to exhort, Rev. Amos Kendall was presiding elder, and Rev. Ben H. Bunnells was the preacher in charge, and a year later Rev. J. H. Brooks (Uncle Joe) was presiding elder, and examined me for license to preach, while Rev. J. M. Hampton was in charge of the work, then known as the Calhound circuit, and embracing most of the territory in Calhoun County. These good men and useful ministers have all gone to their reward in heaven, but their work still abides, as many are still at work who were converted under their ministry.

I am nearing my sixty-eighth milestone in life; still, as evidence that I have some vitality left, I have preached ninety-six sermons since the 1st of July and done much other work. I have passed through much tribulation during the last twenty-five years or more, but the good Lord has sustained me by his grace, and I hope yet to do a lot of good work, if according to his will, and thus make a safe "home run" for the better land.

I must not close these words without mentioning short visits to Okolona, Houston, West Point, and Coffeeville, where I met with our pastors, Brothers Cunningham, Keethan, Lipscomb, and Baker, who, through their kindness, made me feel quite at home. It will doubtless be remembered by some of the older people that I was thirteen years a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and spent most of the time in the bounds of the Aberdeen and Columbus Districts. I recall pleasant associations with Brothers D. W. Babb, J. W. Bell, J. W. Dorman, D. L. Cogdell, W. W. Wollard, J. W. Raper, N. G. Augustus, and others, who still live, while many have crossed over. As I entertain some hope of attending the session of their Conference at West Point, where I was once pastor, maybe I will get to meet these brethren again. But I must stop. If this paper is accepted and published I may write more of the work later.

E. G. KILGORE.

THE "AFTERMATH" AND ELSE.

I speak of the aftermath of our revival at Pearl River Avenue, McComb. Many of us know that the aftermath is not so good, a lot of times, but the revival spirit continues and the collection grew after the revival until we shall almost, if not entirely, reach our goal for the parsonage this year—the payment of $1,000 on the debt—and between five and six hundred came as a result of the meeting. The church asked the pastor to hold the meeting, with our choir leader to conduct the singing, so the whole collection went on the debt on the parsonage. This year was designated in the beginning as "Parsonage Year"—our special financial efforts being in the direction of paying this debt—and then doing what we can for other assessments. We hope to have a "level column" at Canton, but we saw this debt had to be made less—didn't pay much last year because of so many other calls—so we are proud of what we've paid this year (considering our financial strength), and we are going to do our "levelest" to bring up the other assessments.

Just lack fifteen members of having doubled the membership since the present pastorate began. The good Lord, with the hearty co-operation of the church, has made this gain in membership possible. Happy and very hopeful.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THREE CLASSES OF PREACHERS.

One of our bishops recently said that preachers are divided into three classes, as follows:

1. Those whom everybody wants.
2. Those whom anybody will take.
3. Those whom nobody will have.

The mere stating of the classification is sufficient to produce at least a moment's reflection on the part of those who are affected thereby. To give point to his reflections, each preacher might ask himself the direct question, "To which class do I belong?"

A GO-TO-CHURCH MOVEMENT.

It is a significant fact that practically all the Protestant denominations of America are entering vigorously upon a go-to-church movement that has as its end the bringing of all the people to regular attendance upon the services of the sanctuary. Certainly the movement is to be commended. The full force of a church's influence in a community is not to be measured by the number of those who attend its services; but it is self-evident that the gospel message cannot produce its full effect unless it is brought to bear directly upon the individual life. The more people there are at church regularly, the more there will be who will have to face for themselves the issues of eternity.

In connection with the go-to-church movement, it may be well to consider briefly some of the reasons why people do not go to church. In every community—even those that are distinguished for the high moral character of their citizenship—there is a considerable element of the population that is not church-going; and in many communities the number of those that attend divine worship regularly is pitifully small. Why do not all the people go to church?

1. Some people do not go to church because they are wicked and, therefore, hold in contempt God himself and all the means of grace he has provided for their benefit. Their hearts are set to do evil, and they do not want to encourage any institution that is diametrically opposed to their manner of life, or come under the influence of any agency that would make them realize the heinousness of their evil passions and deeds. Even though they know the gospel can save them, they do not want to be saved—they want to continue in their sins.

2. There are others that do not go to church because the church is a matter of indifference with them. They are not especially wicked so far as their conduct is concerned, but they feel no vital interest in spiritual things and they do not take the church into consideration in the ordering of their lives. Sunday simply means to them a cessation from the ordinary work of the week—not an occasion for the development of their spiritual natures and the cultivation of spiritual graces. So they do not think about going to church.

3. There are some people in every community that do not go to church because they are too lazy to go. They have "worked hard" all the week—so they say—and they must needs have time in which to replenish their diminished physical and mental forces. "Sunday is a day of rest, anyway," they contend; and often they add, "What is more religious than resting quietly at home on this sacred day?" They will not dispute with those who claim great blessings from the habit of church attendance—they sigh and say they "just can't make it." Too lazy!

4. Others fail to go to church because they are too weak-willed to carry out their good intentions. They will admit the value of the church in the community, and acknowledge their own obligation to attend its services, and profess the intention of taking up the duty and forming the habit of going to church; but when the day comes, their good intentions become vague, their determination oozes away, and they weakly yield to the adroit suggestion of the devil that next Sunday will do as well.

5. There are usually a few people at least in every community who do not go to church because they do not "like the preacher," or because they are not on friendly terms with somebody else who does go to church regularly. With such, church-going is not a matter of principle, but of expediency. The great matter of their duty to God, themselves, and their fellow-men does not weigh heavily with them because they allow their little personal likes and dislikes to control their actions. It is the proverbial case of "cutting off their noses to spite their faces."

6. Some people do not go to church because they claim there is nothing worth going for. They complain that the spirit of fellowship is lacking; that the singing is dull and lifeless; that the sermon is merly a recitation of platitudes, that "the hungry sheep look up and are not fed." In too many cases this indictment may be too true—but never a service yet has been held in the name of the Lord in which some good was not to be discerned.

7. Some people do not go to church because the duty and privilege of doing so have never been specifically called to their attention. The church has let them alone—and they have let the church alone. So long as the church seemed to be satisfied with the amount of business it was doing for the Kingdom of God, with no apparent effort to enlarge and extend its operations, they have been content to remain unrelated to its program and uninterested in its activities.

So long as there is one individual in a community that does not go to church, so long will there be need for a go-to-church movement; the need of such movement in any given community is multiplied by the number of those who ought thus to be reached. The purpose of getting people to go to church is not, of course, merely to get a crowd, to increase the financial resources, to make the church look prosperous; the purpose is to bring people within the range of the gospel message that they may experience the power of the gospel unto their own salvation; that the forces of the Kingdom may be recruited to the point where all the forces of evil may be overthrown; that the church itself may be tremendously strengthened as the agency by and through which the Kingdom of God is to be established, maintained, and extended to the uttermost parts of the earth. The normal way, the easiest way, the most effective way for Christian people to carry forward Christian work is through the church. We are doing a great thing, therefore, when we get people to go to church.

WILL UNIFICATION CURE OVERLAPPING?

Those who are opposed to the pending plan of unification base their opposition in part upon the contention that it will not cure the evil of overlapping work between the two churches. In support of that contention, they say that the plan nowhere specifically provides for the doing away with the setting up of altar against altar. It would seem to be sufficient answer to this objection to say that the cure of this very evil was one of the main causes leading to the adoption of the plan. Surely the plan will work toward the accomplishment of one of the main purposes that brought it into being!

HOW BIG IS YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL?

Our Sunday school officials have recently given us some startling figures. They tell us that there are about 700,000 members of our church not in the Sunday schools of the church; that there are nearly 3,000 congregations in the church without Sunday schools; that there are not fewer than 3,000,000 white boys and girls for whom we are directly responsible that are not now being reached even in a nominal way; that there are 10,000,000 people in the South not enrolled in any Sunday school. In the vastness of these figures and the wide scope of territory covered by them, we may miss their real significance. To bring out the real meaning of these figures, suppose we ask ourselves, "How many are enrolled in my Sunday school, and how many in the community ought to be in it?" Then go get 'em!

AGAIN I ASK, WHO MISUNDERSTANDS AND WHO IS MISLED?

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

Some time ago I published an article under the caption, "Who Misunderstands and Who Is Misled?"

Some weeks after it appeared, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon undertook to answer it.

I have waited to reply to his answer until he could pass it through the papers of the church, the editors of some of which found it necessary to print it in sections on account of its length.

But I suppose I need not delay longer, but may reply now, without doing him injustice.

1. Bishop Mouzon casts his long article in six sections marked by Roman numerals, the first of which begins as follows:

"It would seem to the average Methodist that the men who drew the plan of unification are somewhat more likely to understand it than those who made no contribution toward framing it."

It is hardly possible for Bishop Mouzon or anybody else to reduce all the Methodists to an average, and then say correctly and authoritatively what that average man might think on any subject.

But nothing is more easy to understand than the fact that men often misconceive and overestimate a thing they have framed. The bias of authorship inclines them to overlook its defects and ascribe to it excellencies which it does not possess.

The Scriptures warn us that a man may "think of himself more highly than he ought to think;" and again it is said, "Every way of a man is right in his own eyes."

However, I have not said that the men who drew the plan did not understand it, nor have I claimed that I understand it better than they. It is contained in a little leaflet of eight pages, and where it is definite anybody can understand it. But on some very vital points it is quite equivocal in its purport and purpose; and on these points the Northern and Southern advocates are by no means agreed. This was the contention of my article which Bishop Mouzon attempts to answer.

The gist of my article was contained in these pertinent questions, which Bishop Mouzon has signally failed to answer:

"If the speeches and writings of the Southern advocates of the proposed plan of unification differ so widely from the utterances of its Northern advocates, what would probably be the heat of the discussion of the subject in the first General Conference of the united church, if the plan were adopted?

"With such contradictory interpretations of a most essential feature of the plan, what agreement could be expected of the Southern delegates and the Northern delegates in the first General Conference? And if either side blocked the action proposed by the other side, what sort of an explosion would follow?

"Who misunderstands this plan? Do the Southern advocates of it misinterpret it? Or, do its Northern advocates misinterpret it?

"Who is being misled? Are the white members of the Southern Church being misled? Or, are the Negro members of the Northern Church being misled?"

I will not say that Bishop Mouzon sidesteps these questions; for that would be to accuse him of intentional evasiveness. But I will say what is obvious, namely, that he misses the mark when he tries to show that I set up my interpretation of the plan against the interpretation put upon it by its framers.

I showed by exact quotations from their published utterances that the Northern advocates and the Southern advocates of the plan were not agreed among themselves concerning the status of Negro bishops in the united church proposed in the plan of unification.

For example, I quoted Bishop I. B. Scott, a Negro bishop of the Northern Methodist Church, who said over his own signature in a carefully prepared article:

"Bishop Mouzon, chairman of their Commission on Unification, in an attempt to quiet the fears of his brethren, says, in an article sent out to the papers of his church and others of the secular press. It is this:

"'One of the finest things about our present plan of unification is that it completely avoids the difficult question of the colored man in the church by leaving us to deal with it as we please and leaving our Northern brethren to deal with it as they think best.'

Now with regard to our bishops he says:

"'They were elected on a separate ballot on which the name of no white man could be written. They were not voted for at the time and on the ballot when the white bishops were elected.'

"As to the manner of the election of these brthren it might he well to say it meant a different thing to us from what our Southern friends seem to understand it. The motion to elect the colored bishops in this way was made by a colored man and welcomed by all our delegates for the reason that they feared that some white brother might secure the election, and without the least thought that it would give us a different grade of bishops."

Evidently Bishop Scott disagrees with Bishop Mouzon. Which of them misunderstands and which is misled?

I now give an utterance on the same subject that was made by Bishop W. P. Thirkield, shortly after the election of Bishops Jones and Clair, the two active Negro bishops of the Northern Church. He said, through the Southwestern Christian Advocate of New Orleans: "Their election by a body of 800 delegates from the whole world, not grudgingly but with contagious enthusiasm, and a vision of its significance as related to the whole world, is an event of far-reaching importance. It forever gives assurance that ours is not a white man's church, but a church as broad as humanity and as all inclusive as the redemptive blood of Jesus Christ."

Bishop Thirkield understood the significance of the election of the two Negro bishops, and he probably holds to-day the same sentiments. He is a member of the Northern Commission of Unification and doubtless interprets the proposed plan of unification in accordance with what he said concerning the election of the two Negro bishops. Does Bishop Mouzon agree with him?

Bishop Thirkield did not overstate the degree of enthusiasm with which the measure was adopted that provided for the election of two Negro bishops; for the members of the General Conference arose spontaneously on its unanimous adoption and sang Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which begins with the line,

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord," and contains the stanza referring to the federal troops in the Civil War,

"I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel:
'As ye deal with my contemners so with you my grace shall deal;'
Let the hero horn of woman crush the serpent with his heel,
Since God is marching on."

Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, is authority for the statement that a Negro delegate after the election and ordination of the two Negro bishops exclaimed, "To-day is the day of our ecclesiastical emancipation!" Upon this exclamation Dr. Spencer remarked editorially: "His words were not an exaggeration. The consecration of Robert Elijah Jones and Mathew Wesley Clair to the identical office and in the identical language as that used in the consecration of the fifteen white bishops eliminated forever and forever any semblance of a color line in the Methodist Episcopal Church."

That expression of opinion by Dr. Spencer and the words of Bishop Thirkield disagree utterly with the opinion which Bishop Mouzon expressed to an unnamed traveler on a train in Oklahoma, and with which that unnamed preacher agreed. Evidently somebody among the four must misunderstand the meaning of the matter and some of them must be misled.

The Episcopal Address to the Northern General Conference at which the two Negro bishops were elected was prepared and read by Bishop W. F. McDowell, chairman of the Northern Commission, and in it was incorporated this paragraph, with much else of kindred import:

"Union is not desirable unless it is right. For the union of like-minded bodies, bodies that are one in heart and spirit, any person might heartily labor. On the other hand, the prevention of a formal union between bodies that are not one in heart and spirit would be a worthy endeavor. Because of its tremendous importance the union of any churches must be on the right basis. The goal is so desirable that we must not be turned aside into a false path or give up our effort to find a true one.

"We must ask of all movements for union or federation four questions and determine our attitude to them by the answer they make: 1. Does the movement make for a real brotherhood of Christian people? 2. Does the movement make for the real unity of all sections, races, nations, and classes within Christ's church? 3. Does the movement make for unity of life, unity of sacrificial, atoning purpose toward man, unity in the holiness and passion of the church's life, like the unity between Christ and the Father? 4. Does the movement make for evangelistic efficiency and the triumph of the cross among all peoples, all classes, all races, and on all continents? By its answer to these searching questions the movement must be tested both in its general and in its particular features.

"For the church of Christ is not a racial church. The church of Christ is not a national, sectional or class church. Plans of union that sectionalize the church are not plans for Christian union."

There is no slightest reason to believe that Bishop McDowell has renounced, or modified in the least degree, the principles thus enunciated. Doubtless he believes the proposed plan of unification is in perfect harmony with them. Otherwise he would oppose it as he opposed the plan of 1920.

Does Bishop Mouzon agree with Bishop McDowell?

Rev. J. U. King, a Negro preacher, was sent by the Northern General Conference as fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, assembled at Louisville, Ky., May, 1924. In the course of his address on May 9 he made eulogistic reference to the passage in Bishop McDowell's Episcopal Address from which the foregoing extract is taken, and said:

"This classic chapter on universal brotherhood paved the way for the adoption of a special resolution which elevated two Negroes to the highest office in the gift of their brethren, unrestricted, unlimited, full-fledged bishops of the Methodist Church."

Does Bishop Mouzon agree with this interpretation of the action of the Northern General Conference?

Do his associates on the Southern Commission agree with this interpretation? Does Hon. H. H. White, who it is said drew the pending plan of unification, agree with it? If so, his views have changed since he wrote concerning the plan rejected by the Northern General Conference at Des Moines, May, 1920. On Jan. 30, 1920, Judge White published the following statement of his position on the status of the Negro in the united church:

"1. I am in favor of unification. 2. I do not believe that the time for unification has arrived, because the Northern Church has about 350,000 Negro members, who in my opinion will be a disturbing element, if the churches are united at this time. 3. I stand with the five members of the Southern Commission who voted 'No,' because the plan recognizes the principle of proportionate Negro representation, and I do not believe that Negroes should be granted this right or privilege. It is true that Negro representation by the present plan is limited to five per cent, but if the membership should increase to above that ratio they could logically, and I think they would, insist on a continuance of proportionate representation to any extent whatever.

"I assisted in framing the plan which is being submitted, and believe it is the most satisfactory plan that can be proposed at this time. If the Southern Church decided to concede the principle of proportionate representation, I shall abide by the decision; but personally I am opposed to it.

"(Signed) H. H. WHITE.

"Alexandria, La., Jan. 30, 1920."

The plan now proposed is, with respect to the status of the Negro in the united church, far more objectionable than the plan of 1920, which Judge White so strenuously and wisely opposed.

It gives Negro bishops (bishops not then in existence) official authority in the united church as the plan of 1920 did not. The following sections of the proposed plan refer to their place in the united church and are quoted in full.

Article V, Section 2, defining the powers of the proposed General Conference, gives that body authority as follows:

"To define and fix powers, duties, and privileges of the episcopacy; to fix number of bishops to be elected by the respective Jurisdictional Conferences and to provide in harmony with the historic practice of Episcopal Methodism for their consecration as bishops of the whole church."

The General Conference is thus empowered to tell each Jurisdiction how many bishops it may elect and of what sort, white or black. And it provides for the ordination of the bishops elected "as bishops of the whole church."

Article VI is as follows:

"The bishops of the two churches as at present constituted shall be the bishops of the united church without further action.

"Immediately after the union shall have been consummated the bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the church.

"A bishop may be asisgned to administer in any part of the church, provided that when he is assigned to administer within the jurisdiction other than that by which he was elected it shall be with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the jurisdiction involved."

By this section the Negro bishops are placed upon the same basis with all other bishops "of the united church without further action."

They also are included when it is said "the bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the church."

In the College of Bishops they have votes as do all other bishops and participate in arranging "for the superintendence of the work of the church." In the College of Bishops a majority of all determines issues there. It is not like the proposed General Conference in which each Jurisdiction votes separately and may veto what the other proposes. And one of the matters determined is the assignment of bishops. Negro bishops will thus participate in fixing the assignments of all the white bishops, both Northern and Southern.

They may be members of the Judicial Council, and it is certain the Negro members of the Northern Jurisdiction will be represented in that Council by a Negro bishop or by some other Negro. That Council passes upon all appeals and determines them by a majority vote. The appeals of white preachers, if the proposed plan is adopted, will be heard and determined by that tribunal. No Negro has ever been appointed to serve in the Supreme Court of the United States, but they may, and will, sit in the Supreme Judicial Council of Methodism, if the proposed plan of unification is adopted.

Dr. Claudius B. Spencer evidently had all this in mind when he wrote and published the following editorial:

"There seems to be an idea in some quarters that, when the two churches are united by the proposed plan, our Negro bishops will be made to feel that they are to go and sit down in the background. We have seen statements that the Negro bishops will not preside over the General Conference. We presume that is so. And there are a large number of white bishops who will not preside over the General Conference, since a very small number, possibly only two from each jurisdiction, will be the limit. It is unlikely that of the two designated, one Jurisdiction will name a colored bishop, because the selective process will name only those most highly endowed in parliamentary intricacies. But that a bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Jurisdiction will be cast aside because of his color is rather an exaggeration.

"At the last General Conference, Bishop Jones presided over a regular session of the General Conference and Bishop Clair assisted in the consecration of the bishops-elect, and with dignity and acceptability from every standpoint.

"Moreover, this resolution was passed by the General Conference:

"'Whereas, the treatment of colored peoples in all parts of the world by Christian nations, for the most part white, constitutes a direct challenge to the teachings and ethics of Jesus; therefore,

"'Be it resolved, That we, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, refuse to recognize as valid in church or State any discrimination on the basis of race or color; for "He hath made of one blood all nations," "We are also his offspring."'

"That is the flag of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The record made by the General Conference at Springfield does not disclose any particular symptoms that that flag will be hauled down. It is a fact that our Negro bishops are in every particular the equal, ecclesiastically speaking, of any other bishop, North or South; and would sit in every meeting of bishops where the united church met, nor would they be allowed to feel themselves out of place.

"Did our brothers in the other jurisdiction have any other idea? Who told them so?"

Manifestly Dr. Spencer thought, and doubtless continues to think, that some men in the Southern Jurisdiction did not so understand the matter, and did have a different idea. To whom did he refer if not to Bishop Mouzon and other Southern members of the Commission on Unification?

Who misunderstands and who is misled, Dr. Spencer or Bishop Mouzon?

In this connection it may be observed that Bishop Mouzon, speaking to the second paragraph of this editorial of Dr. Spencer, said in his article:

"At the recent session of the General Conference of the Methodist Church one of these bishops presided. (It is not mentioned, however, that this took place when the colored fraternal delegates were presented to the Conference.) A very appropriate thing, one would think."

I do not know why he omitted any reference to the participation of Bishop Clair in the ordination of the five white bishops elected at Springfield. It can scarcely be doubted that if the proposed plan of unification were adopted one or more Negro bishops would participate in all the ordinations of white bishops, both Northern and Southern, in the future. How would that affect Methodism in the South? Will all the sessions of the General Conference be held outside the South?

2. Bishop Mouzon seeks to break the force of these indisputable facts by saying of the proposed plan of unification that it leaves "our Northern brethren with their colored membership to work out their own problems." But when our church and the Northern Church pursue such opposing policies on this subject can it be truly said, as is declared by the proposed plan of unification, that these "two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, and in polity?" Would a General Conference of our church rise and sing spontaneously after an election of bishops "The Bonnie Blue Flag," or "The Battle Hymn of the Republic?"

My article, which Bishop Mouzon criticizes, was concerning the Negro bishops, and not about the Negro members of the Northern Church, and he wanders beyond the range of the subject I discussed in order to bring the colored membership under review. But he finally returns to the Negro bishops, and, makes this remarkable admission:

"Under the plan of unification there will be something not altogether different from a modified diocesan episcopacy. The Northern Diocese will be the Northern Jurisdiction; the Southern Diocese will be the Southern Jurisdiction. And within the Northern Jurisdiction there will be the colored Annual Conferences over which the colored bishops will have the right to preside. Each Jurisdiction will elect its own bishops."

"A modified diocesan Episcopacy" violates the constitutions of both churches, and conflicts with the following provision of the proposed plan itself:

"The General Conference shall not change or alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away episcopacy or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency."

Are the two churches so far apart in spirit and polity concerning the Negro question that they must violate their constitutions in order to provide for the Negro bishops of the Northern Church?

When Bishops Jones and Clair were elected it was done under an action of the Northern General Conference for "the election of two Negro General Superintendents." That was constitutional. And to call Negro bishops "General Superintendents' and then limit them to Negro Conferences is something worse than unconstitutional. Moreover, to give them authority to participate in "the superintendence of the work of the whole church" when they are confined in their labors to Negro Conferences does not seem to be just to them or wise for the church. How will they be able thus to contribute to the superintendence of the whole church?

Bishop Mouzon proceeds to say:

"Do not our people know that the Northern Methodist Church does not have mixed Annual Conferences? They have white Annual Conferences and colored Annual Conferences. The color line runs everywhere throughout their church."

In this he is not accurate. The color line does not "run everywhere throughout the church." Negroes are members, and official members, in churches in the North that are predominantly white. It is unfortunate that the policy of the Northern Church is not uniform with respect to this matter. It is one thing in the North and another thing in the South, and nobody can foresee the outcome of such a double-minded method. But let that pass.

UNIFICATION AND MODERNISM.

By Rev. George R. Stuart, D.D.

Nothing is easier and more dangerous to society than to stir wrong prejudices.

In the discussion of the unification of two great Christian bodies, matters of vital importance should be presented rather than accusations, calumniations, and false insinuations simply to stir and arouse a vicious and rebellious spirit in the minds of the masses of the people. It is easy to scare people with religious ghosts and hobgoblins. It is repeated over and over again by prejudice mongers that there is more so-called "modernism" in the Methodist Episcopal Church than in the Southern Methodist Church, and that a closer relation of this church would therefore be injurious to the Southern Methodist Church.

In one body twice as large as another it would be perfectly natural for everything in the larger body to be on a large proportion than in a smaller body. With a body twice as large as another there would be double the opportunity, of course, for the appearance of any class of men. Of course, carefully wrought out statistics would have to be proportioned before any sound or reliable assertion could be made.

For a man, who has been in the North very little, has had very slight means of personally examining the situation, and who has absolutely no statistics from which to make up a statement, to say that there is more modernism in the Northern Methodist Church than in the Southern Methodist Church is to make an assertion which is absolutely and solely his own opinion with no possible basis or evidence for establishing the truth of it. To arouse fears and prejudices among our orthodox and Bible-loving people by such statements which cannot be proved, seems to me unworthy of great Christian teachers.

I think no one who knows the facts would deny that in the past forty years I have had more frequent, constant, and vital contact with the Methodist Episcopal Church than any other one man in the South. I have been with them in their great camp meeting and Bible conference associations, such as Ocean Grove, N. J.; Round Lake,

N. Y.; Miami Valley, Lancaster, and many others in Ohio, and in fact all of their great assemblies from the Atlantic to the West and from the Lakes to the Southern borders. Many of these camp meetings I have attended as often as ten to nifteen years. I have held revival meetings in hundreds of the great northern cities—in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Pittsburgh; all of the leading cities of the State of Ohio—Toledo, Columbus, Dayton, Deleware, and otbers; and many of the cities of Illinois and Michigan; and, in fact, every Northern State and most of the leading Northern cities. For forty years I have been a constant and regular toiler among my brethren of the North. I ought to know them better than any other living Southern man. After this forty years of experience, associated with these Northern Methodist preachers in their Annual and District Conferences, in their chautauquas and Bible Conferences, in their camp meetings and pastoral charges, I ought to be able to judge of the spirit of orthodoxy and of the genuine evangelistic spirit. Some of the greatest revival meetings I have ever held, some of the most marvelous demonstrations of spiritual power have been in meetings with my brethren of the Northern Methodist Church.

I think, by those who know me, a candid statement will be accredited. In justice to our sister church, in justice to the great and worthy characters in that great church, I state that in all these forty years of constant association with these brethren of the North, in all the conferences and assemblies where men had opportunity to exploit modern and destrnctive theories, I do not remember hearing as many as a half dozen statements which I considered smacked of destructive or modernistic views.

Of course, one or two men giving forth material judged as under the head of what is commonly called higher criticism or modernism can attract more attention than one hundred men who are presenting unquestionably orthodox gospel Sunday after Sunday. For instance—there are hundreds of fine preachers in New York City wbo Sabbath after Sabbath are presenting gospel truth, the orthodoxy of which is unquestioned by anybody. You have not heard of the work of these great and good men. There is one man in New York City who thinks he is a scholar, and has created a tremendous sensation in church circles.

I visited one of the Indiana Conferences at Indianapolis last week to deliver the usual annual paid lecture to be applied on the local expenses of the Conference. I have never in my whole life received greater ovation, kindlier reception and more fraternal treatment. Bishop Berry dismissed his cabinet that all might attend the lecture and introduced me to the audience. In his introductory remarks he said: "One of the blessed anticipations that I have in the coming closer relations of the two great churches is in the hope that we may meet oftener, know better and love more the great and noble men of our sister Southern Church." There were more than sixteen hundred people packed in the large auditorium and standing around the walls and in the vestibules. I looked carefully, and if there was a single person in the audience whose hands were not engaged in the long and hearty applause I could not distinguish them. At the conclusion of the lecture, I said: "Dr. Berry, you are one of the older bishops of your church, and one whose orthodoxy has always been unquestioned, you have for years been connected with the great assemblies, especially the great Ocean Grove Assembly, I should like to ask you if you think modernism is making much headway in the Methodist Episcpal Church?" He said: "There is a small amount of what is called modernism here and there manifest in our church as there is in all the churches donbtless, but, in my judgment, the great mass of our church was never more abundant in faith and good works." He said: "The spirit of the church is often manifest in one or two actions of a General Conference. To show the spirit of our General Conference on that question, a resolution was offered advising the Sunday School Committee and a committee selecting the course of study for the young preachers to see to it that no trace of unorthodox material should be found. When this resolution was read before the Conference a brother quickly sought the floor and said in substance about this: 'These committees are of our creation and they are our servants to do our bidding. In so important a matter as this, I do not believe that our action should be advisory, but mandatory. I therefore move that we strike out the word "advise" and insert the word "demand;"' and this substitution was vigorously adopted by a unanimous vote."

Where do our brethren get reliable information or experience or anything else that would give them the authority to make this grave and unwarranted accusation against our sister church? And what object could there be in such a grave and unwarranted assertion other than to create among the masses of our people a wrong prejudice, and a wrong spirit and attitude toward our sister church?

In the name of the great Methodist Church in whose border I have labored with such delight and met such uniform fraternal treatment; in the name of our own church in its highest and better spirit, I beg to protest against the scattering of this unfair, unwholesome and unwarranted propaganda against our sister church.

Such propaganda will, of course, make no impression upon men and women who think and read, and know—but to a great mass of people who do not have the time and opportunity to read and think these questions through, this cheap political method of stirring evil prejudices in the masses will have a most unfortunate and regretable effect. These people are accustomed to follow leaders upon whom the church has put their stamp of approval, by placing them in prominent church position. When men who should be leaders in fostering brotherly love, co-operation, magnanimity of spirit and all the other blessed principles of peace and love, turn themselves to the work of stirring all kinds of suspicions and making all kinds of lower appeals to the masses for the purpose of carrying an issue, it is time for us to come to our knees in prayer and inquire if we are really doing the work worthy of our age, office and opoprtunity.

UNIFICATION THAT DOES NOT UNIFY IS USELESS.

By Bishop James E. Dickey, LL.D.

Anything that does not discharge the function for which it was created is a failure. An apple tree in bloom is beautiful and fragrant; but if it does not bear fruit, the function for which it was created, it is a failure. The horticulturist does not plant an apple tree for beauty or for fragrance. He plants it for fruit, and if it does not bear fruit, whatever other excellence may be claimed for it, the tree is a failure.

The General Conference of 1922 adopted the following:

"The General Conference of 1918 instructed our bishops to appoint a Commission to negotiate with a like Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church with reference to the 'exchange of territory and such other ajustments as may be possible and practicable, in order that all needless waste and competition may be eliminated, and that American Methodism may, under the most favorable conditions and to the best advantage, occupy and cultivate the whole field.'

"We recommend, therefore, that this Commission be continued, and that the Commission on Unification, for which provision is made in this report, be and is hereby instructed to extend all possible ald to this Commission to the end that the fraternal purposes for which it is constituted may be speedily accomplished, and that American Methodism may without needless delay occupy and cultivate the whole field under the most favorbale conditions and to the best advantage."—(Journal, 1922, pp. 222, 223.)

The Commission appointed by our bishops was "to negotiate with a like Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church with reference to the exchange of territory and of such other adjustments as may be possible and practicable, in order that all 'needless waste and competition' may be eliminated, and that American Methodism may, under the most favorable conditions and to the best advantage, occupy and cultivate the whole field." This Commission was continued by the authority of the 1922 General Conference, and the Commission on Unification appointed by that Conference was instructed to extend all possible aid to this Commission to tbe end that the fraternal purposes for which it is constituted may be speedily accomplished, namely, that all "needless waste and competition" may be elimnated.

Tbe evident purpose of the General Conference in continuing the Commission on Unification was the hope that some plan of unification might be effected whereby all "needless waste and competition" might be eliminated. The Commission on Unification was, in effect, instructed to provide a plan of unification which would eliminate all "needless waste and competition."

The insistent demand for unification through all tbe years of negotiation has been the desire to eliminate "needless waste and competition." A plan of unification, therefore, to be in harmony with the will of our church must be one that eliminates "needless waste and competition." Does the plan of unification now before us for adoption eliminate "needless waste and competition?" Does it unify? If it does not achieve this end, it fails to discharge the function for which it was created, and is, therefore, a fallure.

We who oppose the plan do not believe that it provides the elimination of "needless waste and competition." On the contrary, it provides for a continuation of it. The Northern Jurisdiction in America is recognized as being coincident with the territory of the United States, while the Southern Jurisdiction is confined to the Southern States and to such Western territory as we now occupy. It is readily observed that the Southern Jurisdiction is covered by the Northern Jurisdiction, which fact accounts for the "needless waste and competition." It is needless to say that if the Methodist Episcopal Church would abide by the Plan of Separation there would be no "needless waste and competition." Tbe Methodist Episcopal Church would not, and will not, conform to that agreement, and the present plan of unification recognizes their claim to Southern territory. That the Methodist Episcopal Church expects to continue its invasion of the South is manifested by the action of their Commission on Unification, for when the Plan of Unification was pending before the Joint Commission the following amendment was offered: "From the adoption of this agreement, neither of the Jurisdictions shall organize a congregation in any community in which the other Jurisdiction has an existing congregation until the quarterly conference of the existing congregation shall consent." This amendment received not a single vote from the Northern Commissioners. I thank the brethren for their frankness. They intended to continue their work in the South, and they were unwilling to mislead us by a contrary vote. They were unwilling to incorporate in the plan anything that would eliminate "needless waste and competition," and by their vote affirmed it.

The plan provides for "needless waste and competition" to continue.

But some one will say: Does not the plan provide for members, churches and Conferences to change their Jurisdictional relations? Cannot the Methodist Episcopal brethren in the South join our Jurisdiction and thereby eliminate "needless waste and competition?" Yes, such action is open to them, but who with the history of 1920 in mind can believe, for a moment, tbat these brethren will come to us? The Commission on Unification submitted a plan of unification to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1920. This plan provided for a number of Regional Conferences. All who resided within the bounds of a Regional Conference were to be members of that Conference and subject to its authorities. This plan of unification unified the territory of the Regional Conference and eliminated "needless waste and competition" in the said territory. What became of this plan? The General Conference did not show it even the courtesy of consideration. Why? Because their members, the Methodist Episcopal brethren in the South, were unwilling to become members of a Regional Conference that was dominantly Southern. These Methodist Episcopal brethren were unwilling to eliminate "needless waste and competition" at the expense of coming under the rule of a dominantly Southern Jurisdiction, hence the plan was left to die in the committee.

Can any one imagine that the Methodist Episcopal brethren in the South, whose opposition to a plan that put them in a Southern Regional Confereuce caused the defeat of that plan, will now voluntarily become members of the Southern Jurisdiction? If so, such an one should become a candidate for literary honors in the realm of light fiction.

The plan before us does not unify. It does not eliminate "needless waste and competition."

It does not even give a promise of it. It fails to discharge the function for which it was created. It is a failure. It is a branch that bears no fruit.

"Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away."

This plan does not and will not bear the fruit of unification. Take it away.

BISHOP CANDLER VERSUS ST. PAUL.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

My atteution has just been called to an article iu the Advocate of July 31, entitled, "Oneness of Humanity and Variety of Races," by Bishop Candler. The good bishop, who is always interesting, is sometimes inaccurate; and in this article is strikingly and dangerously inaccurate.

He begins thus: "St. Paul, addressing the Areopagites at Athens, said: 'God hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth; and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitations; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of them.'" (Acts xvii:26-27.)

This is the reading of the old or "Authorized" Version. The more accurate Revised Version reads: "He (God) hath made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, having determined appointed seasons, and the bounds of their habitation." Observe very carefully the differences between the two! The Revised Version follows the Greek that Paul spoke and Luke wrote. Weymouth, in his "New Testament in Modern Speech," translates this passage thus: "He caused to spring from ono forefather people of every race, for them to live on the whole surface of the earth, and marked out for them an appointed span of life and the boundaries of their homes."

Strange logic is suggested when we read this from the good Bishop: "Racial lines and national boundaries are divinely ordained for the achievement of religious ends. So St. Paul taught at Athens, and so all history teaches."

Did St. Paul teach at Athens anything of the kind? Was he not really pleading that these supercilious Greeks have no ground for their boast of being earth's superior people, as the Jews were wroug in claiming to be God's only children and the Romans were without grounds for their arrogance? "He made of one every nation of men." This is the basis of his plea. Paul was pleading for unification, the bishop for continued division. Maybe the Apostle was thinking of the words of an old Prophet: "Have we not all one father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, profaning the covenant of our fathers?" (Mal. ii:10.) Maybe the Apostle had no such thought—most certainly the Bishop had not. Verily, Paul was pleading for unification—so he was when he wrote the thirteenth of First Corinthians.

The Bishop drags in miscegenation: "Miscegenation between races of different character works moral disorder and human degradation. It rejects the ordinances of God for the purity of racial stocks, and sets at naught the religious purpose designed to be fulfilled through the varieties of human nature. Mongrelism is a monstrous type. It hinders human progress and withstands the providential government of mankind."

Miscegenation means the intermarriage of races. Only the intermarriage of higher with lower races is the thing indicated by the Bishop. In common thought it means the intermarriage between whites and blacks. What has this to do with unification of Methodists, North and South? In neither branch is there favored or known such intermarriage as the Bishop indicates. Intermarriage between higher races is not forbidden by the laws of religion or common sense. What is the Bishop railing against? What does he mean?

The Bishop discounts what he calls "the melting pot theory" of America, declaring that "it does not conform to fact." Does it not? Let us see! The Mississippi Conference covers the lower half of our State. I am fairly well acquainted with the population of this area, having spent nearly half a century in it doing the work of a Methodist preacher. I know many people here from Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Germany, France, Spain, Portugal, Holland, and England—some from Syria (good Americans, too), from Italy and Poland, and even Morocco. Some of these are prominent in the life of our State and church—a half dozen are fine Methodist girls whose last names end in -ski, pointing unerringly back to a Polish ancestry. In a telephone directory of Jackson I have just counted three hundred from Scotch descent. An ex-Governor of our State and an early Methodist steward of prominence, bear names that point to Italy. Our nation, made up of the peoples of almost all the world, is, beyond question, the most virile nation, intellectually and spiritually, in all the world, unless it be England; and England itself is very much a "melting pot" nation. Has our dear good Bishop forgotten that about two thousand years ago Caesar found on her shores not Britons only, but Picts and Scots; and that later there came Angles, Saxons and Jutes, and still later Danes and Normans? What a mixture! All these and others have been melted into one of the world's grandest nations. By this almost ridiculed "melting pot" process, the world's two greatest nations have been built up. Bishop Candler's criticism falls. Paul's plea for the solidarity of the race, and the brotherhood of man and the unification of Christ's followers stands. The Bishop's interpretation of the Apostle's Athenian sermon utterly fails, as does his plea for division and national and ecclesiastic aloofness.

The Christian church was built up at its very beginning pretty much by "the melting pot" process. Its first great ingathering—that on the Day of Pentecost—when three thousand were converted, seventeen different languages had to be spoken that they might receive the Gospel; and of such was organized the very first Christian church. The second was made up of that despised "mongrel" race, the Samaritans. The third evidently was at the Syrian Antioch, and was doubtlessly composed of converted Jews, Greeks, and Syrians. Oneness of race and nationality never seemed to be in the mind or purpose of Paul when he planned for the church; nor was it otherwise with the Christ. Surely our good Bishop's apathy to "the melting pot" process was far from being Pauline or Christly.

Jackson, Miss.

STILL FOR UNIFICATION.

Dear Dr. Carley: For awhile this summer, while associated with some of the brethren who are under the influence of such men as Boh Shuler, of California, I was informed that the brethren of the North would not "tote" fair with us and that they looked on us as Rebel Methdosists, traitors, and the like. I must confess that for the time being I was influenced to side with the anti-unionists, and to let my prejudices run riot, as is the case with some others that I read after in the papers. But, to tell you the truth, I find that the more I read of Jesus and the Gospel he taught, the more I pray with an open mind and heart, and the more I read from those who are opposing unification, the more I am convinced that my first impressions on the subject are right, and I believe that I am stronger for it to-day than ever before.

Now, Dr. Steel is camping where all of us ought to camp—Gal. 6:1; that's a mighty good place to stay. As long as he stays there, I know he will fight fair. I grant all men the supreme right to their own convictions. Men have a right to oppose as well as not to oppose, but Christians have no right to insinuate, or impugn each others' motives. I object to my friend, Brother Hicks Ellis, comparing me to a bleared-eyed, drunken sot, as old Herod was; I think he is due the many hundreds of thousands of Southern Methodists an apology for putting us in such a class. The non-unificationists are "shore" hard up for arguments when they stoop to such argnments as found in the current issue of the Advocate under the title, "Choose Your Model." Christians don't get anywhere writing on that level.

I am willing to abide by the will of the required majority in this great question, as well as all others. I am one who believes that this momentous question, involving world Methodism and the kingdom of God on earth, should be carried continuously to the Lord in prayer by all who shall vote on it, and as the Holy Spirit shall direct, as far as we are conscientiously able to discern, vote; and I believe that as the required majority goes, that will be the Will of God.

JAMES M. LEWIS.

DEAR LITTLE HEADS IN THE PEW.

In the morn of the holy Sabbath,
I like in the church to see
The dear little children clustered
Worshiping there with me.

I am sure that the gentle pastor,
Whose words are like summer dew,
Is cheered as he gazes over
The dear little heads in the pew.

Faces earnest and thoughtful,
Innocent, grave and sweet,
They look in the congregation
Like lilies among the wheat.
And I think that the tender Master,
Whose mercies are ever new,
Has a special benediction
For the dear little heads in the pew.

Clear in the hymns resounding
To the organ's swelling chord,
Mingle the fresh young voices
Eager to praise the Lord.
And I trust that the rising anthem
Has meaning deep and true,
The thought and the music blended,
For the dear little heads in the pew.

When they hear, "The Lord is my Shepherd,"
Or, "Suffer the babies to come,"
They are glad that the living Jesus
Has given the lambs a home,
A place of their own with his people,
He cares for me and for you,
But close in his arms he gathers
The dear little heads in the pew.

—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Dr. Campbell Morgan well says: "I have no word to say against education, against refinement, against culture, against the uplifting of men in all these ways; but I want to say this to you, that out of the deep darkness nothing will lift a man, a nation, a race but the cross of the world's Redeemer."—Selected.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN BROADCASTING STATION—LISTEN IN.

So far the Southwest Missouri Conference has the distinction of making the best showing on amount contributed for the first year of the Special Effort. This Conference has a first year's quota of $43,000, and paid by remittances from the charges over $36,000. In addition to this, a good layman of this Confernce made a special gift to the Southwest Missouri Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund of $12,000, and from several sources the said fund also received approximately $4,000 additional.

The Rev. Frank L. Wells, presiding elder of the St. Louis District, St. Louis Conference, has the gratitude of the Board of Finance for the splendid piece of work directed by him, wherein during the past week two bequests were made to the Board of Finance for Superannuate Endowment in the total amount of $75,000.

In the midst of a building program requiring the expenditure of $150,000, Centenary Church, St. Louis District, sent a check the past week covering full the amount due on her Special Effort quota for the first year. Dr. C. W. Tedlock is the pastor.

WHEREIN WE SALUTE A "KING."

Logtown charge, Mississippi Conference, Seashore District, had a total five-year minimum quota of $2,000. Up to Sept. 6, 1924, the Board of Finance received in cash from this charge a total of $2,410.27, or $410.27 in excess of the five-year minimum quota. Rev. T. H. King is the pastor of this charge. I think the whole church should pause in the midst of her busy activity long enough to give the grand honors to Brother King. All hail, brother, we dub you twice a "king"—first by birth, and second by laurels won!

THEY WILL BE HAPPY AT CONFERENCE.

When the pastors of these charges report at Conference, they will conclude with a smile. Why? Because they will be able to announce that their charges have paid the first one-fifth or more of their Special Effort quotas.

Auburn, Louisville, Bowling Green, Rev. E. P. Dean, pastor. Total assumed quota, $1,560; amount remitted, $313.10.

WHEREIN A PASTOR SLEEPS AT THE SWITCH.

I had a letter this week from the treasurer of the Special Effort committee of a certain charge. The brother wrote that he had been holding a considerable amount of Special Effort money for some time because he did not know what to do with it. He said no instructions whatever had been given him as to where to remit the money, and he thought he had better keep it until he knew definitely what to do with it. Finally he decided to send it to the Board of Finance in the hope that if it did not belong to said Board it would be sent to the Board that should have it.

Would you believe it? You wouldn't think it possible that any pastor in the church would be so derelict in his duty, would you? And yet it is true that the Board of Finance is receiving letters similar to this right along. Therefore, I state again as clearly as I know how to put it:

1. All money collected on Special Effort quotas must be sent direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

2. In making remittances the Treasurer's Book of Remittance Forms should be used. One of these books was sent to every charge in care of the pastor. If it was not received, another can be secured from the Board upon request.

3. If the charge wants credit for Special Effort money raised the first year, the money must be remitted to the Board so that it can be received before the adjournment of the Annual Conference.

The Home Circle

WHEN MOTHER PLAYS WITH ME.

Sometimes when it is raining hard,
My mother plays with me;
She makes me believe she's keeping house,
And I'm her company.

And when I knock upon the door,
She says: "Come in, sit down;
I'm very glad that you have come;
When did you get to town?"

And then we talk about our 'fairs;
How fast the children grow.
"What! had the measles, did you say?
You did not let me know."

Then, when we've had a cup of tea,
It's time for me to go.
I say, "Good-by, dear Mrs. Brown;
I have enjoyed it so."

And so I like a rainy day,
When mother plays with me,
And makes believe she's keeping house,
And I'm her company.

THE LEGEND OF INDIAN CORN.

Wuuzh was a youug Indian boy. His father and mother lived in a beautiful country. They were kind and loving and happy in their home. The father was thankful to the Great Spirit for everything he received.

When Indian boys came to a certain age it was the custom for them to fast for several days, that they might know what kiud of a spirit would be their guide through life. So one day Wunzh and his father set out for the deep forest. His father helped him build his lodge, and then left him.

The first few days he wandered through the woods and over the mountains. He examined the flowers and trees. He wondered what plants were good for food and what were poisonous. When he returned to his lodge, tired with his rambling, he thought about all he had seen. He wished he could dream of something that would benefit his father and all his people. "The Great Spirit has given us all these things, but can I not learn some way by which we may live even if we have no fish or game?" With this thought he went to sleep.

On the fourth day of his fasting he was faint and weak, and stayed in the wigwam. While lying there he fancied he saw a young man approachiug. He was dressed in garments of green and yellow of many shades, and a yellow plume waved in his hair.

"I am sent to you by that Great Spirit who made all things in the sky and on the earth. He knows your desire to help your people. You do not pray for yourself, but for others. I shall show you how your desire may be fulfilled." He told Wunzh to rise and wrestle with him, as he must overcome him. Wunzh was weak, but his heart was filled with courage, and he wrestled stoutly. At length the young man said, "This is enough for to-day; I shall come again to try you." And, smiling, he departed.

On the next day they wrestled, and on the third day, and both times the younger stranger said he was conquered.

"You have won your desire," he said. "To-morrow will be the seventh day of your fasting. When we wrestle you will again prevail. You must then strip off my garments and throw me down and bury me in the spot where I fall. Leave my body in the earth, and do not disturb it. Be careful not to let the grass or weeds grow over me, and once a month cover me with fresh earth."

It happened as the visitor had said. Wunzh conquered, and faithfully obeyed the words of the youth. He grieved to place the young stranger's body in the earth, but he felt confident that the friendly wrestler knew best. Faithfully he guarded the soil and kept it free from weeds and grass.

Late in the summer, after his father had returned from a long hunt, Wunzh took him to the place where he had fasted. The wigwam was no longer there, but a tall and graceful plant with long, bright-colored silken hair, with nodding plumes and stately leaves and golden clusters on each side. "Behold!" cried Wunzh in joy, "It is my friend; it is Moudamin, the friend of man. The Great Spirit has heard my prayer, and no longer must we depend on bunting alone for our food. This the Indian corn—shall be our food hereafter!"

He then told his father what the youthful visitor had shown him. He stripped the leaves from the ear, and held it before the fire until the outer skin became brown, while the milk was retained in the grain.

The whole family then united in a feast and gave thanks to the kind spirit who had given this great gift to men.—Edward Eggleston.

"IT."

Just as the game of hide-and-seek was well under way a voice was heard calling: "John Thomas Morgan! John Thomas Morgan. Please come here!"

John Thomas Morgan, who was "it" when the voice called, raised his voice shrilly and summoned the rest of the bunch from their hiding places.

"I've got to go," he announced; "Mrs. Lossing wants me to do an errand for her."

"That's always the way," grumbled Fred when John Thomas was out of hearing. "Every single time we get up a game, Mrs. Lossing calls John Thomas. She does it on purpose."

John Thomas was occupied the greater part of an hour, for his short legs could not carry him very fast, and when he came back it was nearly dark and time for supper. The spring day was none too long, for it was March, and the after-school playtime seemed all too short for the out-door games after the long winter.

"I wish we could have one more game," sighed John Thomas. "I was 'it' when the game broke up."

But it was too late, and they all went soberly homeward, panting from the exertion of running, all but John Thomas, who had not been running. He was only seven years old, but already it had come into his mind that Mrs. Lossing was apt to think up another errand while he was gone; so, if he did hurry, he did not get back to the game a minute sooner.

That evening, Willy Nelson told his mother about Mrs. Lossing and how she always called John Thomas away from the game, and to his surprise his mother said: "Yes, I've noticed, and I'm glad of it."

"Why, mother?" asked Willy with wide open eyes.

"Because you children always manage to make John Thomas be 'it' when you play together. For some reason he stumbles and is slow, so that you can all get ahead of him, and he is 'it' time and again. I've watched many times, and he never gets to play," said Mrs. Nelson.

"We can't help that," said Willy, fingering his cap. "We don't make him stumble. And, mother, he's so slow to find us it's no wonder we all get home safe."

"It would be nice if somebody once in a while would hold back and not try so hard, in order to give him a better chance," said Mrs. Nelson. "It's hard to play that way all the time. I'm glad Mrs. Lossing calls him away, for she gives him pennies and cakes, and never asks one of you to do an errand for her. Last week her son sent John Thomas a whole dollar because he has been so kind to the poor old lady."

"A dollar! To spend?" asked Willy.

"Yes, to spend as he pleases. You see, she is sorry for him."

Of course, Willy was curious to know what John Thomas would spend the dollar for, so he asked him, and the little boy said at once that his mother had put it away until they could add more to it, and then he would have a pair of glasses. "I won't have to be 'it' all the time when I get glasses," said John Thomas. "The doctor says the reason I stumble so much is because I can't see well."

There was no game of hide-and-seek that evening, but a great counting of pennies and nickels and dimes as soiled fingers emptied little tin banks, and finally Willy Nelson was sent with all the money they could shake out of them to Mrs. Morgan's tiny home.

"Here's some money to help get John Thomas his glasses," said Willy. "We want him to see, so he won't have to be 'it' all the time in our games. It's from the boys and girls, tell him." And then Willy ran back as fast as his legs would carry him, feeling far better than when he had rejoiced that there was one boy they could always beat in the games.—Hilda Richmond, in Sunday School Times.

The Annual meeting of the Home Mission Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions will be held at Atlantic City, Jan. 13-15, 1925.

A Lord's Day Alliance organization has recently been formed in Washington, D. C., to bring about a better observance of Sunday in the District of Columbia.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, our pastor at Summit, Miss., recently spent two weeks in the hospital at McComb, a bruised foot having become infected. He is doing well and will soon be again at work.

Rev. H. E. Raley, of Osyka, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He reported that Rev. J. T. Weems has just assisted him in a very successful meeting at Osyka.

The Cokesbury Press has just issued a volume, "Modern Evangelism and Ancient Environment," by Walt Holcomb. The book contains some of the messages delivered during the author's recent tour in Europe.

Rev. G. P. Fikes, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, has been transferred from the North Arkansas Conference to the Southwest Missouri Conference, and appointed to the Waynesville charge—a good appointment among good people.

The work at Oakdale, La., is moving along well under the leadership of Rev. A. M. Shaw. In spite of the losses incurred in the burning of one mill and the moving of another, a good report is in prospect for Conference.

The work goes well at Silver Creek, Miss., Rev. H. R. McKee, pastor. Forty members have been received this year, twenty-five of them on profession of faith. Extensive improvements have been made on the parsonage, doubling its value, and financial matters are in good shape.

The period from Oct. 15 through January, 1925, has been set aside for the collection of all pledges that are due to the Christian Education Movement. If all those who are in arrears would pay their pledges promptly, the work of Christian education would be greatly helped.

It is good news that Rev. A. J. Beasley, who was forced to give up his work on account of ill health, is improving, though he is still undergoing treatment. He has applied for a room at Sanatorium and is now waiting for a vacancy there. Let the brethren remember him and his family in prayer.

In spite of the havoc wrought by the drought, the work of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, is rounding out well. The preachers are all hard at work, and the reports at Conference will show an advance in finances and a gratifying increase in accessions on profession of faith. Rev. H. M. Ellis is the presiding elder.

The quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will be held in Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3-9, in the Central Presbyterian Church. The term of office of Dr. Robert E. Speer as president of the Council expires at this meeting. Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is chairman of the Program Committee.

From the "Pastor's Calendar," Sardis, Miss.: "The pastor is packing. He and Mrs. Pastor have been married forty-four years, and in that time have moved forty times. We trust that this is our last move on earth. Yet it is well for people to move occasionally, that they may learn how much they have."

From the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss., of Oct. 3: "Bishop Ainsworth, presiding elder of the North Mississippi Conference, preached at Durant last Friday, his subject being the plan of unification of the two great Methodist bodies. News dispatches say the bishop left no doubt in the minds of his hearers that he was against the proposed plan."

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick has declined the invitation of the New York Presbytery to become a member of the Presbyterian Church, and has resigned his position as associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, New York City. Dr. Fosdick is a Baptist, whose sermons from the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church have occasioned widespread discussion.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but now engaged in evangelistic work, passed through New Orleans on Monday of this week en route from Covington, La., where he had just closed a meeting, to an engagement in Kentucky. The meeting at Covington was a gracious one, between fifty and sixty members being added to the church.

Walt Holcomb, the well known evangelist, has recovered from injuries sustained in an automobile accident while in Los Angeles, Calif., and is now at his home in Cartersville, Ga. In a personal note, Brother Holcomb says: "My recovery has been remarkable." He intends visiting some of our Annual Conferences, and is now ready for work again.

New Orleans Methodism lost one of its oldest and most faithful members in the death last week of Mrs. Catherine Fuller Gore, at the age of 86. She was a member of the Rayne Memorial Church at the time of her death, though for many years she was a member of Parker Memorial. She is survived by a son, Mr. Charles E. Gore, and a daughter, Mrs. Clinton Davis, to whom, with many friends, the Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

Rev. O. S. Lewis is engaged in a meeting at Biloxi, Miss., which began on Wednesday of last week. He is being assisted by Captain Charles F. Dunn, for the past six years connected with the Georgia Military Institute. Indications point to a successful revival. Captain Dunn will be open for other engagements after Oct. 15. His present address is Biloxi, Miss.; his home address is 85 Park Avenue, Atlanta, Ga. Brother Lewis commends him highly.

The great Four Square Men's Bible Class, of Shreveport, La., taught by Dr. R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, has its own orchestra of seventeen pieces, and its own annual budget of $6,000. This budget does not detract from the regular church offerings, but rather makes it easier to raise the church assessments. This class now meets in the City Hall, having outgrown three other rooms. The record attendance, a few Sundays ago, is 1,632.

A note from Rev. W. N. Ware, Minga station, Kabinda, Congo Belge, Afrique, says: "In renewing my subscription to the Advocate, permit me to say that I am very much interested in the work of my church at home. My Conference organ reaches me as promptly as first-class mail, and it is always like a long, newsy letter from home. I am always glad to hear from my brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and it seems that the Advocate is the only means I have of hearing."

About four weeks ago, Rev. H. W. Bowman, our pastor at Lecompte, La., who has been a great sufferer for a number of years, went to the Mayo Brothers's Sanitarium, Rochester, Minn., for treatment. After thorough examination, his trouble was diagnosed as a bony tumor pressing on the brain. The necessary operation was performed on Sept. 26, and the latest report is that he is doing well. Let his many friends throughout the State pray that this faithful servant of the church may be spared for many years of usefulness.

Rev. A. M. Shaw, of Oakdale, La., writes: "So many inquiries have come to me as to why I did not publish my sermon on 'Stirring up the Eagle's Nest,' and so many requests for copies of it, that I have placed it in the hands of the printer; and it will be out Oct. 10. I am in no sense publishing it for gain, but merely to satisfy a demand, and to give this—perhaps my most popular message—to the public. It will sell at the nominal price of 15 cents a copy, or $1.50 per dozen, postage paid. I pray God it may prove a blessing to many in printed form, as it seemed to do in its oral delivery."

We clip the following from a local newspaper: "The fourth quarterly conference was held last Sunday at Salem on the Kilmichael charge. Presiding Elder R. A. Tucker preached at 11 a. m. Every church in the charge was represented except one, and all the churches reported, 'paid in full.' There was a large audience and the reports showed a general active interest on the part of the membership. The work of Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth was outstanding, and a resolution was passed requesting his return. A resolution was adopted expressing appreciation of the efficient work of the presiding elder during the past four years."

Miss Otie G. Branstetter, who was elected by the General Sunday School Board at its meeting last May as an Associate Secretary for Missions and Sunday School Extension, entered upon the duties of her office on Sept. 15. Her work will lie in the field of missionary education in the Sunday school. Miss Branstetter took her bachelor's degree at Millsaps College, was graduated from Scarritt Bible and Training School, and took her master's degree at Emory University. She specialized in Bible and Religious Education, and comes to the work eminently qualified for the task assigned her. From the standpoint of the missionary program of the church, the most important interest lies in the field of missionary education, for by this process alone can the church of the future be made truly missionary. Miss Branstetter, therefore, will be welcomed by all who are interested in the program of missionary education through the Sunday school.

SARDIS DISTRICT.

The Sardis District bids fair to make a better showing in all things at West Point than was made last year. For this we thank God and take courage.

We will report 470, or more, additions on profession of faith, over against 361 last year and 301 the year before. In 1922, six of the charges had level columns on benevolences and salaries and ten had level columns on salaries; in 1923, five charges of the district had level columns on benevolences and salaries and nine had level columns on salaries; this year, 1924, we have good reason to believe that nine charges will have level columns on benevolences and salaries and sixteen or eighteen on salaries.

Of course I have not yet completed the fourth round of quarterly conferences, but, so far, five charges have reported out on salaries, which are: Longtown circuit, Como, Sardis station, Batesville, and Crenshaw and Sledge. Of these five, Como, Sardis station, and Crenshaw and Sledge will pay out on benevolences and Superannuate Endowment. Batesville will pay out on benevolences and possibly on Superannuate Endowment.

On the Arkabutla circuit, Sarah has paid the salaries in full. On the Byhalia circuit, Emory has paid salaries in full and guaranteed full payment on benevolences. The other churches of Byhalia charge give promise of paying out on salaries and benevolences. On the Cockrum charge, three churches—Independence, Hebron, and Palestine—have paid the salaries in full. The other churches of the charge will do the same. Coldwater always pays out in full, and we expect nothing else this year. On the Courtland charge, two churches—Pope and Wesley Chapel—have paid salaries out in full. We have reason to believe Hernando will pay out in full. On the Olive Branch charge, one church, Center Hill, has paid out on salaries. The other churches of this charge will pay out on salaries. We are confident that Mount Pleasant will pay out on salaries. The Pleasant Hill charge gives promise of paying out on salaries. On the Sardis circuit, one church, Bethel, has paid out on salaries. The other churches of this charge will pay out on salaries. The Shuford charge gives promise of paying out on salaries. I have not yet held the fourth quarterly conference of the following charges: Senatobia, Horn Lake, Tyro, Crowder, Oakland, and Charleston. Of these, Charleston and Senatobia have the habit of paying out on salaries and benevolences, which I am sure they will do this time. I have reason to believe that Horn Lake, Tyro, Crowder, and Oakland will pay out on salaries, and that Tyro will pay out on benevolences also.

The preachers of the district have all been faithful and earnest in their work during the year. Practically all the revival work done in our district was done by the district preachers, and we have had some great revivals over the district. Most, if not all, of the stewards of the district are faithful and loyal to their task.

Trusting that none of our sanguine hopes will be blasted at the last hour and praying the blessings of God on all the great work of the church, I am,

Fraternally,
J. TILLERY LEWIS, P. E.

Have love! not love alone for one,

UNIFICATION—PRO AND CON.

By Rev. Henry T. Young.

I am glad to see the brethren getting away from the spirit of harshness and of suspicion, and discussing the matter of unification as becometh brethren. Common sense and religion are twins, and we should walk with both in this crisis of our beloved Methodism. Surely all bitterness should be kept out of the argument, and only brotherly kindness should prevail. All possible facts should be brought out. Dead issues ought to be left with the dead, and a vote for or against unification should be cast with an eye single to the glory of God, and for the good of that part of the Christian church whose task and aim is, "To spread gospel holiness throughout the lands."

Let us suppose it is adopted and works. Then—

Our Northern brethren will have no cause to suspect us further or to complain that we are provincial, or prejudiced against them or their adopted child—the Negro. All overlapping problems will be settled, and that to the good and satisfaction of all. No longer will altar be raised against altar. Our Books of Discipline will be adjusted until we will have but one. Our Boards will be consolidated and we will have less overhead expenses. Many of our publications will be merged, and we will have better papers, and they will cost us less. We will be able to take quite a few trained workers from the Boards, papers and periodicals, and pulpits, who will be released, and who are already being paid, and put them elsewhere and thus do more work for the lost at no increase of expenses or of workers. Our mission work at home and abroad can be better done. We will have the greatest unified body of Protestantism, and thus will wield the greatest influence on the world. We will set the example that will be followed by other demoninations, out of which will come the same good results that we get. We will be able to make our colleges and universities larger and better. Out of all this should come the greatest revival that the world has ever seen.

But let us suppose it does not work. Then—

We can have no hope of ever adjusting the Negro question that has been a problem in some form or other ever since we have been at work in America. The breach between episcopal Methodism in America will be widened far beyond what it has ever been. The overlapping question will be more unbearable than ever. There will be wrangling and debates without number. Very hard things will be said, and there will be an epidemic of mud-slinging. Following all this will essentially come some kind of division again. We are too near the Civil War period yet, not to have quite a few who have not and cannot forget the strife of those days. The first time a Negro bishop presided over the General Conference, very likely the thing would start in earnest. There are enough of those on the Northern side who would resent any resentment that may be manifested on such an occasion by one from the South. It is obvious that some of the strongest men of our church are going strong against unification as now proposed. Some Annual Conferences are going almost solidly against it. Those Conferences will send men to the General Conference who will truly represent their sentiment. Likewise will men be sent from the sections of the church North. The logical result of all this would be division. It came once, and we cannot claim a thing to-day that would not bring a repetition of that thing. Many doubt even that we are as spiritual as our fathers were in the forties.

There is much that could cause trouble beside the Negro. A name must be chosen for this unified church; perhaps that will cause some trouble. The Disciplines must be adjusted so as to correspond; there is dynamite in that. The overlapping problem must be worked out; that is a very delicate thing. The collecting and administering of large funds must be engaged in. The boards must be unified, as well as some Advocates, etc. All these and other things will surely try both the faith and patience of our people on both sides.

I am about to make a suggestion now that should be very seriously considered: We have several million dollars' worth of property, and will soon add ten million dollars to the millions that we already have in endowments. Should conditions get unbearable, as they did once, and the Southern Church people come out of this strange plan of unification that we are to vote on, they would come out without a penny, nor would they even have a roof over their heads, unless the larger faction, represented by the Methodist Episcopal Church, should be generous enough to give it to them.

I am aware that some one may say this is pessimistic and unreasonable, but in the light of what happened before, and judging that we are no more spiritual than we were then, and remembering that this very thing has recently happened in the unification of the Cumberland Presbyterians and other Presbyterians, I do not believe that this is an impossibility at all. I am sure no bunch of business men would risk the millions that we have on a probability as indefinite as we are called upon to do in this matter.

Now what? Let us either defeat this proposition until we can work out the problems and agree on them, or hold up voting until this is done by our committees. Some would say we have gone too far to adjust these problems now, and the only thing we can do is to vote the plan, and work these things out afterwards. No, let's defeat the plan as it is presented for ratification or rejection, work out these problems, and then return to this plan. Let's take care of the property and money that has been given at great sacrifice by many, and the majority of whom have passed into the better land.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Will you please raise the assessment on your charge for the Washington City Church and send to W. D. Davis, Brookhaven, Miss., or myself at Lumberton, Miss.? It is very important that we pay all we can by Conference on our pledge made several years ago. A few of the preachers have sent in the amount assessed to their charges. Will you not send yours?

After an illness of two months, MRS. LUCY G. PAXTON (nee Gibbs), died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. P. Klein, in Mount Vernon, N. Y., on Aug. 23, 1924, in her seventy-eighth year. She was the widow of Mr. William G. Paxton, of Vicksburg, Miss., who preceded her into the land of the blest by twenty-five years. She was a sincere follower of Jesus Christ, a pattern of matronly virtue, given to hospitality and abounding in good works. She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. J. P. Klein, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.; Miss Mary Lou Paxton, of Stamford, Conn.; Mrs. Fitzgerald S. Parker, of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs. Hubert F. Thomas, of Denver, Colo. She leaves also three sons, Mr. William G. Paxton, of Vicksburg, Miss.; Mr. Henry C. Paxton, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Mr. Edward G. Paxton, of New York City.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

MRS. NORA ALLEY HARBIN was born Aug. 14, 1877, and passed to her heavenly reward, Dec. 7, 1923. Sister Harbin united with the Methodist church in early life, and was a consistent member of the same until her death, being especially active in the Sunday school and Woman's Missionary Society. Every life which was touched by hers was reminded of the higher life which she had found in Christ, and especially has her influence been missed in church and community life. She was happily married to Mr. John E. Harbin, April 6, 1901. To this union were given two sons and two daughters, all of whom remain with their father except while at school and college preparing for life's work. She is also survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Alley, of Ruston, La., and two brothers and two sisters. The body was laid to rest by her pastor and friends in the old burial ground at Sharbrough's Chapel, by the side of her husband's mother, who was buried just a few days previous.

FROM DE SOTO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: A few words from De Soto charge. We are closing out a fairly good year. We have had splendid revivals at all churches on this charge. We had J. V. Bennett at Crandall, Earl B. Moll at De Soto, and A. S. Oliver at Andrew's Chapel. They did us good work. The preaching at the other three churches was done by the pastor. With the people co-operating, we had good results. We have had forty-eight accessions to the church this year.

Then we were with Brothers McNeese, Baggett, Sibley, Hope, Jones, and A. J. Leggett in meetings. Altogether, we were in thirteen meetings, including the three in which we had help. It has been a pleasant and profitable four months of revival effort on our charge and elsewhere.

We are now pushing collections. We have all of the benevolences subscribed, and about 60% paid. We believe we will be able to collect it all. We are praying for a great Conference this year.

THINGS ARE DIFFERENT.

By Garfield Evans.

She came from a backward community a number of miles from the railway. When she registered in the dean's office she was not a particularly attractive girl. Her father accompanied her to the opening exercises of the school, but he was not dressed as the other parents were, but was seen in the dining room and in the chapel only in his shirt-sleeves. Yet the girl was not apparently ashamed of her father.

She stayed in this church school only about two years, but the Christian influence was lasting. Reading of the work of the church and the needs of missions, she frequently writes to a distant friend, whose acquaintance was made during her school days, inclosing a check for missions.

There are no regular church services where she lives. Occasionally she goes to a town some miles distant where she gets to attend church. In a recent letter she reveals her heart as she says: "My father does not believe in anything as I do, and our conversations usually end in an argument. He can't understand why people need to read the Bible every day. And all any one explains to him he only argues against it. My grandfather at times seems to believe some, but at other times he goes back on it. They do not like to see me read the Bible. But they are not able to make me do differently, for since I have joined the church, things are different with me. My mother has taught me from a child to do right and still wants me to be a Christian, although she has to do things she doesn't like, for otherwise there would be trouble." She brings her letter to a stop saying she must go write her check for missions.

This is a scene in one of the backward sections of a prosperous Southern State. The Christian school and a Christian home are our hope. This girl in her faith and sense of Christian stewardship puts some of us to shame.

There are some things with us that might be different.

GOD'S BUDGET SYSTEM.

God made the first application of the "Budget System" in his division of our time to give us one day a week for rest and worship. How can we make the accomplishments of that seventh of our lives as real as any other seventh? The church service has for centuries aided the solution of that problem; but just as in school work, regularity of attendance is required for satisfactory results.

With the greatest work of all the ages to accomplish in a very few short years, Jesus was a regular church attendant. He finished his work. Though he died for our sins, he rose again. Shall we not follow his example in the use of the day and find communion with him where his people gather at the trysting place, and then go out to live Christ?

Come to church regularly.—Selected.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT GROUP MEETING.

Instead of one district conference in the Vicksburg District, our district secretary held two group meetings. The upper group met in Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, on Friday, Sept. 19. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, district secretary of the Vicksburg District, presided at all sessions.

At noon, the ladies of Crawford Street and Gibson Memorial Churches served a lovely dinner to the delegates at Crawford Street Church.

After devotional exercises, the afternoon was devoted to business, helpful talks, and discussions. Ten auxiliaries constitute this upper group; eight of these were represented and gave encouraging reports of the work being done.

The following topics were presented: "How a Missionary Society Can Be a Good Samaritan in the District," Mrs. Connelly, Vicksburg; "Inspirational Talk on Missions," Mrs. W. H. Huntley, Port Gibson; "Stewardship," Mrs. McLaurin, Vicksburg; "Why We Did Not Get on the Honor Roll," discussion.

Mrs. L. W. Alford, vice president of the Mississippi Conference, gave a most helpful talk on, "The Kind of Social Service Work That Is Needed in Our Community."

We were fortunate to have with us Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of Nashville. She brought two inspirational messages during the afternoon session and the address at the evening session. Having returned so recently from the Orient, two of her messages concerning our work in China were full of encouragement, and a stimulus to a greater work on our part. We are also indebted to her for a very helpful and instructive talk on the "Belle Bennett Memorial Fund and Removal of Searritt."

Two Conference officers, Miss Mabel Porter, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. L. W. Alford, vice president, were present and offered helpful suggestions.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District; Rev. Robert Selby, and Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Vicksburg, and Dr. W. H. Huntley, of Port Gibson, conducted our devotional services.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Epworth Auxiliary.

Instead of having our regular weekly meeting, Sept. 30, we co-operated with our pastor in helping to put over a big program during rally week. A mass meeting of women was called. Realizing that there is a big work for us in helping to "clean up" our own city, we invited Mr. Guy R. Molony, superintendent of the police force, to address us. Invitations were sent to women of other churches, and goodly numbers were present, comfortably filling our church. Quite a few men were to be seen in the audience.

After singing "America," Brother Lee, pastor of Parker Memorial, led in earnest prayer. Mr. Molony was then introduced, and talked quite at length on "Organized Vice in New Orleans."

He gave figures to show that vice is increasing at an alarming rate, due largely to the leniency with which law offenders are treated. In 1923 there were 45,492 people arrested. It seems to us that things are terrible, that people are wandering far, when in one year ten per cent of our population was arrested. Lottery vendors, bootleggers, and similar types of lawbreakers are handled too gently—in most cases receiving the minimum sentence, where, if the maximum were given, there would be fewer to molest the good citizens.

"Vice will be suppressed when it is made unprofitable. Plug up the loopholes in the laws and inflict sterner penalties where needed; then get the judges to impose maximum prison sentences, and the lottery vendor, the handbooker, and the bootlegger will disappear and the immoral resort will close its doors." He urged the necessity of knowing for whom you vote. Vote for and elect legislators who will improve certain specific wrongs.

After the address, the meeting was open to those who wanted to ask questions. Some very interesting questions were asked of Mr. Molony—one bringing out the difference between law enforcement in our country as compared with that of England.

The question was asked, "How can the women help to remedy some of these wrongs?" After the meeting there was a committee formed, called by Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, composed of the presidents and superintendents of social service, to investigate conditions and formulate plans for action.

REASONS WHY EVERY WOMAN SHOULD BE A MEMBER OF THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Because her education demands it; because the spirit of the time requires it; and because our Lord has asked it of all his children.

The love of God should constrain all women, young and old, to band themselves together for the extension of his kingdom.

"She that is not for me," and my commission "is against me." "She that gathereth not with me"—by influence of membership in the Missionary Society—"scattereth abroad."

As enlisted soldiers under the banner of Jesus Christ, our orders are "Go, tell." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The Missionary Society furnishes the most practical means of obeying this command.

Because it will give her a larger vision of spiritual life and fit her for more and better service for the Master.

"Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore, glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's."

Because in studying the sad condition of the women and girls in heathen lands they soon contrast them with their own lives and become more grateful to the Heavenly Father, more unselfish, more determined to work and pray that all may share her blessings.

That she may develop a strong, Christian-like character and find expression for the deep gratitude that prompts every child of God to reach out and help those who have no Saviour—no hope. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

"Christ came not to be ministered unto, but to minister;" therefore to be Christlike we must serve.

Because it is one of the very best ways by which she may show her love and loyalty to Jesus, her Redeemer.

He came to seek and to save the lost. He left us an example to follow in his steps; therefore our supreme duty is to go and teach. In this act of obedience there comes into the life of every true missionary woman and every circle girl an untold joy, a sweetness and richness of service which can be known in no other way.

Christ says: "As the Father hath sent me into the world, even so send I you into the world. Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Christians are followers of Christ. We cannot be Christians if we refuse to follow him in the work of world redemption.

Our missionaries on the fields are simply doing work for us. How could we Christian women or girls be so indifferent to our duty as not to be active members of a Woman's Missionary Society or Circle?

To become informed of world wide missions is a debt we owe the early missionaries who have saved us from the horrors of pagan lands. Only by knowing are we constrained to do.

By belonging to a Missionary Society a Christian woman can go by proxy "into all the world," while a missionary can go into only one part of it.

Because it is an honor to woman to have Christ's confidence, to be considered worthy and capable of carrying out this divine commission, "Go, tell." She never knows how to love until she has loved the people who know not Christ.

It should be the desire of every Christian woman and girl to become a member of the Missionary Society in order to hasten the time when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Gratitude for the redemption through Christ from all the heathen women must endure, should make every Christian woman and girl glad to have such an opportunity to prove her love to him by keeping his command: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Louisiana Missionary News.

We should realize that the enforcement fight lies around the definition of what constitutes an intoxicating beverage. The definition today is one-half of one per cent, because this has been found to be the only enforceable definition. Over thirty States had this definition even before the nation went dry. To have three per cent as the definition of intoxicating liquor could open breweries for manufacture, legally; open beer saloons, legally.—Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, Editor, Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MOST PITIFUL SIGHT IN LIFE is a man or woman who has no "will-power" as a result of nerve force exhaustion

All the physical suffering which may be caused by nervous irritability, headaches, backaches, indigestion, heart palpitation, etc., as a result of nerve force exhaustion, are nothing as compared with its awful effects upon the mind and "will power."

The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will"—who has noble impulses and desires but not enough "will power" to carry them through. The memory also fails, the judgment is bad and everything therefore seems to go wrong.

In such cases, do not take mere stimulating medicines nor narcotic drugs (which only further injure your delicate nervous system), but what you need is something to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains strength-giving organic iron for the blood and may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. Millions of people are using it. Satisfactory results are guaranteed to every purchaser or the manufacturers will refund your money. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We have begun our membership campaign in earnest. All who attended our training schools during the year will remember that we have for our goal for the next five years 75,000 on our rolls. This first year we should enroll 10,000. The General Sunday School Board has set apart October, November, December, and January to make a united effort over the entire church to reach 250,000 men and women, boys and girls. The two extension departments, the Cradle Roll and the Home Department, thoroughly worked, could bring in the 10,000 that we have for our first goal. The plans that Mr. Brabham has worked out are in harmony with the Bible idea of evangelism; the literature explaining the plans is equal to the best that has come from our General Sunday School Board. All we have to do is to ask for it and use it. This is a good time to do this piece of work. Let us get it done before the session of our Annual Conference. Do this and it will help do some things that look impossible. Write me for samples of literature.

Congratulations to Mr. C. P. Shelby, superintendent; Rev. R. G. Lord, pastor, and to all who have worked together to make Jonestown Sunday school reach the 100% standard of efficiency under the "C" program of work. Recently a survey was made of the entire community; one hundred and fifty homes were visited, facts were gathered and tabulated that stirred the entire church. A family was visited where a boy was found that needs the attention and help of a surgeon. Forthwith the good people arranged to send the boy to Memphis and have him put under the care of one of the best surgeons in the city. Other needs were discovered and will be met. Who can estimate the far-reaching effects of this piece of Christian service? Brother Lord is teaching a class in the Organization and Administration of the Sunday School. When a superintendent like Brother Shelby and a pastor like Brother Lord and people like those at Jonestown work together with God in carrying out the plans of the church, the Kingdom of God will come more fully and rapidly than we have known.

This month I have checked up Coahoma, Joncstown, Sherard, Gunnison, Clarksdale, Booneville, Pickens, and Richland. All these schools are working under the program. They have covered items in the ten points, but have not completed every item in the ten points. Jonestown is the only school checked up that has done all of everything. The following have been appointed to check up schools as they have opporunity: Miss Virginia Thomas, Rev. Melivilie Johnson, Rev. R. G. Lord, Rev. E. G. Mohler, Rev. W. R. Lott, and Rev. S. H. Caffey. It helps all the workers in the Sunday school to see how much they are doing and what to do next. Give it a fair trial.

The Helen Weaver Sunday school class, of Corinth, Mrs. E. R. Smoot, teacher, sent in a check of $50 to help endow the chair of Religious Education of Grenada College. Keep the good work going.

High Blood Pressure may be easily, inexpensively overcome, without drugs. Gladly send particulars. Dr. F. F. Stokes, Mohawk, Florida.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 201 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

TO PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Brethren: I am writing to you to make a very definite personal appeal to you, to take an offering for the Sunday School Board from each of your Sunday schools.

It is imperative that your Board have in hand $600 in a very short time. We need this amount before the meeting of the Annual Conference.

If your Sunday school has observed the Day and has not sent the money to us, won't you please see about this for us?

It is now too late to ask that you have a regular program, but surely we can expect an offering. If only half the Sunday schools would make an offering, I believe we would have all we are asking for, and more.

Please let us hear from you in regard to this matter.

Yours sincerely,

H. T. NEWELL,
Treasurer, Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board.

INTERMEDIATE-SENIOR AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S WESLEY BIBLE CLASSES, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

In the Sunday school there are no groups more interesting, more challenging, or more worth while than the boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 17 years, and 18 to 24. The leader in these departments has a task worthy of his utmost ability and skill. And the man or woman who thinks of the Intermediate-Seniors and Young People as trifling, lazy, bad, or in terms of other bad names, ought not to be considered for superintendent of these very important places. We need a man or a woman with an appreciation of an early and middle, as well as later adolescence, as a time of rapid physical changes and growth; as a time in strategic importance in spiritual awakenings; as a time when decisions are at least in the making; as a time when loyalty to the highest is as easy to secure as allegiance to the unworthy, and whose appreciation leads him to a close application to the needs of these groups, both collectively and individually. Then you have a man or woman who is worthy of the place of these all-important departments.

And if your school is not large enough to demand these superintendents, then this appeal should be made to the superintendents of the local school and the teachers of the classes of these ages, and also to the pastors. And it is through you all that, as Conference Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior and Young People's Wesley Bible classes, I wish to help and encourage in any way I can this all-important work and keep them in touch with all other helps, especially the General Sunday School Board, which is anxious to keep in touch with you.

There are so many advantages of the organized classes. Think of them. We will not ask for space to mention them. You seem to realize already many of them, for we have many organized classes. But since I have been given this work and after a careful study of its needs, I find that we need to be made to realize some of the benefits to be derived from enrolling with the Central Office. What are these benefits?

1. It brings the class into the fellowship of thousands of other Young People's Wesley classes.
2. It identifies the class as a unit in the greatest movement of the church for Young People.
3. It manifests loyalty, allegiance, and support of the church.
4. It encourages and stimulates other classes to organize.
5. It entitles a class to membership in the Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation.
6. It gives the class a definite connection with the Conference and General Board officers, thus enabling it to receive all benefits, suggestions, and helps that may come from these sources.

Our Conference reported last year 252 Wesley Bible classes, when, in fact, we did not have them. We had that many and I am certain many more organized classes, but we did not have the "Wesley Classes," for to have a Wesley Bible class you not only have to organize, but you are required to report that class to the Central Office, which you can do through Brother Chambers or myself, and give the name of the class and the names of the officers, with 50 cents for the Intermediate or Senior classes, and $1 with your report for a Young People's class. Is it the money we want? No; the money you send with the report is simply a small investment in the Sunday school work; it comes back into the local Sunday school—half to the General Board and the other half to the Conference Board. What the General Board wants is constant touch with that class and its officers, thus enabling the classes to receive all benefits, suggestions, and helps that may come from these sources. The organizing and reporting, with the dues, will bring to you a beautiful certificate; and reporting annually with the same amount of dues will keep you in good standing.

Some may say, "After we have enrolled, why report every year?" How else will the Central Office find who the newly elected officers and teachers are if you don't report? I have a list with teachers of certain classes in certain towns, and that teacher has not lived in that town since 1911, the year when the class was organized. The General Board is losing lots of time, literature, and money because we lack reports. Most of all, we are losing a lot of splendid helps in the work coming to us.

Now to the pastors: You can't report a Wesley Bible class until they have reported to the Central Office with dues, and gotten the certificate for the class. If a class is behind with its dues, it has failed to report and is not in good standing, but you can report the class. But we want to urge their reporting so that we may have the names of the teachers and other officers annually.

H. R. McKEE,
Conference Superintendent Intermediate-Senior and Young People's Wesley Classes.

Now as a member of the Sunday School Board of our Conference, I want just these words: My saying it will not mean anything, but it is on my heart and I want you to think of what is said, more than who it is saying it.

Now all Boards of the Conference have great and important work, but we, as a Sunday School Board, seem

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Cost One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 321 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 15 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only 1 cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him to-day. —Advt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

ingly to me, have the most important of all the Boards, and yet we have so little money. Are there not some big-hearted, Christian-hearted laymen and lay women who will carefully consider the greatness of the work and the great need of money, and out of their means help the Sunday School Board? God grant it. We asked for a small sum last year for some improvements, and got less than we had the year before. Consequently we had less money to begin with this year than last year. But I trust that the reports of Sunday School Day offerings will bring us up. Brother Chambers very wisely asked for $350 for a Standard Training School—and we did not get it, in the face of the fact that this is one of the crying needs of this work. And we must go forward in this, or we are going backward. It is being stressed as never before. And did you know that with a little more than thirty Conferences in Southern Methodism, there are twenty-nine ahead of us in Teacher Training? All glory to Jackson District for her splendid Training School, and to Vicksburg, and to Seashore, and I think Meridian; but do you know we seemed to be unable to work up one in my district?

What did the Little Rock Conference do? That Conference Board had the money and a very fine superintendent of Sunday schools, Rev. Clem Baker, and they had the hearty co-operation of all the presiding elders and the preachers, and listen: In that Conference Standard Training School there were enrolled 950 students; enrolled for credits, 749; total credits, 509; total number of schools represented, 105; preachers enrolled, 102; presiding elders enrolled, 15; and the total amount of money spent on this school, $4,037.37—just about as much money as we have for everything, including salaries of two field workers.

Brethren, I am taking space and maybe not saying much, but my heart is beating fervently to what I am trying to say. What we need in our Mississippi Conference is a vision of the greatness of our work, and a real Sunday school conscience. You can talk evangelism as much as you please, and I am thoroughly committed to it; but what work is it that brings most of the members into our church? It is the Sunday school. Besides, the problem of the church today is not so much the getting people into the church as it is to save and keep them in.

As a Board we have as competent, as well trained and as well informed Sunday school workers as any Conference for a field worker, now called superintendent, in the person of Brother Chambers. He is enthusiastic and energetic, very prompt in his correspondence when he can be at home. I felt it was my duty while attending the Council meeting at Nashville last winter and when we had workers from all the Conferences to compare a bit to see what we had in our workers, and I am glad to say to you, and most of you know it, that we have as well informed a worker in this work as any Conference.

And as you know, Brother Hull is doing as fine work as any man we have anywhere.

Now these are our men, and they are not a bit better than we are making them. Let's open our hearts and our doors and our purses and give them something with which to do things as other Conferences are doing, and we will have wonderful results.

We need a secretary for the Sunday school office at Jackson and have Methodist headquarters at least in one place. The Sunday school work demands it if Brother Chambers is to go out. And he must go out into the field.

We are exceedingly fortunate in having Prof. C. A. Bowen as our Board chairman. Occupying the chair of Religious Education in Millsaps College, he is capable, long-headed, and one of the most brotherly men I know, and if any of the laymen of our Conference feel that we need their money and they are willing to let us have it, he is a safe man to guide us in the use of it, as is also Brother Chambers in recommending.

God speed the day when we shall do bigger and better things in the Sunday school work of our Conference.

H. R. McKEE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY ITEMS IN LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

By C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

The Sunday schools' pledge to the Missionary Centenary Campaign, according to the latest figures from the Central Office, is $38,284.40. They have paid $27,826.65.

The following schools have received certificates that they have paid their Centenary pledge in full:

Alexandria District: Natchitoches, Alexandria, Campti.

Baton Rouge District: First Church.

Lake Charles District: Maxie, Eunice, First Church, Robeline, De Ridder.

Shreveport District: Gilliam, Pelican.

Monroe District: Rayville, Bartholomew.

New Orleans District: Algiers, Epworth, First Church, Parker Memorial, Parker Memorial, Junior Department, Rayne Memorial.

Ruston District: Trinity, Ringgold, Homer, Arcadia.

The Conference and District Missionary officers are:

Dr. W. W. Drake, Conference Superintendent.

Alexandria District, Miss Frances Wilson, Cheneyville, La.

Baton Rouge District, Miss Stella Murphey, Baton Rouge, La.

Lake Charles District, Mrs. T. J. Adams, Eunice, La.

Monroe District, Mrs. Dr. Dolchide, Oak Grove, La.

New Orleans District, Mrs. J. G. Snelling, New Orleans, La.

Ruston District, Mrs. S. J. Bean, Haynesville, La.

Shreveport District, Mrs. W. H. Price, Logansport, La.

The Conference Superintendent, Dr. Drake, sends out the following message to each of the above district superintendents:

"As superintendent of the department of Missionary Education and Extension, you have the opportunity and the responsibility of helping to develop the program of missionary effort in all the Sunday schools of your district.

"In this department, we are aiming to develop and maintain in every Sunday school the following definite things:

"1. A missionary committee, which shall have charge of the missionary interests of the school.

"2. A regular monthly missionary program of inspiration and instruction.

"3. Special missionary study classes.

"4. A regular offering each month devoted to missions or Sunday school extension.

"5. A special; that is, a special missionary objective to which the monthly offerings shall go, and which, through reports from the field, will stimulate and increase missionary interest.

"If every Methodist Sunday school in Louisiana would make an offering of 5 cents per scholar each month, $24,000 a year would thus be raised, instead of the $3,000 reported last year.

"If each Sunday school had a special, such as a share in the salary of a French or Italian missionary in Louisiana, a kindergarten or a Bible woman in Japan, or some other special objective, missionary interest would be greatly stimulated.

"If you will secure a list of the superintendents in your district and, either by personal visit or by letter, lay before them the importance of securing these objectives, the work will be greatly helped. The time for doing this work is now, when the reorganization is taking place at the opening of the fall season.

"Let us adopt as our goal for Louisiana: A missionary committee, a monthly program, a monthly offering, and an accepted special in every Sunday school.

"The enclosed copy of 'Missions in the Sunday School' may help you in carrying out these plans.

"I shall be glad to help you by any further information or suggestions in reply to your inquiries.

"Let us secure 100% organization for missions during the present season.

"Yours frternally,

"W. W. DRAKE.

REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF FOR SEPTEMBER, 1924.

Sept. 5-8, at Laurel, Miss. At 11 a. m. with J. R. Jones; at 7 p. m. with T. A. Ferguson. Two good services; 20 came to the altar for prayer and reconsecration; 3 Syrians joined the church.

Sept. 13-16, with Rev. A. F. Watkins, Yazoo City. Visited all the foreigners in the city; 5 Americans joined the church.

Sept. 19-22, with E. N. Broyles, at Greenville, Miss. Visited the stores and homes of the foreign people and others in the city; 5 Greeks, 2 Syrians joined the church; spoke to the Men's Bible class; 7 p. m., to the Epworth League; at 7:30 we had a good service with the congregation. We had 35 people to come to the altar for prayer and reconsecration.

Sept. 22, returning home, I met a man who was a lawyer, living at Rolling Fork; after talking with him, he decided to join the church. I sent his membership to Rev. T. J. O'Neill.

Sept. 24, with the Capitol Street Church Missionary Society, to organize home training, music and sewing mission school for the foreign and poor folks' children in our city of Jackson, Miss.

Sept. 28 and 30, I preached two times in the Old Ladies' Home. We had a good service; ten old women joined the church in Jackson.

Held five services; 26 joined the church.

Will you pray for me and my work?

A Wise Old Trapper

In the state of Ohio there lived a bunch of boys who had the trapping business down to a science. They each sent for separate price lists every year and then sent all their furs to the house giving the best quotations. After five years they decided they weren't so dreadfully wise because they didn't have enough profits to make their efforts worth while. One day they met Tom McMillan driving a new car to town. Tom said he made the price of his swell outfit shipping pelts. He told how he got wise to those funny prices and found it was better to deal with Chas. Porter because he always knew in advance just what he was sure of getting. He said that Porter never offered $5 for a $3 pelt, but he always paid the $3 which he promised and sometimes a little better. Chas. Porter now has five wise trappers in that section instead of one.

Don't take a Chance With Your FURS

Your furs mean real dollars to you. Why send them to some fellow who offers you $1.25 when you know very well you are lucky to get fifty cents. Ask the wise trapper who knows. Once a Chas. Porter shipper and you will always be one. You know in advance that we give a square deal and every shipment brings sure money.

Send us your name and address. Get our Price Bulletins, Shipping Tags, and full particulars. Do it right now. This means real dollars to you, so don't put it off. Write to-day.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTE, CLARKSDALE, MISS.

The Greenville District Epworth League Institute was held at Clarksdale, Miss., Sept. 8-9, 1924. The conference secretary, Miss Pauline Standifer, and Mrs. A. K. Shaifer, the district secretary, arranged the program, which began at 2 o'clock, Sept. 8, 1924. Brother J. M. Guinn, our pastor at Friars Point, led the devotion. He gave a most inspiring address, after which the roll was called. It was found that about forty Leaguers were present, representing five Leagues.

Round table discussions were next in order. Following this, reports were given by delegates from the chapters represented. The district secretary appointed a committee on finance and resolutions. A motion was then made and seconded to adjourn to meet again the following morning at 9 o'clock.

Monday night a social was given. All the delegates were invited to Big Bluff College. After "examinations," a delicious salad course was served, which was enjoyed by every one.

Rev. J. H. Felts, our presiding elder, conducted the devotional meeting Tuesday morning, Sept. 9. This was a treat to all who heard it. It is worthy of being published in all of our League papers. Rev. R. P. Neblett, chairman of the Epworth League Board in our Conference, led the informal discussions which followed. These were most helpful, instructive and enjoyable. The reports from the committees were heard, after which the Institute closed with the League benediction.

Following is the policy which was adopted:

It is the aim of the Greenville District:

1. To have a League in every pastoral charge.
2. To have every League an active League.
3. To have each chapter represented at each Institute.
4. To have each League to make a definite pledge so that our district can give $75 to Conference promotion fund, $150 to Mission Special, and $100 to Grenada College Endowment.
5. At least a ten per cent increase in subscriptions to the Epworth Era.
6. A study class in each chapter.
7. A quarterly report to the district secretary from each chapter.
8. That we co-operate in every way with the Conference League officers in putting into effect the Conference League policy.

MRS. A. K. SHAIFER,
District Secretary.

Law observance should recognize no classes or exemptions. It is, however, a special obligation of that class which by reason of education, wealth, and position owes the duty of example to the country. But there can be no exempt classes or individuals in law observance, no matter what sacrifice of personal tastes, inclinations, or beliefs are involved.—Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, Philadelphia, Pa.

HAS CHRISTIANITY FAILED?

Some one has said that "Christianity has failed." Christianity in its fullness has never failed, but a Christianity that has been scaled down to catch the ears of the multitude has little strength. Christianity must be understood in all its fullness. Christ was just as much interested in healing the body as he was in saving the soul.

The church of to-day must be able to offer suffering humanity what it was able to offer in the early centuries, because Jesus is the same yesterday, to-day and forevermore, and his power is the same.

People expect God to undo for them in a moment what it has taken years to acquire.

People give a fleeting thought to prayer and afterward neutralize it by failure to support that prayer.

People expect great things from God, but fail to use the means God provides for obtaining them.

God's creatorship carries with it preservation and healing.

God, seeing the suffering and need of mankind, has provided means for relief, and Christ, through his church, is the everlasting inspiration, support and giver of these means, and amongst them are the peculiar powers and agencies that the church is most fitted to supply.—Selected.

THE CHURCH AND THE LARGER LIFE.

1. Man is incurably religious. The human heart's instinctive cry is "Abba, Father!" As Augustine expresses it in his "Confession": "My heart was made for thee, O God, and it is restless until it rests in thee." In the words of the American poet:

"In even savage bosoms
There are longings, yearnings, strivings
Of the good they comprehend not."

Prayer is the fountain source of real religion and the church is, first of all, the house of prayer.

2. But the advantage of the church is not limited to worship. The fellowship of the Christian church is the richest, most fruitful and most rewarding form of friendship. It has a genius of its own. It is inspired and fed by the central figure of Jesus Christ, the Great Friend of all humanity, and kept alive by association in his great cause.

3. The church is the inspiration and motive power to service, and is the only adequate means of co-operation in the great tasks of a Christian civilization. For example, the church is a torch in the hands of the younger generation. The Duke of Wellington once said: "Bring up the young without religion, and you raise up a race of clever devils." The church is indispensable to the home, and the young people.

The church aids us in fulfilling the tasks of citizenship. The church creates a public conscience. The burning convictions of God's prohphets and the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount and of Cavalry inspire men and women with a deep sense of justice and responsibility and the principle of service in performing the duties of the community, the State and the nation.

The church is a world force at work on every continent and in the islands of the seas, and offers a man the challenge of extending his influence for good around the world.—Selected.

A CONCERTED PLAN TO CALL PEOPLE TO THE CHURCH.

A special interdenominational movement in the interest of promoting church attendance and enlisting for church membership is being launched by the Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism. It is the outgrowth of the conference of the denominational secretaries of evangelism held under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches at Northfield, Mass., last June.

This undertaking is not simply a "Go to church" spasm. It is a systematic effort, covering a period of several weeks, to arouse new interest in the church, so that public worship shall have a larger place in our community life.

The program suggested by the Federal Council of the Churches includes the best features of various denominational programs. It can be changed to suit the special conditions of any denomination or community. The proposed outline, however, includes the following four points:

1. A friendly visitation of every home in the parish by the pastor or a representative of the church, for the purpose of extending an invitation to attend its services and securing information concerning the needs of the family and the community at large.

2. A church Rally Sunday, with a sermon on the place of the church in human life, and the importance of loyalty to its regular services of worship.

3. A special emphasis on the work of laymen in securing decisions for Christ and for entrance into the church.

4. A fall ingathering of new members.—Federal Church Bulletin.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Mrs. Shaw Calls Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a God-Send to Sick Women

Cambridge, Maine.—"I suffered terribly with pains and soreness in my sides. Each month I had to go to bed, and the doctor told me I simply had to go under an operation before I could get help. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I told my husband one day to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I took the third dose I felt better. I took it four times a day for two years, getting better all the time, and now for four years I don't have any pains. After taking the medicine for two years I had another child—a lovely baby girl now four years old—the life of our home. I do praise this medicine. It is a Godsend to women who suffer with female troubles and especially for pains at the periods. I surely was very bad once, and I know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation." — Mrs. JOSIE M. SHAW, Route No. 1, Cambridge, Maine.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 out of every 100 were benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

FROM CAPITOL STREET, JACKSON, MISS.

Capitol Street Methodist Church, of Jackson, Miss., has been in a unique revival lately. It was scheduled to last two weeks. The first week was to be devoted to regular revival services, the pastor to do the preaching, and the director of music to lead the singing. From the first, large crowds attended the services and a splendid interest was manifested, and as a result sixty new members have been added to the membership of the church, making a total of 293 increase in membership thus far this Conference year.

On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour Bishop W. N. Ainsworth preached. His sermon was a masterpiece of oratory, in delivery, in matter and spiritual power. We have heard him preach a number of times, but never has his delivery been equal to that which the great audience at Capitol St. heard that Sunday morning. Every nook and corner in the big church was filled with people; they came from everywhere in and around Jackson and every one went away feeling that the message heard came from the heart and lips of a man of God and a master-preacher of the Word.

The second week of the revival was scheduled as the "Departmental Revival." The different departments of the church had charge of it: On Monday night, the Board of Stewards; on Tuesday night, the Woman's Missionary Society; on Wednesday night, the Sunday school, and on Thursday night, the Young People. The plan was that each of these departments was to present to the audience who they were, what they were, what they expected to do, how they have been doing, and the results secured. The purpose was to sell the church to themselves—to acquaint the membership more fully with the policy and methods of their own church, and to interest the membership in the work that the different departments of the church were supposed to do. The results have been most gratifying. The people have been led to study their church and themselves. Their interest has been aroused to the extent that they are becoming righteously proud of their church and Methodism in general. People who have heretofore taken little interest in the work of the church have been led to see that there is a reason for every organization in Methodism.

That good results will come from these meetings is already apparent and we are all happy in the thought that we are coming to know ourselves and why we are. Knowledge is power, and we have felt that if Methodists had more knoweldge of the doctrines of their church, of the polity of their church, of the departments of their church, a better loyalty and faithfulness to her teachings would result therefrom. These meetings have been helping, and we do feel that good will result therefrom.

FROM THE MANTACHIE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a word from the Mantachie charge.

This is our fourth year here among these good people, and by far the best. The Lord has blessed us this year with gracious revivals all over or throughout our whole work.

We have just recently closed a great tent meeting at Kirkville, which was a meeting of part of the churches on the Mantachie charge—Palestine and Ozark—and included Gilmore's Chapel and Marietta, on the Maricttа charge. The services were continued for twelve days. The big tent was furnished us by the Booneville brethren, and the preaching was done by our district missionary evangelist, Brother J. T. Gullett, of Booneville.

The Lord poured out his spirit upon us and his people, and gave us a mighty victory in his name over sin. There were 97 known conversions, and 86 additions upon profession of faith to the Methodist church. There were some 12 or 15 more who joined other churches, making a hundred or more that united with the different churches. A number of family altars were established. We baptized three babies. It was indeed a truly great meeting in the Lord.

We have been blessed with other great meetings, and gracious revivals at a number of our churches on the Mantachie charge this year. We have received 116 members upon profession of faith, and 25 by certificate. The Lord be praised.

Brother J. T. Gullett is a power in the Lord, and he is thoroughly consecrated to his work.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE PREDOMINANT INTEREST AT CONFERENCE.

Many things will engage the attention of preachers and laymen in attendance upon the approaching sessions of our Annual Confereuces. The making of the appointments always holds a large place in the minds of the brethren, and properly so. Eveu if there should be some personal ambitions and hopes involved, there are also perfectly natural anxieties concerning the place of another year's activities, involving comforts for the family, advantages for the children, and opportunities for the most effective service.

The question of unification will doubtless also come in for a good deal of attention—if, not officially and publicly, in personal conversations and discussions. This, too, is perfectly natural, and discussions.- This, too, is perfectly natural. It would be strange, indeed, if this momentous issue will be called upon next year to act concerning it.

There will be in each Conference, also, matters of great importance in connection with Conference enterprises—education, the Centenary, the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and other things. These need and should have the most careful attention.

But the predominant interest at Conference should be the spiritual. It should be a time for renewing consecration, for girding up the soul with the precious promises of God, for getting new visions of opportunity and privilege, of drawing closer to Christ, and for making new resolves to render better service in the future than we have rendered in the past. The Conferences will not be what they ought to be if the spiritual is submerged in the material.

THE POWER OF SENTIMENT.

There are those who contend that sentiment should have very little part in the ordering of life. Plain common sense, hard facts, and the deliberate acts of the will, they say, should be the determining factors in all our thinking and doing. Perhaps so—but sentiment will have its way.

The truth above stated is abundatly illustrated by the recent series of baseball games between the New York Giants and the Washington Senators to determine the championship of the world. If we may judge by the newspapers accounts of the feelings of the spectators at the games, both in Washington and in New York, there was almost a universal desire that the series be won by Washington. Even in the home city of the Giants the crowd seemed to he with the visiting team. Why was this?

The answer seems to be found in the fact that sentiment swayed the feelings of the people. The Senators were led by the youngest manager in the big leaguers, "Bucky" Harris, just 27 years old. He was pitted against one of the most experienced and most successful managers in the history of the game, John McGraw. In effect, Harris was the young David going out to meet the mighty Goliath; the energy, optimism, and enthusiasm of youth were pitted against the cunning, accumulated strength, and complacent air of superiority of experience—and the people were for the strippling.

In addition, Walter Johnson was the great pitcher for the Senators. For eighteen years he had given his best to a team that had never won a pennant. Clean, honest, hard-working, by all accounts, year in and year out he had played the game fair and had won the respect and affection, not only of his own team and of his own league, but of the lovers of clean sport throughout the nation. Now the climax of his career had come in the opportunity to play in a world series—and the people were for him. It was sentiment that made the Washington team the popular favorite.

The strength of that sentiment was seen in the manifest feeling of sadness when Johnson lost the two games in which he started. It was not so much that New York had won as that Johnson had lost, that affected the multitude. The crowds before the scoreboards silently dispersed as the last play was chalked up that spelled defeat for the master. Men who had never seen him, who knew of him only by what they had read, went quietly back to their places of business with a feeling very close akin to personal sorrow. It was sentiment that swayed them.

Then the last game came on Friday of last week. Washington was fighting with its back to the wall. The series was even—three all—but the Senators were weakened hy the loss of one of their best players, out as the result of an injury, and her hest pitchers seemed not to be available for the final test. Harris seemed to he experimenting—making a last desperate effort to find a winning combination. He started with Ogden—and took him out after he had pitched to only two hatters; he sent Mogridge to the box; a home-run hy Harris himself in the fourth inning put Washington ahead—hut New York came hack in the sixth with three runs—and the game apparently was lost; Marherry succeeded Mogridge in the hox; in the eighth inning, Harris made another hit that hrought in two runs and tied the score; in the ninth inning, Harris—and who knows but that it was sentiment that made him do it?—sent in Walter Johnson to pitch—a last chance for the great pitcher to he returned as winner of a world series game. The tie lasted till the twelfth inning, when the Senators scored a run that won the game and the championship. What a roar went up from the crowds that were watching the scorehoards! We were not in any of those crowds—but half a hlock away we knew that Washington had won—no such shout would have marked the victory of the Giants. It was sentiment expressing itself, spontaneousiy and happiiy.

Sentiment plays its part, too, in the greater things of life. Plain common sense, hard facts, deliberate acts of the will—all these have an important piace; but the heart still holds mastery, and the appeal that leaves out the heart misses its best chance to affect the life. Emotionalism in religion? Yes—it has its place. Men are swayed supremely by sentiment.

Faith is of a piece. It believes about the future what it believes of the past; for God is to it the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. We cannot live hy faith now and look forward to fruition in the days to come, unless we also interpret the past days hy faith. God's dealings with us are consistent. There is no break in his providence. His grace is not intermittent. It is prevenient as well as present.—Hugh Black.

AGAIN I ASK, WHO MISUNDERSTANDS AND WHO IS MISLED?

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

(Concluded from Last Week.)

3. Bishop Mouzon urges, and urges justly, that American Methodism should do more to save the Negroes providentially in America. I agree with him, and with me this is no recently born conviction. Before I was eligible for deacon's orders, I began preaching to Negroes whenever I could, and I have continued to do so for nearly fifty years. I was one of the founders of Paine College at Augusta in 1882; bought the ground purchased for it and raised much, if not most, of the money to pay for it; boarded in my home Dr. Morgan Calloway and Dr. George Williams Walker, its first teacher; served on its Board of Trustees for more than thirty years, resigning reluctantly when our church placed on me the consuming labor of chairman of the Educational Commission charged with the establishment of our two universities and also the duties of membership on other boards and commissions, and thus impairing my efficiency on the Board of Trustees of Paine College.

But it is one thing to render service for and with the Negroes of our Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, and it is quite another thing to agree to put white people in any measure under the official superintendence of the Negro bishops of the Northern Church and merge our church into an ecclesiasticism in the legislative and judicial departments of which the Negro members of the Northern Church would participate influentially.

In this connection it is pertinent to call attention to a most important fact. The General Conference held at Hot Springs in 1922 instructed our Commission on Unification to "exercise scrupulous care that the relation of sympathy and support by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on behalf of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America be kept in view," and that General Conference declared, "We owe to that body peculiar obligations of duty and honor which we cannot forget or ignore in contracting relations with any other body of American Methodists."

But the proposed plan of unification contains no reference to these "obligations of duty and honor" beyond the following feeble recommendation tacked on at its end in such a way as to suggest it was an afterthought:

"We recommend that financial support of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church be continued by the jurisdiction with which it is historically related and to such an extent as that jurisdiction may deem wise."

But what about the Negroes in the Northern Methodist Church under the proposed plan of unification?

Prior to the Northern General Conference of 1924 they were helped educationally by a "Board of Education for Negroes," and otherwise by the "Board of Home Missions and Church Extension." The support of "The Board of Education for Negroes" was provided for by the Discipline as follows: "Contributions shall be taken through the church for the maintenance and support of this work, and for this purpose Lincoln's birthday shall be observed wherever practicable," and pastors of churches and their local committees were commanded "to provide for an annual day in the interest of this cause, and wherever practicable this day shall be the Sunday nearest to Lincoln's birthday."

At the General Conference in Springfield, Mass., last May, the Negroes complained that they were not getting a fair deal in the division of educational funds, and demanded that this "Board of Education for Negroes" be merged with the "Board of Education," and that the funds of the combined Board be distributed to the white and the colored membership alike. To this demand the General Conference acceded.

Now, if under the proposed plan of unification the resulting duplex church is to have one Board of Education, the Northern Methodist Negroes will be preferred creditors upon the benevolence of the Southern Jurisdiction, while the members of our Colored Methodist Episcopal Church must be contented with such financial support as is suggested in the recommendation attached at the end of the proposed plan.

Is it proposed that we thus send away our Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, with her children, as Hagar and Ishmael were sent into the wilderness with a little "bread and a bottle of water?" Does that carry out the order of our General Conference with reference to the fulfillment of our "peculiar obligations of duty and honor" to our Colored Methodist Episcopal Church?

But it may he said that each Jurisdiction under the proposed plan of unification will retain its own separate Boards, including its Board of Education. Where, then, will there be any union of the two churches?

Who can tell us what the proposed plan provides about this matter of connectional boards? All that it says clearly is this:

"The Judicial Council shall also have power to arrest an action of a connectional board or other connectional body when such action is brought before it by appeal by one-fifth of the members of said body present and voting or by a majority of the bishops."

Who knows what boards or bodies are meant by that provision of the proposed plan? Is it not most indefinite and incomplete?

4. In my article nothing more was said about the general defects of the proposed plan than that it "is too loose and imperfect to risk holding a General Conference under its provisions." Bishop Mouzon misses the point again, and says: "Well, we could hardly be immodest enough to claim that the work of our hearts and minds was perfect." He seems to imply that my objection to the plan is that it is not ideally perfect. I never thought of it in connection with anything ideal. When I said it was imperfect I meant that it was an utterly unfinished scheme which left unsettled too many matters of the gravest nature and the greatest importance. So it does; and herein our Commission forgot another instruction of the General Confernce. That body distinctly declined the proposal of the Northern Church to leave the framing of a plan of unification to a "Joint Convention." Nevertheless a majority of our Commission agreed to a plan which leaves the most serious matters to he settled by a joint General Conference, which, in fact, would he much the same as the "Joint Commission," which our General Conference declined.

Another matter in which a majority of our Commission on Unification did not obey the expressed will of the General Conference was their failure to follow instructions with reference to the "Joint Commission on Exchange of Territory." The action of the Genral Conference on that subject instructed the Commission as follows:

"The matter committed to this Joint Commission bears a vital relation to fraternity between the two churches and affects directly the matter of unification. Irritating competitions cannot fail to engender hostile sentiments toward any form of unification.

"We recommend, therefore, that this Commission be continued and that the Commission on Unification, for which provision is made in this report, be and is hereby instructed to extend all possible aid and co-operation to this Commission, to the end that the fraternal purpose for which it was constituted may be speedily accomplished and that American Methodism may without needless delay occupy and cultivate the whole field under the most favorable conditions and to the best advantage."

"The Commission on Exchange of Territory," to which the General Conference instructed the "Commission on Unification" to "extend all possible aid and co-operation," met a similar Commission of the Northern Church in Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 14, 1923, and adopted the following agreement, every Southern Commissioner, and four out of the seven Northern Commissioners voting for it:

"That neither church shall organize a new society in any community in which the other church has a duly organized society, except by the consent of the quarterly conference of the existing society."

This agreement was in perfect accord with the following declaration of the Federal Council of Methodism on Jan. 21, 1914, which said:

"The General Conference of both churches, through repeated declarations, have approved the principle that when either church is doing the work expected of Methodism in any community the other church shall not organize a society or erect a church building in that community."

It was also in keeping with all the agreements of fraternity and federation, from the work of the "Cape May Commission in 1876" unto the meeting of "the Commission on Exchange of Territory" at Cincinnati, Feb. 14, 1923.

In July, 1923,—five months after the agreement was made by the "Joint Commission on Exchange of Territory"—an amendment to the plan of unification, embodying the same principle, was offered in the Commission on Unification and it was rejected, all the Northern members voting against it, and a majority of the Southern Commission voting against it, including two Southern Commissioners (Doctor P. H. Linn and Doctor J. H. Reynolds) who were members of the "Commission on Exchange of Territory" also, and who in that Commission voted for the agreement adopted in Cincinnati, Feb. 14, 1923. The amendment to the plan thus strangely rejected was as follows:

"From the adoption of this agreement neither of the two jurisdictions shall organize a congregation in any community in which the other jurisdiction has an existing congregation until the quarterly conference of the existing congregation shall consent."

Pending the consideration of this amendment Bishop Denny, who offered it, was asked several questions by a Mr. Cherrington of the Northern Commission, concerning the meaning and application of the word "community" (a word repeatedly used in all the agreements of comity and federation), and in turn he asked Mr. Cherrington this perfectly courteous and relevant question:

"May I also ask a question? is there any part of the territory of the United States of America that you recognize as our territory exclusively?"

Whereupon, as shown by the stenographic report of the proceedings of the Commission on Unification, this colloquy followed between the Chairman and Bishop Denny:

"The Chairman (Bishop E. D. Mouzon): I rule that question out of order. It has no bearing on the matter before us.

"Bishop Denny: It has a very decided bearing. No objection has been made from the chair up to this time to any question asked by any member of this body.

"The Chairman: There does come a time when the Chair must speak, and he speaks now.

"Bishop Denny: The question I am asking now is perfectly pertinent to the matter before us.

"The Chairman: If you appeal from my decision, why do so. But that is my decision.

"Bishop Denny: With the greatest reluctance, I appeal, and state my grounds. Pertinent to this amendment, and to the question permitted to be asked of me is the question I have asked, because it relates to any community in which we can claim to have as a church any jurisdiction. If that be not pertinent to this question, to this amendment, how could I bring out from any one who would ask me or you a question whether there be an understanding of what is covered by this word 'community?' I understand what is involved, of course. I am not quite so dull as not to; but I hope it will not be turned down.

"The Chairman: The Chair does not care to state his reasons for his decision. If you will sustain the decision of the Chair, you will make it known by show of hands. If you do not sustain the decision of the Chair, make it known by show of hands. The decision of the Chair is sustained."

All that proceeding most surely cannot he interpreted as giving "all possible aid and co-operation" to the "Commission on Exchange of Territory," of which Bishop Denny was chairman.

The defective and dangerous and unfinished plan of unification now proposed was adopted by a majority of our Commission on Unification in disregard of the instructions of our General Conference in three particulars, and it is now proposed that it shall be finished by a Joint General Conference much, if not essentially, the same as the proposed "Joint Convention," which the General Conference at Hot Springs, Ark., May, 1922, distinctly declined to approve.

It has been repeatedly affirmed by Bishop Mouzon and other advocates of the unfinished plan of unification that the Joint General Conference which they would have finish the plan is a bicameral body like a State Legislature with a Senate and a House of Representatives; but if such is the case, let us ask which is the Senate and which the House? Do the Northern delegates compose the Senate and the Southern delegates compose the House? Obviously this idea that the Joint General Conference is to be a bicameral, or two-chamber, body is a misconception. The body is similar to a joint meeting of the Legislatures of two States—say Tennessee and Georgia—each representing a different constituency and each having tho power to veto all the acts of the other.

What would be the chances for peace and love and harmony in such a body?

5. The most remarkable passage in Bishop Mouzon's article is on this italicized proposition as a text:

"Men who oppose unification will not be permitted to do with our plan what Senator Lodge and others did with the League of Nations."

Under this emphatic declaration he institutes a comparison between the League of Nations and the proposed unfinished plan of unification and makes an implied comparison of himself with President Wilson, while others who disagree with him he compares to Senator Lodge.

Now, I would not indulge derision with reference to this bundle of comparisons; but perhaps it is permissible to use the language of Shakespeare, and say that the difference between the League of Nations and the incompleted plan of unification is so wide that any man who can "know a hawk from a handsaw" can see that the two things bear no slightest resemblance to each other.

And much as I esteem Bishop Mouzon, I never, until he suggested the idea, associated him with the lamented Wilson, and, somehow, I think he must on reflection regret associating with Senator Lodge his brethren who oppose the adoption of this defective and dangerous plan of unification. I am sure he is not vain enough to classify himself with Woodrow Wilson nor unkind enough to classify with Cahot Lodge his brethren who cannot approve the unfinished plan of unification.

It goes without saying that there is no element of idealism involved in this issue. Men of the highest ideals and the most elevated piety are opposed to this defective plan. And those who will have membership in the Annual Conference of 1925 will vote according to their convictions without asking anybody's permission.

The entire portion of Bishop Mouzon's article which brings up "The League of Nations," etc., is irrelevant to the subject under discussion.

Equally irrelevant is the noble quotation Bishop Mouzon makes from the writings of Hon. Jefferson Davis. Everybody knows that Mr. Davis did not wish the South to forget its history or abandon its principles. All his utterances, especially his last and greatest work, show that he cherished that history and maintained those principles.

Nor in what Bishop Mouzon quotes from him did Mr. Davis have any remotest thought of any plan of Methodist unification or any other ecclesiastical scheme whatever as a means of reuniting our country.

The country is already reunited, and if it were not, the adoption of this defective plan of unification would not contribute to reunite its sections. It would not contribute to the peace and unity of even the two churches involved, to say nothing of the whole country. It unifies nothing.

Bishop Mouzon says, "it will work." Undoubtedly it will work. A deleterious drug will work in the human system, but its working may result in great damage if not in death. Carbolic acid will work, but if not speedily counteracted, it quickly destroys life.

Yes. This plan will work, and if it were adopted, there is no antidote for it should it prove damaging and deadly to our beloved church, as I sincerely and assuredly believe it would; for once adopted, the plan offers no way of escape from the evils engendered by it.

It is not a unifying plan at all, and when I oppose it I am not "the advocate of disunion," as I have been denounced, but the advocate of the peace and prosperity of American Methodism. To such an epithet I must refuse to reply in kind.

But with my view of the defects and dangers of the plan Northern leaders agree.

Just the other day the editor of the Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) said of it:

"The only regret we have in discussing the whole subject is the nature of the proposed plan of unification. It is so remotely unification that one can scarcely see it in that light. The sensible men of both churches should get together on a proposal that would promote organic union."

In a recent letter of Rev. R. P. Shuler, of Los Angeles, published in one of our church papers, was this statement about a conversation that he had with Bishop Waldorf at Winona Lake, Indiana, during the last week in August:

"While at Winona Lake, Ind., attending a recent Bible conference, I had the pleasure of sharing a suite of rooms with Bishop Waldorf, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, one of the most refreshing, inspiring, and magnetic bishops I have ever had the pleasure of knowing. He is enthusiastically in favor of the present plan of unification, and declares that he does not for a moment douht hut that the two Methodisms, as one, will work out their problems to the glory of God and so as to insure the future progress and prosperity of Zion.

"However, Bishop Waldorf stated to me that, while he helieved the plan should be adopted and unification hrought ahout after its adoption, he realized that the plan itself, when thoroughly analyzed, was 'the purest nonsense,' and that it did not as a plan guarantee unification at all. His hope was and is, as is true with virtually all proponents of the plan, that the plan might bring us to where we would be able to find onr way to unification through its provisions. No one who is sane believes that the plan is a plan of unification. It may be a plan contemplating unification. it may be a plan by which we may in the future arrive at unification. It may be, as some contend, a step toward unification, but it most certainly is not unification. Moreover, there are thousands who believe that it will har the way to actual unification forever and will result quite naturally in assimilation or in the gradual swallowing up of the minority hy the majority."

In Zion's Herald of May 7 (the day on which the Northern General Conference adopted the plan with such apparent unanimity) Bishop Thomas D. Neely, another bishop of that church, published an article in which he said of this dangerously defective plan:

"The separation continues from bottom to top, and at the top they, the two churches, are not united as one, but are bound together like two men tied together with a rope around their throats, so that in their struggles they are likely to choke each other, and neither will have freedom, except to cry: 'Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?'

"In that strangle-hold relation the two bodies are to fight out their desires and demands, with the probability of repeating the experiences of the historic Kilkenny cats. Already there are serious injuries proposed to the organic laws of our own church. It is the worst scheme ever invented. It is not a unification and is something to he shunned as one would a viper."

Again I ask, "Who misunderstands and who is misled?" Bishop Mouzon's answer to this question does not answer.

Do the Northern leaders misunderstand the plan, and are they misleading their Negro members? Or, do the Southern advocates of the plan misunderstand it, and are they misleading our people?

These questions are too serious to be set aside by sharp personalities and unbrotherly insinuations. They must be seriously met in the fear of God and in deep concern for the welfare of our beloved church.

I am trying to save from hurt the great church to which I have given tireless toil and unselfish service for nearly fifty years. I am not careful to defend myself, and I refuse to return railing for railing. I am more concerned to maintain the spirit of Christian unity with my brethren near me than to unify with others more remote from me.

Peace among ourselves is more important than any plan whatsoever.

THE APPROACHING ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVENTH SESSION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Henry D. Hawkins.

The Mississippi Conference is a mother Conference. It now embraces only that part of the State of Mississippi south of the counties of Washington, Holmes, Attala, Winston, and Noxubee; but originally it embraced all of Mississippi, Alahama, Louisiana, Texas, and a part of Tennessee. There are ten Conferences at the present time in the territory first embraced in the Mississippi Conference; therefore, she is the mother of nine. Texas, where there are now five Annual Conferences, was once "The Texas District" of the Mississippi Conference.

Most of the early sessions of the Conference were held in Natchez, Woodville, Washington, or at some point in the "Natchez Country;" hut several were held at Tuscaloosa, Ala.; and then a little later several at Clinton and Jackson, La., and in New Orleans.

The session which was held a hundred years ago met in Tuscaloosa, Dec. 22, 1824, and adjourned Dec. 30, Bishop Joshua Soule presiding.

Five sessions of the Conference have met in Canton, Miss.: those of 1847, 1853, 1861, 1875, 1890. The records do not show who presided over the 1847 session; the other four were presided over by Bishops Capers, Paine, Marvin, and Galloway, respectively. Rev. H. J. Harris, grandfather of C. N. Harris, present editor of the Madison County Herald, published at Canton, was secretary of the Conference at thirteen of its sessions, including two of those held in Canton.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth is to preside over the approaching one hundred and eleventh session, which is to meet in Canton Nov. 5; and A. F. Watkins will probably be elected secretary, which will make the twenty-fourth consecutive session in which Dr. Watkins has served in that capacity. There are 190 preachers serving appointments of the Conference, chiefly pastoral charges. Besides these, there are twenty superannuate members, and fifty-six lay members; and there is always a class of young preachers appearing for the first time, asking to he received "on trial" into the Conference. Of course, death usually takes an annual toll.

The Mississippi Conference has an honorable history, with a good record in its devotion to missions, Christian education, and other causes that look to carrying the gospel forward. Certainly its work and its workers have not been perfect; preachers and people might have come nearer to fulfilling the expectation of their Master. But she has taken herself seriously, furnishing her quota of money, work, and thought. Jones, in his "History of Mississippi Methodism," mentions with pride that in the days of slavery agitation the records of the Mississippi Conference were never disfigured by any resolutions on that subject.

From the standpoint of size, the Mississippi Conference is strong, but by no means equal in this regard to some others, such as the Virginia, the North Alabama, the Western North Carolina, and several of the Conferences in Texas.

Probably the points of chief historic interest to Methodists attending the coming one hundred and eleventh session of the Mississippi Conference will be: the Canton church lot itself, where the magnificent new house succeeded the old one: the Sharon community, which was a seat of one of the Conference's early institutions of learning; and the latter Pearl River church house, about eight miles south of Canton, in front of which is a simple monument to the Lambuth family. Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, who died about three years ago, was considered by some the greatest authority on missions of his generation. He was born in China. But Bishop Lambuth's father, Rev. J. W. Lambuth, was reared in the above-mentioned Pearl River community, and during a long life of evangelic labors in China and Japan kept his membership in the Mississippi Conferences and in the Journal of the Mississippi Conference his name, and those of his Brother, Robert W. Lambuth, and his father, John R. Lambuth, appear in the list of "Our Sainted Dead."

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NEWS.

Our district is advancing along all lines under the careful leadership of our heloved presiding elder, Brother Hardin. He makes a mighty good presiding elder, and is wide-awake to the needs of his district and preachers. The preachers are all very busy now getting ready for Conference. From all accounts, we have had unusually good revivals all over the district, and with a fairly good crop within the bounds of the district, we should have a very good financial report.

Brother Hardin reports tbat the three group meetings held in our district were well attended by all the preachers. One was held for the southern section of the district at Shubuta, one for the northern section at Scooba, and the other here in the city of Meridian. The reports of the preachers indicate that they will do as well as last year, and probably better. Brother Hardin was very much encouraged over the results of these meetings.

I am pleased to announce that there have been fourteen young men licensed to preach the gospel in this district this year, all of whom are from the city of Meridian with the exception of one, who is from the De Soto charge. This speaks well for the spiritnal condition of our churches in Meridian. We have some of the best praying people in the world right here in this beantiful city; all the Methodist churches, to my certain knowledge, have earnest, consecrated, Holy Ghost praying people in them. There are many here who can say with John in I John, third chapter and twenty-second verse: "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight." And what is his commandment? The twenty-third verse explains—"And this is his commandment, that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment." Brother! anybody fulfilling these requirements of the Lord can get anything he desires from Heaven. We have some great Christians in this section of the country, for which we praise the Lord.

A GREAT INSTITUTION—THE MISSISSIPPI TUBERCULOSIS SANITORIUM.

This is one of the greatest institutions in the United States, or in any other country. It is well managed by Dr. Boswell and his efficient staff of assistants. The chief characteristics of each are sympathy and kindness. The patients are in love with the doctors and nurses. There is a spirit of good cheer and hopefulness throughout the institution.

The patients appreciate visits from friends, and especially from the preachers, who hring them good cheer from Christ, with hope of healing, not only of body, hut of soul. Between twenty-five and thirty have been sent home within the last month, restored to healtb.

Our church needs to arrange for the pastor to give more time to this work. The need is great. The patients are so appreciative and receptive. They hunger for spiritual food. They beg the pastor to visit them more frequently and remain longer. But he cannot when he has four other appointments. The pastor should spend the recreation period of two and one-half hours each day, for at least three days in the week. Then it would take him a month to have a short service in each room.

There are more than two hundred patients in the institution now. Forty-three of these are Methodists—twenty-one from the Mississippi Conference and twenty-two from the North Mississippi Conference. These two Conferences co-operating, should give at least half-time of a pastor to this great work. The Baptist pastor serves only Magee and the Sanitorium, consequently he can give more time and better service.

We make no difference in our visiting, but visit all denominations. Each denomination has preaching in the lobby of the dining-room one Sunday night a month; from seventy-five to one hundred attend these services.

What will we do about it? Let us give them the Bread of Life while the State feeds and restores the body.

DR. STEEL THEN AND NOW.

Mr. Editor: With no purpose to meddle with your editing, which suggests by its character that no improvement can be suggested, I send this, clipped from the current issue of the Methodist Advocate, and suggest that it suggests very much just now. Dr. Steel's heart is right if his logic does miss a beat now and then.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Read This.

There are good and true men who seem at times to have forgotten that the war has long been over and that a new generation has come upon the scene of action, to whom their vindictive words are strangely out of keeping with the peaceful spirit of the age. But, sir, we must not judge the course of a river by the swirl and eddies on the surface, but by the deep and steady sweep of its current. The men, whether they be politicians or preachers, the demagogues of the stump or the pulpit who "nurse their wrath to keep it warm" are in a rapidly lessening minority. The spirit of the age rebukes them. I speak for the intelligence of the South; I represent its public opinion, and I know that I voice the sentiment of the great masses of its thoughtful, industrious, and progressive people, who not only control the present, but are the key to the future, when I say from the center all around the sea we desire to bury forever the animosities of the past, hush the dissensions of the present, draw closer to our brethren in fraternal alliance, and to lock our shields for a united advance against the gates of hell. Mr. President, indulge me, sir; I feel the burden of my message. I speak from the heart. Would God, sir, that I might convince the Methodist Episcopal Church that we, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, desire to clasp hands with you in perpetual peace, and together rise to the height of this vast opportunity. Sir, we do not want a formal fraternity, with its periodic official courtesies and its ineffectual sentimentalism, but a practical fraternity, expressing itself in legislation and administration, in deeds as well as words. We want a fraternity studious to avoid differences and to find points of agreement. We want a fraternity that honors each other's motives, recognizes each other's difficulties, has patience with each other's faults, and protects each other's character.—Dr. Sam Steel, in Fraternal Message to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1888.

EDUCATION'S OPPORTUNITY.

The Church Harmonizing Commission authorized by the General Conference at Hot Springs has asked that an open field be given to the Christian Education cause from Oct. 15, 1924, until Jan. 15, 1925. Two definite objectives are before us: First, to collect the pledges made to the Christian Education Movement; second, to make a special effort to give further relief to our hard-pressed schools.

This order of the Commission means that the entire organization of the church, bishops, elders, pastors, secretaries, church officials, are, by General Conference action, asked to use these three months, as fully as possible, to do this one task. There are other things that must be cared for, but let this one big task be our one supreme task.

For four years the Christian Education Movement has had a second place among the church's interests. Our colleges have continued to suffer. Now is our opportunity to give the long-looked-for relief and make good our vows of four years ago.

May we ask that each subscriber do his best to meet this sacred obligation? If possible to do so, pay the entire subscription you made four years ago. In North Mississippi, there will be due and unpaid Nov. 1 about $200,000. May we not urge every man to do his best to get this money into the hands of the schools?

We are asking that every official make special effort to meet the needs of Grenada College Endowment. This must be secured this winter.

J. H. HOLDER,
Secretary-Treasurer, North Mississippi Conference.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—CLASS OF THE FIRST YEAR.

The Class of the First Year will please meet the committee in the Methodist church, West Point, Miss., Oct. 28, at 2 o'clock p. m.

S. A. BROWN, for the Committee.

Colegio Eliza Bowman has received $1,350 of Centenary money for running expenses.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

"PUT YE IN THE SICKLE FOR THE TIME HAS COME TO REAP."

The harvest season is here. After a year's busy toil and in the midst of fears and anxieties the Lord has abundantly rewarded the sowers by giving wonderful crops in nearly every section of our great church. And now the growers stand in the midst of their crop-laden fields with thanksgiving. And while they behold the result of their labors with gratitude, the One who gave the sunshine and the rain whispers: "Put ye in the sickle for the time has come to reap."

But a great harvest of corn and wheat and cotton, etc., should mean also that the One who has applied the season's opportunity should not be forgotten when the granaries are full. He is a poor type of Christian who accepts everything from the hands of his Lord and returns to him practically nothing. We would not think of using the services of laborers for a whole year without remuneration; we could not if we would. The most efficient laborer in our harvest fields has been none other than the Lord. We should gladly pay him his part in full measure.

THE SONG OF THE HARVESTERS.

These are they who do not forget. The Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment grips the heart of the whole church, and hundreds of charges are responding merrily. The song of those who have paid one-fifth or more of their total Special Effort quotas makes sweet music.

LET US KEEP ON PUSHING AHEAD.

Peristently pursue a definite plan to pay one-fifth or more of your quota this Conference year, and you will win. If one plan fails, try another. Keep your eye on the goal and do not quit. Remember, standing still is practically the same as going backward. Keep a-goin'. If I read correctly the heart-throbs of the people toward our superannuates, the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is sure to succeed. Be sure that you are in the picture at the end.

Send all remittances on Special Effort quotas to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The Home Circle

THE TEACHER.

Lord, who am I to teach the way
To little children day by day,
So prone myself to go astray?

I teach them knowledge—but I know
How faint they flicker and how low
The candles of my knowledge glow.

I teach them power to will and do—
But only now to learn anew
My own great weakness through and through.

I teach them love for all mankind
And all God's creatures—but I find
My love comes lagging still behind.

Lord, if their guide I still must be,
O, let the little children see
The teacher leaning hard on thee!

—Lesllo Pinckney Hill.

WHEN ERNEST DISOBEYED.

"Here, children," said mother early one morning, "I want you to go to the store over at Hillville and buy the groceries I have marked on the slip of paper. And be sure to get back by 11 o'clock," she added with a mysterious twinkle in her eyes."

"Yes, mother," said Violet. "May Ernest go, too? You know the big snake we saw in the woods the last time we went to the store? We may need brother along to protect us."

"Yes, Ernest can go with you, only be sure to get back by 11 o'clock."

It was about a mile to the grocery store. Arriving there, the children purchased the groceries mother wished and also some candy with the dime she had given them. Then they started for home.

"I wonder if we will have time to pick some raspberries," suggested Violet. "I saw such nice ones on our way over."

"Sure, loads of time," replied Ernest with the air of one who knew a great deal.

So they stepped into the wood, and all picked berries until they had several quarts.

As they were again starting for home John Groves happened by with his big dog. He was whistling and seemed to be having a great time.

"Come on, Erny," he said, "let's go down to the creek and have a swim."

"No," replied Ernest. "We must get home by 11, and we won't have time."

"Sure we will. My dad's coming down this way with the team, and he said he would stop at the creek and get me at 10:30. You just come along and you'll have plenty of time."

"No, brother, don't go," pleaded Violet.

Ernest was undecided. He looked first at John and then at his sister. Then he said: "You walk slowly home, Violet, and I'll go with John, have a swim, and then catch up with you before you reach home."

"O, but Erny," pleaded Violet, "you know mother said we were to be back by 11 o'clock, and besides, I might meet a snake!"

"There are no snakes at this time of the year," said John Groves scornfully. "Come on, Erny."

Ernest followed with hesitation. He felt rather bad and that he should not have left his sister. But the creek did look so cool and inviting.

The boys had a fine swim. They were splashing and having a splendid time when suddenly Ernest realized that a great length of time had passed since he left his sister. "O, John, it surely must be after 10:30 by now!" he cried.

"O, I don't think so! Father will most likely be here any minute now."

But father did not come.

The boys presently started to walk home. Meeting a man on the road, they inquired what time it was.

"Ten minutes to 11," he replied.

When Ernest reached home it was just noon. His mother prepared lunch and they sat down. Mother was very quiet. Ernest wished she would talk.

After lunch mother asked him to go into the garden and finish weeding.

But he could stand the silence no longer. "Where is Violet, mother?" he asked.

"She has gone to town with your Uncle James. They are going to the Zoo this afternoon. Uncle James said he had to leave promptly at 11 o'clock, but that if you and Violet were ready he would come and take you in his new automobile. That was why I wanted you to be sure to be back by 11."

"But, mother, why didn't you tell me?" asked Ernest.

"Your uncle wanted to surprise you, so I promised not to tell you until he drove up in his car."

Ernest wended his way slowly and thoughtfully into the garden, where he set about the task of weeding.

The Zoo! That was the one place Ernest had been wanting to visit for a long, long while.

But Ernest was a good boy, and the thing that caused a little ache in his heart was that he had disobeyed his mother.

As he weeded the garden weeds a little bird sat up in a tree near by and seemed to say with his merry voice: "Al-ways o-bey! Al-ways o-bey!"

Ernest looked up at the little bird, and then with a smile he said aloud: "All right, birdie, I guess it's the best thing to do."—Primary Weekly.

STAR TAKES A JUMP.

Betty theught that her pony Star was the best in town and even in the county, and probably in the whole world. He had the best disposition, for he never bicked or bit—except apples. He was a champion when it came to biting apples!

"Betty, you always give Star the biggest apple," said her brother Bobby as he leaned over the fence of the pasture one day. "Don't you think you ought to keep the biggest for us and give your horse just the ones that we can't eat? It doesn't make any difference to him how big it is so long as it is an apple."

Betty gave Bobby a look that plainly said, "You can pick up your heels and get right out of my field if you talk that way." But she really answered by polishing off the biggest apple that she could find and putting it up to Star's soft black muzzle.

"Sic him, Star!" said Betty, but Star only whinnied and wandered off and put his long neck down to nibble the juicy blades of grass.

"Let's play," said Bobby, and he jumped over the fence. "Go get his saddle and see whether you can make him jump that little ditch." He pointed to a tiny sunken path that ran right across the meadow.

"I never jumped with him before," said Betty, "but of course he can do it."

She ran into the stable and came back trailing the saddle and bridle behind her.

"Here, come here!" she called and went racing off after Star. But he trotted away as if he were playing a game of tag with her.

"Star, come here, come to your mistress!" she called, and at last he came nearer and allowed her to slip on the bridle and buckle the saddle on his back. Betty knew how to saddle him very well because she had done it many times.

When he was ready she swung herself up on his back. "Get up, Star" she commanded.

He started forward straight toward the path, and Betty gathered the reins tight in her hand, ready to help him over the ditch. Bobby ran along beside them, and in his excitement he pulled out his big white handkerchief and waved it up and down. "Go it, Star! Jump it!" he shouted, and jumped up and down himself.

The flash of the white cloth frightened Star. He swerved sharply to one side, tossed his head, kicked up his heels, and with his head low to the ground ran as fast as he could in the opposite direction straight over the green pasture. Betty gripped his sides with her knees and leaned far over, pulling hard on the reins. "Whoa, whoa, Star!" she shrieked, but the wind must have been whistling by the pony's ears too fast to let him hear her. He did not stop.

Betty held on as tight as she could, but suddenly, just when she seemed to be bouncing the most, Star jerked up his feet and jumped. Up and down together went horse and rider, but the jump seemed to take all the runaway spirit out of Star. The next minute he came to a quick standstill with Betty sitting tight on his back. She looked behind her and saw that they had gone over the brook.—a little bubbling brook—that ran through the end of the meadow.

Two persons came running toward them, Bobby and mother; but Betty only laughed when they asked if she was hurt.

"I think my bones rattled," she said, "but I don't believe any of them broke."

"Whew! That certainly was a big jump," said Bobby, looking at the stream. He could not get across it except on stepping-stones.

"I told you Star always had to have the biggest of everything," said Betty. "Even the biggest runaway jump!"—Charlotte E. Wilder, in the Youth's Companion.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The enrollment of students in Centenary College, Shreveport, La., has exceeded 350 to date.

Plans are being completed at Hazlehurst, Miss., for the revival meeting to be held by Rev. W. B. Hogg this month.

Brother Byron Smith, of Peoria, Miss., is a long-time subscriber to the Advocate. We appreciate his kindly words of appreciation of the paper.

Rev. Bob Shuler has just completed a quadrennium as pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Los Angeles, Calif. During that time, 3,000 members have been added to the church.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Tylertown charge, Brookhaven District, passed resolutions highly commending the work of the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, during the past four years.

Rev. J. W. Chisholm, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, has been transferred from the Central Texas to the New Mexico Conference, and appointed pastor at Alpine, Tex., in the El Paso District.

The Western Christian Advocate is authority for the statement that Dr. G. Campbell Morgan will occupy the pulpit of the famous Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, for perhaps half of the coming year.

The third Shreveport District Standard Training School is in session at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., this week. A fine course is being offered under competent instructors. Dr. A. S. Lutz is the educational director.

At the promotion exercises of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., held on Sunday evening, Oct. 5, 162 pupils were promoted to the next higher departments. A fine program was rendered in connection with the service.

We call special attention to the article by Rev. W. M. Williams in this week's Advocate concerning the need of a larger service to the patients of the great State Sanatorium at Magee, Miss. This need should be met by the church.

Judge Frank Morris, general evangelist, has just closed a remarkable meeting in Lebanon, Ky., in which the Methodist, the Baptist, and the Christian churches co-operated. Rev. W. O. Sadler, well known in Mississippi, is the pastor of the Methodist church at Lebanon.

We have received the first issue of "The Methodist Messenger," published "every now and then" by the First Methodist Church of Gainesville, Fla. Rev. Ben F. Rogers is the editor, which means—as all his North Mississippi friends know—that it is an interesting publication.

Mrs. John A. Kern, wife of Dr. John A. Kern, one of the most distinguished ministers of our church, died recently. She was the mother of Dr. Paul B. Kern, of Southern Methodist University, and Dr. A. A. Kern, of Randolph-Macon College. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow.

The Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., began a "double-the-attendance" campaign on Oct. 5, the campaign to continue for seven weeks. Extensive improvements are being made on the church building, which, when completed, will add greatly to its beauty. Rev. W. W. Holmes is the pastor.

The attendance at Grenada College this year shows an increase over last year, even after dropping the preparatory students. The Freshman class alone has ninety-six members. The teaching force had to be increased to take care of the situation. The endowment of Grenada should be no longer delayed.

From the Lincoln County (Miss.) Times: "Monday night, in the Lampton Auditorium, a large audience of college girls and Brookhaven people enjoyed the first Faculty Recital, given by the teachers of the Music and Expression Departments of Whitworth College. * * * The entire program was an artistic success."

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society announces the resignation of Mr. Frank H. Mann as one of the General Secretaries of the Society. During the administration of Mr. Mann, the annual income of the Society steadily increased. His retirement is for reasons that are wholly personal, and he carries with him the highest appreciation and good will of the Board of Managers.

Miss Evelyn Eugenia Hardin, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. D. Hardin, was married to Mr. Joseph William Carroll, of Montgomery, Ala., at the district parsonage, 1303 Fifteenth Avenue, Meridian, Miss., on Oct. 6, the father of the bride, who is presiding elder of the Meridian District, officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, has been transferred from the Central Texas Conference to the New Mexico Conference, and appointed pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, El Paso, Tex. This is the church served by Rev. W. B. Hogg before he entered the evangelistic work, and is one of the great churches of the connection.

Last Sunday was observed as rally day by all the Sunday schools of the Calhoun charge, Louisiana Conference, of which Rev. P. O. Lowrey is pastor. Special speakers were secured, among them Prof. W. B. Hale, of the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, at Ruston. Brother Lowrey is one of the most indefatigable workers in the Conference.

Rev. W. D. Bass, Corinth, Miss., writes: "When writing a word in a late issue of your paper concerning the good things accomplished during the past four years under the administration of Brother J. B. Randolph, as presiding elder of the Corinth District, I was under the wrong impression in regard to his paying his own money altogether for gospel tents. The facts are, other good friends helped him pay for the tents. Would be glad if you would make this correction for me."

The Poster Advertising Association, Inc., 307 South Green Street, Chicago, Ill., is offering three substantial cash prizes for the best posters expressing the debt of the world to the church. The contest is open to any artist, amateur or professional, anywhere in the world. Full particulars of the contest can be had upon application to the Association, or to the Federal Council of the Churches, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York.

Rev. A. M. Shaw, our pastor at Oakdale, La., observed his Jubilee as the thirtieth anniversary of his entrance into the itinerancy. He was licensed to preach at Rock Schoolhouse, near Camden, Ark., on Oct. 13, 1894. He has served 23 years in the Little Rock Conference, 2 in the Pacific, and 5 in the Louisiana. He is well known as a preacher, writer, and lecturer. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes for many additional years of happiness and usefulness.

FIXING A MEMBERSHIP GOAL AND REACHING IT.

Applied Locally, the Goal Should Be—"Sunday School Enrollment Equaling Church Membership."

By Clarence M. Dannelly, Alabama Conference Sunday School Superintendent, President of the General Sunday School Council of Southern Methodism.

Every great business enterprise has the commendable desire to increase its fields of service. This is true in the commercial world, and it is true in the religious world.

The greatest "buiness" in the world is that of selling the saving message of the Christ. Jesus used the term, "business," only once during his earthly ministry, and it was "in the midst of the doctors (learned teachers), both hearing them and asking them questions." He was in attendance at a synagogue school and asked Mary, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

Our great desire in the teaching ministry of the church is to have this business flourish so that those who ought to be taught can be reached with the message that means a larger and more noble life in the world and a certainty with reference to the life to come.

Hence the depression of feeling that came over us when the record was written of work in the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism last year showing a net gain of only 18,679. This was smaller than in many years, and so far short of the annual application of our General Sunday School Council's tocsin of war for the recent quadrennium—"a million increase"—that the depression soon took on the nature of a squaring of jaws, the bending of knees, and an humbleness of heart, in which attitude prayers ascended to him in whom we live and move and have our being for wisdom to do more in his kingdom service.

For the past quadrennium in the Alabama Conference there has been a wholesome growth of 26½%, the growth this past year amounting to 12% over the year previous. This was 31.63% of the entire growth of the Sunday school, and while causing pride of a somewhat selfish nature to flood our being, we of course regretted that some of the other Conferences either barely held their own, or had lossage. The only other Conference with a large numerical increase was the Western North Carolina Conference.

With this record of growth in our Conference, we are yet far from satisfied, as one will readily understand when we state that we are nearly 25,000 short of the church membership. There is a great discrepancy between the Sunday school membership and the church membership, to say nothing of the church constituency, in the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism. Recognition of this serious shortcoming prompted the war cry of this present quadrennium—"a million increase." We long to have the very commendable record of the United Brethrhood and the Methodist Episcopal Church in having a school enrollment that exceeds numerically the church membership. This is a wholesome state of being.

It has been stated that the ideal Sunday school membership is the church membership plus. This plus consists of the ... who ought to be in our training, but have not yet reached the age of decision for Christ, and those ... to connect in a formal way with the church of God's children. It consists of children and young people.

The entire training of the church in the Sunday school is a continuous work. We are sounding continuously in our Sunday schools rings. This has caused some schools to add in an effective way active Home Departments for the young people and the adults who cannot regularly attend the Sunday school sessions. Yet, to be sure, we have somewhat paradoxically urged that the Home Department wage a campaign all the while, to get rid of itself! Some who think they cannot come to the Sunday school sessions regularly might find out, through urge and example of others, that they can attend with more or less regularity—at least as associate members of the class.

At the district Sunday school conferences of the Alabama Annual Conference early in the calendar year, which is also early in the Conference year, we have the representatives of the schools present discuss plans for the year and agree on certain specific "Objectives." Among these "Objectives" this year, is the bringing of the Sunday school membership to an equality, numerically, with the church membership. Not a single district but that placed this among its tasks for the year! There will not be success in every instance. This we felt to be the case when the self-appointed task was stated; this we feel to be the case now. But the recognition of such a condition and the desire to overcome this point of weakness has a very decided psychological effect, and we are certain that it helps mightily in the effort to increase membership in the local school.

We cannot outline a special campaign for Sunday school increase. None has been waged. The effort to increase has been such a vital part of the whole service to the schools of the Conference, however, that we feel gratified at the success that has attended our insistence at this point.

We might add this word further. Our increase might directly be traced to the training program of our Conference. Not all of this training has been given in Training Schools, either of the Standard or One-Teacher, or Non-Standard type. This has loomed large, as it ought and as it will continue, we trust. But there has been going on in direct parallelism to it, a program of institutes of one day's duration which has been taking a larger and larger place in our work. This has provided opportunity for those trained in "Schools" to be of broader service than the local schools.

At these one-day meetings there are hundreds of those reached who cannnot be touched by training schools. We take this into consideration and plan the meetings so that the old inspirational idea of Sunday school institutes will be conserved in a helpful way, but at the same time try to introduce elements that are fundamental in training—namely, showing the multitude of consecrated workers how it might be done, those who are willing to give of themselves more or less unreservedly to the teaching ministry, but not knowing how a school ought to be run, nor having nor taking the time to study the many problems in detail.

To this end we have placed much emphasis on the "Program of Work," and present it as the greatest contribution in local Sunday school activities that the church connectionally has made since the initiation of the training program years ago. When a vision is sought by some worker in a school, results follow, and not the least of these, in the following of these splendid suggestions, is the logically expected result of increased enrollment and attendance.

There is no doubt but that the enrollment campaign is a great need. We need in a united way to get behind this recognized failure and so organize our local Sunday school forces that provision will be made for all who ought to be enrolled. Then after the business organization is ready to deliver the goods, "advertise" to the community that there is something of value to be received. Enroll the indifferent and those not accustomed to attend. Then when they come, give them something worth their while, and they will desire to come back again. In the parlance of business, let us play on our greatest of all business enterprises for the "return customer."

WHEN WE WALK WITH HIM.

A noble mind can never swim with the stream. It resents being carried. Even though the direction is the same, it would go if it were left to its own initiative. It must walk upon its own feet. It must take its own path. It must go forward under the feeling of responsibility.

In quiet inactivity all men are equal. They must be seen fighting to be rightly estimated. Therefore the noble mind resents passivity and the proffer to be carried along by inherited conditions of associations that do not call upon it to do its best. For we are living in a world that calls upon the mind of man always to do its best, to act independently, and to trust God nor be afraid.

The unsuspecting soul, utterly ignorant of the strife and road, of the burning hate and intrigue of the great world, walks unsuspectingly into the maelstrom or is carried therein by forces over which he has no control and then too frequently discovers that, like an Egyptian pitcher of tame vipers, each struggling to get its head above the others, the world of men and women engulfs him as though he were indeed but another human unit of no value and little worth.

The world apart from Jesus Christ is one of struggle and conflict, with little hope, sympathy, or consideration. To walk in it is to have the memory of loss and regret, of suffering and deprivation constantly haunting the path. If the soul has had any experience of communion with Christ, the contrast becomes so great that it haunts like a specter.

Think of the prodigal son away from the father's house! Often no doubt he saw the vision of his pure boyhood days like a specter haunting him in his fallen estate, while he cries with anguish: "Back, back to your shroud and sepulcher, O Lazarus of my youth! And when I am called to the final judgment, rise up for me and stand in my place and confront those who would slaughter thee!"

This is the cry of the soul in a world where the light of God has gone out, where the spirit of alienation has wrought its havoc, and conscience sits alone grieving and yearning for the hour of restoration.

When we walk with him there prevails in the heart a manifest spirit of peace. The soul is at rest. Its surface may be swept by winds and the breezes that blow through the avenue of man's worldly activity, but deep down in the life there are that seclusion and that certainty and rest which can never be disturbed even by the storms that may break with threatening destruction. The inner consciousness of this experience is the sweetest that ever comes to the human life. When one enjoys it, when one lives with it, there is created that sense of dependence upon Jesus Christ that leads the soul constantly to throw itself in recognition at his feet. The sense of merit or worth counts little, while before him the cry rises: "Worthy, no, no; unworthy, most unworthy!"

But was Thomas worthy to attain sonship with him whom face to face he doubted? Was Peter worthy to preach the gospel of him whom he had thrice indignantly denied? Was Paul worthy to become the apostle to the Gentiles, teaching the doctrine of him whose disciples he had persecuted?

If the repentance of Peter and Paul availed to purify their hands and hearts and sanctify them to the service of Christ, what worthiness can those souls that depend on him claim?—Western Christian Advocate.

TO THE MEMBERS AND DELEGATES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Friends: We of Canton are looking forward to your coming with great pleasure, and we believe you will be a great help to our little city. We are very sorry that we will not be able to entertain visitors. We will be full. It is not a question of willingness, but a question of room. Our boarding houses and hotels will be running over.

Yours faithfully,

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE.

AN APPEAL TO EVERY SUBSCRIBER TO THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION FUND.

On Nov. 1, the fourth payment is due on pledges to the Christian Education Fund. This should be agitated by all interested from Oct. 15 to Jan. 15, 1925.

Our schools and colleges are in need of all money subscribed and have made their own budgets on that basis. They cannot do the work which is expected of them and which they should do unless this financial support is forthcoming.

It is the wish of the Christian Education Movement that all past-due subscriptions should be paid at once and that all payments due Nov. 1 should be paid on that date, if possible.

In keeping with the suggestion of our Head quarters, I hereby designate the fourth Sunday in November as Christian Education Day, and the week following as Christian Education Week, urging all collectors to see each subscriber in order that we may clean up all arrears in subscriptions.

J. M. MORSE,

Secretary-Treasurer, Mississippi Conference Christian Education Movement.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please hand in your reports not later than the second morning (the first day preferable) of the Annual Conference. Make separate check for each claim and note on check what claim it is for. Put no money in. Place report with check, or receipt, in envelope, seal and hand to W. T. Griffin, W. H. Lane, or to me. Mark on outside of envelope, charge and district. Get the latest report blanks from Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn. No blanks will be sent out by the committee.

Conforming to the above requests will greatly facilitate matters for both the auditing committee and the Statistical Secretaries.

T. B. COTTRELL, for Committee.

MRS. MARY E. HARMON, daughter of Bozeman Hayes and Eliza Simmons Hayes, was born, April 21, 1842, and died Friday, June 20, 1924, at Crowley, La. In 1866 she married E. L. Harmon, prominent planter of a community near Crowley, known as the Prairie Hayes County. This couple had no children of their own, but adopted four nieces and four nephews as their own. Only one of these adopted children is living, Mrs. J. M. Lyons, of Crowley, at whose home Mrs. Harmon died. The writer had the great privilege to be Sister Harmon's pastor and friend for several years. He knew her when she had to bear her greatest sorrow, the loss of her lifetime companion, Brother Harmon. Every one called Sister Harmon "Aunt Mary." She was a woman of outstanding character. Her leading virtue was loyalty. She would die for her convictions. She loved her church and her pastor, and she had no patience with modern insincerity. She was a woman that did her own thinking, and when she reached her conclusions she was firm enough to announce her convictions. Another outstanding virtue, in addition to her loyalty, was her sense of gratitude. She was full of appreciation of every attention given her. She made her pastor feel that her home was his home. There never lived a more loyal and true member of the Methodist church in Southwest Louisiana than Aunt Mary Harmon. When the time came for her to answer the last summons, she was ready and waiting to join those loved ones of hers who had passed on before her. It was my opportunity to conduct the funeral service and join with her many friends in paying our tribute to this most remarkable personality and friend.

John Edward Page was born in Hinds County, Miss., near Brownsville, Sept. 23, 1851, and died in Lexington, Holmes County, Miss., Sept. 21, 1924, thus rounding out more than seventy years of useful living.

In early manhood he moved to Black Hawk, Carroll County, Miss. Here he met, loved and married Miss Willie Conger, of Vaiden, Miss. To this union one child, Lucius Edward, was born. This only son was stricken with diphtheria and died, Nov. 15, 1900. Thereafter these two lived in the bonds of true love, looking for the reunion of broken ties in the beyond; now only the wife and mother is left, lonely but full of hope and sustained by faith in the Heavenly Father's goodness.

"Ed Page," as his friends loved to call him, with his wife, moved to Lexington, Holmes County, Miss., in 1893. He held the office of county tax assessor for one term and was county cotton weigher for twenty-five years. In public office as in private life, he was faithful, conscientious and courteous. Fidelity as a public official, courteous as a gentleman, loyalty as a friend, tenderness as a husband, faithfulness as a Christian, honor and honesty as a man, were not matters of policy with him, but of life principles. As he believed so he lived, as he lived so he died.

To the virtues of unswerving fidelity, gentle courtesy, abiding loyalty, sweet tenderness, unalloyed faithfulness and unsullied honesty, was added a keen sense of humor, which pervaded his life to the end. Those strong and gentle qualities of character bound men of all creeds and races to him. He loved men and children and they loved him. He readily forgave, even when unasked.

His cheery, sunshiny heart seemed never to be darkened by the lowering clouds of pessimism.

Long months of suffering preceded his departure to the Eternal City, but no complaints were ever uttered. He possessed his soul in patience until he heard the Master's summons, "Well done, good and faithful servant," then quietly and peacefully closed his weary eyes in restful sleep.

The funeral was held from the Methdoist church, of which he had been a lifelong member, conducted by Rev. J. W. Ward, his pastor, assisted by Revs. N. A. Edmonds, V. L. Bryant, and G. T. Gillespie, of Jackson.

Tenderly the hands of many friends laid his body away beneath a mound of flowers in the cemetery at Black Hawk, Miss., beside tbat of his son.

Peace to thee, our friend and brother!

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

FROM THE HAYNESVILLE AUXILIARY.

Through the tireless efforts of our president, all departments of the Woman's Missionary Society continued active during the summer. Thus interest in the work has not waned, and reorganization for the fall quarter has been eliminated.

The auxiliary is rejoicing over the acquisition of five splendid new members. This is in keeping with the appeal of the Louisiana Conference to reach the goal of a "double membership" in 1924.

The Mission Study Class has made an intensive study of the following books: "The Child and America's Future," by Jay Stowell; "Creative Forces in Japan," by Galen Fisher, and "Save America." All who participated in the study of these were not only greatly enlightened, but were furnished with unparalleled opportunities for sympathetic understanding. During the month of October, Robert E. Speer's "Of One Blood," will be taken up.

The first meeting of the fall season of the work circles was held Sept. 29. The circles prepared a box of clothing for our girl at the Ruston Orphanage; also discussed plans for the annual bazaar to be held in December.

Quarterly report of social service department: 75 bouquets of flowers, 256 visits to sick, 81 trays delicacies sent sick, 12 visits to strangers. A delightful social hour was spent. There was a splendid attendance of members, and a number of guests.

The Bible Study Class has made a study of the Old Testament, chapter by chapter. This course has been specially beneficial, has acquainted each one with the Bible and thus created a love for a close reading of it.

LETTER FROM BRAZIL.

My Dear Co-Workers: Since last I wrote you, we have had the privilege of visiting three of our schools, Colegio Piracicabano at Piracicaba, Colegio Methodista at Ribeirao Preto, and Isabella Hendrix, at Bello Horizonte.

The school at Piraciaba is our oldest in Brazil, and it was with reverence that we walked through its halls, remembering the early struggles of Miss Watts and the women at home who supported her to get a footing in this city. When Miss Watts came to Brazil, woman's work was unknown; for a woman to appear on the streets either alone or in company with a gentleman was an innovation that shocked the natives. Miss Watts started her school in a small rented building, with one pupil and no servant. The old building—the one that was first erected—begins to tell the tale of its age, but stands as a monument to faith and self-sacrificing efforts. The newer building—the Martha Watts annex—is larger and more imposing than the one to which it is annexed, and is indeed a fitting monument to the founder of the school.

Miss Stradley and Miss Watts are the only two principals that this institution has ever had, and it is the embodiment of both. It has a personality all its own, manifested in the spontaneity and enthusiasm of the pupils. Miss Stradley tells us this is due partly to the character of the people from which the school draws; they are characterized by a greater independence of life and thought than in some other portions of the country. A large per cent of the pupils in this school become Protestant by open profession. The school has been established so long and our work here has been so full of power that it is no longer an opprobium to become a Protestant. Miss Stradley teaches a class of young men in the Sunday school, former pupils of hers in the school. A number of these young men have volunteered for the ministry.

A beautiful school is being built in this community entirely through the efforts of the congregation except for the price of the old church, which has been bought by the school and is being converted into class rooms. Piracicabano turns away puplis every year for lack of room; a new dormitory is a necessity. This is our training center for the Central Brazil Conference, and should be equipped for the present needs of Brazil.

At Colegio Methodista we received a royal welcome. The buildings and grounds here are most attractive, but the capacity for the pupilage limited. No larger a number of boarders than thirty can be accomodated. In a way, this is an advantage, for the small number makes possible a most charming family life, and this we realized was an outstanding characteristic of this school. Here we found an abounding young life, cordial and genial. Under a loving guidance, these girls are being given full play in the development of their personalities. Their royal welcome to the strangers from the far north, and their determination to do their share in the honors gave full evidence of this. Numbers of these girls were girls with a purpose. One girl, with a strong blend of Indian blood, told me in her broken English that she was an orphan and had worked in a factory, but she was now getting ready to teach in the far west. This school is crowded also; classes are taught in old buildings left standing on the grounds, and another class room in the end of the dormitory hall upstairs. When a new dormitory can be built, the present building will be remodeled for the administration building. The school is in the heart of the greatest coffee region in the world—a shipping center where eighty trains go in or out every day. Our missionaries have made their way and have won the respect of the community. We met numbers of the best people in the drawing rooms of the school while there.

Bello Horizonte, like its name, is indeed a beautiful horizon—a fine place for a school, a healthful location, and the capital of the State of Minas, which means mines. The State is the great mining section of Brazil. At Bello Horizonte we find an attractive group of young girls and a far-reaching work being done. The pupils here seem more reserved than in the other schools, and harder to reach with the truth of the gospel. However, during the years, the school has made its way. On Sunday afternoon, the officers of the Missionary Society called upon us, and, except for the strange tongue in which they spoke, we would have thought ourselves among our own missionary women at home. We realized the results of our years of work at this time and again when the faculty gave a tea in our honor, inviting the graduates of the school.

The conditions under which our work here is being carried on are the most distressing in the field. The little beds in the dormitories are so close together that there is only room for a chair between. The whole building presents a crowded and jammed appearance. To find sufficient class room space is almost an impossibility, and yet this is our only school in all the big State of Minas. It has been voted that our next Centenary building shall be at Bello Horizonte. Pray that the collections may be speedy; the need here is urgent.

On our return to Rio we stopped for a day in Juiz de Fora. How I wish I could tell you about Granberry, the beautiful new church being erected, and the missionary society of 238 members. But this letter is too long already, so I must close.

With all good wishse, I am,
Yours cordially,

THE URGENT NEED.

The urgent need of the day is the thoroughgoing application of the principles and the spirit of Jesus to all our international and inter-racial relations. Straight and narrow is the way of life, but broad the road that leads to destruction for nations as for individuals. The genuine practice of the Christian way of life is the only remedy for the troubles and dangers of the modern world. It must be practiced by millions upon millions of individuals, and it must be practiced by classes and groups and by nations and races in their mass relationships. This is not a demand for emotionalism, for quixotic, one-sided disarmament, for blind and pauperizing philanthropy. It is a demand for the Christian spirit united with sound common sense. We can overcome evil only by good, hate and suspicion only by deeds that are unselfish and generous, race pride and arrogance only by appreciation and justice and good will. —Sidney L. Gulick, in the Winning of the Far East.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The next few days the preachers and people will be working to report "level columns" at Conference. It will take a lot of tugging and agonizing to do this. The "level column" is greatly desired by the preachers and the different causes that are almost perishing for lack of support. There is another column that must be more than level, and that is the column—and it is a long column—of people, old and young, who do not attend Sunday school. If we have 500 members of the church, ought we not to have at least 500 in the Sunday school? Look in the Minutes of the Conference and see how you stand. Very few have "level columns," boys and girls, men and women who are receiving religious instruction. It is about time we were making a united and persistent effort to reach all our people. Have we not waited long enough to begin to reach the hundreds and thousands on the outside? We have an abundance of the best literature the church has ever sent out to help bring in 250,000 during the next four months.

Suppose the Sunday school makes an offering every fourth Sunday for Missions and the pastor finds out that he needs it to pay out his budget at the close of the year. Under the law of the church has any one a right to use this money for any other purpose than that for which it was raised? This question ought to be settled for all time to come. Our laws are simple and wise; if one man has the right to ignore them in one particular, all men have the equal right to break any and all laws. It is a dangerous practice to misappropriate money. Money has been raised for the Sunday School Board to be used in the work committed to it, and that money has been divided with other churches, it has been given to the Near East Relief, Missions, Orphans' Home, and other worthy enterprises, but does this practice square with ordinary ethics?

I find that checking up the Sunday schools and the departments in the Sunday school is worth as much as any one thing that can be done. In every case new work is undertaken and a desire to do better work is stimulated. I find the Beginner Department of First Church Columbus, is 100%, and so is the Junior Department of this same church 100%. The other departments lack only one point of reaching the goal. Somebody has been at work over here. The people say it is Brother Lewis that deserves the credit, and Brother Lewis says it is his fine help that is responsible for the success of this church. Stop a minute and count up the forces that have worked together to achieve this or any other success. The Holy Spirit comes first, then the authors of the books, the plans of the General Sunday School Board, the work of the Conference Board in giving training schools, and other forces worked with God. Let us give God all the praise.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

By C. D Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

Each of our seven districts has strong and weak points in Sunday school work. In way of organization, the New Orleans District leads in many features. Our records show that every school in the city has adopted a Program of Work Chart, and has been checked this year. Each school in the city with only one exception has sent in a Sunday School Day offering. Five of the schools have paid their Missionary Centenary pledge in full.

The Alexandria District Standard Training School has recently issued sixty-eight credits, with some office credits to follow. This record gives the Alexandria School the honor of issuing the largest number of credits up to date in our Conference during 1924.

Plans are on foot at Alexandria to build an adequate Sunday school annex. One of the leading members of the local organization has offered $10,000 towards this new annex, which is to be of the "A" type school.

Your Conference Superintendent had the pleasure of visiting the West End Methodist Sunday school of Alexandria last Sunday. They have a fine field in that section of the city. Mr. M. E. Steadman, a member of the State Legislature, is superintendent of this school. Several new Sunday schools will be reported at Conference from the Alexandria District.

The following Sunday schools have promised to observe Children's Week, and have received literature: Mangum Memorial, Shreveport; First Church, Shreveport; Noel Memorial, Shreveport; Texas Avenue, Shreveport; Oil City; Greenwood; Mansfield; Claiborne; Cedar Grove; Pelican; Bossier City; Belcher; Logansport; Vivian; Gilliam; De Ridder; Lake Charles; New Orleans; Campti; Crew Lake; Opelousas; Rayne; Coushatta; Glenmora; Lisbon; Rochelle; Homer; Ruston; Natchitoches; Jena; Arcadia; Lecompte; Minden; Athens; Ponchatoula; Holden; Tickfaw; Baton Rouge; Winnsboro; Crowley; Bogalusa; Alexandria.

The Minden Standard Training School is in session this week, with the following courses and instructors: Bible, Dr. R. H. Wynn; The Sunday School, Prof. D. B. Raulins; Principles of Training, Mrs. J. M. Henry; The Pupil, Prof. J. E. Stevens, Grenada College.

This school promises to be the largest Training School in the State. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Childress, and his congregation are to be congratulated on putting over such a school. The morning assembly period at 10:30 o'clock is a strong feature of the school. Dean Smith, of Centenary College, brought a message on the subject, "The Sunday School as a Saving Element in Civilization." Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, of Shreveport, brought a message on the subject, "The Psychology of Conversion and Christian Living." The special message on "Training Work in Our Church" was delivered by Prof. J. E. Stevens.

SHATTERED NERVES

Lady Says She Was In a Desperate Condition, But "Now In Splendid Health" After Taking Cardui.

Dale, Ind.—"About three years ago," says Mrs. Flora Roberts, of this place, "I had the 'flu,' which left me in a desperate condition. I had a bad cough. I went down in weight to little over one hundred pounds. I took different medicines—did everything, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I hurt so badly in the chest at times I would have to go to the door to get my breath.

"I would have the headache and . . . was so weak I felt like I would just have to sink down and stay there.

"My nerves were shattered. I looked for something awful to happen—I would tremble and shake at a noise.

"My mother said, 'Do try Cardui,' and my husband insisted till I began its use. I used two bottles of Cardui . . . and noted a big improvement in my condition. I kept up the Cardui and weigh 180 pounds. I am now in splendid health—sure am a firm believer in Cardui, for I'm satisfied it did the work."

After a weakening illness a tonic is needed to help regain lost strngth. Many thousands of women have found Cardui exactly what they needed for this purpose. It may be just what you need. Try it. All druggists'.

MEMBERSHIP INGATHERING AND OUR TRAINING PROGRAM.

By Rev. J. Q. Schisler.

1. Every phase of our work related to every other. Many persons are responsible in the operation of a railway train. Each of these is dependent upon every other. The welfare, safety, and pleasure of many persons are dependent upon the harmonious co-ordination of the work of these several workmen. Nearly every wreck of a passenger train is due to the failure of some one or more of these persons to meet fully his responsibility at every point. The passenger traffic manager, the superintendent of construction and repair, the dispatcher, the station agent, the switchman in the yards, and the train crew, all these must do team-work if people are to be transported safely and rapidly across the country.

Sunday school work is also team work. Every phase of it is related more or less intimately to every other phase. The teacher in the Primary Department is concerned with the training program, with the missionary education program, and with every other program that touches the department, and those responsible for these programs are concerned with the work of the primary teacher. The success or failure of any one department or class affects to a greater or less degree the work in every other department and class in the school; therefore, any campaign that looks to the increase in membership throughout the school is of vital concern to every officer and teacher in the entire school.

2. Inter-relationship of membership campaign and training work. The task of the director of training work in the local Sunday school is larger than the direction of the present program of training. He is concerned also with the future plans for training work. He and his committee must forecast the number of teachers that will be needed six months hence, one year hence, and lay plans for training these future teachers. Many of these students, if not most of them, will not have a background of training which they have received in the departments in which they would have been enrolled had they been in Sunday school previously; hence, teachers to whom these new pupils are assigned [illegible] well trained and, if possible, [illegible] teachers. In other words, the [illegible] of the Sunday school will place a very [illegible] responsibility upon the [illegible] of the school. The director of training, and all others responsible for this work, even though they have been succeeding fairly well in maintaining a training program that meets the needs of a moderately growing school, will find their program wholly inadequate for a suddenly enlarged enrollment such as should be brought in by this membership campaign.

When our government saw the necessity of entering the world war and began to lay plans for calling millions of men into the army, it realized that the first thing to be done was the training of officers for the leadership of these men. The Government wisely established officers' training camps, and brought raw recruits into the army only as these training camps could turn out officers who were qualified to lead these recruits. Is there any suggestion for the church in this experience? Are we so foolish as to think that we can suddenly expand our membership fifty or sixty per cent and hope to hold it without a trained force for leading these new members? Any program of membership increase that does not take into account the necessity for a trained leadership is doomed to failure before it gets started.

3. Training for service as well as for teaching. Any teacher who knows anything about his task has some conception of two truths, as follows: First, expression is a vital part of the teaching process; second, Christian character is developed by the right sort of activity. The teacher who would meet his full responsiblity must not only know, but apply these truths to his work. His influence and leadership must project themselves into the week-day life of the child. Any training program, therefore, that professes to measure up to the teacher's needs must go further than merely to equip her for class room instruction. In other words, the idea of service must be interwoven into the purpose and objectives of a whole training program for Sunday school teachers. The membership campaign will serve a useful purpose in many churches by calling the attention of teachers to this responsibility that lies beyond the field of mere instruction and emphasizes this one form of activity—the necessity of training for service as well as training for teaching.

REMINISCENCES OF BREVARD, N. C.

(Dedicated to the Missionary Society of Epworth Church, New Orleans.)

Is it idle curiousity that gives one the desire to penetrate into the wilds of nature, or is it because we unconsciously follow the passing throng? But when nature herself, in all her sublimity, invites us, what human being with a sense of gratitude or appreciation will let the opportunity pass by unheeded?

It was quite a contrary in July when a small party of sightseers ventured out on a trip to Mount Pisgah, near Brevard, N. C. It was a little more than eighty miles from our boarding house, and with great anticipations, for it was a delightful trip, and so, seated in the auto, we started on this most joyful journey.

The roads were fine, and after riding some seven miles, we came to the first mountain that we necessarily had to cross. This was a nine-mile drive over a somewhat rocky road, but we finally reached the foot of Mount Pisgah in safety.

When we entered the gate at the foot of the mountain, the keeper of the inn gave the necessary instructions: Before going up, a certain number of automobiles are allowed to ascend for so many hours, and at a certain hour they begin to drive down the mountain.

As we stood at the bottom of the mountain, old Pisgah, with extended arms, seemed to say, "Come and see," and as we rode up this narrow, dangerous road, we realized, "there must be no variableness, nor shadows of turning," which is certainly emblematic of a Christian life. The gentleman in charge of our party advised us to enjoy the scenery on every side, as it was his duty to keep his eyes on the road, and his steady hands on the auto wheel, for one wrong turn meant utter destruction.

Finally we reached the stopping place, as near the summit as we were allowed to go, and the majority of our party began to climb to the tip-top. This was a thrilling effort over jagged rocks and small cliffs, but, persevering, we finally reached the top and threw our arms around the heavy pole, embedded in the rocks, for the support, I presume, of those who are overcome by the height.

We were now 5,749 feet above sea level, and as we gazed around we wondered how we could ever safely descend, even to our car, but we felt near to Him who "watches even the little sparrows fall," and, after satisfying our vision, we began to climb down these sharp rocks with a feeling of safety.

So from "Mount Pisgah's lofty height, we viewed our home," but, having no wings, we took no flight, but put ourselves into His hands and began our descent, thankful when we reached "terra firma" again. We had a wonderful experience to relate when we returned to our boarding house, but first we dispatched a fine, hot supper which awaited us and to which we did ample justice.

The following day we visited one of the summer camps for boys, located near Brevard, N. C. The camps are located in the beautiful Blue Ridge section, forty miles from Asheville, and one and one-quarter miles from town. They contain over 200 acres of mountain woodland valley, including a ten-acre lake. The lake is equipped with Mullen's steel rowboats and Old Town canoes, which are at the disposal of the boys practically all day. The lakes are under constant supervision during the boating hours. The boys boarding at these camps are treated to a motor trip to Mount Mitchell, 6,711 feet above sea level, the highest point in Eastern America.

Second only to the Mount Mitchell trip is the fifty-mile canoe trip to Asheville, down the French Broad river. The canoes are taken by truck to the river, which is two miles from camp, and the boys get an early start. They camp out one night on the way, and reach Asheville the next day in time for dinner. After dinner, they have a short while to see the city, and return by rail to camp, where a good supper has been prepared for them, and when the retiring bell taps, they are glad to "fall in" and take a rest.

On our way to the camp we visited, by invitation, a lady resident of this locality, where we were entertained with a display of home-made quilts, bed-spreads, curtains and counterpanes. The quilts and spreads were made by grandmothers and even great-grandmothers. The quilts were pieced in stars and baskets, and the quilting was beautifully worked in wreaths of leaves, with the tiniest stitches. The curtains and tablecloths were made of flax by this lady's mother, and the loom on which the flax was spun was also displayed. Now you might say, "Of what interest are these articles of ante-bellum days?" But when you listen to the history of these precious tokens, your interest becomes intense and you take great pleasure in listening to its recital.

One blue-and-white counterpane was made by a great-grandmother in 1717 and is perfectly whole. As I gazed on these works of art, for such they were, I thought of that beautiful poem by Mrs. Felicia Hernas (I think), and tears came into my eyes as I recalled the words. Those beauti-

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Here and There Over Mississippi.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, our wide-awake president, never tiring in the work of the Epworth League, sends in the following gleanings from the field that have been received in his office by mail, and also what he has seen and heard while out in his work as Centenary Secretary for the Mississippi Annual Conference:

A recent letter from Rev. J. B. Cain, Ellisville, contains the following paragraph:

"We have three Leagues now, a new Senior League at Moselle with about twenty-five members, a new Junior League at Ellisville with thirty-two members," (Of course the one at Ellisville makes the third.)

On a recent visit to Canton I find that they have three live, wide-awake Epworth Leagues, Senior, Junior, and Intermediate, all doing fine work, and are anxious to go out into the surrounding territory and organize new Leagues, and do anything else they can to be of service to the Epworth League.

There were recently licensed five young preachers at Central Methodist Church at Meridian. Four of these were members of the Senior League, and three of them attended the Assembly at Whitworth College in June, and all three of them were Life Service volunteers. The names of these young men are: Lynn Covert, James Wascom, Maurice Caver, Fred Graham, and Joseph Eugene Chambers.

The Meridian Epworth League Union had their regular meeting the third Sunday in September at Hawkins Memorial Church. The banner for the largest attendance was awarded to the Junior League at Hawkins Memorial Church.

I wonder if Hattiesburg, Jackson, and Laurel would not find an Epworth League Union profitable?

W. D. HAWKINS.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE BROOKHAVEN ASSEMBLY.

Rev. J. L. Sells says of the Assembly:

"You ask what were my impressions of the recent Epworth League Assembly in Brookhaven. Briefly they were these:

"That it was one of the finest bodies of young people that I had seen in any religious gathering. They were bright, wide-awake, mentally alert, and anxious to find out all they could about the work of the Master, and how they could best be used for him.

"It was most noticeable how few careless ones were there, that seemed bent on having a good time alone, and these could not help but be influenced in some degree by their companions and friends.

"Those in charge of the Assembly certainly put forth every effort possible for the complete success of the Assembly and for the comfort and pleasure of all who were there. If there was anything left undone in that respect, I could not detect it.

"That the place was ideal for such a gathering, dormitories, class rooms, dining hall, all convenient and in good shape. Happy the Leaguers of any State or Conference that had such ideal conditions and opportunities."

Rev. W. J. Dawson's Impressions of the Assembly.

"As to my impressions of the Epworth League Assembly and what I thought was the best part of the program, I find it rather difficult to decide on any one feature as being the best. As you know, this was the first Assembly that I have attended, it was a revelation to me. I had no idea of the scope of the Assembly. I know of nothing that means more for the future leadership of the church than does the Epworth League Assembly. It is out of such meetings as the Assembly that most of our preachers, missionaries, deaconesses are coming.

"Every feature was so good that I am unable to say which was the best. Perhaps from the spiritual point of view, the morning watch meant more than any other feature on the program.

"I am glad that I attended. I enjoyed every moment that I was there."

GOOD FOR ALL STEWARDS.

Dear Member of the Board of Stewards: Our Conference year is fast coming to a close. Our record will be written by Nov. 5, when the Annual Conference convenes at Canton, Miss. Our fourth quarterly conference will meet Friday evening, Oct. 31, when the business of this church for this Conference year will be reviewed and summed up.

It is the duty of the pastor at the fourth quarterly conference to place in nomination the names of the men who shall serve the church during the next Conference year as stewards of the church; and the quarterly conference either confirms or rejects the names of the men presented.

The office of steward is a very important office in Methodist polity. The steward stands next to the pastor in the officiary of the local congregation, and he is chosen for nomination, first, because he is a good, strong Christian character; second, because he is a good, strong business or professional man who will exercise his business sense to conduct the business affairs of the church as he would conduct his own business, so that the church will not be brought into disrepute in the community and Conference, and will not suffer for lack of funds to prosecute the work of the Lord in the community.

The present pastor does not know who will be the pastor of this church for the next Conference year. He might be returned and, if such should be the case, he will want a board of stewards that will work in harmony with him for the best welfare of the membership of the church in order that the best results may be secured for the kingdom of our Lord. If a new man should be appointed, the present pastor wishes to hand to his successor in office a board of stewards that will help him in the prosecution of his work and be a blessing to the kingdom.

I am, therefore, writing you, reciting the above facts, asking you to think seriously on the question because it is a God-given privilege and honor to serve the church of our Lord in the capacity named, and if you are willing to subscribe to the following:

First—That you love the Lord, you love his church, you love his people and are ready to lend yourself to the promotion and extention of the work of the church by praying for its success, attending faithfully upon its services and supporting its institutions.

Second—That you are willing to exercise good, strong business sense in providing for the finances of the church by inaugurating the best system of conducting such finances that your judgment may dictate, so that the church will not be embarrassed and that the Conference year may come to a successful close without a "financial tug" at the close of the year to make the record clean.

Third—That you will attend upon the meetings of the board of stewards, regular and called, and assist in prosecuting the work given to them, sickness and absence from the city being the only things that should prevent you from performing such duties.

If you are willing to assume this honorable position of steward and the duties thereby devolving upon the same, your pastor is ready and willing to place you in nomination. If you are not willing to assent thereto as stated above, please speak to the pastor concerning the same, as the pastor will take your silence to mean that you give your assent.

I have spoken plainly, but in love, for our Lord and his church, and I feel sure that you agree with me that this church merits and should have the best pastor and preacher that the Conference can send them and the strongest board of stewards that conditions can provide them. We must be big, strong, godly men, full of the power of God's spirit and willing to lay ourselves out on the altar of our church for the glory of God and the upbuilding and maintenance of that church.

May God bless you.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

MEMORIES OF THE PAST.

This beautiful Sabbath afternoon while resting and quietly meditating, I was scanning the pages of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Sept. 18, and these words met my eyes, "Rev. J. H. Rogers—A Memoir." These words brought sorrow to my heart, and caused my mind to wander back into the past.

Thirty years ago this past August, Brother Rogers was pastor on the Poplar Creek elrcuit, and, with Brother W. D. Bass to do the preachlng, Brother Rogers held a ten days' meeting at old Bethel ehurch. It was during this meeting that I, then a little girl, gave my heart to God, and decided to conseerate my entire life to his service. At this writing I ean still see and hear Brother Rogers as he would go from one to another as they knelt around the altar seeking Christ. He brought eaeh ono a tender message of love and a promise from God's book that brought sweet peaco to the troubled souls. He was indeed a man of God.

I visited this same old Bethel church a few Sundays ago. It is the same old sacred spot to me, only dearer as the years roll by. Tho old faces are almost all gone, and new ones have taken their places. The boys and girls of thirty years ago are the mothers and fathers of to-day. Such is life.

Since reading these words, perhaps an hour ago, I have reviewed my life for the past thirty years. God has done much for me. Though some very great sorrows have come into my life, I have been able to see God's guiding hand. I have done so little for Christ, I often wonder how he can bo so patient with me. And then comes to my mind this little story about a peasant woman. May I tell it?

Once upon a time a king wanted to build the most beautiful church ever built in any country. Everybody was eager to help, and many workmen were employed. While the church was being built, the king had a dream, in which he thought an angel told him to place a white marble slab in the holy place over the altar. The angel also promised that when the church was completed, a name would appear on the slab. This name would be that of the person whose service during the building of the church had been the most pleasing in the sight of God and the angels. In order that everybody might have a chance, the king told of his dream, and ordered the slab fixed as the angel directed. Of course everybody was anxious for the great honor. Rich men gave wonderful gifts; one man gave great marble eolumns for the porch; another gave gems and precious stones; a lady gave beautiful velvets for the cushions; the king gave his own servlces, working like any eommon laborer. When the people saw this, they thought of course the king would surely have his name placed on the slab. But when the building was complete and the name appeared, it was not the king's or any of the nobles, but the name of a poor peasant woman. How surprised the people were. No one had seen her around and they wondered how it could be. What had she done? The king sought her out. He found her in a little humble eottage. He told her that her name had appeared on the slab, and wanted to know what she had done to earn this great honor. She seemed puzzled. "I did nothing at all," she replied. "I was never near the building, only to look at it."

"Think," urged the king. "You must have done something. Think."

"The only thing that I ean remember was so small it does not count," she answered. "I used to watch the oxen dragging the wagons of heavy stone for the church up the hilly road. There were many sharp rocks on the road, and one day one of the oxen stumbled and fell. The poor thing was badly hurt and suffered much. It made me feel very sad, and to prevent another such accident, I arose early every morning and removed the stones from the road."

"What reward did you expect to get for this service?" asked the king.

"No reward," she replied, "only to know that the poor animals would not be injured by falling on the stones."

Tho king was thoughtful a moment, and then said: "I see—I see now why your name appeared on the place of honor."

God wants us to forget the reward that might bo ours, and work through love.

The longing for the salvation of souls that entered my heart thirty years ago is still there, only stronger and deeper. During the fourteen years that I was a Methodist preacher's wife, I was happy in the work, and thanked God that he had given me a place to work in his vineyard. Since his death, a little over three years ago, I have been teaching, and in this work I have been doing my best to live for God and instill into the hearts and minds of the little children in my care high ideals and Christian principles. But at this time every year, I get homesick, and oh so lonely for the loved ones and friends that I miss so much.

The preachers and families are looking forward to the Annual Conference—some with a heavy heart because they have not been able to reach the goal set, and others with joy because a wonderful blessing has come their way. I know both feelings and can sympathize. But now, if I should be called on to give a report of my year's work, I am afraid that it would be very little that I could report; and yet surely I have moved at least a few stones. I am praying yet, and I know that if God needs me he will in some way open up a broader field of service. When this time comes I am ready to give my best for my Christ.

May I ask an interest in the prayers of the Christian people in behalf of my two little boys and little girl, that they may make useful men and women in God's kingdom?

If any of my friends in different parts of the State should see this and care to write me, I would appreciato it oh so much.

FELLOWSHIP AT ITS HIGHEST.

Every man needs to live eonstantly in the light of his best possible self.

Man's best record at golf or in salesmanship; his most perfect achievement in art or professional life; his largest yield in wheat or corn, or his lot of best sellers on the stock market; whatever is best, he works under its urge the balanee of his days.

But progress demands increasing mastery. No man liveth unto himself alone. His worthiest effort is perhaps surpassed just over the way. He needs the touch of others to enlarge his vision and thinking. His ultimate worth must be determined in terms of his relation to other persons, finite and infinite.

To know the best in others, he must seek their fellowship at its highest. To make honest judgment of the world's greatest personality, man must live in the presence of his ideals, and by experimental knowledge settle all questions as to his worth. The good news of the Master is that man, with all his frailty, may beeome a son of God. He may attain his best possible self by constant eommunion with the Son of God.

The church on earth is simply a sea of humanity with its tide set towards immortality. Breaking on the rocks, yet drawn irresistibiy on by the hope set within. It overcomes every obstacle and reaches the quiet haven. It is the fellowship of those hungering for the best. Share its hopes. Fight its battles. Enter into its joys.—Selected.

"THE BALANCE WHEEL OF LIFE."

Why the ehurch? Does the ehureh meet a need in a growing, developing city?

Twice within the past two weeks our attention has been called in the public press to the assumption that many of tho suicides of the past year are traceable to the jazz life we are living. Every one will aeknowledge the unsettled eondition of many phases of life.

None of us eontemplates suicide; yet how few of ns are really living the full measure of life! To be efficient the life must havo depth; the deep things are found in the soul; the sphere of the soul is in the ehurch and her services.

The clarion call from many sources is—Poise, Quiet, Steady.

Where better ean wo imbibe that spirit of calmness and serenity that gives depth and poise to life than in the church services?

The balance wheel of life is the soul. No organization of interest eaters to the soul as does the church. The ehureh serviees afford time and opportunity for meditation and reflection not offered elsewhere.

God said: "Be still and know that I am God." Jesus instituted the chureh as the avenue through which we may collectively pray and think under the blessed quietness of a worshipful religious assembly.

Found Relief in Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Always Recommends It

Bridgeport, Connecticut.—"I was completely run-down, had headaches, dizzy, faint feelings and other troubles women often have. As I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before, my husband said to take it again. I have now taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, the Liver Pills, and six boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets. I am feeling very good now and shall continue taking them for a while. I have been telling my cousin about the medicine and she wants to take it, too. I always recommend it."—Mrs. HENRY C. SMITH, R.F.D. No. 3, Box 6, Bridgeport, Conn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Smith's experience is but one of many.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 121,000 replies were received, and 98 per cent. reported they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Are You a Tired Out Housewife?

Many people do not realize that the most exhausting of all work is housework and the care of children. Many a woman who should be in the prime of life finds her strength gone, her nerves unstrung and is weak, worn out and run down with pale, thin, watery blood from the strain of housework.

In such cases, what you need is something to put more iron into your blood. Nuxated Iron contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron in your blood. You will be astonished at how much better you feel often in even a few days.

Try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks, and you will see color come back to your lips and cheeks, you will not be so easily upset by trifles, and best of all, you will find that you have new strength and energy and endurance for your daily tasks. At all good druggists.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT.

The Christian Education Movement approaches the peak of its opportunity. The fourth regular payment falls due Nov. 1, and many deferred payments begin then. The Centenary has passed its zenith, and the Superannuate Endowment cause is being cared for. Throughout the church there is the feeling amounting to a conviction that the Education Movement, having waited patiently its turn for making collections, now has its opportunity. The message of the movement has not been in vain, but has largely gripped our people. They are impressed more and more with the importance of Christian Education. There has never been greater need or greater opportunity for the church's ideals and influence in our educational system. These ideals will live and shape the life and destiny of the nation largely as they are embodied in our own institutions. The church's work and part in the field of education is more clearly defined than ever. Shall we occupy this field and do this work?

The answer to this question is now up to our educators on the one hand, who must do this work, and to our people on the other hand, who must provide the sinews of war. These two factors are interdependent. One cannot do without the other, and one very much helps the other. When our institutions of learning send forth a product that, measured by Christian standards, is vastly superior to that produced by the secular schools, Methodists will provide the material resources for adequately equipping and maintaining our schools. On the other hand, unless the funds are furnished, it is impossible for them to do their work thoroughly. These two factors will determine the future of the church's educational activities.

Though there may be some "spots on the sun," every Methodist ought to know that our schools, by all reasonable tests, are doing well their part and keeping faithfully their covenants in this dual proposition. Every loyal Methodist who loves his church intelligently will make a diligent effort to do his part. The Christian Education Movement is the concrete, practical response of the church in this cause so vital to the kingdom.

Every man in the organization of the Movement needs to be impressed with his responsibility. If he fails, the effort to that extent fails. This is true of bishops, secretaries, presiding elders, pastors, collectors and subscribers. But at this stage of the effort the last two named are in the most responsible positions. The collector who, in a prompt, business way, looks after the payment of pledges as they fall due, renders an inestimable service to the cause and deserves the "well done" of the Master. The subscriber should make his payments promptly and respond cheerfully to the collector's appeals, appreciating that he gives his time and talent to this work without salary.

THE BLESSINGS OF PROHIBITION.

Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in an address before the State Sunday School Convention at Albany, N. Y., on Thursday night, Oct. 16, made the following statement:

"A million lives have been saved by the drop in the death rate since prohibition. We spend $74,000,000 less per year to relieve drink-made poverty. Over 500,000 fewer are drunk on our streets per year. Alcoholic insanity has dropped two-thirds. Diverting our former drink bill of billions of dollars to legitimate business has made possible the auto boom, which put 15,552,077 autos on our roads, giving employment to seven million people; transformed the movies into a billion-dollar business; writes monthly a billion dollars' worth of new insurance; adds $60,000,000 daily to our savings, and gives to the churches a membership increase equal to a Pentecost daily."

REV. THOS. H. LIPSCOMB,
Pastor at West Point, Miss., Host of the North Mississippi Conference.

It is Mr. Wheeler's business to know what he is talking about—and we think he does know. Prohibition is an undisguised blessing.

NOT THE TIME TO VOTE.

We note from press reports that several of our Annual Conferences meeting this fall have adopted resolutions approving the pending plan of unification. This is not the official vote on the plan, of course, and we suppose a Conference has the right to do as it wishes about the matter; but we do not believe that formal action of any kind should be taken this year. The General Conference specifically fixed the Conference sessions of 1925 as the time for taking the official vote; that is the time when the vote should be taken.

WHY MR. HUGHES DOES NOT GO TO CHURCH.

In the October number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Mr. Rupert Hughes tells why he quit going to church.

As a theologian, Mr. Hughes is a well-known novelist and playwright. His attempt, therefore, to give the present status of theological doctrine is about as successful as would be an attempt by Firpo, the "Bull of the Pampas," to elucidate the theory of relativity. Mr. Hughes does not have to go to church, if he does not want to do so; but he really ought to know better than to try to excuse his personal derelictions on the ground of the gross ignorance, superstition, and hypocrisy of devout Christians throughout the land.

It is really refreshing to find a man of some prominence nowadays who is so blissfully ignorant of what Christianity is, of what the church stands for, and of the work the church is doing, just as it would be refreshing to run across some simple soul who would seriously contend that all the automobiles in the world are still propelled by the primitive two-cylinder engines—therefore he will not own or ride in one!

It is a little painful, though, to find a reputable citizen like Mr. Hughes who is content to enjoy all the blessings of Christian civilization—including the right to stay away from church if he wants to—who at the same time is so ungrateful as to "bite the hand that feeds him."

By his own confession, there was a time when Mr. Hughes went to church regularly and entered devoutly into its services. We fear that his present state of mind is to be attributed to a possibility that is well recognized in Methodist terminology—he is "backslidden!" He needs our prayers more than our anathemas.

NE PLUS ULTRA.

The following story is going the rounds: A man somewhat the worse from drink was boasting of his patriotism. "I'm no 100 per cent American, I want the world to know," he said. "The 100 per cent man just hates Japs, Jews, and Dagoes, and a few like that. I'm a 200 per cent American—I hate everybody!" The slogan, "America for Americans," may be pretty good in a way; but the "200 per cent American" is a menace.

THE RETROSPECT.

By Aubrey Wooten.

As I turn my back and look upon the life that I have led,
There's a gardener that is idle and a vineyard that is dead;
And the many ways I've traveled, never reaching any goal,
Look more like the crossroads of the Flesh than highways of the Soul.

Memory comes to find her fancy in my dreams of long ago,
But there's only left the arrow—neither hand nor string nor bow;
And the milestones that are numbered with the years that now are flown
Bear the road-marks and the footprints of a life that lived alone.

I am soul-sick for my vineyard, tho' I know that it is dead,
But I'll grow another garden much more beautiful instead;
I won't throw away my birthright for the counterfeit and sham,
I will prove that I can come back—as determined as I am.

Life has been a tragic drama and I've played a sordid role,
I have thought more of my body than I ever have my soul;
But there's sunlight in my garden since I've opened wide my gate
To the Master of my vineyard, who is master of my fate.

Hazlehurst, Miss.

A LETTER FROM REV. J. L. NEILL.

My Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed the third session of the Czecho-Slovak Mission. It was by all odds the best session we have had to date. Visitors present were: Bishop James Cannon, Jr.; Rev. W. C. Cowart, Superintendent of the Belgian Mission, and Prof. F. C. Woodard, presiding elder of the Warsaw District of the Polish Mission and treasurer of that mission. Those present were of the opinion that few, if any, home Conferences were more Methodistic in all their work.

The reports were very gratifying, and showed 4 districts, 27 pastoral charges, and 36 organized churches. We now have 18 native pastors besides our five missionaries, making a total of 23 preachers. The total membership is 8,958. We have 11 Epworth Leagues, with 242 members; 32 Sunday schools, with 88 officers and teachers and 1,715 pupils; 11 Woman's Missionary Societies, with 400 members. The Bible school enrolled 20 pupils during the past year, 18 of whom passed their examinations successfully. The third session of the Bible school will open Tuesday, Oct. 14, and bids fair to be the best session to date.

One of the most gratifying things connected with the reports was the attitude of the church toward self-support. The sum of $3,389 had been raised for church buildings; the total raised for all purposes was $7,699. This is more than double what was raised last year; more than four times what was raised the first year. There were 36 lay delegates present; it was interesting to see them take such an active part in the work of the Conference.

All our men go to their respective fields of labor with a renewed determination to take this country for the Kingdom of God. Bishop Beauchamp and Dr. Rawlings tell me that unless the Centenary subscriptions are paid at an early date, our whole work will face disaster. They have urged that I spend the winter in the States, assisting with the collections. I am leaving within the next few days for America. Rev. D. P. Melson, of the South Georgia Conference, will be in charge during my absence.

With the kindest personal regards and brotherly love, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

J. L. NEILL, Superintendent.

THE INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By Van Carter, General Superintendent, Louisiana Council, Religious Education.

Last month was held in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, the first Professional Workers' Conference of the International Council of Religious Education. The Conference was attended by 117 delegates, including executive and field workers of twelve co-operating denominations, State secretaries, county and city secretaries, directors of religious education, children's workers, young people's workers, adult workers, specialists in week-day and vacation school work, and laymen interested in the cause of religious education. Our own Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was represented by our General Secretary, Dr. John W. Shackford, and Dr. L. S. Sensabaugh.

The theme of the Conference was "Functions and Relationships in the Merger," the Merger, of course, being the getting together of thirty-five denominations and the International Sunday School Association into one organization, which was accomplished in June, 1922, at Kansas City. The finest spirit of good will and fellowship prevailed, and all present manifested a will to co-operate and a sincere desire to learn how to co-operate. The discussions were carried on in a spirit of open-mindedness, with an eagerness to get the other person's point of view and study the problems presented from all angles.

One of the particular points brought out and agreed to in the Conference was that the program of the International Council of Religious Education and its auxiliary State and local Councils in the Merger is not in any sense a separate or competing program in relation to the denominations, but that it should be considered by all co-operating denominations as their own. Since the different co-operating denominations have a voice in determining what the program shall be, and in setting up the organization and machinery through which it shall be carried out, it was agreed that they should consider it as their own co-operative program and feel a definite responsibility for its promotion and support.

Among the many points brought out in the Conference might be mentioned the following:

1. That co-operative relationship cannot be worked out on paper, but can be accomplished only by meeting together, planning together, and working together.

2. That through conference and planning together, the denominational and interdenominational forces will discover what things can best be done together, and that these should form the basis of co-operative effort.

3. That the International and State Councils should give publicity to denominational training schools and conferences, and that the denominations should announce and promote, through their publications, international and State training schools and camp conferences.

4. That the denominations should help furnish leadership for international and State training schools and camp conferences, and should help promote attendance and secure financial support.

5. That in the development of a system of leadership training it must be remembered that there are other means besides training schools, and that in seeking to reach the people we must begin where the people are and lead them step by step toward the desired objectives.

6. That denominational field workers should furnish State Councils with full information regarding the dates and other details of their denominational programs within the State.

7. That denominational leaders should pass the word down to their workers that the International Council and its auxiliary State and local Councils are the accredited interdenominational agencies for co-operative work, and as such should be heartily aided and supported.

8. That it is the duty and function of the secretary of State, city and local Councils to take the initiative in calling conferences of denominational and interdemonminational workers for the planning, setting up, and promotion of co-operative programs.

9. That week-day religious instruction is one of the most important and rapidly developing phases of religious education, and that this work must of necessity be carried on very largely by co-operative effort. The necessity of International Council leadership in this field was strongly urged.

10. That there must be a dependence upon God for strength and guidance, and that there should be a fellowship of prayer among all those who have dedicated their lives to the teaching ministry of the Master.

At the coming session of the Annual Conference in Crowley, the brethren will be asked to consider the matter of officially co-operating with the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, and it is the hope of many Christians in other churches that they will decide to help the Council build and carry forward the community co-operative program of religious education that will help the churches to reach the one million, two hundred thousand, five hundred and sixty-five Protestants now in Louisiana not in any Sunday school.

INCIDENTS IN THE PROCESS OF METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

I have read in silence much that has been written on the subject of unification, pro and con. I have been pleased with the lofty Christian spirit of most of it and grieved by the narrow and bitter spirit in part of it.

It is well for all of us to remember that all that is desirable in any church is characterized by love in spirit and in manner. No ecclesiasticism can take the place of love. It is also important to remember that it is easy to profess love while practicing the contrary; and equally easy for us to avow love on our part and charge hate to others of a contrary opinion—as easy for one party as the other.

There is absolutely no justification for any of us who thinks less of another merely because opinions differ.

For myself, I am happy in my relation to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as it now is. So far, I can see no reason why I could not be equally happy in the two churches brought together, as now proposed. Apart from considerations personal, I think I see considerable advance in mutual understanding, in love, and in sympathetic co-operation, to come out of the closer relations of the two churches. With such increase of mutual understanding, love, and co-operation, each individual can but be enriched and the general interest of the kingdom advanced.

to promoting the present plan because it engenders confusion by stirirng up differences. The implication is that it is only those who support the plan who cause differences and produce confusion. Such brethren forget that a large majority of our General Conference at Hot Springs appointed the Commission; that a large majority of that Commission endorsed the present plan, and that a large majority of the special session at Chattanooga passed it ou to our Annual Conferences. In view of the facts, those who oppose unification are more chargeable with causing differences and confusion than those who agree to the plan legally proposed and submitted.

Really, so far as I can judge of the situation, from somewhat extensive reading and personal contact, most of the differences and regrettable feelings grow out of our divided leadership, and the peristent efforts on the part of our constituted leaders to carry the church according to their own way of thinkiug. It is a pity our bishops and those who represent the church in its legislation cannot act in accord.

Occasionally I even hear the fear expressed that those who make the appointments will be biased in the assignmeut of preachers. I am sure this is an unwarranted distrust of our bishops and presiding elders. I have too much confidence in these brethren in authority to entertain any such fears. Now and then I hear it said that it will be many a day before an advocate of unification will be sent to another General Conference.

It seems to me that there is too much else to consider for us to permit this one factor to determine qualifications for seats in the General Conference, whether one is on this side or that. Threats and iutimidations are out of order from either party; and they are as reprehensible in one as in the other.

Through all, it is well to remember that an active imagination can present a gloomy forecast of all movements. One sees a "lion in the way," and does not act; another "regards the wind," and does not sow. All progress hazards some risks. Here there comes a most practical question: "How will our members who are from the North be affected by some of the unkind words said about the Northern brethren?" Another practical question: "If we refuse to unite on the grounds most commonly urged against unification, what will become of the many valuable members we have from the North? Will they feel comfortable with us? Will they stay with us?"

Further, can it be denied that one reason why there are "Northern Methodist" churches in the South is that there has been prejudice in the South, as well as in the North? Really is all prejudice on one side?

Is it not true that there are many good, brotherly people North? And is it not also true that we have some sectional extremists South?

Did not Jesus mingle even with the despised Samaritans and announce a worship non-sectional? What would he have us do?

We may not be able to answer alike, but let us seek his spirit and try dispassionately to find his way. If we miss his method, let us at least preserve his spirit.

Lorman, Miss.

WHAT IS THE AIM AND PURPOSE OF THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION?

By Rev. T. J. Warlick.

Since the pending plan of unification will be, at least, a part of the constitution of the united church, and affect the titles of all our church property, it is highly necessary for all parties concerned to understand fully the meaning and aim of the compact before it is ratified. Much has been said and written that tends to conceal rather than reveal the real nature and obvious meaning of the plan in question. Many have spoken of it as a loose plan of federation, and others as a plan of unification, federation, or alignment of the two churches. Evidently the plan has a definite aim and purpose.

We give the following quotations to show how it is interpreted by some of the leading advocates of the plan. In his reply to Mr. Harbee, Bishop DuBose says: "A broad and steady distinction must be made between unification, or federation and union. It is not organic union that is proposed, but alignment of the two churches for greater missionary, educational, and publicational advancement. It also means the consolidation and unifying our work in the South—the elimination of the Northern churches from the South, and whatever work we have in the North from that territory. If this unification is consummated (and the indications are that it will be), in the South the difference will not be noticeable. We retain our General Conference and go forward with our local and jurisdictional work, just as heretofore. The Super-General Conference will consist of the two General Conferences in joint session, in which each side will have the same voting power. There are some points (and those are they to which I objected in the plan) that must be changed or modified; but we are reserving ample means for doing this. And always if either side is not satisfied with conditions when the point of uniting our forces is reached, it may withdraw without prejudice to its cause."

In his reply to Bishop Candler, Bishop Mouzon makes statements that tend to conceal the obvious meaning of the plan in question. He says: "Our plan of unification is in reality a plan of unification by co-operation. And it will work. What the plan really does is to take the two churches just as they now are and arrange a practicel method of co-operation. The Southern Church remains intact. The Northern Church remains just as it is. But the plan makes it possible to co-operate at many points."

It will be noted that there is practically no difference in the explanation of the plan by the two bishops. They seem to have agreed together to conceal or explain away the first article of the plan, which is, in fact, the keynote to the whole compact. In reply to what these leaders say we will let the plan in question speak for itself.

Article 1. "The Methodist Episcopal Church and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall be united into one church with two Jurisdictions under a constitution, with a General Conference and two Jurisdictional Conferences."

What is it, therefore, that Article 1 of the plan in reality does? First, it takes the two churches just as they now are and unites them, with all their holdings of every description, into one church under one constitution. Second, by drawing Jurisdictional lines, it divides the membership and territory of the united church into two groups or jurisdictions, with two Jurisdictional Conferences—this Jurisdictional line, I suppose, is mainly for the purpose of keeping the Negro out of the south corner of his church for the time being.

The thing we want especially noted is this: Jurisdicaion No. 1 is not, therefore, "the Methodist Episcopal Church just as it now is," just arranged for co-operation. Nor is Jurisdiction No. 2 the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, "still intact," with its General Conference retained, as these advocates of the plan would have us believe. The idea that these two churches can be united into one church and at the same time be two existing units, by any method of arrangement, is totally absurd and misleading.

The fact is, therefore, that Jurisdiction No. 2 (notwithstanding Dr. Carley calls it the white man's church) is not a church at all. At best, it is only a fraction of the united church—and if the proposed plan is ratified it will be a vulgar fraction. Who would think of calling the Louisiana Jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a church?

Many claim that the plan guarantees autonomy to Jurisdiction No. 2. Dr. A. F. Watkins, in his splendidly written article, says: "There must be unchallenged and unchallengeable local autonomy, with possession and control of property." I agree with him in that. But how can the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have any sort of autonomous existence and at the same time be united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in one church? That is, it seems to me, just as impossible as it is for a man to be both bound and free at the same time.

Article 2 of the pending plan says, "The united church shall have a name." And when the two churches, therefore, are united into one church, the titles of all the property of the two merged churches will and must automatically be vested in this new "name," and be controlled, as all other connectional affairs, by the General Conference of the united church.

As a matter of course Jurisdiction No. 2 will have control over all its property as a trustee of the united church unless it should become dissatisfied with conditions and withdraw from the union. We will have to get Bishop DuBose to explain how that may be done without prejudice to our cause. But Jurisdiction No. 2 will certainly have no more autonomy than the Louisiana Jurisdictional Annual Conference, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now has. To claim therefore, that Jurisdiction No. 2 can have autonomy, with control over property, is simply childish.

My Objections to the Pending Plan.

We will give just three reasons for being opposed to the proposed plan at this time.

1. Because the plan proposes to bind the two churches into one church, strip them of all their property rights, and force them to settle all unsettled questions, and grow back together, or perish in despair. The plan offers no relief in case of a hopeless disagreement, notwithstanding Bishop DuBose, after a close study of the plan, says either side may, if dissatisfied with conditions, withdraw without prejudice to its cause.

2. Because the history of the past fifty years shows a lack of unity that makes a happy and safe union impossible. The plan itself evidences a known lack of unity. I know of no one who has given all of the facts just as they are, except Bishop Denny, in his splendid minority report. And, my brethren, facts are the fingers of God, and, therefore, cannot be brushed aside as dust and ashes.

Some one has suggested that union would cause unity. But unity does not come that way. St. Paul says: "We are all baptized into one body by one spirit, and are all made to drink into the same spirit." And this baptism comes upon none except those who are penitent for wrongs committed. If this unity had not been lacking, we would never have had altar against altar in the South.

3. Because the pending plan places the Southern division where it will be under the necessity of doing its colored brethren an injustice.

Every one who is willing to view the facts as they are must see that the plan proposes a mixed church. It will have, to start with, approximately 400,000 Negro members, three of whom are bishops of the whole church, with all of the rights and privileges of the white membership of the communion. And every one must know that a mixed church cannot prosper in the South. I am reminded that the plan makes it unconstitutional for the colored members to have any privileges in Jurisdiction No. 2 of the united church. But is that right? Is not the Negro a member of the whole communion, equal with the whites? Being in a separate communion, as we are now in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, social equality is only a privilege of theirs, and we can deprive them of that privilege without doing them an injustice. But if the two churches unite, then they cannot be denied that right without doing them an injustice. I do not believe in social equality in the church nor out of it, and for that and other reasons, at the age of 19, I withdrew from the Methodist Episcopal Church and joined what they called at that time "the Rebel Church." But it is a white man's church, and if I keep my senses, you are going to have the time of your life to reorganize me back. Knowing the views of the Northern people as I do, I am sure, if the pending plan of union should be ratified war would begin. That, in my judgment, would ruin both churches. An effort would be made by the Northern element of the church to amend the constitution and let the Negro join the white church in the South as they do in the North. And many Negroes would come into what they call "their own," and you need not doubt it.

SEVENTEEN THOUSAND VOLUMES OF SCRIPTURE GIVEN AWAY.

By Rev. J. J. Morgan, Southwestern Agency Secretary, American Bible Society.

Of vital interest to Bible lovers, especially those who support the American Bible Society, is the actual giving of Scriptures. The Southwestern agency of this Society, at Dallas, Tex., has given away, from January to October of this year, 17,650 Books, valued at $694.56.

About 50% of these donations are the Penny Gospels, given chiefly through our colporteurs, who distribute them with telling effect wherever they go.

A large percentage is given to the spiritually starved Mexicans; next come the prisons; and we never refuse a chaplain's request for help, or individual calls from prisoners for the Bible. A large number of Books have been given to hospitals and rescue homes. The Indians of Oklahoma and the soldiers in camp have been presented with pocket-sized volumes. We have responded to many calls from the blind and the aged poor. We never give promiscuously; never give without assurance that we are justified in generosity, trying to dispense wisely our sacred fund.

The figures given do not include grants of pulpit Bibles, yet this is one of the donations that reach a great number of people by means of one gift. The other day a young country pastor, accompanied by a member of his church board, called. His church building had been swept away by a cyclone. Shortly afterward, a fire nearly demolished the frame building his small, hardworking congregation had erected to take its place, and in this fire their pulpit Bible was ruined. There was not a trace of whining supplication in this man's request that the American Bible Society give a good pulpit Bible to his church. The need and worthiness were so evident that it was with great joy we immediately set our name to the form that authorized the outright gift of a Bible for this church.

The persons we have classed as Volunteers are just plain, everyday people, working as you and I do, and going about their daily labors like the rest of us, but—and here is the difference—they carry in their pockets or purses a quantity of penny Gospels, and take advantage of every opportunity to offer a Book to a stranger. Let me tell you a story, one a traveling salesman told us the other day.

"Monday I stood near the big, beautiful Union Station (in Dallas) giving out the American Bible Society Penny Gospels. A red-hatted station porter received one with apparent thoughtlessness.

"Tuesday I went back to the station to look after my baggage, and there, sitting on the curb, were three red-caps, very close together, pouring over some small object. As I passed near them I saw a tiny Gospel in the hands of the man in the middle. He pointed out a verse, read it aloud, and, turning his face earnestly from one to the other explained the words as he read. I went up to the baggage room and there I had a long wait. It must have been nearly an hour later that I came down again, and found those three men still deeply absorbed in the Penny Gospel."

If you knew that a trembling old woman in West Texas, nearly blind but eager for the comfort of the reading of the Word of God, was given, free of all charge, her heart's desire, and now can read for herself the blessed story in large print, would you rejoice with us?

Would your joy leap up, as ours did, when a foreign boy wrote back to us that he had read the Bible in his own language to his unconverted father and mother in Holland, and they had received the truth gladly? He himself had first found the Bible in our depository, where he saw the Dutch in its place on the shelves with some hundred other languages.

Has your heart been anxious when your boy went out to camp with the soldiers? Know, then, that ten thousand Gospels are being distributed to the young men at the encampment of the National Guard at Lawton, Okla., the American Bible Society furnishing the Books at the actual cost of making.

A certain prisoner at the State penitentiary, reading, in his isolation, the story of Christ, became conscious of the great truth. It stirred his heart and made an immeasurable change in his behavior. More than that, it made him anxious that others should learn of the Bible, and he wrote us to ask how he might secure more copies. Through the donation of a good man, we were enabled to supply him with a quantity of Scriptures, and later we learned of a class he had formed for the study of the Bible amongst the prisoners.

"I want Rev. —— to have all the Bibles he can use in his work," said Mis F., a wealthy woman of Texas, in our office recently. "Please send him a catalog. I am going to give you a check for $50 to cover whatever purchases he may make." And we know she will do it, for she has bought Bibles by the dozen to give away. Her beneficiary selects what is wanted; she pays the cost.

The work of the American Bible Society differs from that of any other concern in the commercial world. It sells, but without profit; it manufactures, and the quantity is practically unlimited. There is a constant pouring out of Bibles in more than seven hundred different languages and dialects, and these are not getting shelf-worn, but are kept in active service. Should a small pile begin to show signs of lazily lying still and so becoming shabby, they are routed out and quickly sent to some mission, as, for instance, the seamen's homes at the coast stations. And invariably the missionaries write us letters of sincere thankfulness. While it does please us to receive such acknowledgments, the thing we are most glad about is that we have put those Bibles to working for the Master.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON GROUP INSURANCE, MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

To the Members of the Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren: The special committee appointed at the last session of our Annual Conference to consider whatever plans and propositions that might be available looking to group insurance for our Conference, has held two meetings during the year, viz., June 30, and Aug. 25, both in Jackson, Miss.

We canvassed several different insurance companies, and, after carefully considering all propositions offered to us, we unanimously voted to recommend to the ensuing Annual Conference as follows:

1. That we recommend acceptance of the proposition offered by the Methodist Benevolent Association at Nashville, Tenn., which company offers group insurance at the rate of $10 to $16 per thousand, the rate depending on the average age of the group. If the average is 50, the rate will be $16 per thousand; if the average is 40, the rate will be $10 per thousand, with a graduated scale ranging between these two ages.

2. We recommend that all the clerical members of the Conference be eligible to membership in the group, and that each effective preacher be eligible to take a policy of $1,000, and that each superannuate, and each supernumerary preacher be eligible to a policy of $500.

3. We recommend the organization of an Association in the Conference, auxiliary to the mother Association at Nashville, under such by-laws as shall be adopted by the Conference, which Association shall have full control of funds contributed by and for the group of the insured.

Of course, the committee will submit a detailed report of its work and recommendations to Conference, but this synopsis of the report is given to our Conference organ for publication at this time in order that all who are interested may study the salient points in the recommendations, and be thereby the better prepared to vote on the report when it is presented at Conference.

Respectfully,

T. J. O'NEIL, Secretary of Committee.

FROM THE DECATUR DEN.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

When Lee was defending Petersburg, at some places the Union and Confederate lines were so near together that a rock could easily be thrown from one side to the other. When there came a lull in the almost ceaseless firing, some Yankee would venture to poke his head above the trench and call out, "Don't shoot, Johnnie." And then a sort of unauthorized and tacit truce would prevail when the men in bright blue uniforms on one side, and the men in ragged and faded gray on the other side, would crawl up on the breastworks, and joke each other. A Confederate soldier would tie a plug of tobacco to one end of a string and a little rock to the other end, and throw it across to the Yankee side. The Yankee would pull the string across "the bloody chasm," take the plug of tobacco, and tie in its place a little sack of good coffee. Then he would throw the rock back to the "Rebel" side, and the hungry "Johnnie" would take off the coffee, and shout back, "Thanks, Yank." The next minute the shout would come, "Lookout, Johnnie; we're going to shoot!" Down the men on both sides would tumble into their "dugouts," and for the next five or six hours bang incessantly at each other with their deadly rifles.

What did such conduct mean? It meant that these brave men had no personal enmity toward each other. The Northern soldier was fighting for the Union, which ought never to have been disrupted by the South, and the Southern soldier was fighting for the principle of self-government as embodied in the State, which the North ought never to have violated by coercion. Each was right in purpose, each was wrong in the way they attempted to manage the case.

Now we are in a great crisis of our history as a church, and it seems to me we can learn something from the way our fathers fought their great struggle. Let me presume on my age and advise my younger brethren to avoid personalities. Fight measures, not men. Advocate principles, but do not attack character. Recognize the fact that there are good men and women on both sides of the question. There is bound to be misrepresentation, but unless it involves the principles for which we contend, do not pay any attention to them. Be like the engineer at the throttle, and keep your eye on the rail and your hand on the lever, and don't stop to throw rocks at the little animals that race along and bark at the Express.

In the beginning of the war with the North, General Lee was put in command of the Confederate troops in West Virginia. The campaign was a failure; but though it was through no fault of General Lee's, he was severely criticised. He not only did not reply himself, but prevented his friends from replying at the time to the harsh and unfair censure. Everybody knows now that General Lee was not to blame. Let us try to follow his example; I say try to follow his example, because it is no easy thing for a little fellow to walk in the steps of a giant.

For my part, I don't intend, with the help of the Lord, to let unification make me fall from grace, or think unkindly of "our friends, the enemy." I'm going to fight against the adoption of this plan with all my might, for as I see it, it means the end of my church, and I don't want to see that pass into oblivion. The Lord set up the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, just in time for me, and it has been a spiritual mother to me for seventy-five years. I'll fight for her to the end. But I want to fight these union folks as Stonewall Jackson fought the Yankees: shut my eyes, and say, "Lord, have mercy on their souls!" open them, and shout the order, "Fire!" We are contending for the same great principle of self-government in the church that our Southern soldiers fought for in the State. Give us a plan of unification that will secure that and I won't oppose it. What I oppose is not unification, but absorption, which is inevitable under this plan.

Let me say another thing while I am at it: Don't make a mountain out of a mole hill. Modernism is intellectually too weak to make serious headway in the church. Its presence in a few places will only stimulate a deeper study of the truth. History shows that error provokes zeal for the truth, and the conflict with it always advances the cause of righteousness. Some of the Canaanites were left in the land to test Israel. There are very few modernists among us. They are noisy, but it is like the story of the frogs. A farmer went to a hotel to engage to sell the hotel some frog legs. The manager said he would expect thirty-six frog legs on a certain day. When the day came the farmer appeared with one bull-frog. "Where are the thiry-six frog legs you promised to bring me?" asked the hotel man. "Mister," replied the farmer, "I did my best. This old bull-frog kept such a racket that I thought the pond was full of frogs. But he is the only one I could find." These Modernists make a big racket; get wide notice from the press, are adepts in sensational publicity stunts, and one would think the whole pond is full of them; but as a matter of fact, they are few in number and feeble in influence. So don't lose your religion because a few grasshoppers try to kick over the rock of Gibraltar.

Now, before you get after me for holding these sentiments, remember I am 75, "going on 76," am away up on the mountain. So if you want me to hear you, you will have to shout pretty loud. The angels were singing all around my seventy-fifth anniversary camp.. One of them lit down with a big bowl of ice cream; another with a genuine pound cake—the only kind I like—and others with good things. The air was pure, the sun was bright, and the Lord was with us as I preached twice. Unification may have upset some saints; but it shall not upset me. I notice this, though, the more I pray the less I favor this plan. That settles it with me, for the impressions that I get on my knees I take to be the guidance of the Spirit. I know what the unificationist will say, so each of us must follow what we feel to be the path of duty.

PAGEANT FOR CHRISTIAN EDUCATION DAY.

The Board of Education has had prepared a pageant entitled, "The Nation's Need," showing what the church is doing educationally, to be used in connection with Christian Education Day. The Discipline provides for this day, and the pageant will help the pastor and his co-workers to convey an instructive and interesting message to his people on this important subject. Copies will be furnished free to any pastor, Epworth League president, or Sunday school superintendent who will put it on in his church. It is adapted to city or rural churches, and will not require an unusual amount of work or equipment in its presentation. Send to the Board of Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

H. H. SHERMAN,
Associate Secretary.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please hand in your reports not later than the second morning (the first day preferable) of the Annual Conference. Make separate check for each claim and note on check what claim it is for. Put no money in. Place report with check, or receipt, in envelope, seal and hand to W. T. Griffin, W. H. Lane, or to me. Mark on outside of envelope, charge and district. Get the latest report blanks from Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn. No blanks will be sent out by the committee.

Conforming to the above requests will greatly facilitate matters for both the auditing committee and the Statistical Secretaries.

T. B. COTTRELL, for Committee.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT

DO YOU KNOW

That This Movement Has Right-of-Way for the Next Three Months?

HAVE YOU HEARD

1. That it has collected $5,000,000 of the $9,000,000 already due up to October 1, 1924?
2. That it has laid the foundation for and helped to raise $7,000,000 "New Money" in special campaigns, of which $3,000,000 has been paid?
3. That it has paid many old debts that have been sapping the life of our schools for years?
4. That it has increased by thousands of dollars—yes, millions—the endowments of our colleges and universities?
5. That it has erected many new buildings to meet the growing needs of our schools?
6. That it has increased substantially the salaries of underpaid officers and teachers?
7. That it has enrolled 7,000 Life Service Volunteers for full time Christian service?
8. That it is helping hundreds of these capable young men and women to go to college and prepare for a useful life?
9. That it has put new life and spirit and hope into our educators, who have been battling against heavy odds?
10. That the fourth payment falls due November 1, 1924?

HAVE YOU A WORTHY PART IN THIS GREAT MOVEMENT?

HAVE YOU PAID YOUR PLEDGE?

AMOUNTS PAID ON SPECIAL EFFORT QUOTAS NOW TOTAL OVER $750,000.

Each day brings us closer to the 1,000,000 mark in the Special Effort to raise $10,000,000 for Superannuate Endowment. To date (Oct. 4, 1924), $754,900.27 has been paid to the Board of Finance. It seems certain that by Christmas a total of $1.000,000 will actually be in hand from the movement. Are you proud of your Annual Conference's record? Up to Oct. 1, 1924, the Annual Conferences have paid on Special Effort quotas as follows:

Alabama, $15,742.69; Arizona, $877.70; Baltimore, $2,792.25; Central Texas, $14,148.57; Denver, $2,604.96; East Oklahoma, $5,975.02; Florida, $35,909.53; Holston, $36,523.69; Illinois, $3,033.26; Kentucky, $29,413.84; Little Rock, $13,111.20; Louisiana, $26,541.58; Louisville, $42.794.20; Memphis, $14,591.14; Mississippi, $16,578.62; Missouri, $29,320.40; New Mexico, $3,721.90; North Alabama, $15,352.96; North Arkansas, $12,859.73; North Carolina, $34.375.00; North Georgia, $34,-150.11; North Mississippi, $12,557.83; North Texas, $26,988.15; Northwest, $2.790.77; Northwest Texas, $8,448.17; Pacific, $9,503.90; St. Louis, $26,551.25; South Carolina, $12,723.82; South Gorgia, $13,548.08; Southwest Missouri, $36,-575.98; Tennessee, $37,275.95; Texas, $7,549.08; Upper South Carolina, $18,538.00; Virginia, $48,-649.61; West Oklahoma, $6,188.12; West Texas, $28.697.84; Western North Carolina, $23,207.69; Western Virginia, $26,801.80; Brazil Mission, $10; Congo Mission, $315; Japan Mission, $210; Belgian Mission, $55.93. The Home Circle

HYMN AT NOONTIDE.

Behold us, Lord, a little space
From daily tasks set free,
And met within thy holy place
To rest awhile with thee.

Around us rolls the eeaseless tide
Of business, toil, and care;
And scarcely can we turn aside
For one brief hour of prayer.

Yet these are not the only walls
Wherein thou mayst be sought;
On homeliest work thy blessing falls,
In truth and patience wrought.

Thine is the loom, the forge, the mart,
The wealth of land and sea,
The worlds of seience and of art,
Revealed and ruled by thee.

Then let us prove our heavenly birth,
In all we do and know;
And elaim the kingdom of the earth
For thee and not thy foe.

Work shall be prayer, if all be wrought
As thou wouldst have it done,
And prayer, by thee inspired and taught,
Itself with work be one.

—John Ellerton.

BURDEN BEARING.

"Can you help me for a few minutes, Marion?"

"I would like to, but I do not see how I ean." The tone was not impatient, but hurried. "I have this essay to finish for the society this evening; I must go to our Freneh history class in an hour, then to a guild meeting, and get baek to my German lesson at 5 o'clock."

"No, you eannot help me, dear. You look worn out yourself. Never mind. If I tie up my head, perhaps I ean finish this."

"Through at last," said Marion, wearily giving a finishing toueh to the "Development of Religious Ideas among the Greeks," at the same time glaneing quiekly at the eloek.

Her attention was arrested by a strange sight. Her tired mother had fallen asleep over her sewing. That was not surprising; but the startled girl saw bending over her mother's pale face two angels, each looking earnestly at the sleeper.

"What made that weary look on this woman's face?" asked the stern, strange-looking angel of the weaker, sadder one. "Has God given her no daughters?"

"Yes," replied the other, "but they have no time to take eare of their mother."

"No time!" cried the other. "What do they do with all the time I am letting them have?"

"Well," replied the Angel of Life, "I keep their hands and hearts full. They are affectionate daughters, much admired for their works, hut they do not know they are letting the one they love most slip from my arms into yours. Those gray hairs come from overwork and anxiety, to save extra money for the music and French lessons; those pale eheeks faded while the girls were painting roses or pansies on velvet or satin."

The dark angel frowned.

"The girls must be aeeomplished now!" exclaimed the other. "Those eyes grew dim sewing for the girls, to give them time to study ancient history and modern languages; those wrinkles eame beeause the girls had not time to share the eares and worries of everyday life; that sigh eomes beeause the mother feels neglected and lonely, while the girls are working for the women in India; that tired look comes from getting up so early, while the poor, exhausted girls are trying to sleep baek the late hours they gave to study and spent at the eoneert; those feet are so weary because of their eeaseless walk around the house all day."

"Surely the girls help, too."

"What they can; but their feet get weary enough going around begging for the charity hospital and the church, and hunting up the poor and sick."

"No wonder," said the Angel of Death, "so many mothers eall me. This is indeed sad—loving, industrious girls giving their mothers to my eare as soon as selfish, wieked ones!"

"Ah, the hours are so erowded!" said Life, wearily. "Girls who are eultured, or take an active part in life, have no time to take eare of the mother who spent so much time in bringing them up."

"Then I must plaee my seal on her brow," said the Angel of Death, bending over the sleeping woman.

"No, no!" cried Marion, springing from her seat. "I will take eare of her, if you will only stay."

"Daughter, you must have had a nightmare. Wake up, dear! I fear you have missed your history elass."

"Never mind, mamma; I am not going to-day. I am rested now, and I will make these buttonholes, while you eurl up on the sofa and take a nap. I will send word to the guild professor that I must be exeuscd to-day; for I am going to see to supper myself, and make some of those muffins you like. Now, go to sleep, mamma, dear, as I did, and do not worry about me. You are of more eonsequence than all the languages or classes in the world."

So, after being snugly tucked in a warm afghan, with a tender kiss from her daughter, usually too busy for such demonstrations, Mrs. Henson fell into a sweet, restful sleep.

"I see we might have lost the best of mothers in our mad rush to be edueated and useful in this hurrying, restless day and generation," Marion soliloquized, as she oeeasionally stole a glance at the sleeping mother. "After this, what time she does not need I shall devote to outside work and study. Until she gets well restored, I shall take eharge of the house and give up all societies."

And Marion kept her word.

A few months later one remarked to her: "We miss your bright essays so mueh, Miss Marion. You seem to have lost your ambition to be highly edueated. You are letting your sisters get ahead of you, I fear. How young your mother looks to have grown daughters! I never saw her looking so well."

Then Marion felt rewarded.—Seleeted.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN LIFE.

Early in life you will eome to two roads, and your success depends upon which you take. You need serious thought, earnest prayer and meditation to deeide this great question; but do not hesitate or delay your decision too long, for life is short and time is too valuable to waste it at the erossroads. Choose that for which you are most fitted and that whieh is honorable, right, and just, and press onward and upward, and do not turn back, but go forward to the goal. Go ask the successful man or woman about this, and he will tell you that one day he with many other comrades eame to these two roads. The others chose the one whieh had the least resistance, as it led on the level or downward grade, and they were failures. He took the upward road, although it was hard to elimb and he had many hard plaees to overeome; hut each victory made him stronger for the next obstacle, until he was strong enough to reach the summit of success.

Choose well, ehoose wise,
Then press your way along;
And never, never quit the task
Till you sing the victor's song.

THE BUSY SILKWORM.

It required two special trains of fifteen baggage ears eaeh to earry from Seattle to New York the seventy-five hundred hales of silk which recently arrived in Seattle from China and Japan.

Four hundred and fifty million silkworms were required to produce this silk.—The Portal.

Life is full of perplexing providences still. Good eauses suffer calamity and eclipse. We have sore and heavy crosses to bear. To us, as to our Lord's diseiples, they seem sheer ruin and disaster, and our hearts give way to something like despair. But they present a totally different aspeet to our Lord. He eonfronts our seeming defeats and disappointments with a serene and quiet mind. He knows that they will work together for our good and God's glory.—J. D. Jones.

We eannot relieve the past. Continued worry about it ineapacitates us to make the most of the opportunities of the present. Never allow your thoughts to dwell without purpose on past mistakes! Take them with you through the door of prayer!—E. P. S. H.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The Publisbing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in the office of the Advocate in the city of New Orleans, Oct. 16, 1924.

The Committee was pleased to find the financial condition of the paper better than it has been for several years.

The committee appointed at a previous meeting to procure competitive bids for the publicatoin of the paper, submitted bids from three printing companies. After due consideration of the details of the bids submitted, and a careful survey of the present business and editorial management of the paper, the committee decided to continue its publication on the basis of that adopted for the past year.

Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D., was re-elected editor for a term of four years. Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers was re-elected publisher and business manager.

By unanimous action of the Committee, the three patronizing Conferences are requested to continue the same assessment for the support of the paper for the year 1925.

In view of the imperative need of a wider circulation of the Advocate, a committee was created and requested to devise a plan for the increase of the circulation, and to submit the plan to the three patronizing Conferences for action. The committee is composed of Rev. John F. Foster, Rev. J. W. Dorman, and Rev. W. H. Saunders.

The Committee would urge the preachers of the three Conferences to bring to the paper a more serious and prayerful support.

J. T. LEGGETT, Secretary.

JUST A PERSONAL WORD.

I cannot refrain from a word of appreciation of the action of the Publishing Committee in re-electing me to the editorship of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. For a little more than six years I have occupied this responsible position. The work has not always been easy, but I have given my best to it. The burden I have carried at times has been lightened by the sympathy of many friends, and difficult tasks have been made easier by the forbearance and helpful co-operation of a multitude of Christian people. All acts of kindness are held in grateful remembrance.

For the future, I consecrate myself anew to the work of giving to the church a paper true to its doctrines, faithful to its polity, and loyal to its program, and as efficient as I can make it in promoting all the interests of the Kingdom of God. To this end, I covet the prayers, sympathy, and co-operation of all our people, preachers and laymen. All of us are engaged in the common task of establishing, maintaining, and extending the Kingdom of God upon earth. It is a goodly fellowship, the joys of which far exceed the sorrows and disappointments. May the blessings of the Almighty rest upon our labors! H. T. C.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

All goes well with the work at Magnolia, Miss., where Rev. Claude P. Jones is pastor. A fine report is in prospect for Conference.

Rev. W .H. Saunders, our pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., was the winner of the prize at the recent "Seven Counties Fair" for the best acre of cotton grown in Copiah County.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir is closing a fine year at Leesville, La. There have been 55 additions to the membership of the church thus far, and all the work of the church is prosperous.

The Foreign Missions Convention, to be held under the auspices of the Foreign Mission Boards of the United States and Canada, is announced to meet at Washington, D. C., Jan. 28-Feb. 2, 1925. The attendance will be limited to 5000 delegates.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Holcomb charge, North Mississippi Conference, passed resolutions, in opposition to the pending plan of unification. The names of B. S. Elliott, charge lay leader, and fifteen others are signed to the resolutions.

The many friends of Rev. E. K. Means, the distinguished pastor of the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., will sympathize with him in the death of his mother, which occurred last week in Kentucky. The Advocate joins in the sorrow of those who mourn.

At the recent session of the Czechoslovak Mission, Rev. J. L. Neill, of the Mississippi Conference, was appointed Superintendent of the Mission and President of the Biblical Seminary. Brother Neill will spend several months in the United States in the interest of the Centenary collections.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. He was passing through New Orleans en route to his Conferences in Texas and Mexico. Bishop Cannon was one of the speakers at the unveiling of the Asbury Memorial Statue in Washington, D. C., on Oct. 15.

We take the following from the St. Louis Christian Advocate: "Rev. Floyd W. Dick, transferred from the Northwest Conference to the Missouri Conference and appointed to Maysville, is now on the field and reports a cordial welcome." Brother Dick was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference.

The Institutional Methodist Church, of Hollister, Cal., of which Rev. A. Inman Townsley, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, is pastor, was dedicated on Sunday, Oct. 12. Bishop H. M. DuBose officiating, assisted by Dr. C. D. Bulla, presiding elder. The church is valued at $40,000, and is thoroughly equipped to do the most effective work.

The Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss., is entering upon the seventieth year of its existence. It is one of the best printed and best edited papers that reach our desk. We heartily congratulate its editor and publisher upon the high standards of journalism reached and maintained, and we wish the paper many additional years of usefulness and prosperity.

The board of stewards of the Methodist church at Sardis, Miss., passed resolutions highly commending Rev. J. A. Randolph for his services as pastor and expressing regret that his pastorate would soon come to an end. The board also passed resolutions expressing its appreciation of the services of Rev. J. T. Lewis, presiding elder of the Sardis District, and expressing its desire for his reappointment to the same office.

Mrs. Samuel A. Montgomery, formerly of New Orleans, now connected with Centenary College, Shreveport, La., announces the marriage of her daughter, Margaret Hamilton, to Mr. Charles Carlisle Conrad at Centenary College on Saturday, Oct. 11. The father of the bride, the late S. A. Montgomery, was a distinguisbed lawyer and leader of reform movements in Louisiana. The Advocate extends all good wisbes to the happy young couple.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Hazlehurst, Miss., under date of Oct. 20, writes: "Brother Hogg came and opened up yesterday at 11 a.m., and the meeting bids to be the greatest in the history of this place. This is his home town, and the people, regardless of denomination, claim Will Hogg as their own. It is evident that the space we arranged to take care of the congregations will be too small, although we are prepared to accommodate two thousand people."

The New Orleans District Standard Training School began its sessions at the First Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday afternoon with a good attendance and fine interest. The following constitute the faculty: Prof. C. A. Bowen, of Millsaps College; Miss Willette Allen; Mrs. W. B. Ferguson; Mrs. Clay E. Smith; Rev. H. E. Wheeler, Conference Superintendent of the North Arkansas Conference; Dr. J. L. Cuninggim, President of Scarritt College for Christian Workers. Mr. H. P. Wall is educational director of the School, and Mr. J. H. Carter is chairman of the board of managers. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School Superintendent, was in attendance at the opening session.

On Rally Day, Oct. 12, at the First Methodist Church, Tupelo, Miss., eight infants were baptized and eighteen members received into the church. A total of 132 members have been received this Conference year without any revival campaign. The membership of the church is now 1048. The Senior Epworth League merited a gold seal certificate at the summer conference for grading 100 per cent—the first League in the North Mississippi Conference to win this honor. A standard training school has been held in the church, with 77 persons receiving credit. Two young men have been licensed to preach, and two young ladies have offered themselves for Christian service, one of whom the church is sending to college this year. Rev. C. C. Alexander is the pastor of this vigorous and growing church.

On another page of this issue of the Advocate appears a picture of the new Methodist church at Bentonia, Miss., of which Rev. C. W. Wesley is pastor. The value of the building and lot is conservatively estimated at $7000, and there is no indebtedness of any kind. The building of this church is a remarkable tribute to the faithfulness and efficiency of the pastor and to the loyalty and liberality of the membership. At the beginning of the year, the membership was 58; to that number, 22 have been added. The pastor says of them: "We haven't many members, but they are worth their weight in gold. What they lack in numbers, they make up in quality. They have surely been good to this preacher and his wife." We congratulate all concerned upon the happy realization of their dreams for a new church building.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: J. L. Bell, Newton, Miss., 2; Rev. W. W. Perry, Many, La., 2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Brandon, Miss., 2; Rev. F. B. Ormond, Tylertown, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Winstead, Car-

"DR. STEEL THEN AND NOW."

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Under the above caption in the Advocate of October 16, Dr. H. Walter Featherstun quotes from my Fraternal Address to the Northern General Conference. He says it "suggests much just now," and then plainly implies that what I said then is out of harmony with my opposition to unification now. He, too, like Dr. Burrows who first published the extract, spins that construction of what I said out of his own consciousness. There is no difference between my position now and my position then. I pleaded then for fraternity, and I plead for that now. I opposed organic union then, and I oppose it now. It is a disingenuous attempt to make me contradict myself.

There is not a word in the extract that favors the organic union of the two branches of Methodism. Such a union is impossible. If forced upon us by a majority vote, it will have most serious results, and disrupt our church. We can never have another General Conference to meet in the South, because in no Southern city large enough to entertain the General Conference would the mixing of the negroes and whites be tolerated as they will have to mix in the united church. Imagine such a General Conference meeting in Memphis, New Orleans, Birmingham, Atlanta, or Richmond! I am everlastingly opposed to this plan of unification. We must defeat it in self-defence.

I'm glad Dr. Featherstun thinks my "heart is right;" but I am doing my best to keep head and heart together, and if the case he quotes as showing they are apart is the best he can do, I think I am getting along pretty well. Fraternity forever—union never!

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Mrs. J. W. Quimby, one of the most beloved and conseerated members of the Woman's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church of Laurel, Miss., has been called by our Heavenly Father into the Great Beyond, who in his infinite love and wisdom calls his own; and,

Whereas, we deem it a privilege to take note of those who, by their beautiful eharaeter have left an indelible impress for good upon those with whom they associate, and whose life has proved that there is a reality and a sweet peace in living the Cbristian life: Be it resolved:

1. That her life was an inspiration to each and every member of the class, feeling that being in her presenee, alone, meant a spiritual uplift, and an association with one of God's own.

2. That we urge upon the members of our class to draw from the life of this good Mother of Israel the lesson of lifting the burdens of others by radiating from the heart, through the eountenance, that "peaee that passeth all understanding."

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our beloved member with our most earnest expression of love and sympathy.

"PLEASE TELL MY MOTHER."

By Glee Hastings.

All day long Demetrius had waited shyly around the offiee building of tbe Near East Relief headquarters in Athens, hoping that somebody would see him and ask him to come in and eat some of the bean stew that he eould smell, when he got elose enough to the kitehen windows. It had been a long time sinee he had had anything good to eat. Coming down on the ship from Saloniea, he bad hidden away under some barrels so that tbe eaptain would not see him, and had only a scrap of bread now and then that a kind sailor had given him.

It had been eold and stormy on the sea, but anything was better than trying to stay on alone in Saloniea in one of the wretehed refugee camps after his mother died, and there was no one who cared anything about him. He had not known exactly wherc he was going when he slipped off the boat at Piraeus, but a soldier had seen him and suggested tbat the Amerieans at the old palaee in Athens might do something for him, sinee hc was a little fellow. So Demetrius wearily trudged the long distanee to Atbens—and then he had been afraid to ask.

It was dark and past time to close the offiee when the orphanage direetor was asked by one of her workers: "How about this little boy that is outside? Will you see him to-night? He just eame up the stairs."

Within a half hour Mrs. Harris, who is in eharge of the Old Palaee, was taking eare of little Demetrius. He had a big steaming bowl of bean soup and all the bread he eould eat, and then, because it was too late to send him to the Zappeon Orphanage to be with the boys, he was given some blankets and put in eharge of the nigth-watchman until the next morning, when he would become a regularly enrolled member of tbe Near East family.

When Demetrius was ready to eurl up in the blankets on the floor near the charcoal burner in the lower hall, this is what the night-watehman heard him say, as he revcrently folded his thin little hands and lifted his serious blue eyes: "Oh God, I thank you because to-night I have bread in my stomaeh and blankets to put around me. Please tell my mother."

A Wise Old Trapper
In the state of Ohio there lived a bunch of boys who had this trapping husioess down to a science. They each sent for separate price lists every year and then sent all their furs to the house giving the best quotations. After five years they decided they wereo't so dreadfully wise because they dido't have enough profits to make their efforts worth while. One day they met Tom McMillan driving a new car to towo. Tom said he made the price of his swell outfit shipping pelts. He told how he got wise to those funny prices and found it was better to deal with Chas. Porter because he always knew in advance just what he was sure of getting. He said that Porter never offered $5 for a $3 pelt, but he always paid the $3 which he promised and sometimes a little better. Chas. Porter now has five wise trappers in that section instead of one.
Don't take a Chance With Your FURS
Your furs mean real dollars to yoo. Why sell them to some fellow who offers you $1.25 when you know very well you are lucky to get fifty cents. Ask the wise trapper who knows. Once a Chas. "HE HEARD ME."

It seems as natural as breathing that man should pray to God. The possibility of communion with God is one of the fundamental beliefs of our religion, and there can be no question that through this communion strength and righteousness come to man. It seems charaeterlstic of the normal man to feel his need of God, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ In preeminent fashion supplies this need. When men call upon God he hears and answers them. And if ever a day comes when the soul loses its faith in prayer and loses lts sense of God's presence It is assuredly a dark day for that soul.

There are periods in the history of some of us, perhaps of most of us, when our sense of need is at its minimum and our sense of indepedenco at its maximum, and during such periods we may wonder why men talk of prayer, and we may feel that we are indeed the architects of our own fortunes, and we may be proud of our work. But such an experience is rather an unlovely and undesirablo one, and is apt to put us hopelessly out of touch with our fellows. Fortunately it is usually of short duration, and we return again to sanity and a sense of our need.

If any one in human history mlght have been expected to be self-reliant and independent it would surely have been Jesus Christ, and yet we find him In closest communion with the Father, and in difficult periods of his life we find him, withdrawing himself from men that he might pray to God. The Master of wind and wave bowed often in prayer; how mnch more should we, his humble followers, seek to commune with God?

What good is prayer? What profit is there to him who practices it? This question is sometimes asked, but it is seldom asked by the man who prays. Prayer is not, as some suppose, a constant stream of requests for things that we deslre. It ls the outgoing of the soul towards God, the fellowship of the spirit of man with the spirit of God. It means a new atmosphere in life, a dlvine enfolding, and a divine inspiring. It lifts man above the sordld levels and makes him walk the high places with the Infinite One. It calms the earth fever; it soothes the earth-weary spirit; it gives men glimpses of other worlds; it stills the volce of passion and gives peace to the disordered spirit. It keeps the soul of man In tune with the Infinite, and it saves us from earth-intoxication. It ls not wholly concerned with getting something from God, but it does concern itself with keeping always in touch with God.—Christian Guardian.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasscs, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuino Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and, don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A CHRISTIAN FRIEND OF GANDHI.

The word "Christian" in India has a speclal signiticance even among those who have not embraced the Christlan religion, according to K. T. Paul, the Indian General Secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. of India. Mr. Paul speaks through an article in the November issue of Association Men, organ of the American Young Men's Christian Associations. The article is by P. Whitwell Wilson, well-known British journalist and ex-member of Parliament, who is the author of the books, "The Christ We Forget," "The Church We Forget" and "The Vislon We Forget."

"People will say to you that such an action is not 'Christian,'" says Mr. Paul. "They know what a 'Christian' action should be. They do nōt say so frequently that such an action is not 'Mohammedean' or 'Buddhist.' ... They think they know what, in any partlcular set of circumstauces, Christ hlmself would do. They revere Gautama, but the records of Gautama do not enahle them to find in him the example for every day which they find In Christ."

Mr. Paul is a frlend of Mahatma Gandhl, famous leader of the non-co-operators. Gandhi, although not a Christian, helieves profoundly "in the presence and authority of Christ." During the vlolent disorders on the Malabar Coast, where the Moplahs, arden Mohammedans, attacked the Hindus, the Y. M. C. A. undertook relief work, and Gandhi sent the General Secretary the following verbal message of approval:

"I am glad that you are undertaking this relief work, for you may be able, perhaps, to teach the Hindus to treat the Mohammedans in a Christian spirlt."

"The Y. M. C. A. in India has become indigenons to the country," says Mr. Wilson. "To adopt a word familiar in Indian politics, it has been 'Indianized.' It is an autonomous organization, guided by a National Committee which is served by an Indian as General Secretary."

In the argument between government and non-co-operators, the Y. M. C. A. remains strictly neutral. But many of the problems of the country are discussed in the rooms of the city Associations, which furnish meeting-places for Indian men who have been educated in Britaln. In the villages, the Association has co-operated with the government in establishing co-operative banks, and was the means of starting such a bank to finance co-operative societies in communities where no security was available except the borrower's character. After the first year, this bank earned the maximum divldend of 9 per cent, and in the nine years of its existence no credit society has defaulted in payment.

But the Y. M. C. A., under K. T. Paul, in Mr. Wilson's opinion, is more than a Christian club with classes, athletics and other accessories of such an institution; more than an organization which helps to promote the welfare of peasants. It ls a "challenging influence." Mr. Paul is out to change history. With all hls gentle consideration for others, there is In this man a profound ambition for hls country. Others say, "India independent"—he says, "India as the Kingdom of God."—Bulletln.

know the result of our Children's Week program in our church, Oct. 6-12. In the home visitation our teachers were certainly untiring in their efforts, and the results were more than gratifying. Twenty-five homes were visited and practically every home responded to the invitation of the teachers, and a large number of new pupils were present yesterday morning. The attendance was the largest for the quarter. Our new church and Sunday school building was filled to capacity at the parents' meeting last night. The program was a success from the beginning, made so by the interest and hard work of those taking part, and the crowd seemed really to enjoy every part of it. They were enthusiastic in adopting the following as a forward step for the Sunday school: To maintain curtained class rooms and provide separate department. Get students to apply lessons learned to everyday living.

"Now, just a little history of our school. When we came to Barham the attendance was 24, with an enrollment of 74. We now have an enrollment of 96, with an average attendance of 81. This past summer our old building became so crowded we had to begin to plan for new quarters, so, since you were her last, we have built and moved into our new building. It is a large 60x40 building, built so that it may be made to correspond to requirements of the "C" type school."

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My report for the year can be summed up in a few words as follows: In every church where the leaders have made an effort to carry out the policies of our General Sunday School Board in conjunction with the Conference Board the work of the kingdom has prospered. The numbers have increased until there is no room for more; the quality of instruction has improved so that it compares favorably with the best teaching that is being done in our high schools.

One year ago Columbus, Central Church, had an attendance of about sixty; to-day they have a larger number enrolled in the Sunday school than on the church register. They need an annex to the present new structure large enough to care for upwards of two hundred. The work that Del Longgrear has done is nothing short of monumental. He is loyal to the Lord and the plans of his church.

The Sunday school at West Point has been doing excellent work for several years. This school has formed the habit of doing good work. Promotion Day with this school is a means of grace. The Cradle Roll, under the supervision of Mrs. Roy Snider, has an enrollment of 124; fifteen were promoted to the Beginner Department. The Junior Department received the banner for the best average attendance for the year. The Intermediate Department received the banner for the largest offering for the year. This school awards the Robert Raikes diploma with seals for perfect attendance. There were seventy-five who received these diplomas and seals for the year. Miss Ethel Hines leads the list with a record of twelve years' perfect attendance, Miss Lucile Belk and Randolph Howorth for eleven years, Miss Gladys Gilmore and J. H. Snider for ten years, and so on down the line. Most of the pupils above the primaries are members of the church. Bibles were awarded to all Juniors who had memorized the correlated Bible work for the year. This splendid record is due to the untiring efforts of superintendents and teachers of the different departments. Perhaps no one has put more time and study in the work of this school than Mrs. B. M. Howorth, Superintendent of Elementary Work.

We have a standard school scheduled for Clarksdale and ten other churches for Nov. 23-28. Mrs. H. L. Talbert was elected as educational director by the board of managers. The following courses are to be given: "A Methodist Church and Its Work." "Pupil Study," "Missionary Message of the Bible," and "Stories." The first, third and fourth courses are known as general electives, and the second course is a general required course. Schools for the Columbus, Corinth, Greenwood, and Aberdeen Districts are in the making. Sardis and Grenada Districts have not been provided for as yet.

Cards for pastors' reports will be mailed out in a few days. These reports are required by the law of the church. They are worth a great deal to the Sunday School Board when it comes to making plans for the next year. It takes only a minute to fill out the blank spaces, but it takes a loyal man to use that minute.

When you have observed Children's Week send reports to Miss Virginia Thomas, Box 152, University, Miss. Durant and Jonestown have sent in creditable reports.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

A Short Plea for Three Things.

1. Please try to enter the campaign for membership which is now going on through the whole church for 250,000 new Sunday school members.

2. Will you not, each and every one who is interested in the Sunday school work, give us accurate reports for our Annual Conference Journal? We ought to show a large increase this year, and if we can get to Conference what has come to us on the reports we will show a very considerable increase. Please use diligence and care in making the reports.

3. We need $500 by the 1st of November. Of this amount, some $75 has been promised; please do not put it off, but get it to us. We have not had to borrow a penny for one year and eleven months. The sum of $500 will put us out on top. You have helped us in every pull; will you not give us a generous lift now?

Always and everywhere and all the time pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM KINGSTON, LAUREL, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: It has come my usual time to give a short report of my year's work here at Kingston, Laurel. I have been here for two years, and I think I can safely say this has been one of the most profitable and happy years of all my ministry. We have had many things to make us feel good here at this place. When I came here last year, there was a debt of $600 on the church, and $75 on paving notes, and a debt on the parsonage. All this has been raised, and we will dedicate the church this winter. We all feel proud of the fact that we are out of debt so far. Besides, we have had paving laid around the church and parsonage property, which adds to the looks of things.

On Easter Sunday, we began our revival meeting with Rev. W. M. McIntosh, his wife, and Mr. John Bryant, the singer. We ran the meeting through three Sundays, and thirty-four members were added to the church, most of these on profession of faith. It was the best meeting ever held in the church, I am told. Brother McIntosh and his wife are two of the best workers I ever had with me anywhere. They are great for a meeting. He knows how to preach the old-time Methodist doctrine and bring sinners to Christ. He is so agreeable in his work, and stands by the pastor, and leaves the people loving the pastor better than before he came. I do not hesitate to recommend him to anybody at any place who needs some good hard work done in a meeting.

In the spring of the year, I had the "call" to become pastor of a Congregational Methodist church in the afternoon work, and held my own meeting there for them, and as a result of my work there and the help of the Lord, I have landed that whole church for our Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The whole congregation, property and all will be ours in the next year. They will be received into our church at our last quarterly conference. There are about 100 members in all. I feel that we have won a real good thing in getting these people to transfer their whole church to us.

On the first day of October, I went to help Brother A. C. Johnson in a meeting on the Carriere charge, and found him to be a mighty fine fellow, doing a good work and serving a fine class of people. We ran the meeting eight days, and had one of the best church revivals I have been in for a long time. He is doing a good work on the Carriere charge, and is in fine favor with the people on the charge.

We are bringing the work here at Kingston to a close this year in real good shape. We have a mighty fine, well organized Sunday school, and a good Missionary Society; also two good, active Epworth Leagues. We will soon be ready for Conference.

BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR., IN SCANDINAVIA AND FINLAND.

(The following communication has been sent to the editor by Bishop Anton Bast, of Copenhagen, the bishop in charge of the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Scandinavia and the Baltic States.)

In behalf of the World Anti-Alcohol League Bishop James Cannon visited Scandinavia in August. It was a great pleasure to me when he visited in Stavanger, Norway, during the Methodist Episcopal Conference session. He took an interesting part in our Conference work, and on Sunday he was the much beloved preacher in one of our Norwegian Methodist churches. But he came here as a representative of the World League work, and he did it well in every way. In a mass meeting on the market place he spoke to more than three thousand, and privately he highly interested our preachers and people in league objects.

About his special task he on his way from the Conference town lectured in Bergen and in Christiania, Norway, to a very strong throng of hearers. The Norwegian vice president of the World League, Lawyer Solnordal, introduced the bishop, and in his introduction speech he stated, that among the much of good we in Scandinavia receive from America nothing is like the impulse for temperance and prohibition. In that connection he, though himself not a Methodist, praised the Methodist church and its leaders for valuable service in that for every nation requirable work.

With the undersigned as his interpreter, Bishop Cannon gave strong addresses concerning the reasons why America will stand for prohibition.

The American prohibition movement, he said, has strong champions among the immigrated Scandinavians. Two Norwegians, Mr. Volstead and Knute Nelson, took a prominent part in carrying prohibition through in America.

Then he gave an historical sketch about how prohibition took hold of American people, and at last he gave a very interesting collection of facts which stated that American prohibition has not been in vain.

On his way to Finland Bishop Cannon stopped in Stockholm, Sweden. It was a week-day (Wednesday, Aug. 20), and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon he gave his address. Though not a convenient hour, the large St. Peter Methodist Episcopal Church gave room to an exceedingly great and much representative assembly.

Senator Alexis Bjorkman, the vice president of the Swedish branch of the Anti-Alcohol League, gave the introduction speech, and then the bishop delivered a much interesting lecture, and told how prohibition has worked in America.

As the Swedish people last year took a general vote for or against prohibition, and nearly half of the votes cast were dry, the temperance people have a good hope in the near future to overthrow the liquor business. Therefore, the Bishop's rather too short visit to Sweden was much appreciated, and his lecture packed with real facts, and it will become of great use in the work for a dry Sweden.

In Finland, Bishop Cannon was an honorable guest to the Finnish-Swedish Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was held in the city of Helsingfors, and there the Bishop lectured to very large audiences. In Finland they have prohibition, and like America they must fight very hard to keep out alcohol from outside the borders and enforce the prohibition law.

A special welcome was given Bishop Cannon by the Finland government, and in some ways we other Methodist preachers profited by his being there. One day the secretary of Social Affairs of the Government invited us two bishops and some of the preachers to a very pleasant drive together with himself in an auto belonging to the government. In the afternoon of the same day we were invited by the said Secretary of State, together with the superintendent, Rev. Karl Hurtig, and some Methodist preachers for tea. Some of the foremost officers of the social department were invited, too. There the Bishop was given a wholesome occasion for propagating his task in that influential circle.

Bishop Cannon went from Finland to Esthonia and Latvia, and made addresses in Reval and Riga, the capital cities of those countries. He made several addresses in Denmark last year, so he has now delivered the Prohibition Message in all the Scandinavian and Baltic States.

All in all Bishop Cannon in that visit to Scandinavia proved himself not only a much desired and appreciated visitor whom it is a benefit to meet everywhere, but also as a powerful champion for that significant cause in behalf of which he gave his time, his strength and his talents. I enjoyed very much his brotherly fellowship, and I expect much fruit for good because of his being here.

ANTON BAST.

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

FROM THE MARIETTA CHARGE.

Dear Old Advocate: As I have finished my round of protracted meetings, I will write you about it.

I began at Friendship—just a little further east than "East Prentiss schoolhouse." When I arrived, I found Brother J. T. Gullett there, ready for and doing his part of the work, that of preaching, which he did well. We received seven new members, and several others were converted.

After this meeting, we were hindered for the next, by the people not being ready for the meeting and preachers not coming to help according to expectation.

We began at Nebo on the third Sunday in August. Our helper failing to get there, we led in the singing, praying and preaching, though we had some good help in all. We had several conversions, and two joined the church.

Next, we began at Gilmore's Chapel on the fourth Sunday in August. There we had fine singing, which gave my voice some much-needed rest, and enabled me to preach fourteen sermons by Friday night, when we closed out after a fine and successful meeting which added five splendid members to the church.

We began at Siloam the fifth Sunday in August, and we were much disappointed by the absence of some splendid young preachers who had promised to do the preaching for us. Notwithstanding the disappointment, we had some splendid local help, and the Lord blessed us with a splendid meeting, in which about thirty confessed Christ. Brother Andie Fugitt was with us, and did some fine work in leading the song and prayer services. He gave friends and relatives good advice in his exhortations. We predict for him a useful life in the work of the Lord.

We went from there to our home church, Marietta, beginning the first Sunday in September. There I preached only twice because we could do better. Brother E. G. Mohler, of Booneville station, was with us, and did some splendid preaching. Brother Mohler teaches in his preaching, and he teaches what the Bible teaches. His appeals are strong and persuasive. The church at Marietta was made better by his preaching.

The second Sunday in September we began a tent meeting at Kirkville. This tent meeting was an after meeting for Gilmore's Chapel, of Marietta circuit and O'Bork and Palestine, of Mantachie circuit, which plan brought Brother G. B. Love, myself and Brother J. T. Gullett, the district missionary evangelist, together for this meeting.

Brother Gullett managed the meeting, and he did it effectively. The meeting ran from the 14th to the 25th, inclusive, without a break, except we rested Saturday at 11 o'clock.

It was a great meeting. Many were converted. I booked thirty-two members at Gilmore's Chapel as a result of that meeting, and Brother Love got more than I did.

The Baptists received a goodly number during the meeting. Altogether, I suppose there were one hundred who joined the different churches—maybe more than that.

There were many things that contributed to the success of the meeting; but there are three things that I feel deserve special mention: First, in addition to the preaching and praying, and the persistent personal work done in the congregation in the after-meeting and between services; second, the services were held, each time, long enough for the work to be done; third, the meeting did not cease too soon.

1000 EGGS in Every Hen

If You Keep Chickens
CUT THIS OUT

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of Poultry Success.

The average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept over a second year she may lay 100 more. Then she goes to market. Yet, it has been scientifically established that every pullet is born or hatched with over one thousand minute egg germs in her system and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years' time if given proper care.

How to work to get 1,000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest, triple egg production, make slacker hens hustle. These and many other money making poultry secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. There is big profit for the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how. If you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 251-K, Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., and a free copy of "The 1,000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Minutes of the First Group District Meeting, Vicusburg District.

The first group district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Vicksburg District was held at the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., Sept. 16, 1924.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the Natchez Auxiliary served to the delegates and visitors a most appetizing dinner in the Sunday school room.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Brothers Evans, Smith, and Hawkins. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, district secretary, then took the chair and conducted the business. She reported 22 Adult, 3 Young People, 6 Junior and 3 Baby Societies in the district.

Mrs. W. H. H. Lewis, of Fayette, was elected secretary.

It was our privilege to have with us Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, our Cultivation Secretary, who gave us at this time an instructive and interesting talk on what the Missionary Society is doing in the Orient.

The secretary called the roll, and the following Societies reported: Fayette, 4; Lorman, 1; Mizpah, 2; Natchez, 19; Woodville, 7.

"How to Conduct a Missionary Society" was briefly told by Mrs. Lewis, of Fayette.

Mrs. Ford reported for the Lorman Society, and read an excellent paper on "The Training of Young People and Juniors."

Mrs. Hawkins gave a paper on how to conduct a Mission study class, and also reported for the Woodville Society. Natchez, Lorman and Woodville being the only Societies in this group having a regular class. The secretary asked that Societies finishing a book, please send them to her and she would lend them to Societies not able to buy them.

Mrs. Millsaps reported for Mizpah. This Society is the youngest in this group. 75% subscribing for the Missionary Voice.

Gloster and Centreville not being present to report for their Societies, Fayette and Woodville discussed why they were not on the honor roll, and Miss Porter and Mrs. Lipscomb told how a Missionary Society can be a good Samaritan in a community.

Mrs. Warren Trimble made an interesting report for Natchez. This Society has paid more for the Belle Bennett Memorial than any other Society in this group. Natchez Young People had a good report.

Mrs. Lipscomb made a thorough explanation of the Belle Bennett Memorial love gift and Scarritt Training School. She and Miss Porter also explained what social service means.

Mrs. Cottrell, in her gentle, impressive way, thanked the Societies for their interest and co-operation in making this a most inspiring and instructive meeting, and the Natchez Auxiliary for their untiring efforts in making the day a success by their boundless hospitality.

At 7:30 an appreciative audience gathered at the church, and, after the singing of a hymn, prayer by Brother Hawkins, and a special by the choir, Mrs. Lipscomb delighted them with a most interesting account of the missionary work in the Orient as she found it.

We left feeling that it was good to have been with those who love God and his work.

MRS. W. H. LEWIS,
Recording Secretary.

WARNING

WHAT KIND OF IRON HAVE YOU BEEN TAKING?

The Newer Compound of Iron Containing Organic Iron Like the Iron in Your Blood, or Ordinary Metallic or Mineral Iron—It's Important to Know the Difference—How to Tell.

A child must have lime to make bone, but it gets organic lime from milk and not mineral lime from lime rocks. So the millions of red blood corpuscles in your blood must have iron, but nature put food iron—not mineral iron—for your blood in the husks of grains and the peels and skins of vegetables; modern methods of cookery throw them all away, hence the alarming increase in anaemia—iron starvation of the blood, with the devitalizing weakness, nervousness and other attendant ills it brings. You should either go back to nature or take the newer form of food iron to make up for this great loss and maintain your bodily and mental vigor. The iron that people usually take is mineral or metallic iron and is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. The newer form of iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in the husks of grains and peels of vegetables. It is so prepared that it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by your blood, while some physicians claim mineral iron is not absorbed at all. This newer form of iron may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. It costs much more to make Nuxated Iron than it does to make mineral or metallic iron. But when your health is at stake, get the best. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. For sale by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON
For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

TO SUPERINTENDENT OF CHILDREN'S WORK, LOCAL AUXILIARY.

Dear Co-Worker: I want to give you a word of greeting and call your attention to our annual Week of Prayer. The Council plan is for all missionary auxiliaries to join together in this observance; but for the past two years the children's societies have been rather careless. I am anxious for each one to join this year. Will you do your part to bring this to pass?

We will render a great service to the church and her children, and certainly hasten the coming of the kingdom, if we can teach the children the value of prayer.

May this fourth be the best quarter of the year, and its close find every department active.

Sincerely yours, in His service,
ALTHEA JONES,
Superintendent of Children's Work.

A WORTHY EXAMPLE.

Last week at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Little Rock Conference Woman's Missionary Society it was voted to appropriate $1,000 out of the contingent fund for the erection of the Woman's Building at Mount Sequoyah.

At a meeting of representatives of the twelve patronizing Conferences, held last summer at the Western Methodist Assembly, it was agreed that the Missionary Societies of these Conferences would build a $25,000 Woman's Building on Mount Sequoyah. Mrs. C. F. Elza was elected chairman and Mrs. H. L. Remmel was elected secretary of the organization, and now the Conference to which these elect ladies belong has made the initial offering for this worthy cause. This is exceedingly gratifying to the Assembly management, as it is an auspicious beginning. If the other Conferences will follow this fine example, the building is assured for use the coming year. Which Conference will be next? Let our women demonstrate their interest by early action.—Arkansas Methodist.

TELLS OF WORK ON THE CONGO.

The Rev. W. N. Ware, Mississippi Conference Epworth League missionary to Kabinda M. E. C. M., Congo Belge, Afrique, sends the following very interesting account of his work to the folk back home:

"Minga Station, M. E. C. M.,
"June 2. 1924.

"To the Mississippi Conference Epworth League, W. D. Hawkins, President, Meridian, Miss., U. S. A.

"Dear Friends: To do the work I have been called upon to do for the past few months and at the same time be the 'writer of many letters,' is more than I can do. I often find time to think of you good people at home who have made it possible for us to be here, but to write is a different proposition. This is the third letter I have started to you during the past three months, and I surely do hope that I shall be permitted to finish this one.

"We reached Minga, our appointment for 1924, on the 21st of February. Five of us were appointed to this station: Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Bush, Miss Christine Allen, and the Wares. The first-named had not returned from their furlough in America when we reached our appointed home, so, after we were shown about the work for a few days by Mr. Kinman, the missionary in charge last year, he went to his appointment in Wembo Nyama and left Miss Allen and our family to do all the work of the station until the Bushes should return.

"Thus for about three months I have had all the work that at least three men are needed for, if the work is to be done adequately and the men are not to break down in health. Miss Allen has had the Business and Educational Departments of the station, and I have had the Evangelistic, Industrial, and Medical Departments without an assistant save the natives.

"The Industrial Department has a work line of more than fifty men, and, under my direction since we have reached Minga, they have built us a good-sized kitchen, have completed small houses which were under construction when we came or started soon after arirval, have done quite a bit of work on paths, in gardens, etc., have sawed about 700 feet of lumber, made several pieces of furniture, and have almost completed a large dwelling house for Mr. and Mrs. Bush.

"The Evangelistic Department has been somewhat neglected for the lack of time and the lack of knowledge of the native language. It is too bad that so many men who come out to do evangelistic work have to give so much time to industrial and other lines of work because the workers are not here, and the work must be done if any one is to remain in the fields! We have under our charge ten native evangelists, preaching in seventeen villages and teaching their schools. I have helped to administer the sacrament to the Christians of all these villages, and have baptized a few candidates for church membership. I lead in prayer and song service once each week, and teach a Sunday school class on Sunday. Our hearts were made glad by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Bush about ten days ago, and Brother Bush has taken this department off my hands. He has also relieved me of the care of the Mission boys, now more than fifty in number.

"The Medical Department is not to be ignored (in spite of the fact that many of our people at home ignore it). Since we have neither doctor nor nurse, all this work has fallen to me. I have always felt a desire to be a medical missionary, and like this work very much; but alas, I came out unprepared for the work! However, it is surprising what success an untrained and inexperienced man can have with many of the more simple cases with which we have to deal. I have from ten to thirty patients each morning to diagnose, give out medicine, and often to put on bandages. Sometimes I have teeth to pull; occasionally I have a case which demands a knife, but for lack of equipment, houses for patients, and surgical knowledge, have to turn them away untreated. I have had to send a few away who could have been helped here had we only a hospital and a place to keep the patients. At present we are building a few temporary houses, mere huts, and shall be able to care for a few patients in this way. Can't you good people of America spare us a doctor and a nurse for Minga station? You have hundreds of them, we have none save the witch doctors, who are far worse than none. A few hundred dollars would build and equip a large hospital here, save the implements, which would be by far the most expensive thing involved. You have wealth; our natives are poor and get an average salary of about fifty cents per month at the present rate of exchange! Ten dollars would build a house, equip it for one patient, and feed that patient here for one whole year!

"We are well and happy in the work. The longer we stay, the more we learn about the life and needs of these people. We feel that if our people at home really knew of their condition, they would do more for them. Pray for us and the work."

IMPRESSIONS OF THE BROOKHAVEN ASSEMBLY.

Rev. J. L. Decell, pastor of the Central Church in Meridian, has the following to say about the Assembly:

"The 1924 Mississippi Conference Epworth League Assembly was the best ever—the most promising group of young people, full of enthusiasm for the cause of Christ, and a consecration that was full of inspiration. This session was so fine, already the Associate Deans are planning to make their part of the work better next year."

Dr. H. T. Carley, editor of the Advocate, says of the Assembly:

"I was at Brookhaven such a short time I really had no opportunity of getting into the work of the Assembly. I may say, however, that the evident spirit of interest and enthusiasm on the part of the young people was to me a very inspiring thing. I think we need have no fear of the future leadership of the church when we find its young people entering as heartily into its work as they did at the Brookhaven Assembly. I do not believe that we can overestimate the value of such gatherings."

Mr. E. O. Harbin, recreational and culture executive from the Nashville office, says:

"Regarding your Assembly, the thing that sticks out in my memory is that we had there a fine group of young people who played the game Epworth League Style."

FROM MOUNT PLEASANT, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Mount Pleasant work has prospered this year, with a good revival at all four churches. The pastor has visited and prayed with the people, and has preached more than 200 sermons on the work, and, during the revival season, at other places. I have been in all the meetings on the circuit, and accompanied him to Sessums, where he assisted Rev. J. R. Jones in a fine meeting there.

We have a fine Sunday school at Mount Pleasant. It is increasing in interest since the consolidated school was opened. There are on this work two Woman's Missionary Societies, two Junior Missionary Societies, and one Young People's Missionary Society.

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Lewis, held our fourth quarterly meeting at Marshall's Institute on the 29th of September. He preached a great sermon. We had a nice dinner at church, and the occasion was a deligthful one. The people asked for the return of the pastor, and we all want Brother Lewis for our presiding elder. He has made a good one.

New Salem held a church conference Sunday. Their salary will all be paid; the other churches will pay out also.

My husband is so busy getting his collections and rounding up for Conference that I am writing this while he is at his work on the circuit. I am sure that our Conference will be a good one. Sardis District will have a better report this year than last year. Practically all the folks out of the church on Mount Pleasant circuit that were old enough joined the church last year. They said during the meetings that they were still enjoying religion. The churches are taking on new life, and we are praying that all the members will reconsecrate their lives to God.

We had Rev. G. C. Gregory and family with us at Mount Pleasant the second week in September. The people enjoyed Brother Gregory's preaching. He got sick and Mr. Graves had to finish the meeting. Brother Gregory served this work for four years previous to our coming. He has a great many friends here. People from every church heard him preach during the meeting. The Woman's Missionary Society are running the prayer meeting at Mount Pleasant. It was started the next Sunday after the meeting closed. It is growing in interest every week.

AFTER BABY WAS BORN

Back Weak and Painful. Mrs. Miller Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rotan, Texas.—"I am writing to let you know how I have been benefited by taking your medicine. After my second baby was born my back was weak and hurt me continually, so I thought I'd try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I had read so much about where it had helped so many women. I had been bothered with my back for over a year, and it would hurt me until I could not do my work, which is keeping house for three and cooking and washing dishes. I tell all my friends if they have any kind of female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. You may use this testimonial if it will help any one."—Mrs. C. R. MILLER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 76, Rotan Texas.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 121,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

FROM ZACHARY, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just closed a six days' revival meeting. Our church was quickened into a more abundant life and power. The preaching was done by Rev. L. W. Cain, of Franklinton, La. As an evangelistic preacher Brother Cain is equal to any, and far superior to many. He fearlessly speaks the whole truth in love. He did my church more real good than a long drawn out "announcement" with a gathering in of many sinners as is often the case.

T. J. WARLICK.

WILLIAM HENRY LEDBETTER.

William Henry Ledbetter was born Dec. 25, 1834, in Anderson County, S. C. At the age of 17 he moved to the adjoining State of Georgia, and was one of the many splendid citizens of the generation now rapidly passing away which Georgia gave to compose the excellent citizenry of Central North Louisiana. Brother Ledbetter was married to Miss Mary Eliza Powledge, of Merriwether County, Ga., Nov. 14, 1860, and from the union there were born two daughters, both now deceased, Mrs. Lula Whitehead and Mrs. Mollie Harris; and four sons, all now living, W. R. Ledbetter, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter of Arcadia, E. Ledbetter and M. J. Ledbetter.

After the death of his first wife he was married Dec. 12, 1881, to Miss Emma Goodwyn, of Lincoln Parish, La., and to them were born three daughters, Mrs. Annie May Glasspool, Miss Laura Ledbetter and Mrs. Mildred Ferguson, and two sons, Roy and P. R. Ledbetter. All of them are now living except Roy, who died in infancy.

Brother Ledbetter, at an early age, professed faith in Jesus by uniting with the Methodist church, to which he remained loyal, since he always regarded her catholic doctrines as the best expression of Christian truth. His father was a Methodist preacher, and there were also Methodist preachers in the family connections of his mother and first wife. One need not wonder that all his children have a preference for Methodism, and that one of his sons is a Methodist preacher.

He was a veteran of the Civil War, and passed through the trying experience of the Reconstruction period in the South.

In the year 1890 he suffered severe financial reverses, and though still with a growing family to provide for, gave up nearly all his property to partly meet his obligations, then bravely labored hard and finally, after nineteen years, succeeded in paying the last dollar of indebtedness, and was very happy in the outcome.

During a period of several years, perhaps as the result of his reverses, he did not live up to his full spiritual privileges, but after a severe attack of pneumonia in the year 1903, that almost proved fatal, and during which it was the writer's pleasure to minister to him as pastor in Homer, he was spiritually restored. While he did not take as prominent a part in public religious exercises as he might have done, yet he was faithful to the end.

Among the qualities that evidenced his sterling character was his marked respect for womanhood and the purity of his life and thought. He was always strictly temperate, and with a good physical constitution might have lived even longer had he not contracted disease while visiting in the Northwest. He had native humor and was fond of a clean joke. He was a lover of good literature and could converse well on current issues. He had also a remarkable memory.

The end came at Alexandria, La., on May 28, 1924. Through his life he had had an instinctive dread of death, but this fear was entirely removed before he passed away, and he said, "I am not afraid of death." His loved ones lament his loss, but at the same time rejoice in hope.

By his own request the body was interred in Simsboro, La.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT IS A PREACHER WORTH?

The following figures, taken from the American Labor Year Book for 1924, give the daily wages of those belonging to the Building Trades Union in New York for 1923: Bricklayers, $12; bricklayers' laborers, $8; carpenters, $10; cement masons, $10; cement and concrete laborers, $7.20; portable engineers, $12; plumbers, $10; plasterers, $12; plasterers' laborers, $8.50.

We would not say that these workmen receive too much for their labors; but we do say that what they do is certainly not worth more to the community than the labors of those who give themselves wholly to the preaching of the gospel. Bricklayers and carpenters and plasterers and the like are engaged in building houses in which people may live and work; preachers are engaged in making people fit to live and work in these houses. Both from the nature of the material worked with and from the nature of the work, the preacher's work is harder, more exacting, and infinitely more important than the carpenter's work. The jewel is of more value than the casket that contains it. A preacher is worth as much as a carpenter.

NO UNION BETWEEN ANGLICANISM AND ROMANISM.

A good deal is said from time to time concerning the possibility of a reunion between the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church. That there is no probability of such reunion may be gathered from the following words of Dean Inge, of St. Paul's, perhaps the most famous and most influential of English churchmen, as reported by the Churchman:

"The Reformation aimed at a return to the Christianity of the Gospels. In this it only partially succeeded; but it stripped off most of the accretions under which we lay smothered, accretions which do not belong to Christianity at all, but to the immemorial superstitions of the Mediterranean races. Protestantism realized that Christ stood in the prophetic, not in the priestly succession, and that his teaching about worship was much the same as that of Micah. * * * This moral and spiritual creed, individualistic and universalist, but not sectarian or political, enriched by the Pauline and Johannine Christ-mysticism, is enough for Protestants. It is irreconcilable with Catholicism as it exists in the Roman Church. * * * I respect all sincere convictions; but it is necessary to tell some of our rulers plainly that the majority of Anglicans have no more wish to be 'reconciled' with the Pope than with the Grand Lama. In plain language, we won't have it at any price."

PLEASE STATE REASONS.

Dear Brother Carley: In the Advocate of Oct. 9 you published the following editorial paragraph:

"Will Unification Cure Overlapping?

"Those who are opposed to the pending plan of unification base their opposition in part upon the contention that it will not cure the evil of overlapping work between the two churches. In support of that contention, they say that the plan nowhere specifically provides for the doing away with the setting up of altar against altar. It would seem to be sufficient answer to this objection to say that the cure of this very evil was one of the main causes leading to the adoption of the plan. Surely the plan will work toward the accomplishment of one of the main purposes that brought it into being!"

Now, I am one of the objectors to whom you refer. Your answer, which you assert "would seem to be sufficient," does not satisfy us, because it furnishes no proofs. Indeed, your reply is exactly what I was taught to call, "begging the question." It is merely declaring that to be true which is the real question under discussion. Yet that is the only reply that has been offered to our very rational objection.

BISHOP W. N. AINSWORTH,
President of the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Annual Conferences.

Now, may I ask, not in the spirit of controversy, but for the help of those sincere objectors who have not been able to discover them, that you please point out to us clearly from the plan itself those provisions which give assurance that the "evil of overlapping work between the two churches" and "the setting up of altar against altar" will be effectually cured by the adoption of this plan?

This will be a great kindness to those of us who sincerely desire to do what is best for the cause of the Master, but have failed to discover in the plan any such reasonable assurances as you must see; and it will go a long way toward ending debate.

Sincerly your friend,

H. M. ELLIS.

Brookhaven, Miss.

In compliance with the above request of Brother Ellis, we cheerfully give the grounds upon which we base our belief that the pending plan of unification will cure the evil of overlapping work between the two churches and do away with the setting up of altar against altar.

1. This very evil of overlapping work and the setting up of altar against altar was, as is generally recognized one of the main reasons leading to negotiations looking toward unification. It is a reasonable presumption, therefore, that the cure of this evil would be one of the definite aims of the negotiations.

2. With this as one of the main purposes in mind, the Commissioners necessarily had to draw their plan accordingly. They would not—could not—have proposed and overwhelmingly adopted a plan which, in their opinion, would not solve this difficulty—cure this evil.

3. The plan itself, in Article I, specifically declares that the two churches shall be united in one church. This means, if it mean anything, that all occasion, need, or desire for overlapping work, setting up altar against altar, is removed. The united church certainly would not act other than as one organization.

4. The plan, in Article V, Section 2, paragraph 8, gives the General Conference of the united church the power to provide for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions in the United States from one Jurisdiction to the other. The conditions upon which these transfers are to be made are not worked out in the plan, but they are definitely assigned to the General Conference for its action.

5. Those who favor the adoption of the plan believe it provides for doing away with overlapping; certainly, many of these will be members of the first General Conference of the united church, and it will be "up to them" to propose and advocate the adoption of such provisions for transfers as will result in the doing away with overlapping work, the setting up of altar against altar.

6. Those who have opposed the plan, some of whom in all probability will be members of the first General Conference of the united church, will insist that such provisions be adopted as will

ADDRESS BY BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR., AT THE UNVEILING OF THE ASBURY MEMORIAL STATUE.

When in the future days our children shall walk up this broad avenue and shall come face to face with this man on horseback, their attention will be immediately arrested, for this rider and this horse are like unto none of our great country. There are horses as large, as strong, as well built, horses with rearing head, with flashing eye in the very act of rushing to the charge. And on these horses there are seated great generals with sword in scabbard, or with sword unsheathed, waving aloft, beckoning their followers to advance. But this horse is worn and weary, telling the story, written in the pose of its body, of thousands of miles traversed through dense forests and over rugged mountains. And this man on horseback has truly his sword in his hand, but it is "The Sword of the Spirit—the Word of God."

And as the sword in hand proclaims the reason for the monuments to great military commanders, so the reason for the monument to this man is the sword in his hand—the invincible Word of God. That was the weapon used by the Captain of our Salvation in his conflict with the devil. Thrice did he draw that sword from its scabbard and declared, "It is written," and from that writing of God, from that verdict, there was no possible appeal. And so, with this weapon of the Prince of Peace, this man on horseback went forth conquering and to conquer.

If we seek for an adequate explanation of the life of this man, it will be found in a short passage taken from the book which he is clasping in his hand. Doubtless, as the prophet wended his way on the long road, he read over and over again the thrilling record of the Acts of the Apostles, and especially the story of the journeyings of Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles.

And when the road was rough, the swamps were deep, the fords were dangerous, the mountains were high, the sun was hot, or the wind was cold and biting, and there were rain and snow and sleet; when the country was new and hostile Indians were all around; when no shelter was near, not even a cabin; no bed but his cloak; when food was uncertain and coarse and scanty, this man must often have repeated to himself, "In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness, beside those things which come upon me daily, the care of all the churches." As indicated above, the attitude of this Christian hero in all of these varied testing experiences can be explained by one passage: "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, that I may finish my course with joy and the ministry which I have received from the Lord Jesus to testify the gospel of the Grace of God." How that sweeping declaration of loyalty, of unswerving devotion to a great purpose made by St. Paul, must have echoed and re-echoed in the soul of this apostle of the New World! And how accurately, and how adequately it explains the many years of ceaseless endeavor, unchecked, undiminished by any hardship or affliction, until indeed the life itself wore out, given as none too dear a price that he might finish his course with joy!

Why should this man surrender his ease, his comfort, endure hardness and wear away his life? Because Francis Asbury was a good soldier of Jesus Christ. To him the vital, the controlling, the great essential fact in his life was the ever-present leadership of his Master. To him the Kingdom of Heaven was an absolute monarchy. He had a king called Jesus. And he had received his commission directly from the King. And he gladly accepted his Master's own test of genuine love: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." He had heard his Master say, "Follow me," and it was the all-absorbing aim, the consuming purpose, the joy of his life, to follow in His footsteps. It is not an easy way; sometimes it is steep and rocky and thorny, and yonder pathway leads directly through Gethsemane, and into the hall of mocking and scourging, and a little further on the Cross rears itself against the sky, and this earthly life must be laid down. Shall he go that way? Can he not go another, an easier, less rugged, less dangerous and reach that goal? So timid, hesitant, doubting souls may reason. But to the great soul of Francis Asbury there was only one important question: "What way is the Master leading? That way I go." He had heard his Master say, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." "The Son of Man has come to seek and save that which was lost." Had not men been lost, the Son of Man would not have come to seek and to save them. Had not man been lost, there would have been no ministry of Francis Asbury. But he had in his heart the picture of his Lord seeking and saving the lost in every age, in every clime; not the lost Jew, the lost Samaritan, the lost Greek, the lost Roman, the lost Frenchman, the lost German, the lost Anglo-Saxon, the lost American, not the lost white or red man, or black man, or yellow man; not the lost rich man, the poor man, the beggar, the ignorant, the educated, the high or the lowly born; but seeking and saving everywhere all lost men.

Here we have the key to the life of our hero. He had an unwavering, an immovable conviction that a course had been assigned to him by his Lord, a ministry to testify to lost souls the Gospel of the Grace of God. What the carrying of that message, the preaching of that gospel of the grace of God has meant to stabilizing and strengthening the foundations of our great nation in its early days, is known only to God. But as we look to-day upon this monument, the supreme lesson of the hour is that as in the days of Asbury, so to-day our country sorely needs men of conviction, men of vision, men of courage, men of faith, and above all, men of that genuine sacrificial spirit who, recognizing the moral, spiritual needs of those around them, will give themselves unreservedly, whole-heartedly, as did Francis Asbury, to a life of ministration and service for their fellowmen of every race, of every color in every land. And may their number be multiplied a thousand fold as the years go by.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS TO THE CHURCH: ON THE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE BOARD.

In conformity with the policy of the Board of Missions the Executive Committee informs the church of the condition of our missionary operations and the resources by which these operations must be carried on.

Five years ago a carefully made survey of our work in the home and foreign fields revealed urgent need for buildings and re-enforcements that seventy-five years of successful missionary endeavor had made imperative. Prayers for open doors, for laborers for the harvest, and for access to the hearts of unevangelized peoples had been so answered that no doubt could remain that the hand of God was upon us for good. It was shown that the amount required by our very successes was twenty-five millions of dollars for a five-year period of expansion and building, and at the conclusion of that period a doubling of the regular income of the Board in order that the vastly augmented work of the church at home and abroad might be maintained. The Centenary movement, in a wave of spiritual revival, resulted in the pledging of thirty-five millions for the causes represented.

Now at the conclusion of the five-year period of the Centenary we find ourselves with an uncollected balance of $15,000,000 on the total of $35,000,000, and an unpaid balance of $8,000,000 on the minimum askings of $25,000,000; and that, instead of doubling, the income of the Board from collections and specials has actually suffered a decrease of about $250,000 a year.

Until the beginning of the current year, while we realized that our responsibilities were heavy and our way for the future by no means clear, the payments on Centenary pledges during 1923 encouraged the Board to make appropriations of the amounts actually needed for economically sustaining the work and furnishing some sorely needed equipment. This was done in the faith that Centenary payments for 1924 would be at least as large as they had been in 1923. Thus far, after nine months of the year have passed, the yield from the Centenary, even under some pressure for both Home and Foreign General Work, amounts to $614,840, and from all sources to $981,164.79, against a budget for the same nine months period of $2,069,903, showing a shortage of $1,088,738.21. The actual deficit, however, is not so great, for such appropriations as could be deferred remain unpaid.

Beginning the year with a debt carried over from 1923, the outstanding debts of the Board for the Department of General Work now aggregate the huge sum of $1,216,159.67, less bank balances of $147,571.36, annuity notes of $55,677.82 and a loan of $75,000 from the Centenary Commission, or a present indebtedness of $907,910.49.

In the face of the diminished Centenary income we have had no alternative, but have gone on paying the appropriations that the Board had made; and indeed these appropriations are for the most part for actual support of the missionaries, schools, hospitals and settlements that depend solely upon the Board. The Executive Committee had no alternative, but had to authorize the Treasurer of the Board to borrow such sums of money as were necessary in order to save the Board from defaulting in its obligations.

The deficit that the Treasurer's report showed last May has thus risen to the present huge proportions. It will not increase during the remaining three months of the year, as receipts from collections on the assessment and from specials will suffice to defray current needs. But the best that can be expected from these sources cannot save us from the prospect of facing the new year with a debt approximating a million dollars. This means, at the best, that we shall come to the Board meeting of 1925 with a staggering debt unless payments of Centenary pledges and our new Specials are made at least in the measure that was anticipated when the budget was adopted. Should these resources fail, we shall have to beat a retreat from territory now occupied, close schools and hospitals, recall missionaries, say to volunteers who have prepared themselves and are ready to sail, "We cannot send you forth on your divinely appointed mission," and seriously impair the efficiency of our administrative departments by drastic retrenchment.

Will the church consent to this alternative? The church must say. Spontaneous and sacrificial giving of small and large sums alone will enable us to hold our own, to say nothing of advancing. A church on the defensive is as surely beaten as an army.

Will the church respond to the needs of the situation? Only when the church has fasted and prayed. Our prosperity is so great that our luxuries have ensnared us and diminished our sympathies and responsiveness; therefore we must fast and pray. While our benevolences have been coming to want, savings bank deposits have increased by $1,140,000,000; and the total gain in invested wealth of our country was $12,000,000,000. No doubt the members of our church have enjoyed a share in this prosperity. Is God's cause alone to be reduced and embarrassed? A portion of the refund on our income taxes aloue would probably equal our debts.

This statement has been issued by order of the Executive Committee in order that the church may know the facts and share the responsibility for keeping our work for the cause of missions from disaster. Far from desiring to conceal any part of our missiouary situation from you, we desire that you may be most fully acquainted with it, and, indeed, a reading of the annual report will lay before you such au exhibit of vast evangelistic, eleemosynary, medical and educational work, as doubtless will cause the church to say in most concrete terms: "They shall not be weakened or abandoned."

THE SPECIAL OFFER.

We call particular attention to the "Special Offer," appearing on page nine of this issue of tho Advocate. That offer is to send the Advocate to new subscribers from now until January 1, 1926, for $2. Those who take advantage of the offer at once will get the paper full fourteen months for the price of a year's subscription. They will get the full account of the proceedings of our patronizing Conferences this year and next, and in the meantime they will have the opportunity of becoming fully informed concerning the vital issues before the church. The question of unification will be voted on by the Annual Conferences in 1925—and both sides of the question will be fully presented in the Advocate. Now is the time to subscribe for the Advocato.

POPULAR OR UNPOPULAR PREACHERS.

By Rev. Frank B. Hill.

Dear Brother Carley: In one of your recent instructive and interesting editorials, you say there are three different sorts of preachers. You might safely add two others—those who are popular and those who are failures. Or do you include those two with the other three?

I have a sermon subject, "Jesus Christ's Failure as a Preacher;" when you are short of material and the unification articles are finished and you think it worth while, I will rewrite it for you. I do not say that in the spirit of the young preacher at our Annual Conference in Baton Rouge, presided over by the saintly Bishop Hoss, who had called the name of this preacher to give his report. In answer to his name he stood up and said: "Well, Bishop, I think that I have preached some mighty fine sermons this year." With a merry twinkle in his eye the Bishop stopped him by saying: "Brother, I would like to hear what your stewards have to say about that; but give us a report of your work."

Recently my attention has been called by the Rev. R. H. Brown, of the Wesleyan ministry, to a very interesting series of answers to a question the Methodist preachers used to ask themselves when they met in conference in Wesley's time. One of the set questions was: "How shall we avoid popularity? We mean such esteem or love from the people as is not for the glory of God." To this question five answers are given in the first four of the six editions of the Large Minutes published in Wesley's time: "1. Earnestly pray for a piercing sense of the danger there is, and the sinfulness of it. 2. Take care how you ingratiate yourself with any people by slackness of discipline. 3. Or by any other method which another preacher cannot follow. 4. Warn the people among whom you are most, of esteeming or loving you too much. 5. Converse sparingly with those who are particularly fond of you." Picture those earnest preachers in solemn conclave wondering how to avoid popularity!

Applause is so pleasant, so exhilaratingly intoxicating, a draught that having experienced it once, it is human to desire it again. Popularity is sinful when it has been sought for its own sake; but when it has been honorably sought, how dangerous? I will not answer those questions, but leave it for your readers.

There is no disgrace in being popular, yet no true servant of God will ever adopt any method or mode whose result will be just to increase the amount of his applause, but no preacher is doing his duty who does not strive with all his powers so to present his message that his fellows will be attracted to hear him proclaim the counsel of God. A preacher is not a minstrel; he is a courier with a message to proclaim. Occasionally one comes across a preacher who contemns all popularity. They may thank God that they were not born in Jewry and called to be Rabbis, for the Jews had a summary way with preachers whom it was not a pleasure to hear. The Talmud says concerning preachers: "He must be meek, and even humble; every act of his life should testify to his worth, and withal if his hearers do not like his preaching he is to desist from it." And again another passage says: "A man never so learned should not preach, if his preaching is not agreeable to his audience."

Jesus is loved, remembered, followed to-day not because he was popular or unpopular, but because, through good report and ill, he never turned back, but went straight forward, and finished the work God gave him to do. That is what we are all here for. Praise or blame, censure or applause are not things that wise men will underestimate. Dr. Johnson never forgot the debt he owed to Bishop Warburton because "he praised me at a time when praise was of value to me." We must be respectful toward criticism and learn to say, as Cromwell said, "It is possible we were mistaken."

We are here to do our duty when it is revealed to us; and what matters to all good men is a clear, quiet consciousness of the "well done" which God whispers in the ear of all his good and faithful servants. Hugh Walpole says in his book, "Fortitude," "It is not life that matters; it is the spirit we bring ot it." And it is R. L. S. who says that "all who have meant good work have done good work, though they have died before they had time to sign it." How your readers will agree with those two quotations, I leave.

Bishops, elders, preachers, laymen are all exposed to criticism, or to what Henry Van Dyke calls in his work, Companionable Books, re Charles Dickens and his success, "the damning nature of popularity." We all live in a very small world, some of us in smaller communities than others, where people are interested in people and in very little else. Gossip, scandal, praise and blame eddy around the most obscure life. The most insignificant of us have some little circle within which we are discussed, and where praise and blame, for what they are worth, are measured out to us. Yet when a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him. When a man is "filling his pulpit," when his collections are large and pews are full, it is no guarantee he is successful; nor when the collections drop off and the pews are not so very full is it proof he is a failure. There is some applause that damns the man, a liking for a ministry that crushes a minister. What was it that Jesus wanted? "To see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

An artist stood before a great painting the creation of a master. His eyes were a dream, his face aglow with admiration, his soul enhanced with beauty. One whose eyes were blind to all the exquisite shades of light and color paused beside the artist for a brief minute, then said "I see nothing in that." The other replied, "Don't you wish you could?"

"Don't you wish you could?" Spirit must answer to spirit. None so blind as those seeing see not, and hearing hear not. Spiritual truths must be spiritually discovered. Out the mix and moil of modern life come some of the grossest, most blatant forms of infidelity and atheism. It is propagated by votaries of Satan who assume the wisdom of the ages and are superficial as the scum on a swill tub. Either willfully or ignorantly misinterpreting and perverting the Bible, they indeed wrest Scripture to their own destruction, and earnest, fair minded students of God's Holy Book wonder at their insensate lack of understanding and vision. With some pretense toward learning and culture and of some repute in the literary world, they drag their loathsome shallow systems through the pages of some current magazines and openly attack the fundamental principles of our present-day civilization. Apparently with no vision or appreciation of the majesty, beauty, and holiness of God and the undeniable graces—brotherhood, kindness, charity, hope, joy, peace—of Christianity, they besmear the printed page with their shallow, hostile lubrications. What the motive is behind all this outbreak of unbelief and enmity to Christianity is, I cannot imagine, unless it be an immoral, sinful life or an abnormal development of egoism, blind and dead, root and branch. Surely the devil, whose very home and being they deny, is leading them captive at his will and they are hooting while being led. It is a puzzle to me why decent, and I presume somewhat respectable men, are so insensible to the outstanding fact that the Christian faith has, again and again, rescued the race from barbarism and is really the only force in the world to-day that makes life livable, and holds men in social and civil relation that they can be guilty of such folly.

Some belong to the church, others act as though the church belonged to them. There is vast difference in being owned and owning. Free will, moral agency, personal responsibility are "mighty close kin" to real liberty. The right or principle to defend any action relating to the polity of the church, especially if this action has been carried out by the regularly elected delegates from the Annual Conferences to the General Conference, differs widely from the assumed right to criticize harshly and even denounce the same. If our church has a polity and no well informed Methodist I presume will deny it has—the power and authority for carrying on this polity and executing its decisions are surely lodged in its Conferences. And the General Conference, composed of legally elected delegates, is the voice of the body. All other self-constituted bodies, whether laymen or ministers, are extra cathedra, and assume that the church belongs to them, an assumption that to my mind, to say the least of it, is a source of confusion and unrest. If as a loyal Methodist one has stood before her altar and assumed the vow "to support her institutions," surely the form of church government under which we now live is no small part of said institutions. So I for one am willing for the men we have elected, and will further elect, to decide the question of unification of the two great bodies of Methodism, and not to dishonor them—our representatives—through distrust and suspicion. So, brother, whoever you or your associates are, please appeal to me from a legally constituted body or committee within the church duly recognized by custom and authority of our book of Discipline, and I will gladly give you a hearing. But please don't bother me otherwise. I am a Methodist, with the emphasis on the method. I belong to the church.

IMMORTAL MONUMENTS.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

Not long ago I attended the dedication of Munger Bowl, a new athletic stadium on the campus of Birmingham-Southern College. The field was formally opened by Governor Brandon in the presence of his staff, a former Governor, distinguished leaders in church and State, and a mighty concourse of ten thousand people.

It was a great occasion, but it meant much more than the mere opening of an athletic field. It commemorated the faith and works of two distinguished philanthropists of our church. It once more illustrated the fact that gifts to the cause of Christian Education are immortal investments which pay large dividends in character, achievement, and world advancement.

The Munger Bowl was the gift of Mr. R. S. Munger, who, by the way, attached to his subscription the tender condition that for all time to come "all little boys under 12 years old with clean faces" should be admitted free to the grounds. This stadium, however, is but one of the munificent gifts which this good man and his wife bestowed upon the college.

For several years they stood behind the administrative expenses of the institution. They gave $55,000 in cash for the Munger Bowl. They gave $100,000 to the endowment fund. They endowed the chair of English.

Mr. Munger passed away several months ago. His wife, Mrs. Mary Collett Munger, who followed him to the grave on the 1st of September, 1924, wrote in her will a final gift of $250,000 for the erection of a great auditorium and adminisration building.

Thus the gifts of this devout couple to Christian Education totaled nearly half a million dollars. Nor was this all, for they left in the hearts of their manly sons a love for this cause as intense as that which actuated the parents.

During the past four years, since the coming of Dr. Guy E. Snavely to the presidency, other philanthropists than Mr. and Mrs. Munger have turned their attention to Birmingham-Southern College as a field of service. Mr. W. H. Stockham, well known as a leading layman everywhere among our people, made a gift of $100,000 to the endowment fund and for the erection of a president's home, and Major M. Paul Phillips gave $50,000 for the erection of a library.

Now let us notice some of the immediate effects of these gifts to Christian Education.

In 1921, about the year these benevolences began, this institution was serving 220 students—boys and girls. In 1922 this number increased to 384, and the following year 564 young men and women sought the benefits of the institution.

Additional funds enabled the college to establish a Summer School and to make a most interesting and valuable extension of its service by establishing Saturday and evening classes for teachers and others who were unable to attend the dally lectures.

At the present time this college enrolls 502 boys and 240 girls in its regular classes, and of these 742 young people, 285 are in the Freshman class. It serves 250 in the Saturday and evening classes. Last summer, instruction was given to 517 persons in the Summer School. Thus it serves this year really 1500 students solely in the arts and sciences. It has in an incredibly short space of time come to be one of the largest colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. None of its advances could possibly have been made without the large benefactions it has received.

If we want tangible results in real service to the largest number of persons, we will experience difficulty in duplicating the immediate returns on these investments in Christian Education.

Be it remembered, however, that these immediate returns are as nothing compared with the service which these gifts will render through all the future. There will never be a time when they cease to reflect honor upon the memory of those who made them. Through all the future, trained men and women will march out from the college to lead the affairs of society, each of them the product of these investments.

This is an element which ordinary forms of benevolence do not possess. Much charity, as in the case of gifts to paupers, actually perpetuates the problem it purports to solve. But gifts to Christian Education have a tendency to solve all social problems by producing Christian leaders who will eventually create a new world for us. Nothing is quite so fundamental as this. And it is to be hoped that in every section of our church philanthropists will arise who will pour their wealth into this vital channel.

Gifts to the cause of Christian Education build immortal monuments to the honor of those who make them. They are investments which cannot be swept away; they pay their dividends forever in terms of Christian character and manhood. And he who produces a leader of m .n does the best that can be done for his country.

A CLOSING MESSAGE.

To the People Called Methodists, Greenville District,-Greetings:

The Conference year is touched by the shadows. The evening of my official relation appears. The record, good or bad, will soon be history. Without exception, the charges that have used system are in good condition. Without exception, the charges that have delayed, procrastinated, are against the old, old, old problem—trying to do a year's work in a few weeks. The pity, the tragedy of it!

An Observation—Where finances drag, all the machinery of the church runs poorly. No pastor can function at best among a people who are indifferent to their obligations; and such a people will lose interest, become irregular in their attendance at church, and probably ask for a change of pastors.

Another Observation—The further behind a church gets, and the nearer Conference, the more complaint one will hear of overassessments, hard times, inability to pay. Such a situation distresses good stewards, makes poor ones "mad." It is a situation as unholy as it is unnecessary. Not a single charge in the district need fear "short reports" if they begin even now. A delay of thirty days will be fatal in some cases.

An indifferent steward is of doubtful value to church or community. For a church to have to depend on a man who is himself indifferent and unconcerned, is all but fatal. A steward represents the integrity of his church, to a large extent the success of his pastor, and very definitely the ability of his presiding elder to care for the charge. If God and his church are given first place, yea, if they are given an equal place in our affairs this fall, the Greenville District will show level columns.

Don't try to cross the unification bridge till you get to it. Discuss it, get all the information you can, stand for what you deem wisest and best, but don't handicap your elder, embarrass your pastor, discount yourself by falling down on church finances and charging it to your Imagination.

You will have a new presiding elder next year. The four years I have spent with you have been very happy ones to me. Bickering and strife have been all but unknown. Petty problems have not seriously dlsturbed. I leave the district without the slightest trace of ill will against a single human being. Not a single individual has been guilty of the slightest discourtesy. Help me help you this fall. I want to help. I will do it if you will let me.

I thank you, my brethren, clerical and lay, for courtesies innumerable, hospitality unbounded, consideration generous beyond my desert, and co-operation that has made glad my heart many times. I like the delta, love her people, believe in her future, and pray for the success of our Zion. Let no lean thing rob you of your fatness. May every charge know the joy of real sacrifice, the fine self-respect of level columns, the deep peace of definite spirituality. May the grace of God so appear that a cheery optimism drive grounchiness and doubtful disputation far from you.

May you know the leadership of the great Head of the church through good and evil report.

With love, appreciation, and great expectation with reference to final reports,

Cordially and fraternally,

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

THE CALL TO PRAYER.

By Dr. A. C. Zumbrunnen.

The 2,500,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are called to give themselves to prayer and intercession, Nov. 16-23, 1924. The observance of the Week of Prayer is entirely optional and voluntary, but it is sincerely hoped that every church and every member will grant the request of the Board of Missions in this regard. All pastors are earnestly requested to call and urge upon their members their high privilege and duty in this respect.

No formal program has been prepared for the Week of Prayer. Each church may observe the Week as best fits its particular conditions. It is suggested, however, that on Sunday, Nov. 16, special consideration be given to home missions; that at the mid-week prayer service special prayer be made for a revival and a quickening of the missionary spirit of our members, and that on Sunday, Nov. 23, the emphasis be placed on our foreign mission work. On the last date it is urged that a free-will offering, a thank offering, a sacrificial offering be taken for the work of the Board of Missions, General Work. This offering is also voluntary. There are to be no subscriptions or pledges taken. Only a free-will or thank offering.

Each member is requested to study carefully our present missionary situation, our wonderful opportunities, our overwhelming responsibilities, the large blessing which God has given us during the year, and then give what he or she is moved to after careful thought and earnest prayer—to make an offering unto God to be used to bring knowledge of his love to all mankind as expressed in his gift of Jesus Christ as Savior of the world.

A series of articles will be found in this paper from week to week setting forth some phases of our missionary work, some of our church's opportunities, some of its responsibilities, and what the prospects are of the Board of Missions meeting them. These articles should be read in order that prayer may be made by all for specifically the same thing at the same time.

Why this call for a Week of Prayer and intercession for missions? What is its purpose? The Week of Prayer and missionary offering was launched by the Board of Missions, General Work, in order to get the matter of missions, home and foreign, very much on the minds and hearts of our people; to get them better acquainted with what is being done and what needs to be done; to let the church know how many and insistent the calls are for entering new fields and enlarging the work in the fields in which we are already operating; how that many volunteers are ready to go and can't be sent; that unless the church give more liberally to the support of our missionary enterprises than at present, both at home and abroad, the Board will have to begin retrenchment—closing some of the stations, recalling some of the missionaries, and that in the face of the fact that God has opened for us a thousand new doors in answer to our prayer, and that thousands of our choice young people have answered our call to enter them.

The call to prayer is primarily a call to our church to its knees in behalf of missions. It is hoped that thereby the seeming sag in interest may be removed and a great quickening may take its place. The missionary enterprise is the primary one of the church. It should be the same for every member of it. It is hoped that the Week of Prayer will make it such. That is why it has been launched. That is why the call is sent out. Shall not every Southern Methodist observe it? Let 2,500,000 Methodists again go to their knees a week for world evangelization and Christianization. Then, and only then, will it do its share in this respect.

OUR CHURCH'S OPPORTUNITY AND CRISIS IN BRAZIL.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

Reports recently coming to us of a revolution in the city of Sao Paulo call keenly to our interest. Our great compound in that city was in the very midst of the contested zone. A letter from one of our missionaries says: "The fighting and shelling have been confined almost entirely to our section of the city the last seven days. Three days ago our consul advised us to flee. The day we left our homes was the worst day any of us had ever passed through. Our Central Church is a refugee station and Red Cross hospital, and on this day it seemed to be the object of the Federal forces' wrath. Eigh shells fell right around the church, but I am glad to tell you not one struck it. One fell just in front of the church, and a piece of it went into a window of the Lee home."

In this compound in Sao Paulo is a publishing house that is the best printing plant supported by any denomination in South America, printing Christian literature for all the Boards; a great church that they say is the best Protestant church in South America, and built largely by Brazilians; a bishop's residence next door; two splendid residences for missionaries—all in one compound, and this is only a part of our physical plant in the city of Sao Paulo.

Then there are the colleges, beginning with Granbery, poorly equipped, all through its history, but by the Centenary furnished with all the land she needs, nearly all the buildings, and running over with students, entering a new era of prosperity; the new institution on the great bluff overlooking Porto Alegro with a building completed; a third college at Campinas, in the Central Conference, with a splendid site purchased with Centenary money, the foundations laid, a school projected, and waiting for funds to go ahead. In addition, there are day schools and high schools for boys and girls by the score.

Perhaps in no field has church building gone forward more rapidly, or was more needed at the beginning of the Centenary. In one district the presiding elder told the secretary that he hoped to build thirty-five churches before the end of the Centenary period. Fifty or sixty churches have been erected, nine of these away out in the wilderness to the northwest of Sao Paulo.

The Sunday school work in Brazil is especially promising. Every church, besides its own Sunday school, which is usually conducted on Sunday morning, the preaching service being held in the evening, has its own mission school. The story of Sunday school extension work in Rio, or that in Uraguayana, or in almost any one of our cities, would read like a story of apostolic times.

Last year, away down in Rio Grande do Sul, there was an evangelistic campaign of the Conference that in preparation and the carefulness of its organization, and the fruits reported at the end of the campaign, suggested that wonderful movement in Korea. This and other good drops before the shower foretell the coming of revival refreshing to all our work in Brazil.

If we are not to let slip and lose our great opportunity in Brazil, there probably was never a time when our leaders more needed the backing of the church at home, not only its money, and that is needed, but its sympathy, its intelligent appreciation of the task, its continual intercession, more especially for leaders at this crucial moment, that they may have vision and courage and patience to bring the work in Brazil into a great religious awakening in that country.

PEANUTS VERSUS ORPHANS.

By Laird Archer.

"We are spending too much for relief—we can't afford it."

A man of large business affairs said this to me when I told him what I had seen recently in the Near East. He is a wise man. Certainly he knows business conditions. Therefore I thought he must be right. Possibly we can't afford it—foreign markets are upset—farm values are not what they ought to be—collections are slow. I became concerned. I began to investigate. Had we overspent ourselves on refugee children? I brushed aside the Biblical philosophy that he who gives prospers in the end—no idealism, only cold facts.

Fact No. 1 surprised me. Government figures showed that we paid thirty-three million dollars in a year's time for—peanuts!

Thirty-three million—and I had been dubious about ten million for the lives of orphan boys and girls.

But I wasn't convinced. We need peanuts. They are food. University figures rate peanut butter as one of the necessities of life.

I went further. It took a hundred and seventy thousand people working hard to keep us supplied with corsage bouquets and dinner flowers we demanded last year. Goodness knows what we paid for the flowers. A florist explained the other day that coal conditions were the reason I had to pay more than I used to for half a dozen roses. But flowers are necessary.

And if it has to be orphans or flowers—as compared with a lusty, travel worn, foot-sore orphan a beautiful, fragrant flower may be preferable, although it cost more per half dozen than would feed that boy for a month.

I looked on. We spent sixteen million dollars in a year for paper flowers.

Paper? No fragrance—no life?

Only color! And I thought of the need for color in the cheeks of a child I saw in Syria.

However, color is necessary in our drab lives.

I found that we made up for what the paper flowers lacked by fifty million dollars' worth of perfumery. That was the value of smelling stuff made for Americans last year.

But perfumery is necessary in the city's congestion of choking fumes.

Then I found that we spent $115,000,000 in the year for pictures of ourselves. In these "hard" times we still must have ourselves photographed. That is right. Photographers must have work. Our friends must have pictures.

But I had a picture in my mind of a lean lad fresh from a period of starvation getting out of Turkey and weakly trying to learn how to make shoes in an American orphanage at Beirut. I wondered what kind of a picture of him in a year's time would be produced by the saving of a few pictures of each photographed American.

After that I learned that the plumes of our hats cost us $16,000,000. Thinking again of my manufacturer friend, I agreed that the plumes were necessary—although I'm inclined to believe that the best feather in our hat last year was the ten million invested in young lives.

I went on, through the list of necessities as compared with unnecessary orphans.

We spent $93,000,000 for regalia and society badges.

I prize my lodge and my fellow-lodgemen, and I am honored by the badge I wear, although I might have paid less to the jeweler and got a less expensive one. This led me back irresistibly to the white star badge of Near East Relief I saw on the arms of women and men toiling to rescue children on the Anatolia frontier.

We invested fifty-two million in chewing gum.

We are chewing thirty-five million dollars more of it than we were in 1914.

It took sixty-two factories and nearly four thousand busy people to keep us supplied.

They also need the work.

But I couldn't forget the boy I saw chewing a black crust of bread that the average American boy would throw to the winds.

Twenty-three million for sports—two hundred and nine million for ice cream and confectionery—but why go farther?

The money is spent.

Is there more? Have we anything left for boys?

We paid $15,000,000 alone for pocketbooks in which to carry our earnings for 1923.

How about a few million for children?

The Home Circle

WITHOUT MOTHER!

"Its awful lonesome at our house
'Thout mother;
It's just as quiet as a mouse
'Thout mother.
An' father looks so lonely there
Of evenin's, sittin' in his chair;
It just ain't cheerful anywhere
'Thout mother!

"It's awful hard to get along
'Thout mother;
It seems that everything goes wrong
'Thout mother.
'Course, father does the best he can;
But then, you know, he's just a man,
An' don't know how to fix an' plan
Like mother.

"Seems like I don't enjoy my play
'Thout mother;
Things just get worse every day
'Thout mother!
There's no one now to mend my doll,
Nobody's sorry when I fall—
O, home, just ain't no place at all
'Thout mother!

"But father says we must be brave
'Thout mother;
'Cause him an' me, we only have
One 'nother.
An' if we're brave, an' strong, an' true,
An' good, just like she told us to,
We'll go up home, when life is through, to mother!"

THE GIRL IN SILK.

By J. L. Glover.

"Mother, I just can't stand that new girl!" And with these words Kitty threw her books on the table and herself into the Morris chair with a flounce, which emphasized her sharp statement.

"What new girl? And what harm has she done my little daughter?" asked Mrs. Preston, with a reproving shake of her head at her vehement little girl.

"It's those people who have just come to that old brown house at the foot of the hill," explained Kitty, taking breath. "There's a girl about my age—Madge, her name is. She came to school today, and she's just as proud as can be, mamma. You ought to see the clothes she wears to school; the prettiest dark blue silk, trimmed with plaid, and silk stockings, and such a lovely coat—gray, trimmed with fur. She's real stuck-up about her fine clothes."

"But how did you know she was stuck-up?" asked mother, with interest.

"Oh, she wouldn't speak to Leila and me at recess—just walked by with her head in the air."

"And did you and Leila speak to her, and ask her to join in your play? Remember she is a stranger, and you ought to make the first advances."

"But, mother, we couldn't go with young ladies dressed in silk."

"Perhaps she would rather have had on gingham, too, and had a good time," suggested mother. "It is never safe to judge too hastily, little daughter, unless you know all."

Kitty looked unconvinced, but she said no more. The next day, however, she came in from school triumphantly.

"Now, mother, she is proud, and I'll prove it to you. Lou Allen asked her to go blackberrying with us on Saturday, and she said Madge just looked down at her silk dress, and said, 'I can't go in this, it would be ruined.' So now, don't you see?"

"I see," returned Mrs. Preston, "but now I have a story to tell you in my turn, little daughter. I went to-day to call on Mrs. Lindsey, Madge's mother. She is a sweet-faced woman, very gentle and refined. While she talked to me, she was working on a beautiful dress. She seemed to think that I would be surprised that Madge should have such a handsome dress, for after a while she said very quietly that Madge's aunt in the city sent her daughter Ruth's outgrown dresses to Madge. 'And it is a great help,' she added frankly, 'because otherwise I could hardly afford to dress her suitably for school. I know these dresses are too handsome for our circumstances; and it's a real cross to Madge to have to wear silk and velvet, when her little sisters and I wear calico, and every one knows we are poor. She would rather have ginghams for school wear, but there are shoes and stockings and so many other things to be bought that she will just have to keep on wearing Ruth's outgrown things.' I guess it isn't a very heavy cross," Mrs. Preston ended, smiling, "but I knew, from what you had told me, that it is a cross, and not a light one, sometimes, to a girl to be misjudged by her schoolmates. And you girls haven't helped to make it easy for her, have you?"

Kitty looked ashamed. "I'm sorry, mamma; but how could we have guessed such a thing? I wonder if we could fix it up in some way, without hurting her feelings. I know, mother. You remember that blue gingham of mine that was too short, and I've never worn it. Do you think—"

"I think you might suggest in some nice way to lend it to her to wear blackberrying. Do it in a friendly way, and I don't believe she will take offense."

"I'll try it," promised Kitty.

The next day she sought out Madge at recess, and made friends; and soon they were thoroughly "chummy." Madge proved a congenial spirit, and before long a group of girls were eagerly discussing the blackberrying party that they had planned for Saturday.

"You'll come with us, won't you, Madge?" asked Kitty, as the two girls walked homeward together, after school. "Do come, we'll have such fun."

And this time Madge answered very frankly:

"I'd like to, Kitty, really, but— I know it sounds funny, but I haven't anything to wear but this," looking down at her handsome suit, "and it would be spoiled with the briars. I'll explain to you about it, some time."

"Oh, but what a pity," said Kitty, impulsively. "Of course, you couldn't wear that lovely dress, you want a gingham—something that won't tear, and will wash."

"I know but I haven't one good enough," said Madge.

"Well, but listen, Madge. I have a pretty blue gingham I've never worn. It doesn't fit me but you are just a shade smaller and it would fit you exactly. Please let me lend it to you, and come, Madge. You won't be mad, will you?"

"But suppose it gets torn?" demurred Madge.

"It wouldn't matter. Come, it's all settled. I'll bring it over this afternoon, shall I?"

"Thank you," said Madge, simply. "I'll be glad to go blackberrying, then, Kitty. It was just this stupid old dress that stopped me."

So the next day a merry party of girls went to the blackberry fields, and, getting their pails and baskets full of great, juicy berries, they took the girl in the blue gingham dress into their innermost circle of comradeship.

"We had the best time, mother," said Kitty, that night. "Madge is so nice and she helped everybody pick, and didn't mind whether she had her own basket full or not, and she told funny stories to amuse little Janey when she got tired and began to cry on the way home, and she told us how to play some new games. We wouldn't have had half as much fun without her; to think we called her proud and stuck up!"

"Judge not, that ye be not judged," quoted mother, softly.

"Well, I'll never judge anybody hastily again—that's positive!" said Kitty.

Madge came to school on Monday in a beautiful brown silk plaid, but nobody thought of calling her proud again. She had won her own place in the little world of school.—Exchange.

Many people are always dreading coming troubles. They are well enough now, and well enough off, but they may get sick, or they may become poor, or some other trouble may befall them. A large part of human unhappiness is caused by needless forebodings—dreading ills that never happen. It is a miserable way to live, this looking out into the future and filling it with imaginary shapes of evil. No doubt there are real troubles lying concealed in the future for all of us, but let us not dread to go on with quiet faith, since over us the bow of God's eternal goodness bends!—J. R. Miller.

If you cannot join the army yourself, try to gain a recruit. If you cannot win thousands to Christ as the missionaries do, you can by doing the next thing in the kindest way, redeem one soul for him.—Robert Russell.

cure overlapping, the setting up of altar against altar. Under these circumstances the General Conference, empowered to act, will certainly act.

To recapitulate: One of the main purposes of unification is to do away with the evil of overlapping work, of setting up altar against altar; the pending plan makes the two churches one; the General Conference of the united church is empowered to provide for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions in the United States from one Jurisdiction to the other; those who are supporting the plan declare that these provisions will be made; those who are opposing the plan will insist that these provisions be made.

Upon the grounds cited above, we believe that the pending plan of unification will, in due time, cure the evil of overlapping work, the setting up of altar against altar.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Announcement is made that Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis has retired from the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, after twenty-five years of service.

Three Sunday schools of the Silver Creek charge, Mississippi Conference, observed Children's Week, and all the churches put on the membership campaign. Rev. H. R. McKee is the pastor.

Rev. A. M. Serex, recently graduated from the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, has been appointed assistant pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city. He has entered enthusiastically upon his work.

The fourth annual session of the New Orleans District Standard Training School came to a successful close on Friday night of last week. The number of credits issued was 95—the largest in the history of the school.

Rev. Walt Holcomb preached each afternoon before the Tennessee Conference which was recently held at Columbia, Tenn. Bishop Mouzon has asked Dr. Holcomb to preach daily before the Memphis Conference, which meets in Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 12.

In the Oct. 22 issue of the Daily Democrat-Times, of Greenville, Miss., Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at Greenville, administers a deserved rebuke to Mr. Rupert Hughes for his article, "Why I Quit Going to Church," which appeared recently in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Amendment No. 1 to the Constitution of Louisiana, to be voted on at the general election, Nov. 4, which gives the School Board of New Orleans the authority to make better provision for the financial support of the public schools, has been approved by 77 educational and civic organizations of the city.

The reports at the fourth quarterly conference of the Caledonia circuit, North Mississippi Conference, showed a fine condition throughout the charge. Resolutions highly commending the work of Rev. A. T. McIlwain as presiding elder during the past four years were unanimously adopted by the conference.

The fourth quarterly conference of Grenada station, Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, passed highly commendatory resolutions in connection with the completion of a quadrennium of service by Rev. R. A. Tucker as presiding elder of the district. Brother Tucker and his family have lived in Grenada for eight years, and they are held in the highest esteem by the entire community.

At the recent session of the Pacific Conference, Rev. A. Inman Townsley, who had been pastor of the Institutional Church at Hollister, Calif., was appointed pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, San Bernardino, Calif. San Bernardino is a flourishing city of more than 30,000 people, and St. Paul's is the leading church there. Brother Townsley says: "If ever a people needed unification, that people now lives here in California." Brother Townsley sends his love to the Louisiana brethren.

General Ballington Booth, president of the Volunteers of America, spoke three times in New Orleans last Sunday. A public meeting was held in Jerusalem Temple in the afternoon, which was largely attended. The General was very effective in his presentation of the work in which his organization is engaged. Rev. H. S. Johns, chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, was also a speaker at the afternoon meeting.

The Southern Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is in session in New Orleans this week, Bishop C. L. Mead presiding. The Southern Conference is included in the Denver Area, and is composed of two districts—the Brenham and the San Antonio. Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, M. E. Church, South, has accepted an invitation to conduct one of the evangelistic services during the Conference.

Rev. M. A. Massey, of Harleston, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a very gracious meeting at Salem Camp Ground. Rev. W. C. Swope, general evangelist, of Charleston, Mo., did the preaching. The tabernacle would not accommodate the crowds that came to many of the services. There were 50 or 75 conversions and reclamations, with 14 accessions to the Methodist church and one to the Baptist church. Brother Swope is one of the most powerful preachers of the doctrine of perfect love we have ever heard."

Rev. C. C. Evans, our pastor at Natchez, Miss., writes: "Methodism in the old city of Natchez is growing more loyal as the days go by. Last Sunday was Rally Day with us in the Sunday school and church. More than 100 new people attended Sunday school, many of whom expressed themselves as being delighted and said they were going to continue to come. The attendance on the preaching services, both morning and evening, was good, most of the Sunday school remaining for the morning service. Conference is close at hand. Our report, I am sure, will be up to the usual standard—'Everything in full, Bishop,' or 'level columns.' The man who has the good luck to come this way need not be afraid."

Rev. E. N. Evans, for many years a prominent minister of our church, but in recent years in the local ranks, died of pneumonia in the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., at an early hour on Monday morning of this week. His wife, a son, and two brothers were with him at the end. Brother Evans was a resident of New Orleans, where he had made his home since entering the local ranks of the ministry. He loved the church devotedly, and was active in its work, frequently preaching in the pulpits of the city to the edification of his hearers. Brother Evans had held some of the leading appointments in Arkansas and Louisiana, which he filled with great acceptability. He was an unusually gifted preacher. The editor of the Advocate feels a keen personal sorrow at his going away. The funeral was held in New Orleans on Tuesday. Sincere sympathy is extended to the sorrowing family.

HOME INFLUENCES.

Children should be instructed in all that relates to the movement to restore New Testament Christianity, but all instruction will be in vain without the proper home example. Children are observing. They know full well where our deepest interests lie. Are we always ready to discuss the fashions, the markets, the political situation, but have little to say concerning the business of the King whom we profess to love and serve? Is the news from the front, where our brethren are in the thick of the fight against the common enemy, and in behalf of Christ and his conquering faith, of less interest to us than the baseball scores? Do we fill our homes with secular papers, with their daily recitals of strife and corruption, of crime and folly, and, when we are solicited to subscribe for a religious magazine, excuse ourselves, saying: "We are taking more papers now than we can find time to read"?

We do not wish to inveigh against the secular press, except to say that no kingdom of this world has anything to offer to be compared with that of the Prince of Peace, whose heralds are abroad in the earth to-day and whose glory shall outshine the stars. If, as we profess, we have embarked everything in this kingdom, are we manifesting any great desire to know how it is progressing?

Let us not be deceived. The children know what your ambitions are and ours. Whether we wish it or not, they are daily pitching their lives to the key of our own. Vain is it to hope to arouse the enthusiasm of children for a cause toward which we ourselves maintain a careless and indifferent attitude! Why should they be concerned about a perishing world when father and mother betray but a half-awakened interest in its behalf?—Christian Standard.

SOME SECRETS OF THE SEA.

Luminous fishes are one of the ocean's many interesting features, says L. E. Eubanks in Our Dumb Animals. The mechanism of and reason for a lighting apparatus has long been a subject of scientific investigation. Professor E. Newton Harvey, of Princeton University, has been studying the cypridina, a crab-like creature about an inch long, with oval-shaped body inclosed in a shell much like a clam. It emits a strong bluish light, the source of which Professor Harvey has found to be a relatively large gland located near the mouth. The light is in constant process of manufacture, and the supply is never exhausted.

Professor Harvey tells also of another little fish he discovered in the East Indies. It is about three inches long and carries a large oval of light beneath its eyes. There are two types. One shuts off the light supply when it desires by means of a screen-like eye-lid which can be made to cover the luminous area. In the other type the light-giving organism is revolving, so that its bright side can be turned inward when the fish desires.

Pastors are urged to call attention to the SPECIAL OFFER and to secure new subscriptions. We shall heartily appreciate their co-operation.

This offer applies to NEW subscriptions only. Cash must accompany order.

And this reminds me of what I have read about the large electric skate, a fish so called because it gives out strong electric shocks. A captive skate gave birth to several baby fish, which on the following morning were found snugly ensconced beneath the mother. While the young were near her she could be handled with impunity, for she gave out no shock; but the moment the young were taken away, she resumed the emission of powerful shocks. The obvious conclusion is that the electric skate can control her shocks at will, and that she withheld them on purpose not to injure her young.

"Why," asks one writer, "has Nature been at such pains to equip so many fishes and crabs with illuminating systems which they can turn on and off at will?" Various answers have been given, none of them very satisfactory.

One explanation is that the light serves to attract prey within striking distance, and what lends support to this theory is that some fishes carry their luminous organs on great tentacles hanging down in front of their mouths. Quite contrary to this is the belief, advanced by some investigators, that the light serves to frighten away enemies. Still others say that the luminous spots are identification marks of a species.

On first consideration, the most plausible explanation would seem to be that Nature meant the light to be used as a lantern. We can readily believe that there are dark and dismal depths of the sea in which an illuminator of any kind would be highly helpful.

But in many cases the light-giving organ is so affixed to the sea creature that it could not possibly be of any service to it as a lantern—sometimes on the side of the body. In fact, science has to admit that,thus far, the reason for luminous organs in fish has not been entirely explained. —Central Christian Advocate.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please hand in your reports not later than the second morning (the first day preferable) of the Annual Conference. Make separate check for each claim and note on check what claim it is for. Put no money in. Place report with check, or receipt, in envelope, seal and hand to W. T. Griffin, W. H. Lane, or to me. Mark on outside of envelope, charge and district. Get the latest report blanks from Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn. No blanks will be sent out by the committee.

Conforming to the above requests will greatly facilitate matters for both the auditing committee and the Statistical Secretaries.

T. B. COTTRELL, for Committee.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Crowley Methodist church is looking forward with much interest and pleasure to entertaining the Louisiana Annual Conference. This will make the third time in its history that it has had this opportunity.

It has always been an effort for any church to entertain so many guests, and it will be necessary for us to say at this time that only official delegates will be the guests of the church during Conference. Every home will be occupied, and all visitors will do well to secure accommodations before arrival. Many who are listed, fail to attend because of unforeseen causes, and we will appreciate a letter from you saying you cannot come as soon as you know.

We are looking forward to your coming with delight and profit ALONZO EARLY, Pastor.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 100 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 100 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On Sept. 7, 1924, at her home in Holly Springs, Miss., one of the most consecrated and loyal of Christian women left this life in peace. I write of MISS HATTIE WRIGHT, a faithful member of the Methodist church in that town. Methodism suffered a distinct loss when she went away, for there was such a genuine love in her heart for her Lord and the church of which she was a member. Her father and mother were G. W. and Nannie Harris Wright, of whom she was born March 29, 1860. She leaves three brothers and one sister to mourn her going away—C. H., D. B., and Elliott, and Mrs. R. M. Evans, all of Holly Springs. Miss Hattie joined the Methdist church after she was grown, under the preaching of Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, and from that time she considered herself wholly given to the Lord. Her life was wrapped around the church and its mission. No service was held but that she was there; no new minister came but to be welcomed by her good cheer and friendship. She was a distinct help in the choir, Sunday school, and all other activities of the church. She was buried from the church which she loved so, and gently laid to rest under a wealth of flowers. Her pastor, Rev. C. A. Parks, said the comforting words of ritual and Scripture. We shall hardly see her like again on this earth. May her life inspire us to live closer to the Master to whom she became so willing to go.

A former pastor.
W. R. LOTT.

BROTHER A. G. CROOK was born Dec. 27, 1846, and, after a life of noble service, died Sept. 18, 1924. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. H. Cooley, assisted by Rev. W. J. Dawson, after which the frail body of this noble Christian gentleman was laid to rest beneath a wealth of beautiful flowers in the cemetery at Shiloh church. Brother Crook was married to Miss Fannie Rhodes fifty-four years ago. To this union were born ten children. Surviving him are his beloved wife, Mrs. Fannie Crook, and W. S. Crook, Lumberton, Miss.; W. H. Crook, Jackson, Miss.; J. W. Crook, Lafayette, La.; R. D. Crook, Bogalusa, La.; G. D. Crook, Stephenson, Miss.; C. H. Crook, Bogalusa, La.; and a daughter, Mrs. John Franklin, Pelahatchie, Miss., R. F. D. Two brothers also survive him: W. S. Crook, Brandon, Miss., and Dr. H. L. Crook, Jackson, Miss. Only two sisters are living, Mrs. Jennie Sims, Brandon, Miss., and Mrs. B. W. Brown, Covington, La. Brother Crook was born and lived his entire life near Shiloh Camp Ground, in Rankin County, Miss. In early manhood he gave his life to God and united with the Methodist church at Shiloh, and until his death was faithful to the Master, to the church, to his friends, and to the high ideals of life and service which characterized the career of this fine, clean, Christian gentleman, whose motto was honesty and clean living. As a soldier in the Civil War he was brave and courageous, serving his country well; as a church member his life was above reproach; as a Christian he lived blameless; as a friend he was trusted, honored and loved by all who knew him. We shall cherish his memory till we meet him where eternal spring abides and where true worth shall meet with full reward.

His pastor,
E. H. COOLEY.

To the memory of our friend and co-worker, MRS. C. B. HICKS, whose earthly pilgrimage was over Sept. 22, 1924, we submit this little tribute. She was an honored member of this Society since her residence in Mansfield—eight years. When failing health no longer permitted her active participation in its affairs, her counsel, when sought, was wise in the guidance of the same. She was always deeply interested in the activities of her church, yet so liberal-minded as to love and live in harmony with those of other faiths. To God, she gave worship, obedience and service; to humanity, aid to the distressed and needy. Her service was far-reaching to unobtrusive places, making her memory an inspiration to all and to many young lives, who were, by her, guided to choose their life work. Those who knew her best loved her best. Truly it may be said of her, "She has fought a good fight, she has finished her course, she has kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness." The bloom of her earthly life has fallen, shall only to blossom again in the fragrant garden of God.

WILLIE E. RICKS.
MRS. GEORGE WILSON.

Tuesday morning, May 20, 1924, we laid to rest in the old Ellison graveyard, near Deasonville, Miss., all that was mortal of MRS. J. W. ELLISON, the widow of the late Rev. John W. Ellison, for many years an honored and useful member of the Mississippi Conference. Gentle hands heaped up the mound and laid the flowers beside the spot where nearly thirty years before the body of the beloved husband had been buried; then kindred and friends moved away upon silent feet to leave them there alone beneath the shade of the forest trees, amid scenes familiar to them in the years long gone. She was born not far away, at Ebenezer, the daughter of Alfred G. Rogers and his wife, Rebecca, and here her childhood and youth were spent. Here she was married May 20, 1869, to one of the friends of her youth, now become a young Methodist preacher, and from this spot began the homeless, but happy and useful, itinerant life that ended with her husband's death, Sept. 11, 1895. The later years of her life were spent in Jackson, in a pleasant little cottage home, hard by the campus of Millsaps College, where, respected and loved by all who knew her, she watched the shadows lengthen until she heard a voice like that of a shepherd calling his sheep, and when the silent watchers looked they saw that she had gone. When the day dawned that saw her body laid beside that of her husband, it was the fifty-fifth anniversary of her marriage. She was a gifted woman and a devout Christian; a helpful wife to her preacher husband, and to her children a wise and tender mother. She was a woman of strong intellect, strong convictions, and strong will. Charitable in her judgments of those about her, she was candid in the expression of her opinions. Into the holy place of her friendship many were welcomed; into the holy of holies but few, and when once her confidence and affection were given she was the most loyal of friends. Three children survive their mother: Almo, whose home in Jackson, close to the home of his mother, was like that of one who stood by ready to comfort and help; Rebecca, now Mrs. J. S. Johnston, of Jackson, a talented musician and a dutiful daughter; and Frances Louise, the wife of the Rev. B. M. Keith, of Fairmont, W. Va. To them belongs the heritage of her good life. The funeral services were held in the Galloway Memorial Church, in Jackson, under the leadership of Revs. E. K. Means and M. L. Burton. The interment was at the old home church, where the service was conducted by Rev. A. S. Byrd and the writer.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, in the providence of God, he has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our best, truest, most efficient and lovable members of the choir, in the death on Oct. 11, 1924, of KATE TOMLINSON MURDOCK, beloved wife of Mr. W. J. Murdock, who, for a great length of time, has so efficiently directed our choir; and,

Whereas, we are so conscious of our loss and loneliness without her, her genial spirit, pleasant disposition and efficient helpfulness; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the choir of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Laurel, Miss., bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that he maketh and doeth all things well.

2. That we do hereby express our sympathy, love and prayers for Brother Murdock and his two bright and sweet little children, Dorothy and Jack, Jr., in this hour of their sad affliction and bereavement.

3. That we commend them to the God of all grace and the fountain of all love, that their hearts may be comforted in this time of their great sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Brother Murdock, a copy to the Laurel Daily Leader, and also to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: J. R. Jones, H. C. Lomax, Birdie E. Lightsey, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased God, in his wisdom, to call from our midst our highly esteemed friend and co-worker, MRS. W. F. ADAMS; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, as a Missionary Society and Sunday school class, of Poplarville, Miss., tender her bereaved ones this tribute of respect and sympathy.

2. That her removal from our midst leaves a vacancy, and a shadow upon the minds and hearts of her coworkers, and her loss will be long felt in all good work.

3. That while we are saddened and grieved at her departure, we know that our loss is her eternal gain, and we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Societies, a copy printed in the Free Press and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Very respectfully submitted: Mrs. J. E. Williams, Mrs. Arthur Gandy, Mrs. W. H. O'Donnell, Committee.

A Wise Old Trapper

In the state of Ohio there lived a bunch of boys who had this trapping business down to a science. They each sent for separate price lists every year and then sent all their furs to the house giving the best quotations. After five years they decided they weren't so dreadfully wise because they didn't have enough profits to make their efforts worth while. One day they met Tom McMillan driving a new car to town. Tom said he made the price of his swell outfit shipping pelts. He told how he got wise to those funny prices and found it was better to deal with Chas. Porter because he always knew in advance just what he was sure of getting. He said that Porter never offered $5 for a $3 pelt, but he always paid the $3 which he promised and sometimes a little better. Chas. Porter now has five wise trappers in that section instead of one.

Don't take a Chance With Your FURS

Your furs mean real dollars to you. Why sell them to some fellow who offers you $1.25 when you know very well you are lucky to get fifty cents. Ask the wise trapper who knows. Once a Chas. Porter shipper and you will always be one. You know in advance that we give a square deal and every shipment brings sure money.

Send us your name and address. Get our Price Bulletins, Shipping Tags, and full particulars. Do it right now. This means real dollars to you, so don't put it off. Write to-day.

PASTORAL LETTER SENT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS OF THE CALHOUN, LA., CHARGE.

Dear Friends and Co-Workers: Having on the first Sunday in October entered upon our new Sunday school year, and having just passed our rally and promotion days, some of you, perhaps, just beginning your work as Sunday school teachers, we trust that each of you realizes the sacredness of the trust that your several superintendents and your pastor have committed to you, and that you are starting out to make this the best Sunday school year of the life of your church. In a real sense you are "assistants" to your pastor, and in loyalty to Christ, to the kingdom of God, and to the ongoing of your church, you are expected to be as exemplary and dependable in your work as he is in his, and we suggest the following test rules as a guide to you in the full realization of the importance of your work. Would not these five qualifications be among those that you would consider as necessary to a work so sacred?

1. First of all, and before anything else is considered, is that you be a good Christian—upright in life, reverent in disposition, sound in faith, and earnestly trying to glorify God, and to make your life a blessing to your fellow-men.

2. Next in importance to your Christian character, is the spirit of willingness to co-operate loyally with your pastor and superintendent in everything that pertains to the interests of the Sunday school of which you are a member, and of the church of which it is a part. If you know better than the leaders how a thing should be done, they will thank you for your advice in person, or through the workers' conference; but please do not "knock"—there are enough outsiders, and perhaps members of your class, doing that; you were put into the church's officiary to "boost," and only such as will do that are needed in the church's "cabinet" of leadership.

3. Regularity and punctuality of attendance are both a test of your trustworthiness of character, and the only hope of the success of your work, your example of fidelity to duty counting as much in the formation of the character of your scholars as the lessons that you teach. We expect you, therefore, to be as dependable in your Sunday school attendance as day school teachers, cooks, field hands, railroad agents, and pastors are dependable in their duties. Should you find more pleasure in going visiting, entertaining company, or going off to other attractions at the Sunday school hour than in meeting your Sunday school class, and attending the services of your church, then you are evidently out of place in passing for a shepherd and leader of the "little flock" over which the church has made you "overseer." If we can do without you one Sunday—which represents a week of your time—we might do without you every Sunday. If, therefore, unavoidably and providentially hindered, as those in all positions sometimes are, please let us know in time to get a substitute teacher prepared for the work, and that due explanation may be given to your class, that your influence over your class be not weakened, and that your loyalty to the Sunday school be not questioned.

4. A sincere effort to become efficient, one that "need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," is also a necessary part of a Sunday school teacher's test for fitness. The children of our day are taught common education by trained teachers, and to have the Bible taught them less efficiently is to put divine truth below secular truth in their estimation. Join a teacher training class, attend Sunday school institutes, study your Bible, be efficient—or just as efficient as you can!

5. Attendance upon the regular workers' conferences of your Sunday school, where you can give both your counsel and your co-operation with the leaders' plans for furthering the interests of the school, is also an important part of your work as a Sunday school official, and those who do not attend these meetings without reason cause their loyalty to be called in question, and ofttimes these non-attendants become "knockers" of the plans the faithful workers have made. When providentially hindered from attending these council meetings, please let us know your reasons, and then be sure to abide by and co-operate with what the council in your absence has planned. Our Program of Work requires a full attendance of all officers and teachers upon our workers' conferences, and for any one of you not to do so would upset the whole program of the school, and weaken this means of co-operative work. When principals of schools or leaders of business corporations call their workers together for report and counsel, they require faithful response, and the institutions of the church that are set for the training in Christian character should expect no less of those who constitute the church's working force.

Under your leadership, friend teacher, how have the members of your several classes progressed in gaining an understanding of the truths of the Bible, in their growth in Christian character, in their interest in and loyalty to the church, and in their desire to be efficient servants in the kingdom of God? Many of them have but little or no help for developing their Christian lives in their homes; some have bad social environment—all need shepherds who love them, who are ready to "lay down their lives for the sheep." Through the regular agencies of the church the "chief shepherd" has commissioned you to "feed my lambs," "feed my sheep." May your love service for the Master's kingdom be greatly blessed, and the blessings that you give to others rebound in blessings upon your own heart and your own home!

With due appreciation for the unselfish work that you are doing, and praying that all our Sunday schools may at this rallying time be entering upon an epoch of new zeal and prosperity, I am,

Sincerely and fraternally your pastor,

P. O. LOWREY.

THE UNIVERSAL POWER OF JESUS CHRIST.

By Rev. S. D. Howard.

Jesus said after his crucifixion, burial, and triumphant resurrection, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Matt. 28:18. Let us consider the universal claim of Jesus Christ as based upon the foregoing text.

This claim includes authority over all forces of nature, as well as all power over spiritual forces. Prior to his resurrection, he proved his power over nature, in turning water to wine; in opening the eyes of those that were born blind; in raising the dead to life; in stilling the tempest. His triumphant resurrection on the third day is another proof of his power and authority over death and nature. His appearing to his disciples inside of a room that was completely closed is another proof of his power over nature. His ascension to the Father after his resurrection is another proof of his power over nature because he had to overcome the force of gravity in his triumphant ascension.

Again, his claim includes all power over revelation. "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." "What thou seest, write in a book." "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." "Search the Scriptures, for they testify of me," said Jesus to the Jews.

The claim of Jesus includes his power to forgive sins and to save men and women to the uttermost, and this claim has been verified thousands of times. Men and women have been saved by Jesus when they were as low down in sin as it is possible to be. There are many to-day in the ranks of the Lord that can and will testify to the saving power of Christ.

His claim includes his complete power over sin and its power, which is the work of the devil. "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." The many honorable and useful institutions that bless the world to-day are the result of the claim made by Christ. The high state of civilization, the onward march of progress on material lines, are the result and verification of the claim of Christ. The great inventions that have blessed and are blessing the world are literal verifications of the claim of Jesus Christ. Printing millions of volumes of the Holy Scriptures, and the fast method of travel, and the distribution of the Bible, and the preaching of the Gospel, have all been made possible by the claim of Jesus.

We see on every hand a literal verification of the claim of Jesus Christ, and we may expect to see a continuation of the fulfillment of this universal claim of Jesus, until the earth is renewed, and peace and tranquility shall cover the earth and the lion and the lamb shall lie down together—and men shall beat their swords into ploughshares. So mote it be.

NUXATED
It is the organic iron in your blood that takes up oxygen from your lungs. This oxygenated organic iron unites with your digested food as it is absorbed into your blood, like fire unites with coal or wood, and by so doing it creates tremendous power and energy. Without sufficient organic iron in your blood your food merely passes through your body without doing you any good.
Organic iron, like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, may be had from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron." In tablet form only.
Millions of people are using Nuxated Iron with great benefit, their experience proving that it increases the strength and endurance of weak nervous, run-down people, in many cases, in two weeks' time.
If you want that virile force that stamina and strength so necessary to great success in practically every undertaking in life, you owe it to yourself to commence taking Nuxated Iron today.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Mrs. C. W. Brown, of Prairieville, Baton Rouge District, writes: "Enclosed you will find $23.25, which was collected on Sunday School Day by the Meadows Chapel Sunday school." The above offering is a large one from this small school, only three other schools in the district making a larger offering.

Dr. F. C. Wren, the Sunday school superintendent at Winnfield, writes: "I would like to have some literature on Children's Week. We expect to observe it, but will be a little late." We hope many of the superintendents will follow Dr. Wren's plan if they did not observe Children's Week, Oct. 12-19.

At the recent Standard Training School at New Orleans we noted present in one of the classes the following preachers: Carley, Drake, Duren, Harper, Alford, Rousseau, and Seegers.

The following resolution was passed at the Shreveport Standard Training School:

"Resolved, That we express our gratification with the success of our Training School in its third session, and the steadily increasing interest in the work of Leadership Training in the Shreveport District, as well as in the entire Louisiana Conference.

"Resolved, That we express our appreciation of the faithful promotion work by our Conference Superintendent, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and the wise administrative work of our dean, Dr. A. S. Lutz, and the splendid work of the members of the faculty.

"Resolved, That we thank those who have offered their homes to the entertainment of guests, and all who have contributed in any way to the success of the School."

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 201 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The question is often asked: "Well, how is the Sunday school work?" The answer is, it is like the leaven the woman hid in three measures of meal. God's truth put into the heart of a child is doing its transforming work slowly, but surely. What is the meaning of the ferment in every church where the leaven has a fair chance to work? Why are church buildings all over the Conference being rebuilt and enlarged? The only answer is, we are beginning to make a place for childhood in our plans for the coming kingdom. We are slowly realizing the childhood is whitest of all the fields. We are beginning to realize that it is more profitable to save a life than to rescue a lost soul. We are putting the emphasis upon conservation rather than upon rescue work. We are learning that salvation is a life process. There is a moment when the soul comes to the realization of its need of a saving Christ, but the redemption of the soul is not complete until that soul accepts Christ fully, and that means far more than most of us have yet experienced. For when we accept Christ fully, we accept his attitude toward the Jew and the Gentile, toward friend and foe, the rich and the poor, the white man and the black man, toward all the world. Then complete salvation must be a life process.

We hear no little of modernism and the like. Modernism and all other isms are cast out and driven back by the living Christ, accompanied by the Holy Ghost, through sound religious instruction. And this sound religious instruction must be given by example and by precept, it must be given in the home, in the church school, the State school, in the community life, everywhere, and by the wholesale. Criticising modernism at long range is worse than folly. We have got to grip the situation right at home where we are living, and grip it under the spell of the Holy Spirit, grip it with a passion. Modernism is not so hurtful as listlessness on the part of those who have been charged with the care of childhood. Modernism is not such a menace as a divided church, one set pulling in one direction and the other set struggling to carry out the plans of the church. To save ourselves and to save the masses of the people, we have got to get together under God and make a solid attack upon spiritual illiteracy. To say it in a word, we must give a knowledge of Jesus Christ as the only and all-sufficient Savior of childhood, of youth, of adults. Yes, we need more united families, more united churches, a united Conference, united with Christ for the one purpose of building his kingdom on earth as it is in heaven.

We are planning to hold at least eight Standard Training Schools the coming year, one for the Conference at large and one in each of the districts; besides these schools, we hope to hold many county and circuit

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Seashore District Annual Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Seashore District held its annual meeting in the Methodist church at Wiggins, Miss., Sept. 30, 1924, with Mrs. R. E. Johnson, of Gulfport, presiding. Devotional service was led by Mrs. R. B. Dacey, of Biloxi, who used the 4th chapter of Ephesians as the basis of her remarks. Prayer was led by Rev. L. L. Roberts, after which the roll was called, when forty women answered to their names.

We had as our honored guests, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of Nashville; Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, President of the Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference; Miss Mabel Porter, Conference Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. R. C. Dacey, Superintendent of Supplies; Mrs. Taylor, deaconess in charge of Wesley House, Biloxi; Rev. L. L. Roberts, P. E. of Seashore District; Revs. J. A. Moore, O. S. Lewis, W. J. Ferguson, W. W. Moore, and M. B. Sharbrough, pastor in charge.

Mrs. Johnson reported three new auxiliaries organized at Saucier, Creole, and Stillmore.

Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Conference President, gave an encouraging message—a message of progress and interest all over the State.

Mrs. Dacey spoke of boxes and supplies received; but money is needed, especially for the Wesley House, where beds for the nursery are much needed. Volley ball and tennis sets were asked for. These things and other supplies for amusement and recreation to be used in Wesley House were urged by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb. There is a wonderful opportunity among the young people of that community. Brother Lewis led in special prayer for the work on the coast.

Mrs. Lipscomb explained the membership contest, a thing which will grow from a State contest to an interstate one. She told of the provision being made to reach the isolated woman of the church through the Gibson Auxiliary. The Belle H. Bennett Memorial was next explained. After Mrs. Lipscomb's earnest talk, we felt that we cannot let our organization fail to do honor to one so noble and well beloved as Miss Bennett.

The noon hour having arrived, we were dismissed with prayer, after which we adjourned to the basement, where a delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the Wiggins Auxiliary.

The afternoon session opened with singing, "Faith of Our Fathers," and prayer by Mrs. Lipscomb.

Reports from auxiliaries were heard with interest. Each showed progress.

Mrs. Lipscomb then spoke of the "Carry On" program, outlined by the Council, to take up and carry on the work begun by the Centenary. Each society is urged to continue to give as much as they have been giving, and to give it through the regular channels—above dues and pledges. Those who give the 15 per cent increase asked at General Conference are contributing their "Carry On" fund.

Mrs. W. J. Ferguson gave a wonderful message, "God's Financial Plan," showing how tithing began as far back as Cain and Abel, bringing it down until now, when our gift is the measure of our love.

Little Emma Doris Breland, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Breland, delighted her audience with a song of the books of the Bible.

A collection was taken by Mrs. Dacey for the punch bowl for the Wesley House, which amounted to $11.72. The purchase will be made.

The minutes were read and approved, after which the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb.

Recording Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Get-together Social at Noel Memorial.

After a thorough canvass of the situation the Missioary Society of Noel Memorial Methodist Church, of Shreveport, already strong in membership and activity, decided, after many conferences, that the Missionary Society was and should be of interest to every member of the church; so plans were laid to get in touch with every newly affiliated lady, welcoming her to her church home and extending a cordial invitation to cooperate with the great missionary work that is being done by the Southern Methodist Church.

After much discussion, it was decided to hold an afternoon reception at the church for all the new members, the Missionary Society acting as hostess. Committees were appointed to look after all details of what proved to be a gala event in the annals of the church. One committee took care of the church decorations; another, of the program; another, of the refreshments, without which no church affair is usually a success; another attended to the invitations to all new members, postal cards and newspapers being used for the purpose, while the entire membership formed a monster reception committee.

The visitors were made welcome in the church parlors, which had been tastefully decorated with cut flowers for the occasion. The entire membership of the Missionary Society were drawn up in line to greet the newcomers, and as each one entered she had to run the gauntlet of good cheer and fellowship and meet individually each member, then take her place in line to greet others. In this way there soon was not a stranger in the gathering. Following this "get-acquainted greeting," the line broke up in small groups with the usual social chatter of friends and neighbors.

The program committee then took charge of the meeting, and the following program was exceedingly enjoyed by all:

Vocal solo, Mrs. C. N. Welch.
Duet, Mmes. Munch and Rawlins.
Violin solo, Miss Azile Swan.
Reading, Miss Mary Jewell Kimball.

The pageant, "A Bunch of Nuts," was mirth-provoking, and served to break down any barriers of formality or restraint, and was most heartily enjoyed.

The Society president, Mrs. W. N. Collins, extended the greetings of the Society to all, and made each and every one cordially welcome, explaining in detail the work the Society is doing and the work planned to do. Mrs. W. W. Holmes then extended a most urgent invitation to all to become members of the Woman's Missionary Society and participate in the work, and through the co-operation of all make the Woman's Missionary Society of Noel Church one of the outstanding societies in the State.

The results of such a meeting can, at present, only be judged by the spontaneous enjoyment of the gathering, and if happy-looking faces and an air of complete friendliness are any criterion, then the effort put forth for this reception met with unusual success.

Superintendent of Publicity.

PASTORAL VISITING IN THREE LANGUAGES.

You who have not had the privilege of going out with Brother A. M. Martin to visit in the homes of his flock have been denied one of the real treats in a Christian worker's experience.

Last March, some French folk who had known him in the work around Raceland and Lockport and who, since then, had moved near Des Allemands, invited him to come into their community and hold Gospel services. This he did, giving the message in one of their homes where about three families had gathered to hear him. Since that time the congregation has increased, until now it includes about a dozen families, all eagerly interested to learn about Jesus and his power to save and keep from sin. Not only French people are included in this group, but there are some German families as well.

One Saturday not long since, Brother Martin asked Miss Hooper and the writer to go with him to visit in these homes. We left Houma about 10 o'clock, reaching Des Allemands shortly after 11, when we began the round of visits. Such eager welcome as they gave their pastor, such loving confidence as they showed, did one's heart good to witness. And how glad they were to meet us and to have us come into their homes. They all love to sing, and in each home we had a season of singing, reading of God's Word, and prayer.

Two of the families we visited had, at one time, been connected with a Mennonite church that formerly had a congregation in this community, and in the first of these two homes there was visiting a gentle, consecrated Mennonite deaconess, a sweet-faced Dutch Pennsylvanian. She visited with us in several other homes, entering into our Christian fellowship with great joy.

In some of the homes only French was spoken, and there we would sing both French and English hymns, and Brother Martin would read the Bible and pray in French. In others, English best fitted, and there Miss Hooper and I would read God's Word and pray in

"SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR MY CHURCH."

Dear Brother Carley: The following paper, entitled, "Suggested Program for My Church," has been returned to me by Mr. T. W. Holloman, of Alexandria, who taught the course, "A Methodist Church and Its Work," during the District Standard Training School, and he requested me to send the paper to you for publication in the Advocate. The program is largely along the lines that are outlined by the Board of Lay Activities, which provides for six commlttees, namely: Christian Education, Evangelism, Missionary, Social Service, Stewardship and Tithing, and Lay Speakers. These committees are to represent the whole church and work, to bring about unified effort and prevent overlapping. I hereby submit the program for publication, as requested, and I hope that it may be the cause of bringing about substantial results in the labor for God's kingdom.

Old Folks Gain Strength with Cod Liver Oil

Thank Goodness You Don't Have to Take the Nasty Tasting, Ill Smelling Oil any More for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets Can be Purchased at any Drug Store.

Why should any old person let feebleness overwhelm them in these enlightened days? Surely everyone knows by this time that Cod Liver Oil contains more vitamines than anything else on earth and is the greatest body builder in the world.

You'll like to take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—they are sugar coated and as easy to take as candy and they do help old people.

Why not try being 10 years younger again—why not grow stronger in body, in mind, in vitality? Why not take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets and drop 10 years from your age in 30 days? We mean this literally, of course. We believe that a 30 days treatment will make you feel 10 years younger—but at any rate try them for 30 days and if you are not satisfied get your money back—60 tablets—60 cents at any progressive druggist. Be sure and get McCoy's—the original and genuine.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY AND APPRECIATION.

Whereas, our pastor, Rev. N. B. Harmon, was accidentally hurt by a runaway horse on July 21, past, which has proved more serious than we first thought it to be, thus confining him in his home most of the time since then, preventing him from doing the work which he loved so well; and,

Whereas, in view of the fact that he is unable to do the work of a pastor, it is his purpose to take the superannuate relation at the ensuing Annual Conference; and,

Whereas, Brother Harmon has given forty years of active service in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during which time hundreds of people have been converted and have united with the church, and has also led in the building of a goodly number of churches and in paying large debts on others; and,

Whereas, he has been one of the most efficient and influential members of the Mississippi Conference for many years;

Therefore, be it resolved, That this quarterly conference of the Newton church, in session Oct. 21, 1924, express to Brother Harmon our deep and sincere appreciation of the services he has rendered to the church during the past forty years.

Resolved, second, That we regret very much this accident, which hastened the day of his superannuation, and assure him of our sympathy in his present affliction, and pray God's richest blessings upon him and his family as he retires from active work.

Resolved, third, That a copy of these resolutions be given Brother Harmon, and one recorded in the quarterly conference journal, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: R. L. Farmer, J. R. Rawzee, J. L. Bell, J. L. Summer, M. S. Berckley, A. S. McClendon, Eugene Woodham, H. O. Thrash, V. E. Stone, C. H. Rew, R. W. Henry, Bob Gibson, C. E. Summer, Mrs. W. G. Allen.

FROM FARMERVILLE, LA.

We have just closed a very gracious revival, which resulted in one hundred and sixty-one applications for church membership in the churches—eighty-two for our church and seventy-six for the Baptist.

The Culpeppers, J. B., Sr., and J. B., Jr., and their wives led our forces in this the most gracious revival Farmerville has had in many years. The whole town and the entire community were stirred. Many who are not accustomed to attending any church were won for Christ and the churches.

We had great preaching and great singing, and untiring labor on the part of those faithful servants of God, and the church, and God moved upon the people and they prayed and worked faithfully to the end.

Some of the outstanding features of this meeting I wish to emphasize:

1. More than six thousand chapters in the Bible were read by the people.

2. The large number of men and women who were brought into the churches.

3. The boys and girls of all ages were in attendance upon all the services except those held during school hours.

4. More than seventy-five came forward declaring their willingness to go wherever God called them.

5. The establishing of many family altars.

6. The hearty co-operation of all Christian people of the town and community.

Farmerville will never be the same again. The coming of the Culpeppers was truly of God. We heartily commend them to any of the brethren who need evangelistic help.

A. F. STEM, Pastor.

DEAR CHRISTIAN FRIENDS.

I am a poor boy in misfortune, and I write this letter to you all to see if you can help me a little by buying a box of beautiful Sea Shells. They are strange and wonderful things, fine for presents, souvenirs, or keep-sakes. Price, $1 a box. I am a crippled boy, permanently bed-ridden, caused by a fall. I can't walk or sit up. Been down in bed 25 years and I have to earn a living in my helpless condition, and if you can send me an order for a box of Sea Shells I sure will appreciate your kindness, and I believe you will be pleased with these pretty Sea Shells.

FROM MERRYVILLE, LA.

Beginning the 31st of August, and closing on the 14th of September, covers the duration of my revival meetings. Rev. H. T. Young, of De Ridder, did all the preaching except two sermons, and did it well. For nearly every day we had three sermons—one on the streets and two in the church. Brother Young preached the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and the church was revived. There were 5 additions to the church on profession of faith. The meeting was quite a success—not in so many professing faith and joining the church, but in that the gospel was preached, sin was uncovered, worldliness was condemned, and the Christians built up and encouraged.

Brother Young is a fine help from every standpoint. He will engage, after the meeting of our Conference, in general evangelistic work. Brethren should secure him for another year as soon as practical.

Things are moving along O. K. up here. The attendance at church is much better than it was when I first came here. It could be better. Sunday school is O. K. Junior and Senior Epworth Leagues are doing well. The Woman's Missionary Society is holding interesting meetings every week. We are endeavoring to get ready for the Annual Conference. God bless the Advocate.

Relieved of Catarrh Due to La Grippe

Thanks To PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Laura Berberick, over 70 years of age, 1205 Willow Ave., Hoboken, N. J., writes: "A severe attack of La Grippe left me with a hoarseness and slime in the head and throat. I had chronic catarrh. It grew worse. I could not lie down or sleep at night. I was always bothered by the slime, pain in the back and a terrible headache every morning.

Finally I bought a bottle of Pe-ru-na which was of great benefit. It gave me blood and strength. I have no pains in head or back, nor noises in the head. The slime has gone and I can sleep. My weight has increased. I am cheerful and happy, thanks to Pe-ru-na, which I shall always keep in the house and recommend to my friends."

For every form of catarrh Pe-ru-na meets the need, Coughs, Colds, Nasal Catarrh, Indigestion, Bowel disorders are all forms of catarrh.

Buy it any where in tablet or liquid form.

A CARD OF THANKS.

To the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church at Silver Creek, Miss., in which the Woman's Missionary Union of the Baptist church ask for a part, and in which they seemed to enjoy a very large part as well as some members of the other churches of Silver Creek, we are profoundly grateful to [illegible] for one of the most timely, most appropriate, and most valuable showers given to any one. Our gratitude is so profound that we have not words to express it. But we trust that we may so live and become more useful in life that we might be able to express our appreciation for such a kind and timely remembrance of us in this way.

May God bless you all. We are glad to be among such kind people. Let God be praised, also, in deeds of this kind, for surely his Spirit leadeth you.

Fraternally yours,

REV. AND MRS. H. R. McKEE.

MEETING AT MAIN STREET METHODIST CHURCH, BILOXI, MISS.

Brother O. S. Lewis, the pastor, has set a fine example to us as preachers in that he held his own meeting, preaching almost every sermon himself. The meeting lasted two weeks. Captain Dunn, of Atlanta, Ga., led the singing, and it was well done. Brother Lewis demonstrated to his people that the old-time gospel could be preached to the church to its edification by the pastor. I do not believe any evangelist or outside pastor could have interpreted the needs of his people and met those needs so well as Brother Lewis did to his own people. Some of his people said that he was a good evangelist, which meant that he was doing the work of an evangelist in the meeting. The pastor's main aim was to build up and strengthen his church people. I am sure that the days that are to come as well as the present, will prove that the meeting was a great success. His preaching to the saints and sinners impressed the hearers that his denunciations of sin and condemnation of the indifference and carelessness of the church were done in love and tenderness. It seems that any pastor would covet the gift to present the Word as did Brother Lewis.

Brethren who need the services of this splendid singer and devout servant of God, Captain C. F. Dunn, can reach him by letter at 85 Park Avenue, Atlanta, Ga. Brother Lewis is doing a fine work here. I have never been associated with a more brotherly spirit than he manifests toward his flock and his co-workers in the kingdom.

Brethren, we hope to see you all at Conference.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas. — "I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so." — Mrs. DORA PHILYAW, R. R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

A LETTER FROM DR. W. H. COLEMAN.

My Dear Dr. Carley: Under the leadership of Providence there often come to us sudden and unexpected changes. Thus it happened that after a most delightful fellowship with you brethren of the Lonisiana Conference during a number of years, my lot was cast with the St. John's peopie of Memphis, and for the last four years with the great Central Church, Fort Worth, and now at Trinity, El Paso. I have aiways accepted my appointments as being providential, and our Lord has marvelously blessed me in them all.

Central has made great progress during the last four years, and stands out, in many respects, as the most attractive appointment in the great Central Texas Conference.

Yesterday was my first Snnday with my new peopie at Trinity, and I am delighted with them and with the outlook in this great church and growing city. We have here in this border city a very fine type of Americans, a most delightful climate, a fine spirit of business progressiveness, and in Trinity, which is the leading church of the city, a great membership of consecrated, loyal, zealous people. The pastor is already in love with them. We had a great day yesterday, and look forward, antlcipating a most successful year.

With an ever abiding esteem for you and the other brethren of that Conference, I am,

Cordially yours,

W. H. COLEMAN.

FOREIGNERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

It is estimated that there is at the present time something like 17,000,000 people in the United States who were born under another flag, and possibly an equal nnmber of the first generation, therefore giving us a total of 34,000,000 foreigners in America, which is about 30% of the total population in this country.

It is to be hoped that the majority of these people have come here to become American citizens. To make them Christian American citizens is the task of the Christian church; further, to make Christians out of those who may return to their native land, that they may carry with them the ideals which have made America a great land and the pride of all the nations of the world.

This is no little task for the Christian churches of America, and if nothing else should engage their attention for several years but to win them for Christ and the Gospel, it would be a service well rendered to the Christianization of the nations of the world.

The majority of these people have come to America, not to spend money, which they have made in the old country, but that they might have the comforts of iife. A great many of them are not only poor, but illiterate and un-Christian. So that we are faced not only with their various conceptions of God, but also with their poverty and illiteracy. Their children will find their way into our public schools. The ideals which these children get from their home life they will carry and disseminate among the public schooi children of our country. The ideals which we have given to our children will be lowered by these chiidren from foreign lands, or their ideals will be raised by the chiidren from our homes.

The economic situation which we face in this country to-day will be blessed or cursed by our immigrants. It depends upon their viewpoint of life. If the church in America would save the ideal of the Christian home and the Christian social order, the Christian church and the Christian civiiization, we must take account of these 34,000,000 of peopie and their influence npon our civilization.

It is to be feared that much of what we have lost in the way of the Christian Sabbath and the Christian social order is due to the influence of our foreign people.

We have prayed for the conversion of the nations of the earth, and now the nations are knocking at the door of our land, begging admission to our country, and thus coming to our very doors where we may preach the Gospel to them. Shali we accept the challenge?

We should not withhold one dollar from the needy peoples across the seas. We should rather increase the amount which we give; but shall we, whiie giving the Water of Life to these peoples beyond the seas, deny it to their brothers and sisters who have come to our iand?

America is the greatest missionary opportunity which the church has before it. It has often been said: "As goes America, so goes the world." Then, if America shall grow less Christian and more pagan because we have neglected these pagans under the Stars and Stripes, how shall we convert the pagan under other flags?

If the Christian churches of America could institute a great program looking to the conversion of these foreign-speaking peoples, having in mind to send many of these younger, well trained people who have been converted to Christ and knowing the church of Jesus Christ in a Christian land back to their native land to carry their new-found ideals and the Gospel of Jesus to their kindred, what tremendous missionary program the American churches would have. Such a program will win, and such a task is the task of the American churches. Shall the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, so favored and blessed of God in former times, while claiming to be the bearer of the Gospel of good news to all the peoples of the world, fail to accept this chailenge of the foreigners in our midst?

Thrilling stories might be recited of how the Gospel of Christ has won its way among many of these peoples, and their sons have gone back to their lands to teil the glorious story. Their number ought to increase, and would increase if we had more people to teii the story in the homeland and more churches in which to tell it. With these 34,000,000 of foreign peoples at our very doors, a iarge number of them being within the bounds of our denomination, there is no better way for the church to do a great piece of work, and to do it quickly, than to Christianize these people.

We covet the prayers of the whoie church that our Gospel as preached by more than fifty of our missionaries among these foreign-speaking peopies, may find its way to their hearts. We need chapeis to work among our two miilion Mexicans in this country, and the large groups of Italians, Cubans, Bohemians, and Syrians, and we need more workers. Will you not help us with your gifts of prayer, life and money?

THE CHURCH A VITAL AGENCY IN CIVILIZATION.

Civilization is a complex and peculiar thing, and the forces that uplift it too often go unrecognized. Our American civiiization is what it is because of the time-honored agencies and institutions that safeguard life.

The church is one of the most essential of these vital agencies, but it is helpfui only in so far as we use it and support it. The church in its broadest conception is the whoie body of the peopie. How often men say: "I do not go to church, but I believe in the church and support it!" Whether that is possible or not, I cannot say, but I know that any man with a vision to-day must feel the need of the church.

A godless nation or city means a selfish and greedy nation or city. May we be spared from such a destiny!—Selected.

schools. The county and circuit schools are to have two, three or four teachers, according to the number we can enroll in these schools. We do not propose to abandon the ciasses in the local churches, but we beiieve we can reach more people and do a better type of work in holding county and circuit schools. Take notice of this and make preparations accordingly.

The campaign for ten thousand added to our Sunday school rolls during the first three months of the year is going to succeed better than anything we have undertaken in the past. The first step to take is to get samples of the literature, study it and plan for a survey of every church, and systematicaliy continue the campaign throughout the year.

Woman's Missionary Society

English. In one home the mother of the family read two Psalms in German, while we sang in all three languages. We know that our Father's heart was made glad by such fellowship of "tongue" as we had that day.

From this community two girls have entered the MacDonell School, and their parents are so happy to have them here.

Brother Martin has kept this work going under the most serious handicaps. When he first opened it, he had a car and could reach them easily, giving them one Sunday service each month and also week-day prayer meetings oftener. But his car, which was not a new one when he secured it, has gone the way of the "one-hoss shay," and he has had to cut out his week-day visits, going only once each month by rail, an expensive proposition for him. If there is a preacher in the French field who needs and deserves the gift of a car for mission work, it is he; and I do hope and pray that God will lay it upon the hearts of the brethren to provide this "missionary vehicle" for him.

We planned with the women in this group to go to them one day of each month and start a Missionary Society, and we are praying that God will shape up this new venture into a permanent organization. We are also working to help these people in the organization of a Sunday school, and we hope to have the co-operation of volunteers from the Houma Epworth League in this undertaking.

We ask that every Louisiana Methodist woman will pray the Father to bless this work in that corner of his vineyard; and we trust that it will not be long before Brother Martin will be the possessor of the necessary "carryall" for his splendid work.

A GOOD LAXATIVE

Black-Draught Recommended by an Illinois Lady, Who Says It Helps Her.—"Fine for the Liver."

St. Elmo. Ill.—"i have used Black-Draught for three years," says Mrs. J. W. Boyd, a well-known member of this community. "i was visiting a friend who had used it for some time. i was in need of a laxative and I had a burning in my stomach. I was constipated. She gave me a dose of Black-Draught and it helped me, so I used it from then on. It certainly benefited me. I think it is fine for the liver, too. i am glad to recommend it.

"One day our pastor was visiting us, and he said his system seemed clogged and asked me to give him something to take. i gave him Black-Draught. He was much pleased with the results and bought a package, himseif."

Constipation forces the system to absorb poisons that should be thrown out, causing pain, discomfort and tending to undermine your health. Black-Draught helps to relieve this condition by acting on the bowels, and by regulating the liver when it is torpid, thus helping to drive out many poisons in an easy, natural way.

Don't take chances! At the first indication of constipation, take Black-Draught. Costs only a cent a dose.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 71—No. 45. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3587.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

Proceedings of the North Mississippi Annual Conference.

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis.

Wednesday, First Day.

The North Mississippi Conference convened in its fifty-fifth session in the new Methodist church, at West Point, Miss., Oct. 29, 1924, at 8:30 a. m., with Bishop W. N. Ainsworth in the chair.

The Bishop announced and the Conference sang "A Charge To Keep I Have."

The Bishop led in prayer and announced hymn 489, "He Leadeth Me." The Conference sang this hymn, after which the Bishop read Ephesians, the third chapter.

T. H. Dorsey, W. W. Woollard, V. C. Curtis and E. S. Lewis assisted in administering the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Former Secretary, J. R. Countiss, called the roll, and was elected Secretary. J. E. Stevens was chosen Assistant Secretary, and C. W. Avery, R. G. Lord, S. H. Caffey, J. M. Guinn, W. I. White, C. L. Oaks, and R. T. Hollingsworth, were chosen Statistical Secretaries.

The hours for opening and adjourning and the bars of the Conference were fixed.

The following changes were made in the Quadrennial Boards:

Budget: A. T. McIlwain in place of J. S. Duncan.

Bible Work: C. S. Yates in place of J. H. Smith, treasurer, and A. T. Canton in place of R. I. Collins.

Finance: S. L. Pope in place of J. E. Cunningham, president.

The following Annual Committees were confirmed:

Public Worship: T. H. Lipscomb, A. T. McIlwain. E. S. Carouthers.

Spiritual Interest: C. C. Alexander, R. H. Furr, Mrs. Kemp Williams, R. W. Evans, J. J. Garner, J. B. Reynolds, W. W. Hartsfield, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, C. L. Rogers. Mrs. W. N. Duncan, J. A. Baker, W. H. Goodwin, H. M. Young, Dr. L. L. Minor.

Sabbath Observance: F. H. McGee, R. M. Evans, Mrs. Jeff Wilson, J. H. James, M. A. Burns, A. L. Davenport, J. A. Cunningham, T. H. Mills, Mrs. G. W. Shaw, R. G. A. Carlisle, T. E. Dunn, G. H. Boyles, J. R. Fowler.

Orphanage: Mrs. R. P. Nebiett, A. A. Martin, W. G. Davis, Mrs. T. J. Lee, W. A. Bowlin, J. W. York, Judge T. E. Pegram, A. R. Beasley, J. H. Sherard, J. F. Watson, R. L. Ward, A. T. Clanton, R. G. Moore, J. D. Turley.

Conference Relations: W. L. Storment, W. B. Baker, W. W. Mitchell, R. O. Brown, S. A. Brown, W. S. Shipman, W. W. Jones.

District Conference Records: R. G. Lord, E. C. Driskell, Seaman Rhea, D. R. McDougal, C. L. Oaks, W. C. Beasley, A. C. McKorkle.

Question 21 was called, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The characters of the presiding elders were passed, as follows: L. P. Wasson, A. T. McIlwain, J. B. Randolph, J. H. Felts, J. E. Cunningham, R. A. Tucker, J. T. Lewis.

The names of the superannuates were called and their characters were passed. Our superannuates are as follows: R. I. Allen, J. W. Anderson, J. W. Bell, W. J. Burt, D. L. Cogdell, B. P. Fullilove, E. Johnson, W. A. Langley, W. J. O'Bryant, B. P. Patterson, James Porter, H. G. Roberts, E. H. Rook, O. L. Savage, C. N. Terry, J. W. Dorman, R. W. Williams. One of our superannuates, J. M. Huggin, died during the year. The following on the list last year were not recommended to be retained in this relation, but are expecting to take up active work again: H. E. Carter, A. T. Moore, W. D. Wendel.

Many of these honored brethren were present and answered to roll call, and several spoke of their activities in the Master's work during the year. The Bishop spoke words of highest praise for the work they had rendered the church, and at the close of their report the Conference sang, "I Am Bound for the Promised Land."

W. W. Woollard presented a resolution in behalf of the Board of Church Extension that in the distribution of Conference funds, the Conference Treasurer be instructed to distribute to the Conference Church Extension Board the sum of $3,500.

Question 3 was called, "Who remain on trial?" C. C. Alexander, S. E. Ashmore, A. W. Bailey, W. P. Bailey, J. J. Baird, G. H. Boyles, A. Y. Brown, M. H. Weed, W. M. Hester, W. A. Langley, J. E. Lawhon, W. C. Mattox, W. W. Milligan, W. L. Robinson, H. D. Suydan, W. H. Heath, L. B. Wimberly, B. G. Whitehurst, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year.

A. M. West, J. D. Humphreys, W. C. Newman, C. M. Ray, and L. W. Summers were passed in character and remain in the Class of the First Year.

Dr. T. W. Ellis, Secretary of the General Church Extension Board; Dr. R. L. Russell, a Secretary of the Mission Board, and Dr. L. E. Todd, Secretary of the General Board of Finance, each addressed the Conference.

In answer to question 17, "What traveling preachers are elected deacons?" the examining committee reported W. L. Atkins, J. W. Robertson, and R. E. Woodfin to have passed examinations, and they were advanced to the Class of the Third Year and elected deacons. G. C. Gregory, a local deacon, was advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

The following visiting brethren were introduced to the Conference: Dr. L. H. Estes, Dr. D. M. Key, C. O. Chalmers, Dr. H. T. Carley; the Baptist pastor, Brother Caswell; J. M. Corley, of the Mississippi Conference; Charles Assaf, of the Mississippi Conference; E. B. Moll, of the Mississippi Conference; Prof. Hooker, of Millsaps College, and W. A. Moore and T. H. McNish, from the Publishing House.

After announcements, doxology and benediction, the Conference adjourned.

At 3 p. m., Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor of Central Church, Columbus, preached.

At 7:30 p. m. there was held a unique service in the way of a symposium on "What Methodism Needs" from the standpoint of the preacher. Rev. W. S. Shipman presided. Rev. R. P. Nebiett read the Scriptures, and Revs. L. M. Lipscomb, L. A. McKeown, E. R. Smoot and W. W. Mitchell presented their ideas on the subject.

Thursday, Second Day.

Conference opened at 8:30 a.m. Bishop Ainsworth announced and the Conference sang hymn 309, "Amazing Grace." Rev. E. Johnson, a superannuate, who joined the Conference fifty years ago, and who was in attendance for the first time in about ten years, led the prayer.

Secretary Countiss read the minutes of yesterday's session, which were approved.

The Bishop read from the seventeenth chapter of the Gospel of John, with appropriate comments on what it means to be "with Christ."

The Class of the Third Year was called, and O. A. Clark, R. L. Ellis, R. T. Hollingsworth, R. C. Mayo, T. B. Thrower, J. R. Murff, H. H. Wallace, C. W. Avery, R. C. Nanney, N. Maxey, W. T. Phillips, and R. G. A. Carlisle were passed in examination of character, and, having finished the required course of study, were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

N. D. Guerry was passed in examination of character and was retained in the Class of the Third Year.

Under question 19, the Class of the Fourth Year was called, and W. W. Bruner, G. D. Burt, W. O. Hunt, J. S. Maxey, and R. G. Moore were passed in character and studies and were elected elders. J. W. York and R. G. A. Carlisle, local elders, were passed in character and in course of studies of the Fourth Year. A. J. Henry and A. F. Moore were passed in character, but remain in the Class of the Fourth Year. The name of A. F. Moore was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relationship.

Question 1 was called, "Who are admitted on trial?" and the following were admitted: J. A. Smith, E. C. Driskell, W. L. Pearson, S. A. Miller, W. R. Crouch, W. C. McCay, Solomon Potts, J. O. Dowdle, W. C. Galceran, Jr., and M. H. McCall.

Question 8, "Who are readmitted?" was called. W. M. McIntosh and E. C. Sullivan were readmitted.

The Bishop asked for two chalk secretaries, and A. S. Raper and A. Y. Brown were selected.

Addresses were made by J. Q. Schisler, of the General Sunday School Board; Dr. H. H. Sherman, of the General Board of Education, and Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College.

The name of W. D. Wendel was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relationship.

Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference, was introduced and addressed the Conference concerning the pastoral care of the patients at Sanatorium.

The statistical report of Grenada District was reviewed on the blackboard, and showed the following totals: Members received on profession, 486; number of charges paying salaries in full, 16; number paying benevolences in full, 10; amount paid on Centenary, $6,425; on Education, $4,789; for Superannuate Endowment fund, $5,788. A total of $17,992 of special funds was raised. The characters of the pastors of Grenada District were passed.

A communication from J. S. Duncan, who now serves an English-speaking congregation in Rio de Janeiro, was read before the Conference.

The following visiting brethren were introduced to the Conference: Rev. Mr. Hobson, pastor of the Presbyterian church; Mrs. Alma Reily and Rev. B. F. Lewis, of the Methodist Orphanage; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College; Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Centenary secretary of the two Mississippi Conferences.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction.

At 3 p. m., Rev. W. M. McIntosh preached a stirring sermon to a great congregation.

At 7:30 p. m. the laymen of the Conference had charge of the hour, and gave a symposium on "What Methodism Most Needs from the Layman's Point of View." It was in every way an interesting and enjoyable service. J. G. Huston, of New Albany, served as director of the program, and the following distinguished guests addressed the great congregation on the subject: Judge Percy Bell, of Greenville; Judge Thomas E. Pegram, of Ripley; Judge L. G. Fant, of Holly Springs, and Judge J. G. McGowen, of Water Valley.

Friday, Third Day.

The session of the Conference convened at 8:30 a. m. A song was sung, and W. M. Young led in prayer. The minutes of the preceding session were read and approved, after which the Bishop read from Acts 17 and commented on the real meaning of "knowing God."

"Saviour, More Than Life to Me," was sung.

The statistics of the Aberdeen District were displayed on the blackboard, which showed the following progress: Six meetings in mission territory were held, resulting in 18 accessions on profession; 15 laymen in the district were active in assisting the pastors in holding services; 19 charges were 100 per cent on salary, and 8 on benevolences; 757 accessions on profession were reported; $6,288 were raised on Centenary pledges, $3,163 on Christian Education, and $5,544 on the Superannuate Endowment fund. The names of all the preachers in the district were called and their characters passed.

A report from J. H. Brooks, chaplain in the United States Navy, and a member of the Conference, was read.

L. P. Wasson, presiding elder, asked for the reference of the name of Brother D. W. Babb to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relationship. Brother Babb has rounded out fifty years of active service in the itinerancy, and his retirement from this position in the Conference called for several touching remarks concerning his service to God and the church. Your reporter heard many, as they looked at him, say, "Isn't he a grand man!" Few men have made a deeper impression for piety and vital godliness in their ministerial life than has Brother Babb.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AT DEDICATION OF ASBURY MONUMENT.

This occasion cannot but recall to our minds in a most impressive way the sacrifice and devotion that have gone into the making of our country. It is impossible to interpret it as the working out of a plan devised by man. The wisest and most farsighted of them had little conception of the greatness of the structure which was to arise on the foundation which they were making. As we review their accomplishments they constantly admonish us not only that "all things work together for those who do good," but that in the direction of the affairs of our country there has been an influence that had a broader vision, a greater wisdom and a wider purpose than that of mortal man, which we can only ascribe to a Divine Providence. A wide variety of motives has gone into the building of our Republic. We can never understand what self-government is or what is necessary to maintain it, unless we keep these fundamentals in mind. To one of them, Francis Asbury, the first American Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his associates, made a tremendous contribution.

Our Government rests upon religion. It is from that source that we derive our reverence for truth and justice, for equality and liberty, and for the rights of mankind. Unless the people believe in these principles, they cannot believe in our Government. There are only two main theories of government in the world. One rests on righteousness, the other rests on force. One appeals to reason, the other appeals to the sword. One is exemplified in a republic, the other is represented by a despotism. The history of government on this earth has been almost entirely a history of the rule of force held in the hands of a few. Under our Constitution, America committed herself to the practical application of the rule of reason, with the power held in the hands of the people.

This result was by no means accomplished at once. It came about only by reason of long and difficult preparation, oftentimes accompanied with discouraging failure. The ability for self-government is arrived at only through an extensive training and education. In our own case it required many generations and we cannot yet say that it is wholly perfected. It is of a great deal of significance that the generation which fought the American Revolution had seen a very extensive religious revival. They had heard the preaching of Jonathan Edwards. They had seen the great revival meetings that were inspired also by the preaching of Whitefield. The religious experiences of those days made a profound impression upon the great body of the people. They made new thoughts and created new interests. They freed the public mind, through a deeper knowledge and more serious contemplation of the truth. By calling the people to righteousness they were a direct preparation for self-government. It was for a continuation of this work that Francis Asbury was raised up.

The religious movement which he represented was distinctly a movement to reach the great body of the people. Just as our Declaration of Independence asserts that all men are created free, so it seems to me the founders of this movement were inspired by the thought that all men were worthy to hear the Word, worthy to be sought out and brought to salvation. It was this motive that took their preachers among the poor and neglected, even to criminals in the jails. As our ideal has been to bring all men to freedom, so their ideal was to bring all men to salvation. It was pre-eminently a movement in behalf of all the people. It was not a new theory. The American Canstitution was not a new theory. But, like it, it was the practical application of an old theory, which was very new.

Just as the time was approaching when our country was about to begin the work of establishing a government which was to represent the rule of the people, where not a few but the many were to control public affairs, where the vote of the humblest was to count for as much as the vote of the most exalted, Francis Asbury came to America to preach religion. He had no idea that he was preparing men the better to take part in a great liberal movement, the better to take advantage of free institutions, and the better to perform the functions of self-government. He did not come for political motives. Undoubtedly they were farthest from his mind. Others could look after public affairs. He was a loyal and peaceful subject of the Realm. He came to bring the Gospel to the people, to bear witness to the truth and to follow it wheresoever it might lead. Wherever men dwelt, whatever their condition, no matter how remote, no matter how destitute they might be, to him they were souls to be saved.

For this work, the bearing of the testimony of the truth to those who were about to be, and to those who in his later years were, sovereign American citizens, he had a peculiar training and aptitude. He was the son of a father who earned his livelihood by manual labor, of a mother who bore a reputation for piety. By constant effort they provided the ordinary comforts of life and an opportunity for intellectual and religious instruction. It was thus that he came out of a home of the people. As early as the age of 17 he began his preaching. In 1771, when he was 26 years old, responding to a call for volunteers, he was sent by Wesley to America. Landing in Philadephia, he began that ministry which in the next forty-five years was to take him virtually through the Colonies and their western confines and into Canada, from Maine on the north, almost to the Gulf of Mexico on the south.

He came to America five years after the formation of the first Methodist Society in the City of New York, which had been contemporaneous with his own joining of the British Conference as an itinerant preacher and a Gospel missionary. At that time it is reported that there were 316 members of his denomination in this country. The prodigious character of his labors is revealed when we remember that he traveled some 6,000 miles each year, or in all about 270,000 miles, preaching about 16,500 sermons and ordaining more than 4,000 clergymen, besides presiding at no less than 224 Annual Conferences. The highest salary that he received was $80 each year for this kind of service, which meant exposure to summer heat and winter cold, traveling alone through the frontier forests, sharing the rough fare of the pioneer's cabin, until his worn-out frame was laid at last at rest. But he left behind him as one evidence of his labors 695 preachers and 214,235 members of his denomination. The vitality of the cause which he served is further revealed by recalling that the 316 with which he began has now grown to more than 8,000,000.

His problem during the Revolutionary War was that of continuing to perform his duties without undertaking to interfere in civil or military affairs. He had taken for the text of his first sermon in America these very significant words: "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." When several of his associates left for England in 1775, he decided to stay. "I can by no means agree to leave such a field for gathering souls to Christ as we have in America," he writes, "therefore, I am determined by the grace of God not to leave them, let the consequences be what they may." But he had no lack of loyalty to the early form of American government. When the inauguration of Washington took place April 30, 1789, the Conference being in session, Bishop Asbury moved the presentation of a congratulatory address to the new President. His suggestion was adopted, and the Bishop being one of those designated for the purpose, presenting the address in person, read it to Washington. How well he fitted into the scheme of things, this circuit rider who spent his life making stronger the foundation on which our Government rests and seeking to implant in the hearts of all men, however poor and unworthy they may have seemed, an increased ability to discharge the high duties of their citizenship. His outposts marched with the pioneers, his missionaries visited the hovels of the poor, that all men might be brought to a knowledge of the Truth.

A great lesson has been taught us by this holy life. It was because of what Bishop Asbury and his associates preached, and what other religious organizations, through their ministry preached, that our country has developed so much freedom and contributed so much to the civilization of the world. It is well to remember this when we are seeking for social reforms. If we can keep in mind their sources, we shall better understand their limitations. The Government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of a country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of man. Of course we can help to restrain the vicious and furnish a fair degree of security and protection by legislation and police control, but the real reforms which society in these days is seeking will come as a result of our religious convictions, or they will not come at all. Peace, justice, humanity, charity—these cannot be legislated into being. They are the result of a Divine Grace. I have never seen the necessity for reliance upon religion rather than upon law better expressed than in a great truth uttered by Mr. Tiffany Blake, of Chicago, when he said: "Christ spent no time in the ante-chamber of Caesar." An act of Congress may indicate that a reform is being or has been accomplished, but it does not of itself bring about a reform.

Perhaps, too, there is a lesson in contentment in the life of this devout man. He never had any of the luxuries of this life. Even its conveniences did not reach him, and of its absolute necessaries he had a scanty share. Without ever having the enjoyment of a real home, constantly on the move, poorly clad, often wretchedly sheltered, much of the time insufficiently nourished, yet his great spirit pressed on to the end, always toward the mark of his calling. His recompepense was not in the thiugs of the earth. Yet who can doubt that as he beheld his handiwork, as he saw his accomplishments grow, there came to him a glorious satisfaction and a divine peace. No doubt he valued the material things of this life, and certainly they ought to be valued, and valued greatly, but he regarded it as his work to put a greater emphasis on the things of the spirit. He sought to prepare men for the sure maintenance and the proper enjoyment of liberty, and for the more certain production and the better use of wealth, by inspiring them with a reverence for the moral values of life.

What a wonderful experience he must have had, this prophet of the wilderness! Who shall say where his influence, written upon the immortal souls of men, shall end? How many homes he must have hallowed! What a multitude of frontier mothers must have brought their children to him to receive his blessing! It is more than probable that Nancy Hanks, the mother of Lincoln, had heard him in her youth. Adams and Jefferson must have known him, and Jackson must have seen in him a flaming spirit as unconquerable as his own. How many temples of worship dot our landscape; how many institutions of learning, some of them rejoicing in the name of Wesleyan, all trace the inspiration of their existence to the sacrifice and service of this lone circuit rider! He is entitled to rank as one of the builders of our Nation.

On the foundation of a religious civilization which he sought to build our country has enjoyed greater blessings of liberty and prosperity than was ever before the lot of man. These cannot continue if we neglect the work which he did. We cannot depend on the Government to do the work of religion. We cannot escape a personal responsibility for our own conduct. We cannot regard those as wise or safe counsellors in public affairs who deny these principles and seek to support the theory that society can succeed when the individual fails.

I do not see how any one could recount the story of this early Bishop without feeling a renewed faith in our country. He met a multitude of storms. Many of them caused him sore trials. But he never wavered. He saw wars and heard rumors of wars, but whatever may have been the surface appearance, underneath it all our country manifested then and has continued to manifest a high courage, a remarkable strength of spirit and an unusual ability, in a crisis, to choose the right course. Something has continued to guide the people. No tumult has been loud enough to prevent their hearing the still small voice. No storm has been violent enough to divert inspired men from constantly carrying the Word of Truth. The contests of the day have but been preparations for victories on the morrow. Through it all, our country has acquired an underlying power of judgment and stability of action which has never failed it. It furnishes its own answer to those who would defame it. It can afford to be oblivious to those who would detract from it. America continues its own way unchallenged and unafraid. Above all attacks and all vicissitudes it has arisen calm and triumphant; not perfect, but marching on, guided in its great decisions by the same spirit which guided Francis Asbury.

LET US BE LOGICAL!

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

I quoted our Lord's prayer for the unity of the church, recorded in John 17:20-23; and somebody replied that the passage might be just as reasonably urged against our being a separate church from the Southern Baptist. Most assuredly; but why this comparison? Does Christ approve in any way or to any degree the chasm that yawns between the Baptist and Methodist churches? I am sure that he does not. The difference between the two cases is that the chasm between the branches of Methodism is not so wide and could be more easily bridged, and hence is more inexcusable. Now Christ meant just what he siad in this prayer: "I pray for * * * them that believe on me through their word, that they may all be one." Who dares to say that this prayer does not take in the several branches of Methodism? Let us be logical, and not unreasonable!

Almost all of those who oppose the pending plan of unification insist that they are not opposed to unification, but to this plan. Destructive criticism is never wise or logical. The infidels thus attack our Bible. These opposers of our plan owe it to us and to themselves to give us constructive criticism: if the plan is not the best possible under all the circumstances, present one that is better. Let us be logical!

It is not sane to reject the whole idea of unification because the pending plan is not a perfect one. When the Constitution of the United States was presented for adoption by the several States it was bitterly opposed by very many. It required nearly three years to secure the approval of a sufficient number of States to enable an election of a President to be held. It consisted of but six articles, so small and so weak it seemed that it was ridiculed. Now by the addition of nineteen amendments it has twenty-five articles, and is honored and owned by millions and admired by multiplied millions more. God was behind it; and he is behind this plan of Methodist union now ridiculed as inefficient and incomplete, and he will bring out of it the strongest, most effective and glorious church the earth has ever known. Let us be logical, and go on with it, trusting in God! We will.

The pending plan has the endorsement of almost all of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 800 strong, and of almost four to one of our General Conference, 400 strong; how can these opposers of the plan hope to defeat it? If a minority just a few in excess of the one-fourth should defeat the will of the majority just short of three-fourths, what will be the feeling of injustice in the hearts of almost three-fourths of the church? Millions are hoping and trusting and praying as well as laboring that it does not occur; and it will not.

APPEAL TO THE OFFICIAL RECORDS.

In the Oct. 3, 1924, issue of Christian Advocate (Nashville) the "chairman of Commission on Unification" states: "It is certain that there are numerous and very serious errors in" the minority report submitted to the recent Chattanooga meeting. It is regrettable that these errors are not pointed out, for when such an assertion is made proof should be offered. He does, however, "call attention to only one of these errors, a misleading mistake which needs to be corrected."

The chairman says that the minority report "does mean and intended to mean one thing—namely, that the Plan of Separation adopted by the General Conference in 1844 provided that before it could become effective it was to be submitted to the members of the Annual Conferences and local ministry and membership of our entire territory amounting to nearly 500,000." (Black type supplied.)

The simple and natural reply to this statement of the meaning and intention of the minority is that they meant and intended to mean exactly, and only, what they said. So careful was the minority in presenting the facts that they quoted verbatim from the official report of the Louisville Convention, used quotation marks, and referred for authority to the volume and page.

The chairman says, putting the words in black type, that he "understands the minority report to say that the Plan of Separation adopted in 1844 provided that before it could become effective it had to be submitted to the vote of the membership of the church at large."

The minority deeply regrets that the chairman so completely misunderstands the officially quoted record and the statement made in the report. The words of the record and the statement of the minority are easy and simple and the meaning is plain. Not one word in the minority report can be found in which the assertion is made "that the Plan of Separation . . . provided that before it could become effective it had to be submitted to the vote of the membership of the church at large." That is not to read the report, but to read something into the report, and something not there and not intended to be there.

What is the exact question involved and how can it be definitely and authoritatively answered? The exact question is, Was the Plan of Separation, before its adoption by the Louisville Convention, submitted to the members of the Annual Conferences, the local ministry and membership of our entire terrotory? That question can be authoritatively answered by an appeal to the official records.

It is just possible that the chairman failed to consult the official records. There are two books, each entitled "History of the Organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South;" the first, the official record, published in Nashville, Tenn., in 1845, said by some writers to be rare; the second by Dr. Redford, published in 1871, now also out of print. In the references given below, the unbracketed figures refer to the official record, the bracketed numbers to Redford. In quoting this title the minority report refers only to the official record.

The day after the adjournment of the General Conference of 1844 the Southern delegates met in New York for consultation and adopted a plan of action. They submitted to the consideration of the Conferences "the expediency of concurring in the following plan of procuring the judgment of the church." Delegates were to be elected to a convention and instructed "conforming their instructions, as far as possible, to the opinions and wishes of the membership within their several Conference bounds." P. 104 (pp. 377, 378.)

That this does not refer simply to the preachers, and is not confined to the "border," is made abundantly clear by the address those delegates published. That address is "to the ministers and members" of the church in the South. P. 105 (p. 378.)

The body of the address says the delegates "thought proper to invoke the attention of the church in the South to a state of things they are compelled to regard as worthy the immediate notice and action of the church throughout all the" South. P. 105 (p. 380.) "The plan does not decide that division shall take place; but simply, and it is thought securely, provided that it may, if it be found necessary. Of this necessity, you (i. e., ministers and members to whom the address is directed) are to be the judges." P. 106 (p. 381.)

Lest some one else may misunderstand the record and the minority report, let it be said once for all that this consultation of the membership was not for the purpose of adopting the Plan of Separation, but as a sure guide to those on whom the responsibility for the purely legal vote rested. This consultation of the views of the members was, with our fathers, a matter of propriety and justice. A referendum in this country on the League of Natios would not legally bind the President and Senate, but it is not likely that the result would be disregarded. A great political party has just demanded such a referendum.

The address further says: "We beseech our brethren of the ministry and membership . . . to examine this matter carefully, and weighing it well in all its bearings, try to reach the conclusion most proper under the circumstances." P. 106 p. 382.) (Black type supplied.) "Disposed, however, to defer to the judgment of the church, we leave this subject with you. Our first and most direct object has been to bring it fully before you, and giving you an opportunity to judge and determine for yourselves, await your decision. The minority from the South in the late General Conference were most anxious to adjourn the decision in the case of Bishop Andrew, with all its attendant results, to the Annual Conferences and to the church at large." P. 107 (p. 383.)

Following the General Conference of 1844, the Southern Annual Conferences met in their first sessions from September, 1844, to March, 1845. At these Annual Conference sessions the Plan of Separation was considered. The Virginia Conference adopted the following: "That, from the ample sources of information before your committee, in numerous primary meetings, which have been held in various charges within our pastoral limits, and the proceedings of quarterly meeting conferences, which we have the most sufficient reason to regard as a fair and full exponent of the mind and will of the membership upon the subject of the action of the recent General Conference, and the propriety of division—we are of opinion that it is the mind of the laity of the church, with no exception sufficient to be regarded as the basis of action." P. 140 (p. 611.)

The North Carolina Conference adopted the following: "From the reports of quarterly meeting conferences and numerous voluntary meetings within the bounds of the North Carolina Conference, both of ministers and people, we feel assured that it is the mind of our people and preachers fully to sustain the action of the Southern and Southwestern delegates." Pp. 142-3 (p.613.) Our chairman says in his article: "Only along the 'border' did the Plan of Separation allow the laymen to vote on anything." North Carolina was not on the border, and yet that Conference certifies "that it is the mind of our people and preachers fully to sustain the action of the Southern and Southwestern delegates."

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The report of the Greenwood District was displayed on the board, and showed the following: 8 meetings held in mission territory, 53 members received in them; 2 new churches organized and 86 laymen reported assisting the pastors in holding services; total new members received in the district, 417; charges paying salary in full,16, and benevolences, 11; total Centenary money raised, $1,330; total for Christian Eudcation, $2,966; total for Superannuate Endowment fund, $5.925. The names of the pastors of this district were called and their characters were passed.

A resolution was submitted by V. C. Curtis to change the present standing rule of our Conference regarding the election of delegates to the district conference, which in the future shall be one delegate chosen by each congregation for every 100 members, provided each church shall have one delegate. The resolution was adopted.

V. C. Curtis presented a resolution for the building committee of the Orphans' Home, relative to financing the erection of the new main building now in course of construction, which was adopted.

Dr. H. T. Carley, editor of our Conference Organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was presented to the Conference, and gave an address concerning the work of his office.

W. H. Mounger read the report of the Committee on Hospitals, which was adopted. Pending its adoption, Dr. L. H. Estes, Hospital Secretary, addressed the Conference.

Dr. Bailey, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of the State, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

Statistics of the Sardis District were displayed on the blackboard, and showed that 5 meetings were held in mission territory, which brought 30 new members into the church, and resulted in one new church being organized; 47 laymen of the district had helped the pastors in holding services; 488 members were received on profession; 18 charges paid 100 per cent on salaries, and 8 on benevolences. There were collected for Centenary, $3,139; for Education, $1,744; for Superannuate Endowment fund, $2,164. The names of all the preachers of the Sardis District were called and their characters passed.

Question 12, "Who has withdrawn?" was called. J. H. Ingram.

Judge Percy Bell presented a request, signed by a large number of laymen, to the Bishop that he use the evening hour to present his views on the pending unification plan. After some hesitation, the Bishop consented to do so.

The Columbus District work was displayed. It showed 578 new members received in the district; 20 charges 100 per cent on salary, and 11 charges 100 per cent on benevolences; Centenary cause, $2.136; Education, $3,991; Superannuate Endowment fund, $8,484. The names of the preachers of this district were called and their characters passed.

Rev. Charles Assaf, of the Mississippi Conference, was introduced and addressed the Conference concerning his work among the foreigners of our State.

T. H. Lipscomb read report No. 1 of the Board of Education relative to pastors' assistants at our State institutions of education, which was adopted.

B. P. Jaco read the report of our Memorial Home in New Orleans, which was received for record.

Brother Clanton read the Orphans' Home report, which was adopted.

Rev. E. O. Harbin, of the General Epworth Board, was introduced to the Conference.

Announcements were made and the benediction pronounced.

Afternoon.

The invitation to visit the State institutions at Columbus and Starkville was accepted by a large body of the members of the Conference, who spent the afternoon in trips to the Mississippi College for Women and the Agricultural and Mechanical College. Most of the delegates went to Columbus, where the girls are.

At 7:30 the members of the Conference and local congregation had the pleasure of hearing Rev. H. C. Tucker, one of our missionaries from Brazil, who has been thirty years in the service there, give a short account of his work, and Bishop Ainsworth gave his views on the pending unification plan.

Saturday, Fourth Day.

Bishop Ainsworth assumed the chair of the Conference for the fourth session at 8:30 a. m. The Conference sang, "He Leadeth Me." Rev. J. A. Randolph read from John 15:1-11, the Conference sang, "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," and E. S. Lewis led in prayer.

After reading and adopting the minutes of the previous session, the statistical reports of the Corinth and Greenville Districts were reviewed. In the Corinth District six meetings were held in mission territory, 112 new members secured, two churches organized, and 26 laymen assisted the pastors in holding services. The total columns showed 559 accessions on profession; 13 charges reported 100 per cent on salaries, and 5 on benevolences; Centenary money raised, $7,333; Education, $3,278; Superannuate Endowment fund, $3,191.

Special evangelistic work in this district was financed by one of the Christian laymen of Booneville, Mr. J. B. Reynolds, who supported a local evangelist, Rev. J. T. Gullett, to do work in the missionary territory of the district.

The names of the preachers of this district were called and their characters passed.

Report from the Greenville District showed 7 meetings held in mission territory, 115 members gained and 7 new churches organized. The total columns showed 422 new members; all salaries and benevolences 100 per cent paid; on Centenary, $1,131; on Education, $7,000, and on Superannuate Endowment fund, $694. Much improvement was made during the year in our church property in this district. The membership of Leland paid an average of $80 per capita to church causes during the year. The names of the preachers of the district were called and their characters were passed.

Rev. T. W. Dye, who for many years was a member of the Conference and had rendered valuable service, requested to be readmitted that he might end his days as a member of this body. The Conference gladly voted to readmit him, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, the Centenary Secretary of the Mississippi Conference and the new Secretary for this Conference, was introduced, and addressed the Conference concerning his task.

Under question 19, O. A. Clark, J. F. Watson, and R. C. Nanney were elected to elder's orders.

Grenada was selected as the place for the next meeting of the Conference.

Reports from the Committees on Sabbath Observance, Christian Literature, and Board of Education were read and adopted.

The hour for the order of the day having arrived, the Bishop called the class for admission to the front, and after delivering to them an earnest charge concerning the privileges, responsibilities and high order of their calling, and propounding to them the disciplinary questions on admission, which they satisfactorily answered, the Conference voted unanimously to receive them into full connection. The members of the class are: W. L. Atkins, G. C. Gregory, G. W. Robertson, R. E. Woodfin.

R. M. Evans was granted the superannuate relationship.

The interest of Grenada College was taken up, when R. M. Weaver presented a resolution concerning the steps to be taken to secure Grenada College as an A-grade college. The matter was discussed with absorbing interest by many of the brethren, showing that the work of the college has the sympathy and interest of all the members of the Conference, and when the vote was taken adopting the resolution for a special assessment of $15,000 for immediate needs, it was unanimously adopted. During the discussion, Miss Virginia Thomas, a product of the college and now the Elementary Superintendent of our Sunday school work in the Conference, made a plea for the college that touched the hearts of all.

Rev. Mr. Walters, pastor of the Christian Church, and Mrs. T. M. Clark, president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Conference, were introduced to the Conference.

After announcements, the Conference adjourned to meet at 2:30 p. m. in afternoon session, with the benediction pronounced by T. M. Brownlee.

The Committee on Public Worship announced the following services for Sunday: At the Methodist church, love feast at 9:30 a.m., conducted by E. H. Rook; preaching at 11 a. m. by Bishop Ainsworth, and at 7:30 p. m. by J. H. Felts; deacons to be ordained at the close of the morning service, and elders at the close of the evening service.

At the Presbyterian church, J. R. Countiss at 11 a. m., and John Robertson at 7:30 p. m.

At the Baptist church, E. Nash Broyles at 11 a. m., and C. C. Alexander at 7:30 p. m.

At the Christian Church, J. B. Randolph at 11 a. m., and W. R. Lott at 7:30 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

Conference met at 2:30 p. m., with W. W. Woollard in the chair, who, after the Conference had sung, "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," read from II Corinthians, third chapter, and called on J. J. Baird to lead in prayer. The Conference sang hymn 180, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Secretary Countiss read the minutes of the morning session, which were adopted.

Reports from the various boards and committees were read, some commented on, and all adopted.

Mrs. T. M. Clark spoke words of greeting from the women of the Woman's Missionary Societies, telling of some of the work they are doing and some they would like to do.

Two or three paragraphs from the report of the Committee on Temperance and Social Service are worthy of special mention. They are as follows: "We are glad to restate the position of our church on the divorce question. We sincerely hope our State Legislature will see fit to do some legislative work on this matter by reducing the number of causes for which divorce may be granted in this State. There are now eleven of these causes, and we stand on the one Bible ground, and hope to see the time when this will be the one legal cause recognized."

"The home is the basis of the nation, and we really view with alarm the indication of the decadence of the American Christian home. We urge upon our people the re-establishment of the family altar, and the religious instruction of the children in the home."

"We stand for clean amusements. We recognize the need of entertainment and amusement for our people; but we insist upon clean amusements and recreations. We condemn suggestive and immoral picture shows and theatres and the practice of gambling at baseball and other games."

During the progress of the afternoon session, the Bishop came in and resumed the chair.

The report on Lay Activities was unusually interesting and suggestive. Our laymen are becoming more and more prominent and effective in the work of the church. D. H. Hall was elected again as Conference Lay Leader.

The report of the statistical secretaries was made, and showed considerable gain in all departments of church work. A very noticeable gain in Epworth Leagues and members was reported. Last year we had reported 109 Leagues and 3,854 members; this year we show 130 Leagues and 9,067 members.

A. T. Clanton, an elder from the Little Rock Conference, and J. F. Watson, an undergraduate from the Mississippi Conference, were received by transfer, and L. W. Summers was reported transferred to the South Carolina Conference.

A little time was given the Conference Relief Association to present its claims to the preachers and for them to elect new officers. T. H. Dorsey was elected president; J. R. Countiss, vice president; R. A. Tucker, secretary and treasurer, and J. E. Stephens, assistant secretary and treasurer.

The Bishop inquired carefully if all committees and boards had made reports, the minutes of the afternoon session were read, and the Conference adjourned to meet in memorial session Sunday at 3 p. m., and to have the reading of appointments at the close of the service Sunday night.

Sunday, Fifth Day.

The Conference met in its annual love feast at 9:30 a. m. Brother E. H. Rook, one of our honored superannuates, conducted the service. The congregation sang, "Rock of Ages," Brother Rook read a lesson from John 10:1-21, and spoke some words about Jesus, the good shepherd. E. M. Shaw led in prayer. While bread and water, the emblems of Christian fellowship, were being passed around, the congregation sang, "There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood." The hour and a half was spent in giving joyful testimonies of Christian experiences, interspersed with songs and ehouses.

Long before the hour for preaching had arrived, the church had been filled to overflowing by a vast congregation of people from the town and country for fifty and seventy-five miles or more around.

The location of the churches at West Point is convenient, so that those crowded out of one church would not have far to go to attend another church.

The question of an auditorium large enough to hold the people who come to the last day of the Annual Conference is an important matter that some day we will have to seek to solve. With good roads and the autos, people will come for miles to hear the Bishop and hear the reading of the appointments.

At the 11 o'clock hour, Bishop Ainsworth preached a great sermon from the text found in I Corinthians 15:3, on the meaning of the suffering and death of Jesus Christ.

Following the sermon, W. L. Atkins, G. W. Robertson, and R. E. Woodfin were ordained deacons.

Memorial Service.

At 3 p. m., the Conference assembled in memorial service, with L. A. McKeown in the chair. He read Psalm 23, and J. E. Cunningham led in prayer. The male quartet rendered beautifully and effectively, "That Beautiful Land."

In answer to question 14, "What preachers have died during the Year," the answer was given: J. H. Smith, whose memoir was read by R. A. Tucker; J. A. Goad, whose memoir was read by B. P. Jaco; R. I. Collins, whose memoir was read by T. H. Dorsey; J. W. Boswell, whose memoir was read by J. A. Randolph, and J. M. Huggin, whose memoir was read by W. A. Bowlin.

R. P. Neblett requested the privilege of reading a tribute to the memory of P. W. Shell, a layman, who for over fifty years, had been a loyal, faithful and prominent member of the Methodist church.

Tender words of love, affection, honor and praise to the memories of these our departed brethren were spoken by many of the preachers.

At the close, the minutes of the session were read and approved.

Evening and Closing Service.

Rev. J. H. Feits preached at 7 p. m., from text taken from Luke 12:21, following which the Bishop, assisted by L. M. Lipscomb, who read the Epistle; R. A. Tucker, who read the Gospel; W. W. Mitchell, W. S. Shipman, J. B. Randolph, W. W. Woollard, and J. M. Wyatt, who assisted in the laying on of hands, ordained to the office of elder in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the following: W. W. Bruner, G. D. Burt, J. S. Maxey, R. G. Moore, O. A. Clark, and R. C. Nanney. Two, W. O. Hunt and J. F. Watson, who have been elected to elder's orders, but were absent, will be ordained later.

The Conference was called to order for its closing session, all unfinished businesss was attended to, and resolutions of thanks and appreciation were adopted by a rising vote. The Bishop made some amusing, wise, and sensible concluding remarks, commending the preachers to their fields of labor for the coming year, read the appointments, and the fifty-fifth session of the North Mississippi Conference was brought to a close with the benediction.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

Every church in every pastoral charge in the Greenville District met its assessments in full.

The beautiful flowers and ferns with which the church was decorated were a joy to the eyes.

* * *

Those having the decoration of the church in charge kept a good supply of beautiful fresh flowers around the choir and pulpit, which were a feast to the eyes of all.

The male choir and quartet rendered some fine music, to the delight of the entire audience. "The Wayside Cross" was rendered very effectively by the quartet Friday evening.

* * *

Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb, the host of the Conference, had made complete preparations for the meeting of the body, and everything was in readiness from the very beginning. Nothing was lacking for the comfort and convenience of the guests.

The editor of the Advocate was most delightfully entertained in the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Vanlandingham, devout members of the Baptist church. Fellow-guests were Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. W. C. Beasley, and Rev. L. H. Estes.

The Business Manager of the Advocate, Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, was most hospitably entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McDonald. Fellow-guests were Rev. J. J. Baird and Dr. Rainey.

* * *

Rev. D. L. Cogdell has been a member of the church for sixty-six years and an itinerant preacher for forty-five years. He was a faithful Confederate soldier, wounded three times. He is nearly 80 years old.

* * *

The presidency of Bishop Ainsworth gave great satisfaction. He was prompt in calling the Conference to order, considerate of all who desired to he heard by the Conference, brotherly in word and act toward all. His morning expositions of the Scriptures were inspiring and edifying.

Captain F. A. Howell, who has to his credit the distinction of having been a delegate to the first session of the North Mississippi Conference held fifty-four years ago, was a familiar member in attendance on this session.

The West Point Methodist church is one of the finest in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. Its pastor and people were untiring in their efforts to give the members of the Conference their best in attention and entertainment.

Rev. D. W. Babb, who was granted the superannuate relation at this session of the Conference, has made a remarkable record. In fifty years of active service he did not miss a single quarterly, district, or Annual Conference; and during that time he did not miss more than ten appointments on account of personal illness.

* * *

The papers read at the meeting of the Historical Society on Tuesday night were valuable contributions to the history of Methodism in North Mississippi. It was evident their authors, Messrs. White, Bingham, and Duncan, had made thoroughgoing investigations.

The brides and grooms of less than a year's standing in the Conference were given special invitation to the Conference and reserved seats for them were blocked off in the center of the church. These young, blushing brides are Mrs. W. C. Galceran, Jr., Mrs. S. E. Ashmore, and Mrs. N. N. Maxey.

* * *

R. M. Evans, who takes a superannuate relationship at this session of the Conference, will make his home in Holly Springs. He is the best penman in the State, and any one wishing visiting cards prepared by a skilled penman could not do better than to get in touch with Brother Evans.

The North Mississippi Conference has seven members who have been members of the body fifty years or more. They are: D. L. Cogdell, who joined in 1868; J. J. Brooks, who is still on the active list and joined in 1869; W. A. Langley, who joined in 1870; J. W. Bell, who joined in 1873, W. J. O'Bryant, who joined in 1873; D. W. Babb, who is retiring at this Conference from the effective list and who joined in 1874, and E. Johnson, who joined in 1874.Most of these were in attendance on the session of the Conference.

The tobacco question was given some airing during the second day's session, in connection with the class for admission on trial. The law of the church is that the Committee on Admission require the candidates for admission to give pledge that they will abstain from the use of tobacco. This law has been in effect for ten years. Some of the candidates for admission have been users of tobacco for some years, and hesitate a little before giving their pledge to abstain from its use. However, no true, loyal Methodist preacher who values his word of honor has failed to live up to this requirement of our great church.

Rather a peculiar coincidence happened at the close of Saturday's session. Four of our presiding elders have finished four years of service, and they have to move. They are R. A. Tucker, J. B. Randolph, J. H. Felts and A. T. McIlwain. One spokesman after another from the several districts where these brothers have served, called their respective elders and members of the districts off into the several different corners of the church, to take some action that seemingly had a mystery about it. The guess is that the preachers of these several districts were presenting some token of appreciation to their beloved elders, who had served the districts so faithfully and acceptably.

OCTOBER 15 TO JANUARY 15

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT

DO YOU KNOW

That This Movement Has Right-of-Way for the Next Three Months?

HAVE YOU HEARD

1. That it has collected $5,000,000 of the $9,000.000 already due up to October 1, 1924?
2. That it has laid the foundation for and helped to raise $7,000,000 "New Money" in special campaigns, of which $3,000 000 has been paid?
3. That it has paid many old debts that have been sapping the life of our schools for years?
4. That it has increased by thousands of dollars—yes, millions—the endowments of our colleges and universities?
5. That it has erected many new buildings to meet the growing needs of our schools?
6. That it has increased substantially the salaries of underpaid officers and teachers?
7. That it has enrolled 7,000 Life Service Volunteers for full time Christian service?

THE LITTLE DRESSMAKER.

By Margaret Brown Elms.

I think this pretty piece of silk
Will make my doll a dress.
It doesn't take so very much,
A yard will do, I guess.

I'll need the scissors first of all;
Then thread and needle, too.
And on my finger I will place
A thimble nice and new.

But I must cut most carefully
And measure all quite right;
For if I don't, the sinken gown
Will be a dreadful sight.

My stitches must be very straight
And every one quite small.
I guess it takes a patient girl
To dress a nice new doll.

GOLDIE BUMBLEBEE AND THE BLUE FLOWER.

By Rose D. Nealley.

Goldie Bumblebee sat rocking in the breeze on the end of a spray of goldenrod. It was a warm day, and he did not feel at all like gathering honey, for it was such sticky, hot work! His mother, Mrs. Busy Bumblebee, flew by with a load of honey and saw him there idling.

"Why, Goldie Bumblebee!" she cried. "What do you mean by sitting there doing nothing? Who ever heard of a lazy bee in the Bumblebee family? If you do not bring home your share of honey tonight, you shall have no supper."

"Yes, mother," said Goldie, and stretched his wings slowly as he prepared for flight. "I'll go to work at once. Where do you think I can find the most honey?"

"I should think there was enough right under your nose," she replied, and hastened away to the clover field.

Goldie worked steadily for a time and then began to grow tired. "I think I shall make a trip over to the pasture yonder," he said to himself. "I believe a piece of sky has dropped out, or maybe there's a little pond there, for I can see a big patch of blue."

Goldie sailed away in the direction of the patch of blue, and when he reached it he found that it was neither sky nor water, but made up of countless blue flowers, such as he had never seen. They stood up very straight and stiff in little groups, and the heart of every flower was protected by dark blue petals with silky blue fringes.

"My," Goldie thought, "doesn't it look cool and pleasant down in the depths of those flowers! I think I shall crawl into the biggest one I can find and have a little nap. Then I shall feel more like work, and I can finish filling my honey-pot before supper."

It was even better in the depths of the blue flower than he had thought. The lovely silken petals protected him from the sun and shed a soft light like a faint twilight.

"This is pleasant!" breathed Goldie softly, and fell asleep.

When he woke up he did not find it so pleasant. The sun must have gone down, for it was very dark and he could not find any way to get out of the flower. The silken fringes had twisted themselves together tightly and Master Goldie Bumblebee was a prisoner. He buzzed and scolded and buzzed, but it was of no use. He could not get out of the flower.

How he wished he had kept busy and filled his honey-pot as his mother had told him to do! If he had, he would now have been safe and snug at home with the rest of his family. They could never find him away off in this pasture, shut up in the heart of a flower.

He stopped buzzing and scolding at last and lay very quiet and even went to sleep again.

When he woke up the second time it was no longer dark in the flower. The sun had risen, and its light penetrated the blue walls of his prison. The blue fringes above his head began slowly to unfold, and soon he saw a tiny opening, no bigger than the head of a pin. It grew larger and a little larger until, with a great jump, Master Goldie pushed his head through the opening and found himself free.

Was there ever a happier young bee? He did not delay an instant, but flew home as fast as his gauzy wings could carry him.

You may be sure his family were glad to see him, for they had begun to be afraid that he was lost.

His brothers and sisters did not believe him when he told them of the flower with fringes that folded itself up at night, but Mrs. Bumblebee said: "He's right. I know the flower well. It is called the fringed gentian."

"I shall never go there again," promised Goldie. "Next time I will fill my honey-pot in the clover field and come right home with it."—Youth's Companion.

LOVE A DIVIDEND.

"Is everything all settled?" Pen looked up eagerly as Mrs. Melrose entered the room. "Yes; I shall have to start back to-morrow afternoon, I fear." And Mrs. Melrose sat down on the window seat beside her young friend. "I shall be sorry to leave you people and go back to the hot city."

"To-morrow?" Pen inquired anxiously. "Can Jean get ready so soon?"

Mrs. Melrose slipped her hand over Pen's slim hands and answered gently: "She isn't going with me, dear. She has decided that her place is at home."

"Isn't going!" Pen was astounded. "She intends to give up a chance like that just to stay in a poky old town like this and never amount to anything! O Mrs. Melrose, I did think she would see what this means and realize that she hasn't any right to spend all her life at home puttering around like an ordinary person. Talents like hers are a sacred trust, and they shouldn't be wasted. You agreed with me; you said you did!" Pen looked at her friend reproachfully.

"I did say just that, dear," Mrs. Melrose replied. "Talents are a sacred trust, but are fame and fortune the only valuable results of such talents?"

"But she doesn't do anything with them. Not—"

"But, Pen, dear," her friend interrupted her, "who decorated the booths at the bazaar last week? Who designed Miss Peabody's window decorations and the interior of her shop when her business was almost at a standstill and made it so enticing that every one stopped to look and then to buy? How about Mrs. Moody, that dear old lady with the crippled leg? Who except Jean would design those fascinating tatted edges for her shuttle to weave and her mind to keep busy with? And I wonder what paid helper would run over to Mrs. Atwater's and draw funny pictures for little Lorrie to keep him quiet while his frail, worn little mother finished her canning or mopped her big kitchen floor? Pen, dear, the love and sympathy that Jean is scattering around here are a means of greater inspiration to many more hearts than the dresses she might design for any New York house."

"H'm." Pen looked thoughtfully at her friend. "You mean it's like putting your money in the bank and letting it draw interest year after year. Sometimes it yields more than big investments and speculations."

"Exactly," her friend answered; "and love is the biggest dividend any investment can pay."

"You're a dear!" cried Pen, and squeezed her friend's hand appreciatively. "I—I think I'll check up my own assets and see whether they are all properly invested."—Selected.

And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it, . . . but the redeemed shall walk there; and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.—Isaiah 35 8-10.

Go to nature, you wrinkled, careworn, caretorn souls; and consider the workings of the Lord in the flowers of the field. This is the real "nature cure," and it has the advantage of being recommended by the Savior himself. We are to sit down in the presence of the wild flowers, and seek their secret, and ask what suggestion they have to make for the living of and acceptable life in Christ.—J. H. Jowett.

Prof. Bowen has been at the head of the Department of Religious Education at Millsaps since its inception, and under his wise and consecrated leadership this department of the coliege has developed a work that is invaluable to the church in training Christian leadership.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Commissioner of the Mississippi Conference for the Methodist Orphans' home writes as follows: "The Orphanage new building work is making steady progress. The building was started Sept. 2, and is being pushed rapidly. Our people are responding to this call of the church and its orphans, and the hope is, the work wiii not have to stop untii the children are housed comfortably and safely. Through the Commissioner, the Mississippi Conference has subscribed over $21,000. Over haif of this amount has been paid. The baiance is due in November and December, most of which wiii he paid promptly, we trust. There are over 100 appiications for children to be entered and cared for. The need of help was never more pressing. The workers are encouraged and hopefui."

LEST WE FORGET.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

In the face of things we iack, it is easy to forget the things we have. Ahab was put in bed for the iack of a vineyard. It is striking to recall how often we are enjoined in Scripture to remember. Almost the best or worst things in life are the memories we store up. "Biess the Lord, O my soui, and forget not ali his benefits." In this mood we can raiiy our courage and kindle our hopes. Jesus must needs meet the discouragement and perpiexity of his disciples with a rebuke of their stupid forgetfuiness. If he did not forget us yesterday, it is uniikeiy that he has lost count of the hairs on our heads to-day.

Let us sit down with our memories. Let us put off the sackcloth of despair and wash off the ashes of despondency that we may be fit for the fellowship of the angels that bring us good tidings out of the past. Let us he grateful for five hundred missionaries being witness for us in the ends of the earth. Let us remember their deeds and their daring and take heart.

Let us he grateful for one hundred and fifty-six men and women in China, fifty-seven of whom are teaching in our institutions, the future ieaders of Christian civilization; sixty-nine of whom are proclaiming the saving Gospel far and wide; thirty of whom are engaged in the ministry of healing and at this moment piaying the Good Samaritan to multitudes whom the outiaw, War, has smitten and wounded. Let us summon the deeds of Allen and Parker and the Lambuths and rejoice in the fruitage of Soochow University, with its five hundred students, along with many other similar institutions, and Soochow Hospital, with its incomparable ministries for both men and women. Let us aiso be giad of those brave and worthy successors who to this hour push the lines forward, then highiy resolve that we will not desert them.

Let us remember the church in Japan, shaken by earthquake, handicapped by International complications, fronted by entrenched paganism both there and here. Let us share their burdens and aiso their patient endurance and heroic perseverance. They are our brethren nearly six thousand strong, the fruit of our faith and daring, the friends of our Lord. Have we no joy in Kwansei Gakuin, with its 17,000 students and its milliondoiiar equipment? Have we no sense of its meaning to Methodist unity, as it stands as a bond not oniy hetween Asia and America, but between the Methodists of Canada and the Methodists of the South, who share equaiiy its hurdens and its triumphs?

How can we fail to rejoice in Hiroshima Giris' School, with thirty-five years of struggle and victory, its 900 students and its army of mothers and teachers and ieaders of the womanhood of the East? Do we wish our children to remember that we could forget so great a thing and leave them to remember our neglect? Two of our bishops have died there, Ward and Lambuth, and the elder Lambuth. Can we forget?

Can we think of Korea with indifference? Have we no joy in the zeal of eighty missionaries, and the devotion of neariy 8,500 members whlch has in three years pushed out into four hundred new villages and estahiished new centers of Christian influence? Have we no place in our thought for the more than twenty thousand inquirers newly touched by the Gospel? Let us pause and reflect on the fact that our reduced appropriation has already greatly crippled this great evangelistic program. Remember how "that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality." In the past five years they have increased their giving over six hundred per cent. Baron Yun has in the past year given 14,000 yen to the Songdo Higher Common School, of which he is president. Let us try to think how it would discount our gratitude to retrench in the presence of such facts.

Can we forget that latest chapter in our Methodist adventures in faith—the Siberia Mission? It was on this final frontier that a mortal arrow pierced the frame of Bishop Lambuth. Here he bequeathed to the church "the lustiest mission we have ever organized."

As we try to gather this vast and bewildering array of heroic achievement that sets in new and more convincing terms Wesley's triumphant assurance, "The best of all is, God is with us," one cannot think it would displease Paul if we paraphrased his tribute to the Macedonians and turned into the purpose "that the abundance of our joy terrifying prosperity shall abound unto the riches of our liberality."

The subject of this sketch, MRS. LAURA L. DeLAP, was born Sept. 16, 1849, at the family home, Bellview, Natchez, Miss. She departed this life July 26, 1924. According to the best information to be had, she joined the Jefferson Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on her sixteenth birthday, during the pastorate of the late Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D. She was united in holy wedlock to the late Enoch George DeLap, the 21st of July, 1874, Dr. W. H. Watkins performing the ceremony. Miss Laura, her only child, lived with her mother, and did all that a loving daughter could for the comfort of her dear mother. She was at her bedside waiting and watching till the end came.

Sister DeLap was indeed a good woman, a devout Christian. For several years she was confined to her room, but through it all she never complained. As her pastor for nigh on to three years, I had occasion to be in her home a good many times. Her conversation was of heaven and heavenly things. She loved all of her pastors—they were precious in her memory; she loved her church; but above all she loved her Lord. For her to die was gain. Late in the evening of the 27th of July, as the sun was hiding his face behind those wonderful bluffs of the mighty father of waters, she was gently laid away to await the coming of her loved one, and her many friends.

"Asleep in Jesus, far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be,
But thine is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

C. C. EVANS, Pastor.

PETTUS W. SHELL was born in Newberry District, South Carolina, April 13, 1841, and died at his home in Houston, Miss., Oct. 23, 1924. He was therefore 83 years of age. He had not been in robust health for several years, but was able to attend church and be about the house. He slipped away during the night, and the family found him sleeping the last long sleep when they arose on the morning of Thursday, Oct. 23. His father moved to Mississippi, bought land and settled in Chickasaw County in 1845. His mother died when he was 6 years old. At the age of 20 he joined the Buena Vista Rifles, and was mustered into the service of the Confederate Army, Company A, Seventeenth Mississippi, April 27, 1861. Surviving this conflict he took up the tasks of life, and was in the mercantile business at Houston for thirty-five years, but that which distinguished him most was his service to his church and the religious life of his community. He served as a steward in the Methodist church for fifty-one years, and as superintendent of the Sunday school for more than twenty-five years. During most of this time he was a regular attendant, and member of the Annual Conference, as a layman from his district. He served a term of four years on the Board of Supervisors of Chickasaw County, and was for twenty-four years a member of the Board of Education. He was married in 1866 to Miss Elmina Westbrooks, who died Aug. 11, 1871, leaving one daughter, now Mrs. Maggie Walker, of San Antonio, Tex. On Nov. 28, 1877, he was married a second time to Miss Susie E. Mathews, of Monroe County, who with two children, Frank and Mary (Mrs. W. W. Jack) survive him. A son, Dr. Elkin Shell, died June 4, 1918. The quiet frame of this good and godly man was tenderly laid to rest in the family plot in the cemetery at Houston, Friday afternoon, Oct. 24, after funeral services from the Methodist church, conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. E. McKeithen, assisted by Rev. J. W. Bell and Rev. R. P. Neblett.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, MR. N. A. HURST, one of our most influential laymen and members of the quarterly conference of the Lake charge, has been called by our Heavenly Father to his reward, be it resolved:

1. That we greatly miss his presence at all our church services, and his godly counsel at our official meetings.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the wife of our beloved brother, with our most earnest expression of love and sympathy.

AVOIDING "THE BLUES" IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By M. W. Brabham.

One of the favorite methods of seeking to increase Sunday school membership has been the contest between two sides known as the "reds" and the "blues." Most people have frankly recognized that such methods are a snare and delusion and without genuine merit as a permanent or worth while plan for ingathering and upbuilding. It happens occasionally here and there that such a method is continued from year to year. It is a spasmodic plan and follows the line of least resistance. Such a plan is wholly unnecessary; and when other plans have been systematically introduced and followed for a period of months and years, the necessity for such efforts will have entirely been dissipated.

There is no comparison in the value as between the high-pressure contest, with all its attending dangers and frequent distresses, and the survey method with its carefully laid lines for following up the information secured.

The school which makes its yearly calendar will wisely provide for an annual survey of the community. This survey will be either independently or with other churches, depending on local conditions. The information must be studied and carefully distributed to the groups responsible for winning those outside. This information will constitute the list of "prospects" for each class or department of the school. Steadily, persistently, continuously, efforts will be made all through the year to enlist those who are eligible to membership. Certainly one who is already a member of some school is not eligible material for another school.

The survey will seek to win the prospect to membership in a particular class or department. The class or department, with its officers leading, will be made responsible for these prospective members. Reports will be called for and expected each month. There will be no guesswork about these projects. There will be accounts, regularly and methodically, of how a member was won or why a certain person refuses to come in.

Make the survey.

Distribute the information.

Follow the prospects.

Report from month to month concerning efforts to win new members. Look after absentees. Let no member now enrolled become a member who has to be regained.

Prepare now to expand your organization for new members.

Prepare for a survey of your community and constituency.

Prepare for Rally Day.

Prepare for the Sunday School Membership Campaign.

Two hundred and fifty thousand new Sunday school members enrolled during the next three months is the goal of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

SUNDAY AND WEEK DAY WORK IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

The last General Conference charged the General Sunday School Board with responsibility for the oversight of week day religious instruction conducted in conjunction with Sunday school work, also with the determination of a curriculum for schools holding week day sessions in correlation with the Sunday sessions.

A great deal has been said during recent years about extending the time of the Sunday school into the week days. Many and various types of experiments in religious education work, including week day time, have been undertaken.

In view of the fact that this whole development is in a formative and experimental stage, the General Sunday School Board is not at this time seeking to promote any rapid extension of this movement. The more important thing at the present time seems to be to conduct a number of carefully supervised experiments. When some of the problems of providing a satisfactory curriculum, a uniform program, and a satisfactory administration have been worked out, it will then be time to undertake the general and more widespread promotion of this work.

Materials have been provided through the editorial department as a basis for the proposed experiments for schools with Sunday and week day sessions. The material for week days is closely correlated with the Sunday materials of the International Graded Lessons. These materials are now available for the Primary and the first Junior grades, and may be ordered of Lamar & Barton.

It is the desire of the General Sunday School Board to keep in close touch with every experiment in this field conducted in the church so that there may be opportunity to study the experiences and observe the results in the various experiments undertaken.

Mrs. V. R. McDonald has been elected by the General Sunday School Board as special representative to study the problems involved in this new development and to assist churches or communities undertaking this form of work. Churches or communities desiring to undertake this work may write to her at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. A brief "Manual of Suggestions for Church Schools with Sunday and Week Day Sessions" has been prepared, which includes a catalog of the curriculum materials referred to above. This may be ordered from the General Sunday School Board.

General Secretary Sunday School Board.

A SCHOOL BOY'S LETTER FROM AFRICA.

Minga M. E. C. M.,
July 30, 1923.

Mrs. Bush, good-bye.

My teacher, bow are you? with Rev. Clinton? I hope that Sir Bush be well, for we got word that you botb were sick, and were troubles on the path, but we bear ill that when you was writing the letter to send to Africa that he was little well.

We glad you arrive at Foreign In Mars. So I was glad when I saw your letter which you sent to me from Lualaba. We all are well, only one woman was dead, name Awuyl.

Tbank you for many things that you had teaches us; also God's way. Now God send unto me a little boy, he born in June 21. I named him Jacob Olenga.

So I' thankfully for God and to Sir C. C. B. helped me to buy wife. We many people wonders of your both kindness is very queer.

And Yema send good-bye to both. She was very well, God belped her. They are at Wembo-Nyama. I gone there, too, and got back.

We are busy for school and anothers works.

After I saw your little wife which you told me to make the sticks of teeths, but that day which, big Bula Matadi came. Sewing mashine was in sight, tben I had put it in masbine this day, indeed. But I did not know how to do. Beacous think it will lost in path if I send it to America. And I keep it in safely in house of Mrs. K. Wilson, in mashine.

Your friend,
RICHARD YEMBA.

(Note: This is a letter written by an African boy in our Congo Mission to Mrs. C. C. Bush, and received by her during her furlough in the United States. Sbe says of him):

"I am sending you a wonderful letter written by my 'wash Jack.' He was so interested in tbe English Series of Readers I took out, tbat I read him a few lessons in Primer, so he proceeded to learn English, alone, studying as he irons with book open before him. We translate his lists of unknown words when we have time, then he reads it again "with sense." No English is taught at the Mission, but you can see that we have a genius in Yemba. The letter will give you an insight into the native's capability, appreciation, devotion, honesty, faith."

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A STATEMENT.

I am enclosing you the following statement, issued by the twenty-four members of the Pacific Annual Conference, voting against tbe present plan of unification:

We, the members of the Pacific Annual Conference who voted against tbe resolution introduced in tbe session of 1924, which resolution proposed to express approval of the present plan of unification, desire to state that our negative vote was cast for tbe following reasons:

1. As a protest against what we believed was a violation of the spirit of the General Conference action, instructing the Annual Conference to take a vote on this plan in the sessions of 1925.

2. As a protest against what we believed was a violation of the General Conference action, instructing a secret ballot.

3. Our vote did not in any manner mean that we are opposed to honorable, workable, actual unification of American Methodism. On tbe other hand, we affirm that we are enthusiastically in favor of any plan of unification that will actually and in an honorable manner unify American Methodism.

4. Our vote was in opposition to the present plan, because we are convinced that it is not a plan of unification, and that its passage by the church will result in confusion, turmoil and endless strife, and will possibly wreck all hopes of actual unification of American Methodism.

This statement was signed by eighteen of tbe twenty-four thus voting. The other six were not at the seat of the Conference when the statement was formulated. Of tbose voting "nay," sixteen were ministers and eight were lay delegates. The vote stood 87 to 24.

BACK TO THE BIBLE.

Question: "Why go to church?"

Answer: To worship the God of the Bible and to become better prepared to do his will. The Bible alone offers an "excuse" for the existence of "a church." We must go to the Bible to find the true mission of the church, which is Christ's body. (Eph. 1:2-3.)

Don't go to church to hear political barangues or scientific discussions. While the Bible contains much scientific information, and the science of the Bible is correct, the Bible is not primarily a manual of science.

I understand that when a certain eminent man was in a city several years ago he addressed a number of the city pastors. He pictured a man seated in his easy armchair by the open fire one cold night reading a scientific magazine. Among other things he said: "I pity the man, under such conditions, tbat could not get more science than any of 'you fellows' could tell him in thirty minutes up at the church building." No, the church does not compete with tbe political wigwam nor the science lecture room. The true preacher is a witness and is commanded to preacb "the Word." The Bible is primarily a "Book of Redemption."

Then, we should "go to church" to hear and support the preaching of the Word, which embodies the good news of the Gospel, "How that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." (I Cor. 15:14.)

The primary work of the church is to bring men, women, boys and girls to a saving knowledge of Christ and to develop Christian character. "We are all children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." (Gal. 3:26.) "No man cometh to the Father but by me." (John 14:6.) "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (I Cor. 1:21.)—Selected.

A BUILDER OF BETTER LIVES.

After the severe testing of the centuries, the Christian church stands forth the admired of all who loved the best in life. It has not always been true to its founder, openly violating his commands. We are to remember that not all professors of religion are possessors. The genuine makes possible the counterfeit. Why should we think it strange to find tbe counterfeit in the church? That fact is not a reflection on tbe church, but rather on the one so acting.

Jesus said to his disciples: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." The command bas in large part been obeyed and has had great success. It has not outlived its usefulness, never so many sad hearts as now, never so many who are discouraged. These conditions can only be bettered by the Christian religion.

Great changes have come in the industrial and social world, and greater ones will follow, but the time will not come when the world can afford to forget God; among the strongest defenders of the church and the principles taught by Christ are some who are not his followers.

Only a few people care to live in a churchless community; for that reason town and addition promoters offer inducements for their erection. The protection and advantages we receive as citizens prove the justice of taxation, otherwise we are getting something for nothing. The man who never in any way contributes to the church is allowing others to pay for the benefits he receives.

If the church of Christ is a benediction to the community, if it has exerted a power in the advance of civilization, if it has been the builder of better lives, if it gives hope of a better life than this, if the church is accomplishing this—then justice demands that we rally to its support.—Selected.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Seashore Camp Ground Training School was organized October 25, 1924. A set-up meeting for this purpose was called by Rev. L. L. Roberts. Rev. B. F. Lewis, the Conference Superintendent of Leadership Training, enterprised the whole movement. The following committee was appointed to select the officers and Board of Directors: The presiding elder, the pastor of Frist Church, Gulfport; the pastor of First Church, Biloxi, Mr. D. R. Weston, and Mr. H. H. Hinton. This committee is to bring in its report at the meeting of the district stewards.

This school will be a great blessing to South Mississippi. It is hoped that from Laurel south will participate in the benefits of this school.

The reports received by this office indicate a great increase along all lines of Sunday school work. Our weak spot now is Wesley Bible classes. May we all be encouraged to go forward in this matter.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Conference Superintendent of Sunday Schools.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The Annual Conference Minutes show that we set some high goals for this Conference year, which ends Nov. 19, at Crowley. No doubt we will have an increased Sunday school enrollment, and I hope we will reach our goal of 5,000, which is less than 1,000 for each district.

Our goal for Standard Training Schools was seven, but we have held ten this year.

The last Standard Training School was held in New Orleans Oct. 19-25. The Educational Director of this school, Mr. H. P. Wall, writes: "We had 94 credits: Principles of Teaching 5, Beginners 5, Primaries 17, Juniors 26, Intermediate-Seniors 24, Administration 17. There were only 115 who actually started out to secure credit. The others who came Sunday afternoon were visitors. All of our twelve churches were represented ten in New Orleans proper and Algiers, and also McDonoghville. First Church had 18 credits, the largest number from this school or any other school we have held here. Algiers carried off the honors by taking home 16 credits, with the total number of officers and teachers amounting to only 23, the largest percentage of workers to secure credit in all four of our schools."

Mr. D. B. Keith, superintendent of Ida, La., who recently took a credit in the Standard Training School of Shreveport, writes: "Will you kindly mail me a supply of Membership Campaign literature? We want to meet next Sunday and make our plans."

Mr. and Mrs. Keith rode eighty miles each day to attend this school at Shreveport. If we had more superintendents of his kind we would make great progress in Religious Education.

REPORT OF THE FINDINGS COMMITTEE.

Of the Minden Standard Training School at Minden, La., Oct. 5-10, 1924.

To the Superintendent, Dean, Pastor, Instructors, Pupils and Visitors and all others interested in this our first Standard Training School, Greetings:

We, the members of the Findings Committee appointed by the pastor, beg leave to submit the following report:

It was our duty, as we understand it, to observe the school in its several departments and to note the conduct and progress of same, and to make report thereof at this time.

To our observation there have been so many possible benefits to be derived from this school that a complete report, however accurate and interesting, would be too lengthy to submit at this time. However, from the many expressions from those whose privilege it has been to attend the sessions of the various departments, we could not conclude otherwise, and it would be impossible for us to report to you, other than that a new and altogether exalted conception of our respective duties as officers, teachers, and pupils of the Sunday school has been experienced by every one at interest. We are sure that a vision of real constructive religious education has been gathered by all, and that there have been many who have silently resolved to apply themselves in the future in a more consecrated and dutiful effort in behalf of the youth of our church and community and have prayed to our Lord and Saviour for strength to sustain them in their resolutions.

It is our opinion that the accomplishment of this school will immediately result in renewed efforts that will extend throughout the several departments of our church and Sunday school, and that its efforts will be evidenced, even in the years to come.

With reference to the instructors, each and severally, we cannot speak too highly of their skill and untiring efforts in our behalf. It has been a privilege indeed to have been associated with Dr. Wynn, Dr. Stephens, Dr. Raulins and Mrs. Henry, all of whom have evidenced indisputably a rich knowledge of God's plan of life and salvation, and have interpreted and presented it to us in unmistakable form. To each and every one of them we wish to extend our earnest appreciation, and to assure them of a lasting memory of their contribution to our school and that theirs may be a long and altogether profitable service for the Master.

We desire to go on record as being under a deep and lasting debt of gratitude to Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent, for his presence and counsel, and to commend him for the wonderful development of this work in the Louisiana Conference. We believe that it is the most constructive work before the church to-day.

We also commend our pastor, Rev. W. C. Childress, who has been untiring in his efforts to secure this Training School for our church, and for making it possible that our people should enjoy its wonderful benefits.

In conclusion, it is our opinion that in the future the Standard Training School should be a fixed institution in our church; that the benefits derived from it cannot be dispensed with at any reasonable cost, and we hereby recommend that it be adopted as an annual institution and that provision be made for conducting it, in the annual budget of the church.

This report, we realize to be inadequate in the premises, we beg to submit, and ask that it be adopted by the school as a whole.

THE FRONTIER.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, stretches from Baltimore, Md., to Butte, Montana, a line probably four thousand miles long. This constitutes what we know as the frontier for our church. Embraced in this frontier we find the Baltimore, Western Virginia, Kentucky, Illinois, Denver, New Mexico, Pacific, Arizona, Northwest and West Oklahoma Conferences.

By the frontier we mean that section of the country where it is necessary for the whole church to supply funds and men to preach the Gospel, build churches and thus contribute to the evangelization of these sections.

In some States along the frontier only 6 or 7% of the population belongs to the Protestant churches. So that in our undertaking to make our contributions toward the evangelization of these States, we are not interfering with any other denomination. We are only undertaking to make a Christian America.

There are whole counties in the State of Arizona where nobody, neither Protestant nor Romanist, is undertaking to do the work of the kingdom for the people. There are vast stretches in New Mexico where this is true. The great West and Northwest, with their great fields and mines, are calling the people that way. They have a great citizenship, great colleges and universities. They need God. We cannot have a Christian America without having a Christian West and Northwest.

While our program in some of these sections may be slow, yet we are showing gain annually, and there is a hopeful spirit among the workers in these fields. Young men from the colleges and universities have answered the call to go to these sections as missionaries. Their hearts are in the work, and they are having a splendid response from the people. Our prayer is that the heart of the church may be with this program in endeavoring to establish the Kingdom of God in these waste and needy places, not that we may build altar against altar, but that we may build an altar where no altar now stands.

It will be interesting for you to know that in the last four years our membership in Arizona has trebled itself, and the membership in New Mexico has doubled itself, and there are calls coming now from county seat towns in the State of Arizona and other growing communities—Macedonian calls—to come over and help them. Sunday schools have been organized in private dwellings; services are being held under sheds and the boughs of great trees, hoping that the church may come to their aid with a pastor and small funds to help them erect chapels. Shall we answer these calls?

There are sections in the city of California where there are from 10,000 to 12,000 people and no church near them. You say: "Let them build their church and call their preacher." Why don't they do it in China and Japan? They don't do it in America for the same reason they don't do it there. They are not interested.

Will the church not pray to God for the evangelization of the great West, Northwest and Southwest?

Epworth League

WITH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

A live wire Epworth League has been organized at Daleville, in the Meridian District. There is a large membership, and all members are enthusiastic Leaguers.

The following officers have been elected: President, Miss Lillie McCarty; Vice President, V. B. Smith; Secretary, Miss Zula Britt; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Anna Allhoff.

Impressions of Brookhaven Assembly.

Rev. W. H. Saunders says of the Assembly:

"It was my pleasure to be present and take part in the exercises of the League Assembly of the Mississippi Conference at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, during the early part of June, 1924—9-15.

"Knowing as I do the importance of having our young people informed as to the statements of our doctrinal standards, their faith founded upon a divine Christ, and the sacrificial death and risen Lord, at a time the world is filled with all kinds of theories on these vital truths, I unhesitatingly say there is no better place to go than the League Assembly.

"I was deeply impressed with the devotional spirit that characterized every meeting, and the consecration of these fine young people to the cause of the Master."

Rev. J. O. Ware says of the Assembly:

"I count myself happy to have attended the Epworth League Assembly, June 9-15, at Brookhaven. The program as a whole reached the 'high water mark,' and could hardly be improved.

"Dr. J. A. Smith's message was of great value to me, while my greatest impressions were the eagerness and whole-hearted way the young people tried to learn, so as to be able to better serve their home League and church.

"As a member of the Epworth League Conference Board, I am well pleased with the work of the Assembly."

FROM WINNSBORO, LA.

Last Sunday evening the Bascom-Waters evangelistic party closed a three weeks' revival here. Brother Waters is one of our general evangelists, and was recommended by Rev. Mr. Stodghill, who had him hold a meeting in a church in Kentucky some years ago. Waters is a John-the-Baptist-like preacher, who cries aloud and spares not, giving both saints and sinners their portion. He has no trouble getting the crowd, and is a master of assemblies. His musicians are above the average, and are consecrated Christians. Though there was no great ingathering, all the churches of the town were greatly helped by the meeting. We erected a tabernacle. There was no difficulty about raising about $1,400 for the whole expense.

Evangelist Waters is now engaged in a tabernacle meeting at Rayville, La. We take great pleasure in recommending him and his party. His address is Clinton, Tenn.

Our work is closing out nicely here, despite the fact that folks say we have had the longest drought this part of the State ever had. Besides Winnsboro, we have a little country church, Magnolia; all former pastors will recall that for years this church has had a very small membership, but has always been noted for its record on finance. This year (they only have about six paying members), besides paying $300 for ministerial support and $130 for Conference work, they have paid $155 for our Superannuate Endowment fund and $45 for the Orphanage and $20 for Memorial Home in New Orleans. We firmly believe these good people can and will be thoroughly aroused to their local responsibilities, and build a new church, and be all God intended his church to be to a community.

Winnsboro likewise is making an excellent record, having had full-time except one Sunday morning each month. Indications are that excepting a deficit on Conference work and their quota for the Superannuate Endowment fund, all other claims will be in full. Several thousand dollars have been subscribed (over $9,000), and nearly $2,000 paid on a new church building fund, and the prospect is looking better all the time, indicating that our folks here won't have to worship in the old, outgrown and dilapidated building much longer.

LEE R. SPARKS.

PASTORS' SCHOOLS.

By Rev. R. H. Ruff.

The demands made upon our pastors to-day are greater than ever before. This means, of course, that they must have more thorough training and possess a wider range of knowledge and information if they are adequately to meet the present day needs. When machinery becomes more complex, the engineer must be more adequately trained if he is to handle it efficiently.

The church has endeavored to meet the need of a better trained and equipped ministry by establishing the pastors' schools, where the pastors may receive training and instruction in their respective fields of labor. These schools do a high standard of work, equal to that done in our colleges and seminaries. The very best instructors and platform speakers in America are selected as instructors and inspirational speakers. This year eighteen such schools were held, with an attendance of three thousand pastors.

No better evidence of the value of these schools can be given than the fact that the number has increased from two in 1921 to eighteen in 1924, and the attendance has increased from a little more than two hundred in 1921 to three thousand in 1924. No fee or tuition is charged. The only expense of attendance is that of board, books and railroad fare.

The courses are intensely practical, covering such subjects as: Evangelism, Rural Leadership, City Leadership, Stewardship and Finance, Social Service, and Missions.

At their last meeting the bishops spoke as follows concerning the work of the schools:

"The rapid and substantial development of the Pastors' Schools throughout our entire connection is evidence that these schools are meeting a real need and rendering a large service to the church. This is cause for gratification. In the performance of their high and sacred duties our pastors stand always in need of wisdom and inspiration; in a day crowded with heavy tasks and weighty problems it is incumbent upon them to secure the widest possible knowledge of means and methods. Such training the Pastors' Schools are well adapted to supply, and we accordingly urge our preachers to avail themselves of the advantages thus offered.

"It would be a worthy mark of appreciation, as well as a profitable investment, if our laymen and congregations everywhere would make it possible for their pastors to attend the Pastors' Schools by defraying the necessary expense. To sit for a season at the feet of competent instructors, to hear the lectures, and sermons of inspiration; to enjoy the happy association with brethren in the ministry; to rest in a changed environment from the constant round of duties—these are privileges which every pastor should enjoy. They can best be had at the Pastors' Schools, and an attendance thereon will be profitable in an enlarged outlook, a more efficient leadership, a warmer heart, and a more spiritual pastoral oversight."

Let us pray that the work of the schools may be enlarged, that every preacher in our denomination may have the opportunity another year of availing himself of the advantages offered by these schools. Without a trained leadership we can never hope to occupy adequately the fields which are to-day so white into harvest.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Brookhave District Meeting.

Speech Delivered by Mrs. L. H. Bowen.

Stewardship and Tithing.

There are texts that naturally come to the mind when we speak of Stewardship and Tithing. Those which present themselves to me are "Occupy until I come," and "Bring ye all the tithes into my storehouse."

And when we think of these verses and of our practice we are forced to the distressing conclusion that the large majority of professing Christians do not believe God's Word. "Bring ye all the tithes" is followed by a promise, "I will pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it." That is in all probability a spiritual blessing and would not satisfy our hunger nor clothe us. There is another very definite, "Honor the Lord with thy substance and the first fruits of thine increase, so shall thy barns be filled with plenty."

Why should we not believe this, and trust God to take care of us? Have we ever seen it disproved? And have we not seen it proved over and over again? I call to mind the experience of a former pastor. In his early life, he and his good wife began tithing. When his family numbered four, times were very hard with him. He received for his year's salary only $260. It was a struggle to give a tenth of that, and he wondered if he might not consider the large deficit between what he was promised by God's church and what he received as his gift to the Lord. But his conscience would not consent, and he paid the $26 into the church benevolences and went up to Conference. For the next year he was given an appointment that paid him the largest salary he had received to that time. From that on he was well provided for.

This good brother has passed on to his reward. The Lord constantly verified his promise, for his last days were spent in comfort and abundant sustenance. Through his long life he had the joy of giving, for after bringing the tithe, he could often make offerings over and above it.

It is easy to tithe, though it is true that comparatively few women have a definite income, or have the handling of much money. But all can take ten cents out of every dollar that comes to her, one egg and one pound of butter out of every ten, and the start once made in the determination to keep on, the way will surely be made plain to larger results. Many women have tried it, have seen its difficulties vanish, have enjoyed its blessings and have led their families to adopt the divine plan.

We are certainly happier in doing it. In our church some years ago was a man who, though a loyal Christian, one that could always be found in the line of duty, attended prayer meeting, led in prayer, worked in Sunday school, but did not look happy. One day I remarked to a friend, "Mr. Blank looks as if he were enjoying his religion." A few weeks later I heard him in prayer meeting tell that he had been tithing for about three months.

And it does bring joy to every one who tries it. We cannot rightly enjoy giving unless we tithe.

The tithe is the Lord's, no one can gainsay it. It is declared throughout the Bible, from the time when Cain and Abel brought the first fruits through Old Testament history. Abraham paid tithes to Melchisidek. Isaac and Jacob tithed. The children of Israel were fully persuaded that their prosperity was dependent on the bringing to the Lord that requirement. God taught his children as we teach little children to-day that right conduct brings happiness.

I should like to say much about the history of this practice, how it was perverted during the Middle Ages, when the church and State were united and the tithe became a secular tax; how, in the early days of Methodism, a free gospel was stressed, probably over-stressed. There was some reason for it then, a distinction from the State church. There is none in these latter days, and the revival of God's unrepealed law for the support of his kingdom is one of our most urgent endeavors.

What wonders might be accomplished if God's church would this year bring all the tithes into his storehouse! John R. Mott said, "If the Christians of America would lay on the altar one-tenth of their incomes we could within five years put in motion machinery that would guarantee the preaching of the gospel to every man, woman and child on earth in this generation."

Do you know what we are doing? Eminent church statisticians say that American Christians are offering to God's kingdom a tenth of a tenth—one per cent of their incomes. From the latest reports, a publication of January, 1924, in the Methodist church we are giving, including the Centenary, less than a fifth of a tenth—not quite two per cent.

Can we ask God's blessing on such an offering? He has given to us all that we have—such wonderful abundance. We are his stewards. "Occupy until I come." "The silver is mine and the gold is mine," he said. He has loaned it to us, and we are spending large sums for our own pleasure, oftimes selfish pleasure, and are missing the higher joy that should be ours in finding the hungry souls that are crying for the bread of life.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Mrs. Brown: I am sending this record to the Louisiana News, and so send it to you:

Names of new members having paid three months' dues, from June 1, 1924, to Oct. 23, 1924, sent to Mrs. D. B. Carre, Corresponding Secretary, Louisiana Conference:

Ruston District, Adult 51, Adult membership 708; Monroe District, Adult 27, Adult membership, 624; Shreveport District, Adult 20, membership 1,080; New Orleans District, Adult 4, Young People 13, Adult membership 627; Lake Charles District, Adult 4, Young People 12, Adult membership 582; Baton Rouge District, Adult 4, Adult membership 492; Alexandria District, Adult 3, Adult membership 490. Total, Adult 113, Young People 25, Adult membership, 4,603.

Our goal is to double the membership in 1925. Let the people who care for missionary interest to grow watch this record from month to month and help the district secretaries to preach the Missionary Gospel to every creature.

Sincerely,

MRS. D. B. CARRE,
Corresponding Secretary.

THE CHURCH—OUR HOME.

"Home" is one of the most appealing words in our language, a word loved as but few words are loved.

What emotions stir within us as we think of home! What memories come to us as we recall the home of our childhood!

No roamer who has not felt the longing for home; no traveler

"Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd,
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd,
From wandering on a foreign strand."

Now, the church is our spiritual home.

It offers us shelter from the storm—the storm of life.

It gives us peace as we mingle with the tumult and the strife.

It brings us comfort when the burden is heavy and the heart is overwhelmed.

It spreads a table before our famished soul.

It puts courage into us when we are downhearted.

It fills us with hope; bids us watch for the dawn and not the sunset. It gathers us into its arms of love; introduces us to the best people on earth.

No fellowship is comparable to the fellowship of the people of God.

It points us to the heavenly home, and assures us, when our loved ones go from us, that we shall meet them again in our Father's house.

The church is our home.—Selected.

AFTER AN OPERATION
Mrs. Wilke Couldn't Get Back Her Strength Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rochester, Minnesota.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after it. I suffered with pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days' time I began to feel better. In two weeks I hardly knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. THE CHURCH AND THE TEN-MILE SQUARE.

James Russell Lowell said: "There is not a place on this planet ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency and comfort and security—a place where age is reverenced, infancy is respected, manhood respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—there is not a place on the globe ten miles square of such description, except our religion has made it so."

If Mr. Lowell's words are true, then the question is: "Do you occupy space in such a ten-mile square? Does the house, or aparatment, or hotel which shelters you, or your family, occupy any of this space, being thereby indebted to religion? Do you do business, or earn your living in any of religion's ten-mile squares?"

If so, what are you doing to support religion in that square area? Religion is kept alive by the churches. The churches are kept alive by the congregations. You may be able to save your soul if you never go to church until they play "The Dead March of Saul" for your benefit. But that is not the question. How about the ten-mile square? Who is paying for its keep? Church-going is not another worldly thing at all. It is as logical and a little more necessary than taxes. Let us reduce taxes if we can, but let us increase church going which makes the ten-mile square habitable.—Selected.

THE UNIVERSAL INVITATION.

A poor, blind woman asked a friend to guess which, to her, was the sweetest word in all Scripture. The friend guessed one word and another. Then the blind woman told her religious experience, how that one day when she felt sad and lost, the call came to her: "Come unto me!" Heaven entered her soul, and ever since the little word, "come," was to her the sweetest word of all.

The divine invitation is universal. "Look unto me and be ye saved all ye ends of the earth." "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden." "The spirit and the bride say come. And let him that heareth say come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely." This invitation includes the high, the low; the rich, the poor; the bondman, the freeman; the ignorant, the educated; the sick, the afflicted, the sorrowing, the well, the strong, the happy; of this time, or of any time; of all ages, classes and climes—one universal invitation.

This invitation is intended to meet a universal need. Sin is universally a curse. Other systems and religions are local or exclusive. In Christianity alone we have the universal remedy for the universal need.

The church is the custodian of this universal invitation. The blessings of accepting this beautiful invitation are for you: Life, light, joy and peace; divine forgiveness, divine friendship, divine fellowship and divine favor.

Every church is an invitation. Will you come?—Selected.

THE CHURCH IS INDISPENSABLE TO HUMAN WELFARE.

That the church is a perfect institution, none who know its long history will claim; that it is an institution humanity would be poorer without, none who know the facts of life will deny.

The church is unique among institutions. Set in the midst of selfish greed and desire for gain, it proclaims a law of unselfishness and a doctrine of universal love and good will.

In the days—such days come to every soul—when the lamp of the ideal flickers low, it is the church more than anything else, with its divine message of hope, that rekindles the flame and illumines life's pathway.

In the time when sorrow and tragedy lay heavy hands upon the heart, it is the church that, by the solace and comfort of its ministry, lifts the burden and gilds the dark clouds with a rainbow of promise.

To youth and age alike, the church sounds a warning against the ways of impenitent evil and the sure ruin that awaits both nation and individual who forget God and walk in the uncertain light of their own guidance.

The church of to-day has an awakened conscience on social evil, economic injustice, and every kind of oppression of the weak by the strong. And the hundreds of its ministers courageously declare the gospel of human brotherhood set forth by Jesus Christ.

The church seeks to open the avenues of worship and prayer to every human soul, without which man has never been, or will he ever be satisfied. For "the soul was made for Thee, O God, and will not find rest until he finds it in Thee."—Selected.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Thousands of people die because of it each year. If afflicted with it, write to THE BIGGS SANITARIUM, Asheville, N. C., for special pamphlet which explains the cause and outlines the rational sanitarium treatment.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE CHURCH.

Since we do not know what life is, we are grateful for its tendency to manifest itself in visible forms. What is the "Ecce Homo," what is St. Paul's Cathedral, and what is "In Memoriam," and "Fidelio," but manifestations of the minds of Guido and Wren and Tennyson and Beethoven?

Religious life has the same tendency. It is for this reason that the world has ever been full of temples, shrines and fanes. It was religious belief that lifted the stately pillars of the imposing temples of Egypt and Syria, and in ancient times, as well as those of St. Peter and St. Paul in our own time.

The church, built upon the belief that Christ is the Son of God and the Savior of the world, bears the name Christian. It has not always been worthy of its name. It has never been worthy of antecedents. At its worst, however, it has been infinitely better than the age in which it lived.

The claims of the church upon society are many and strong. It, more than any other institution, is responsible for the good in civilization. Take from art the contribution it has made, and the galleries of the world would be meaningless; and strip litterature of all it has inspired, and it would be a jumble of words.

The church has peculiar claims upon the individual by reason of what it has accomplished for him. Without its self-sacrificing labors, society would soon be plunged into anarchy and ruin. The restraint which it puts upon men, the mastery which it gives to the spirit of men, is the saving power of society.

All those who believe in the sanctity of property, the perpetuity of free institutions, the permanence of the home, the lordship of Jesus Christ, and the unseen girding of life by the Eternal, should find their way into some church to tarry awhile before its altars, there to receive the fullness of life it has power to give.—Selected.

Before the Centenary, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had in all foreign fields 293 workers, including the wives of missionaries. The Foreign Departments report that nearly that many more have been sent out since 1918. Thus the Centenary has doubled our working force in foreign countries.

The Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, contributed $144,173 in Centenary offerings during the first seven months of 1923. This was a gain of $17,091 over the same period of 1922, when the contributions amounted to $127,083.

WHAT TO EAT TO PUT IRON IN YOUR BLOOD AND MAKE YOU STRONG

PHYSICIAN TELLS HOW IRON-CONTAINING VEGETABLES SUCH AS LENTILS, SPINACH, APPLES, ETC. WHEN REGULARLY TAKEN WITH ORGANIC IRON BUILD GREAT STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE

"At their own doors—in the very gardens of those who are weak, nervous and ailing all the while is one of the most valuable tonics and strength-builders known to medical science," said a well known New England physician, when consulted recently.

The doctor further said:—"If your daily diet contains an abundant amount of iron you are giving your body the red blood food it craves. But if your blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery you cannot expect to be strong and well. On the contrary, your nerves become weakened and you become irritable, fussy and easily upset. In such cases, what you need is iron—organic iron to remove the cause of your trouble, and the moment organic iron is supplied it is often wonderful how quickly your multitude of symptoms will disappear and how strong and vigorous you will become." But be careful to distinguish between ordinary metallic iron which people usually take and true organic iron. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings, while organic iron is a true red blood food, like the iron in your blood itself and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. In fact if you will eat a pint or two of spinach, half a pint of lentils and three or four baked apples each day you will probably not need to take any other form of organic iron; but most people prefer to eat a smaller quantity of iron-containing vegetables and take organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, with them. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. To prove to yourself what Nuxated Iron can do for you, get your doctor to take a specimen of your blood and make a "blood count" of your red blood corpuscles; then take Nuxated Iron for a month and have a new "blood count" made and see how your red blood corpuscles have increased and how much stronger and better you feel; see how the color has come back to your cheeks, how steady and strong your nerves have become. At all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD-GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

FROM GREENWOOD, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I am pleased to render a good report from Greenwood charge. Dr. R. H. Wynn was gratified to receive encouraging reports at our fourth quarterly conference, held Oct. 22, at Greenwood. Despite the fact that we are in the heart of the area hard hit by the long drought, we are paying out all assessments for the year in full, for Greenwood, Bethany and Flournoy churches. We have painted the parsonage and installed electric lights in place of the gas lights formerly used; paid out our Superannuate Endowment in full for the year; an entire new congregation has been added to the circuit charge, and nineteen additional accessions, besides.

The revivals held this summer were very gracious meetings. Brother O. E. Saunders, of De Ridder, did a fine work at Bethany, taking in seventeen new members. Rev. W. W. Holmes also held a splendid meeting at Greenwood church. The people were stirred to a reconsecration, and good results have been evident.

The pastor will be happy at Conference, as he now is. Praise the Lord for his manifold blessings.

Fraternally yours,

DON E. DULANY, P. C.

THE CHURCH'S OPPORTUNITY AND CRISIS IN CUBA AND MEXICO.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

Cuba.

In Cuba the Methodist Episcopal Church early decided to turn over its responsibility to our church, and among the denominations working in Cuba, the first place, perhaps, all along, has been accorded to our denomination. Here and there, in every part of the island, we have planted our centers, and we were waiting for some great impetus to come to re-enforce us for a great advance. That new impulse to our work in Cuba came in the Centenary. No field responded more promptly than Cuba to the Centenary call. Indeed, the drive for funds in Cuba was made a month in advance of the campaign in the church at home, and when we went into Europe, the Cuba Mission saw its opportunity, and took over the support of one of our first missionaries, Brother Neill, the Superintendent of the Mission in Czecho-Slovakia.

The Central Institute in Havana is the best Protestant thing on the island. Candler College, in its field, is eqnally important. There are the Sunday School Institutes, and a plan for Sunday school re-enforcement and advance, a new impulse to evangelism—all these things, and others, opening a new day for missionary service in Cuba.

Cuba is one of the fields in which, because of its diminutive size, in comparison with other fields, there is some immediate prospect of actually covering the ground. In another generation Cuba should be effectively evangelized through the proclamation of the pure Word of God. If it is done, no church, probably, is as well placed for carrying a leading part in the plan of conquest as is our own.

Mexico.

In Mexico we have taken over the territory on the southern border of the United States, along the Rio Grande, that fell to our lot in the redistribution among the great Protestant bodies operating in that Republic, and with the increased funds coming to us in the Centenary, we are going from place to place in the good old itinerant way, in a serious effort to cover the entire territory. Our one medical institution has been reopened, and others secured; our schools and colleges equipped, and started on a new era of prosperity. Churches are rapidly coming to self-support. The number of Mexican preachers has been doubled, trebled, and probably quadrupled. Many young men offering as candidates for the ministry are being trained in our schools, and a strong nationalist spirit promises, if wisely guided, a self-supporting and self-propagating church in Mexico in the early future.

Our preachers in Mexico are evangelists. Last year the increase in the Monterey District was over 700, in the Chihuahua District over 100, and in a letter that came some time ago from Brother Cox, of the Monterey District, he says, "One thousand souls for Christ in this district this year."

It would be a pity to cut out any one of our cherished institutions, old or new, to call home our missionaries, or suddenly to withdraw our support of the Mexican church; but it would be no less a pity for us to go on borrowing in bank for the current support of our work in Mexico. But one of these things we shall have to do, if the church does not come at once to our support.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

Proceedings of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

First Day, Wednesday.

The one hundred and eleventh session of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Methodist church, Canton, Miss., at 9 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, Nov. 5, 1924, Bishop William N. Ainsworth, presiding. Hymn No. 1 was sung. Bishop Ainsworth led the Conference in prayer, and read a Scripture lesson from the third chapter of Ephesians, and commented thereon.

The Bishop conducted the Annual Conference sacramental service, assisted by H. W. Featherstun, M. B. Sharbrough, W. M. Williams, and Dr. H. C. Tucker, and the Conference partook of the Lord's Supper.

The Secretary of the last session called the roll, and most of the members answered to their names.

A. F. Watkins was elected Secretary; G. S. Harmon and J. L. Decell were elected Assistant Secretaries; C. E. Downer, John D. Ellis, S. F. Harkey, and G. P. McKeown were elected Statistical Secretaries.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed at 8:45 o'clock a. m. to 12:15 o'clock p. m.

The bar of the Conference was fixed to include the main auditorium of the church.

The following standing committees, nominated by the presiding elders, were elected by the Conference:

State of the Church.—W. A. Hays, A. S. Oliver, C. M. Crossley, H. F. Brooks, J. W. Ramsey, M. B. Sharbrough, V. G. Clifford, M. L. Everett, J. M. Sartin, W. H. Bradley, S. M. Graham, R. B. Boutwell, W. E. Barnes, H. H. Crisler.

Conference Relations.—J. T. Leggett, W. H. Lewis, H. J. Moore, J. E. Williams, M. W. Porter, G. H. Thompson, W. H. Huntley.

Sabbath Observance.—M. M. Black, A. A. Sims, D. W. Ulmer, J. M. Corley, G. R. Granberry, John A. McLeod, Mrs. W. A. Maxwell, Mrs. W. L. Linfield, J. C. Binford.

District Conference Records.—Percy Vaughn Otto Porter, J. H. Grice, M. K. Miller, J. B. Stringer, S. B. Watkins, J. S. Purcell, Mrs. A. S. Oliver, Mrs. W. H. Lane, John P. Bennett, S. J. Creekmore, J. H. Hester, H. B. Rush, Mrs. W. H. Huntley.

Orphans' Home.—W. M. Williams, E. A. King, D. P. Yeager, C. H. Strait, D. E. Vickers, W. F. Bagget, C. P. Jones, C. E. Saunders, K. T. Moore, H. O. Middleton, Mrs. P. D. Hardin, W. D. Donald, Horace Hinds, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell.

Memoirs.—A. F. Watkins, I. W. Cooper, J. R. Jones, H. G. Hawkins, J. H. Foreman, W. L. Linfield, W. W. Moore.

Various communications were referred, without reading, to their respective boards and committees.

Report No. 1, of the Sunday School Board, was read and adopted.

Question twenty-one, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called, and the following were passed in examination of character: H. M. Ellis, W. W. Graves, M. L. Burton, P. D. Hardin, L. E. Alford, L. L. Roberts, W. B. Jones.

The following were passed in examination of character, and their names were referred to the Committe on Conference Relations for the Superannuate Relation: L. Carley, W. W. Cammack, J. T. Nicholson, R. F. Witt, J. W. Brown, G. R. Ellis, G. W. Huff, C. M. Martin, E. D. Phillips, C. T. Noble, J. B. King, C. H. Ellis, I. L. Peebles, H. B. Perritt, H. W. Featherstun, J. C. Ellis, L. A. Darsey, C. F. Emery.

The names of B. H. Rawls and W. E. Waldrop were called, and they were passed in examination of character.

The names of Ralph Bradley and W. W. Simmonds were called and, they having died during the year, their names were referred to the Committe on Memoirs.

Question No. 15, "Who are the deacons of one year?" was called, and Brunner Marion Hunt, Enoch Alexander King, Rolfe Hunt and Daniel Parker Yeager, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year.

Question No. 7, "Who else in the Class of the Third Year?" was called, and Andrew Jackson Boyles and Lonnie Harvi Sharp were passed in examination of character, but not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were continued in the Class of the Third Year.

Question No. 11, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected deacons?" was called, and Obed Birch Matheny and George Leonard McNeese, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character, were elected to deacon's orders and advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

Rolfe Hunt, Van Renselar Landrum and Charles Wesley Warren, already in deacons' orders, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

REV. ALONZO EARLY, D.D.,

Pastor at Crowley, La., Host of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Question No. 4, "Who else is in the Class of the Second Year?" was called, and William Calvin, Monroe Baggett and Warren Nathaniel Ware, not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the Second Year.

Dr. H. C. Tucker, a member of the Brazil Conference, was presented and addressed the Conference.

The report of the special committee on group insurance was read and adopted.

Question No. 17, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected deacons?" was called. The districts were called, and the answer was, none.

Question No. 19, "What traveling preachers and what local preachers have been elected elders?" was called. The districts were called, and the answer was: None.

Earl Buford Moll, having been a local deacon for three years, and having been on trial in the Conference for one year, was passed in examination of character and elected to elder's orders.

Nicholas Smuts Loftus, having been a local preacher for ten years and having been on trial in the Conference for one year, was passed in examination of character and elected to deacon's orders.

The Rev. Frank L. Wells, presiding elder of the St. Louis District, of the St. Louis Conference, was presented and addressed the Conference concerning the Superannuate Endowment fund.

The following were nominated and elected to serve as the Committee on Public Worship: W. M. Sullivan, M. L. Burton, George Harvey.

Upon request of the Bishop that two "chalk secretaries" be named, upon nomination, F. L. Applewhite and J. F. Campbell were elected.

Announcements were made by the various boards and committees.

The Committee on Public Worship reported that Dr. H. C. Tucker would preach this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and that this evening at 7:30 o'clock the Sunday School Board would hold its anniversary, and that Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor, would deliver an address.

Rev. W. K. Simpson, of the North Alabama Conference; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, and correspondent of the Memphis Commercial Appeal; Rev. George H. Crowell, of the Memphis Conference; Rev. Fred Long, Secretary of the State Sunday School Association; Mr. T. H. McNish, representing the Publishing House, and Mr. H. H. Ahrens, correspondent of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, were introduced to the Conference.

The Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction, which was pronounced by B. F. Jones.

Second Day, Thursday.

The Conference was called to order by Bishop Ainsworth at 8:45 o'clock a.m. The Bishop announced hymn No. 388, which was sung, and L. A. Darsey led the Conference in prayer. Bishop Ainsworth read and commented upon a Scripture lesson from the seventeenth chapter of St. John. He announced that at the close of the morning session the Rev. Clovis Chappell, of the First Church, Memphis, would deliver an inspirational address.

The minutes of the first day's session were read and approved. The roll was called of absentees from the previous session, and those not present on yesterday answered to their names.

On motion, the calling of the roll at future sessions was dispensed with.

H. F. Brooks, transferred at the last session of the Conference from the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Capitol Street, Jackson, and B. L. Sutherland, formerly a member of this Conference, and transferred during this year from the Pacific Conference and stationed at Picayune, were introduced to the Conference.

A resolution providing for a bond issue for the Orphanage, was read and adopted.

The report of the Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home was presented.

Question No. 3, "Who remain on trial?" was called, and the following having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year, Nicholas Smuts Loftus, Earl Buford Moll, Eugene William Hope, Walter Preston George, Abner Charleston Johnson, and Fleet Joseph Jones.

Question No. 2, "Who else are in the Class of the First Year?" was called, and Frederick Sartin, James Hilliman Sharp, and C. H. Williams, not having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the First Year.

Question No. 19, "What traveling preachers have been elected elders?" was called, and John Carl Jackson, Lemuel John Snelgrove, Martin Luther McCormick, Bertram Hamilton Williams, Thomas Commander Cooper, Enoch Marvin Allen, Marvin Kavanaugh Miller, Thomas Marvin Ainsworth, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, were passed in examination of character and were elected to elder's orders. Rolfe Hunt, already in elder's orders, having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, was announced as having completed the Course of Study.

Harvey Judson Oakley, having completed the Course of Study for the Second Year, was passed in examination of character, was elected to dea-

THE CHURCH'S OPPORTUNITY AND CRISIS IN EUROPE.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

Belgium.

We had thought that Belgium was the most rigidly Roman Catholic of all the countries of Europe, but our workers, beginning with a great plan of Bible and Christian literature distribution, have at last gotten a good Methodist stride of definite and aggressive evangelism, in which the people, forty per cent of whom had no vital connection with Romanism, and many of whom the socialists, infidels, or atheists, were hearing the Gospel gladly, as our people preached it in halls, on street corners, in market-places and in tents, and many of the people were being genuinely converted. Two years ago, when I was in Brussels, not a congregation had been organized. A little later the Bishop organized our first congregation. In the last year, largely as the result of this evangelistic campaign, seven new congregations have been organized. There are now eleven churches, with twenty preaching places, and several others in prospect. The scope and success of our work in Belgium is limited only by the number and quality of workers we can get. Mr. William Ward, the president of the World Brotherhood of Great Britain, some time ago declared our evangelistic work the most effective that he had known in the French-speaking world for fifty years, and the American ambassador, in a recent conversation with Bishop Beauchamp, congratulated him on the place of influence our church had already gotten in Belgium.

Poland.

In spite of strong Catholic opposition, in Poland we have gotten a truce with the Government providing for continued operation, and have good prospect of early recognition as a church. In the meantime, we are going as far as the Government will allow us in carrying the Gospel to the people, have liquidated almost completely our expensive relief work, and through orphanages, the great English Night School, and the simple preaching of the Word, we are making many friends and some enemies. The Romanist church, through one of its high officials, recently reminded the faithful that other organizations in the land were negligible. They had been there all the time, and were doing nothing, but that Methodism had a great constituency behind it in America, and a tremendous organization that would not be content to remain in Poland without definite gains, and that this was the organization to be feared and opposed. The president of the Agricultural College, himself a Catholic, but with many of his professors, students, and his wife and children, attendant upon our English school, recently said to one of our workers: "You must get your people at home to understand that the progress of Poland is in millimeters, but if you will stay—and it is not like Americans to quit—if you will stay, you will win." We mean to stay, and our workers believe that we shall at last get our feet on the ground, and when we feel our footing steady beneath us, we shall go faster than in millimeters to the Christian conquest of Poland.

Czecho-Slovakia.

In Czecho-Slovakia I found the evangelistic movement in no great way abating. For nearly a week I traveled in automobile over the good roads of Bohemia among our churches, and came to only one preaching place that was not packed with people, and that was so early in the morning that the people had postponed their coming to an afternoon service that they said would be much better attended. In Pilsen, where the beer is made, the "Big Berthas," near the German line, I attended an evangelistic service being held in a tent. The people were not sitting down, but standing up in the tent like sardines. Brother Neill estimated that there were between 2,500 and 3,000 people packed through the sides of the tent and standing without. After a sermon by the visitor, interpreted by Brother Dobes, the invitation was given, and at least one hundred people came forward and accepted Christ.

Everywhere the Huss name is revered, the Huss tradition is reviving, and his spirit of love for the truth, of freedom, and of the open Bible, again dominates the minds of the people. Our missionaries tell them the story of Methodism's connection through John Wesley, Hernhut, and the Czech brethren, with John Huss, earnestly declaring that we are the true descendants in doctrine and in spirit of that great reformation before the Reformation that Romanism sought to destroy in the martyrdom of John Huss. But that never was destroyed, and if at this time, anywhere in the world, there is a religious movement more truly apostolic than the evangelistic work of Methodism in Bohemia, I do not know of it.

APPEAL TO THE OFFICIAL RECORDS.

The South Carolina Conference adopted the following: "It appears to your committee, on the evidence of numerous documents, and the testimony of the preachers, in open Conference, that in all the circuits and stations of this Conference district, the people have expressed their minds with respect to the action of the General Conference, and the measures proper to be adopted in consequence of that action. Resolutions to that effect have been adopted by the quarterly conferences of all the circuits and stations, without any exception; and in many, perhaps in most of them, by other meetings also, which have been called expressly for the purpose, and in some of them, by meetings held at every preaching place where there was a society. And on all these occasions there has been but one voice uttered—one opinion expressed—from the seaboard to the mountains.' . . . "Your committee also have made diligent inquiry both out of Conference and by calling openly in Conference for information from the preachers, as to the number, if any, of local preachers, or other official members, or members of some standing among us, who should have expressed, in the meetings or in private, a different opinion from that which the meetings have proclaimed. And the result of this inquiry has been that in the whole field of our Conference district one individual only has been heard to express himself doubtfully as to the expediency of a separate jurisdiction for the Southern and Southwestern Conferences; not even one as to the character of the General Conference action." P. 144 (pp. 614-615.)

Here again, notwithstanding the positive assurance of our chairman that "only along the 'border' did the Plan of Separation allow the laymen to vote on anything," the laymen, with one exception in the entire Conference, voted favorably. If it should be claimed that the Plan of Separation itself did not provide for a vote of the members, the answer is that the minority report says not a single word touching any provision in that Plan for a vote by the members. What the minority report says is that the Plan was submitted not alone to the members of Annual Conferences, but also to the local ministry and membership of our entire territory amounting to nearly 500,000.

Much reading and hearing is done carelessly. Perhaps no reader or hearer is always on his guard. What does the chairman mean in the sentences just above, quoted from his article, by the word "allow"? The Plan of Separation nowhere forbids a vote by the people, nor does it make such a vote mandatory. The Plan of Separation provided for a vote of the people on "the Northern boundary." Our fathers thought it prudent and becoming to consult the people, and they tell us they submitted the Plan to the people, and then they give us the percentage vote.

In Georgia the Conference said: "The sentiments of our people in primary meetings, in quarterly conferences, as expressed in the most solemn forms, sustain the course of our delegation in the General Conference, and approve and even demand an organization . . ." P. 151 (p. 627.) Georgia was not on the border.

In Alabama the action was: "The foregoing sentiments and opinions embody the general views expressed most unequivocally throughout the Conference district since the late General Conference, by a large body of the membership, both in primary meetings and quarterly conferences." P. 156 (p. 627.)

Here is Conference after Conference, not one of them, from North Carolina to the Gulf, is "along the border," yet the official record shows in each of those mentioned that the members were consulted.

"The plan having already been legally adopted, the laymen were allowed to say whether or not they would go with the Northern or Southern branch of the church," says our chairman; but it is certain that in this the history has been misread and misinterpreted. Except "with regard to the Northern boundary," "the laymen were allowed to say," prior to the meeting of the Louisville Convention, which convention met May 1, 1845, what were their "opinions and wishes" touching the points on which action is contemplated." "That the membership of our entire territory" had already voted for "a separate organization" is the testimony of the members of the Louisville Convention. Pp. 104, 203 (pp. 378, 490.)

After the adoption of the Plan of Separation by the Louisville Convention, the following "letter" touching the work of missions was approved. That letter was addressed "to the ministers constituting said Conferences, and to all the brethren" (black type supplied), and says: "We feel that our action in this Cnovention pledges us anew for that great motive principle of Methdism. . . . 'And your action, brethren, without which ours might not have been attempted, pledges you to sustain us to the utmost of your power." P. 191.

The pastoral address adopted by the Louisville Convention, signed "James O. Andrew, President," and "Thomas O. Summers, Secretary," and directed as follows: "To the ministers of the several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to all the brethren of their pastoral oversight"—states: "We made it a point of early inquiry, in the course of our proceedings, to ascertain with what unanimity the Annual Conferences represented by us, and the entire body of the ministry and membership within their general bounds, were known to have concurred in the late General Conference, and in approving of the plan provided by that Conference for our being constituted a distinct ecclesiastical connection, separate from the North. The Committee on Organization, being composed of two members from each of the Annual Conferences, was furnished with ample means of obtaining satisfactory information. The members of the committee held meetings with their several delegates apart, and on a comparison of their several reports carefully made, it was found that both as to the members of the Annual Conferences and the local ministry and membership of our entire territory, the declaration had been sustained, and a separate organization called for, by as great a majority as ninety-five to five. Nor did it appear that even five in a hundred were disposed to array themselves against their brethren, whose interests were identical with their own, but that part were Northern brethren sojourning in our borders, and part were dwelling in sections of the country where the questions involved did not materially concern their Christian privileges, or those of the slaves among them. So great appears to have been the unanimity of opinion prevailing, both among the pastors and the people, as to the urgent necessity of the great measure which we were deputed to effect, by organizing on the basis of the Discipline, and the plan provided by the late General Conceference, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. P. 203 (pp. 489,490.)

The "Report of the Committee on Organization"—the fundamental document in the history of our church as a separate organization—says: "The evidence before the committee establishes the fact in the clearest manner possible that throughout the Southern Conferences the ministry and membership of the church, amounting to nearly 500,000, in the proportion of about ninety-five in the hundred, deem a division of jurisdiction indispensable to the welfare of the church, in the Southern and Southwestern Conferences . . ." P. 212 (p. 443.)

It must be clear to every one that till the division of the church actually took place there could be no "northern boundary," no border societies, to determine by vote to which branch of the church they would "adhere." Only after the division did the branches and border exist.

With our fathers the division of the church was a momentous step, not enterprised, or taken in hand unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly, advisedly, and in the fear of God. To them it was all important to know what were the wishes, the opinions, the determination of the members of the church concerning this proposed division. The preachers asked the members to express their wishes, their opinions. Was a division really necessary, and if so, was the Plan of Separation agreed upon by the General Conference of 1944 as "a contingency" "not improbable," a satisfactory contract? Those preachers said let "the church at large" vote. Let the members "determine for themselves," and the preachers would "defer to the judgment of the church." The preachers further say, "We leave this subject with you." Before our fathers exercised the option to divide the church, which option the Plan of Separation passed by the General Conference of the undivided church granted, they believed it was prudent, wise, right, just to consult the members. The members voted before the Louisville Convention met, and that vote was summarized and certified by the Convention, and afterwards the Convention passed the resolution that the border societies should vote as provided for in the Plan of Separation.

Our fathers seemed determined that no one should ever successfully question the fact that the Plan of Separation was submitted to the entire membership of the church. After all that had been said in '44 and '45, the General Conference of 1846 appointed a committee of five, consisting of Drs. Bascom, Capers, A. Penn, Sehon and Richardson, "to draft a pastoral address." (Journal 1846, pp. 26, 30, 38.) That address, officially signed by Bishop Soule, President, and Dr. Ralston, Secretary, contains the following statement: "The General Conference had confided the right of decision to 'the Annual Conferences in the slave-holding States' as the sole judges of the necessity of a separate General Conference jurisdiction, South. The Southern delegations, however, resolved to consult the people before exercising the right conferred by the General Conference. A year was allowed for deliberation. Meanwhile the subject was fully discussed, and came up for judgment and action, not only in all the Annual Conferences, but also in nearly all the quarterly conferences, and other official bodies, representing distinct and entire charges, besides primary meetings of the people almost innumerable, throughout every division of the South. And the result was, the ministry and membership of the whole church in the slave-holding States, in the proportion of at least ninety-five in the hundred, decided in favor of separation, as essential to the success of Methodism in those States." (Journal 1846, p. 106.) (Last black type supplied.)

In the light of this appeal to the records, which is in error, the chairman or the minority report? What can be said for one who leaves certainties and accepts errors?

Our chairman says: "No one would think for a moment of wanting any plan of unification that did not meet the approval of our laymen." At Chattanooga a motion was offered to permit "the adult members of the Methodist Episcopal Church . . . to express their will on the plan of unification;" and the motion was laid on the table. To say, for instance, to the more than 20,000 laymen of the Richmond District that they are consulted on this matter because eight of their number will have a vote in the Virginia Conference, is not likely to be satisfactory to those thousands, and it is not likely to be satisfactory to the thousands of laymen in other districts of the church.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The law of success in any enterprise is co-operation. Great tasks, tasks worthy of accomplishment because of inherent ethical principles and noble aims, cannot be carried to satisfactory results by one man working alone. Take for emphasis of this thought two of England's greatest men—Wesley and Gladstone, churchman and statesman, the one, as Arnold said, with a "genius for godliness," the other a past master in statecraft and with a mind broad as the empire he helped to build. Both achieved brilliant and well deserved success by remarkable tact for working with the people and enlisting their sympathy and support. So in State affairs, in church affairs, in anything great and worthy, no man is great enough to stand alone, for in the world of thought and action God has placed men in relation one to the other.

Here is where the hermit life failed. Simon Peter, with his dominant, energetic spirit and unexpected, outspoken speech, was worth ten thousand Simon Stylites, perched on a tower. For the son of Joses was a wonderfully sociable kind of fellow, and generally went to pieces when left alone. He never could have been a pope after the mediaeval or modern type. The office as now constituted, would so oppress him that he would go fishing again or else he would die of loneliness.

When the preacher learns to work for others, with others, and through others, success does not await him—it is just at hand. The joy of service is his, and that is multiplied through co-operation. Publicans and sinners were not very choice company maybe for our Lord, yet he preferred them to Scribes and Pharisees. The former were at least sympathetic and sociable; the latter would have had a monopoly of the kingdom of heaven—a mighty lonesome piece of business. Better fail working with others than to fail alone—at least you will have company. Lonely tears and bitter tears with little joy coming in the morning.

These thoughts came to me as an aftermath of a sermon preached to my little crowd last Sunday from the text, "He that hath, unto him shall be given, and he that hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath." Our Lord utters this seeming paradox in connection with the three parables of soil, seed, sowing and growth. So is the kingdom of heaven. All must work together for a harvest worth the reaping. The seed is ever good, the life germ is inclosed, ready to burst into quickened growth, the sowing in order; but the soil—that is the uncertain factor. Thorns, piercing, sharp thorns of heartless criticism, choking, overshadowing thickets of unholy desire and doubt, strangle the corn; or else it falls where there is no depth. Perchance is misdirected, feeds birds instead of yielding a harvest. Hath not—even what the sower had of good seed is lost, taken away. The tragic part of it all is that the loss finds no regaining in these fruitless fields. There are other warnings, other lessons here. God give us grace to heed them.

The good soil brings forth some thirty, some sixty, some a hundred fold. On it grows the harvest that feeds the world. From its fertile bosom springs the crop that gives grain for further sowings and reapings. Receptive hearts, glad hearts, willing hearts—he that hath shall have more. The law holds good in the corn field and holds equally good in sowing and receiving the Word. Sow on and on, sower of God's Word. There are thorns, and shallow soils, and hard, beaten paths of sin, and wild birds of unbelief, yet there are wide, open, sunny spaces with fertile soil in God's great field. After all the sowing is mine and yours—the harvest belongs to him and his angels.

"Sown in our darkness, or sown in our light,
Sown in our weakness, or sown in our might,
Sure oh, sure will the harvest be."

WHAT WE ARE DOING IN OUR CITIES.

By Dr. J. W. Perry.

The growth of our cities is easily to be seen. We are rapidly becoming an urban people. Approximately two million people each year for the last several years have been leaving the farms for the centers of population. The causes for this are economic and social. The improvement in farming is making it possible for fewer people, year by year, to produce raw material. The growth of industry makes it more and more necessary to gather those who work up the raw material into the centers. All things, at one time limiting the growth of cities, seem to have been overcome—transportation, communication, health, and all the things that make for the happiness of man have been developed.

When a city becomes large, the tendency is for the more prosperous people, those who have accumulated property, to move away from the congested center to the suburbs. As the property becomes valuable in the downtown section for business purposes, the temptation is to sell the old "Mother Church" for enough money to build a better one out in the suburbs. But while the more prosperous have moved to the suburbs and are moving their churches to the suburbs, the population of the downtown area has had a very large increase, made up in our Southland very largely of splendid young people from the farms and rural sections, who have come to do the work in the city, in offices and business houses. While they work for small wages, they feel compelled to live in cheaper lodging houses in the downtown section, and if the church moves away and they are left without its ministry, a thousand temptations entice them on every side. One city church last year received on confession of faith more than six hundred souls largely of the character described; and yet sometimes country people complain that the Board of Missions expends a little money to care for their children after they move into the city. It has been possible to save several of these old churches by giving them just a little aid, and some wonderful things have been accomplished. One has sent eight young men into the ministry and has seen to the training of each of them. Others have accomplished like things and very soon, because of the increased numbers, become able to provide for their own expenses.

As an aid in social service and relief, a useful agency, called the "Goodwill Industry," has been called into the service of our cities. The Goodwill gathers up old cast-off clothing, furniture, papers, rags and everything else, takes them to the center, employs people to repair those needing repair and to fumigate all of them, then sales are conducted on certain days and at certain specified stations. Thus employment is provided for a number of people who need it, and goods at a nominal cost are provided for others who appreciate the help. It is a self supporting work when properly started. The Board of Missions gives aid in getting the work launched and in training some one to have supervision of it. It is a very valuable adjunct in the work of a great city, and should be extended.

con's orders, and advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

Question No. 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and the following, duly recommended by their several district conferences, and having stood an approved examination on the Course of Study, and having been approved by the Committee on Admissions, were admitted on trial: Clyde Hubert Gunn, from the Hattiesburg District; Horace Walter Featherstun Vaughn, from the Jackson District; John Brogan Holyfield and Eugene Wedgeworth, from the Newton District; William Beckwith Hollingsworth and John Weems Moore, from the Seashore District; George Hawkins Jones and Marvin Howard McCormick, Jr., from the Vicksburg District.

Question No. 8, "Who are readmitted?" was called, and the answer was: None.

Question No. 10, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" was called, and the answer was: None.

At the request of the presiding elder of the Seashore District, the presiding elders were granted leave to use B. F. Crook as a supply.

Rev. George H. Crowell addressed the Conference in the interest of the matter of group insurance.

Report No. 1, of the Hospital Board, was read and referred to the Commission on Budget.

Dr. H. H. Sherman, of the General Board of Education, was introduced and addressed the Conference in the interest of the educational movements of the church.

A resolution urging brief reports from boards and committes was adopted.

Question No. 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. The reports of the preachers of the Jackson District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The reports of the preachers of the Hattlesburg District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

Bishop Ainsworth announced that the class for admission into full connection would be received at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning.

Announcements were made by the various boards and committees.

Dr. E. B. Chappell, Editor of the Sunday school literature; Dr. H. T. Carley, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Rev. H. P. Lewis and Rev. H. E. Carter, of the North Mississippi Conference; Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College, and Mrs. Alma G. Riley, Field Secretary of the Methodist Orphans' Home, were introduced to the Conference.

The Committee on Public Worship reported that H. A. Wood would preach at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, and that Rev. Clovis Chappell would preach this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

F. B. Ormond was granted a leave of absence on account of illness in his family.

Bishop Ainsworth introduced Rev. Clovis Chappell, D.D., pastor of the First Church, Memphis, who delivered an inspirational address, and the Conference adjourned with the singing of the Doxology and the benediction, which was pronounced by J. L. Neill.

Third Day, Friday.

The Conference met at 8:45 o'clock a. m., Bishop Ainsworth, presiding. The Bishop announced hymn No. 492, which was sung, and H. F. Brooks led the Conference in prayer. "Amazing Grace" was sung. Bishop Ainsworth read the Scripture lesson from a portion of the first chapter of the First Epistle of Peter.

The minutes of the second day's session were read and approved.

Question No. 21, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called, and the reports of the preachers of the Vicksburg District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The name of L. F. Alford was called, his character was passed, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

The reports of the preachers of the Meridan District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate addressed the Conference in the interest of the Conference organ, supplemented by Bishop Ainsworth, who commended the publication and urged the Conference to lend it their support and co-operation.

Question No. 21 was resumed. The reports of the preachers of the Brookhaven District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The names of C. C. Griffin, N. B. Harmon and A. Joe Beasley were called, their characters were passed, and their names referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. The name of W. B. Waldrop was called and referred to the same committee for the supernumerary relation.

Sidney W. Edwards, a local elder in the Methodist Episcopal Church, duly recommended by the Meridian District Conference, was recognized in elder's orders, upon his assent to the doctrines of the church and the assumption of the ordination vows without the re-imposition of hands.

Upon the request of Bishop Ainsworth, the Millsaps College Glee Club rendered a musical number.

The Bishop introduced Rev. A. J. Weeks, D.D., who addressed the Conference in the interest of the Board of Missions.

Question No. 6, "Who are admitted into full connection?" was called, and Obed Birch Matheny, George Leonard McNeese, Rolfe Hunt, Harvey Judson Oakley, Van Renselar Landrum and Charles Warren Wesley were called to the bar of the Conference, charged by the Bishop, and, having answered the Disciplinary questions and having been recommended by the Committee on Admissions, were admitted into full connection.

At the request of H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, the Conference made a voluntary subscription of monthly payments to care for the family of A. J. Beasley, who was superannuated, through ill health, necessitating him to be in a sanitarium for several months. It was reported that $92 per month was subscribed.

Question No. 21 was resumed. The reports of the preachers of the Newton District were presented on the blackboard, information was given by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The Committee on Public Worship reported that Dr. Clovis Chappell would preach this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and this evening at 7:30.

The Rev. S. A. Brown, of the North Mississippi Conference, and field agent for the Methodist Orphans' Home, was introduced to the Conference.

The Millsaps Glee Club gave another number.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction, which was pronounced by H. G. Hawkins.

Fourth Day, Saturday—Morning Session.

The Conference met at 8:45 o'clock a. m., Bishop Ainsworth presiding..

Hymn No. 489 was sung, H. L. Norton led the Conference in prayer, and the Bishop read a Scripture lesson from the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke.

The minutes of the third day's session were read and approved.

Question No. 9, "Who are received by transfer?" was called. Bishop Ainsworth announced the name of B. L. Sutherland, an elder, from the Pacific Conference.

Question No. 13, "Who are transferred to other Conferences?" was called, and the Bishop announced the names of Jesse F. Watson, a deacon in the Class of the Third Year, to the North Mississippi Conference, and A. W. O'Bryant, an elder, to the North Alabama Conference.

A resolution inviting the next General Conference to meet at Jackson was adopted.

Question No. 21 "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. The reports of the preachers of the Seashore District were presented on the blackboard, the work was reviewed by the presiding elder, their names were called one by one, and they were passed in examination of character.

The Bishop stated that from the reports received from the districts, there had been added to the church 3,829 on profession of faith, 324 more than last year. With 4,011 added to the North Mississippi Conference, made a total for the State of 7,840.

P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, presented resolutions from the quarterly conference of the First Methodist Church, Birmingham District, North Alabama Confereuce, requesting that the Mississippi Conference restore the credentials of O. G. Halliburton, formerly a member of this Conference, who had surrendered his credentials some years ago. On motion, the Bishop appointed a committee of three, composed of J. M. Morse, I. W. Cooper and J. T. Leggett, to investigate the matter and report back to the Conference.

Reports Nos. 2 and 3 of the Sunday School Board, were read and adopted.

A resolution giving churches the privilege of voting on unification was adopted.

On motion of M. L. Burton, the Secretary was instructed to send a telegram of love and sympathy to N. B. Harmon, superannuate of this session and unable to attend the Conference through illness.

W. M. Sullivan gave the Conference a message of affectionate greeting from W. W. Cammack, contained in a letter from him.

Question No. 23, "Who are superannuated?" was called, and answered in the report of the Committee on Conference Relations.

Question No. 22, "Who are supernumerary?" was called, and answered in the report of the Committee on Conference Relations.

Question No. 11, "Who are located?" was called, and at his own request, G. S. Harmon was granted an honorable location.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Hospital was submitted for record in the Journal.

Reports of various boards and committees were read and adopted.

The report of the Board of Education was read. Pending its adoption the Conference was addressed by I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College; H. W. Van Hook, President of Seashore Camp Ground School, and Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College. The report was adopted.

Question No. 42, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" was called. Central Church, Meridlan, and Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, were placed in nomination. Central Church was withdrawn, and Court Street, Hattiesburg, was unanimously chosen.

Question No. 12, "Who have withdrawn or been expelled?" was called. The answer was: None.

The report of the Board of Lay Activities was read. Dr. J. M. Sullivan was elected Conference Lay Leader.

An afternoon session was ordered for 2:30 o'clock.

A motion was adopted to hold the Memorial Session at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Leave of absence was granted to J. E. J. Ferguson.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of the North Mississippi Conference; Mr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary, General Board of Lay Activities; Dr. T. J. Bailey, State Superintendent Anti-Saloon League; Rev. J. H. Shumaker, Secretary of the Methodist Benevolent Association, and Mrs. H. L. McClesky, President of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, and a member of the General Council, were introduced to the Conference.

The Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction, pronounced by W. H. Huntley.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference opened at 2:30 o'clock. Bishop Ainsworth conducted the devotional exercises, with prayer by John A. Moore.

Bishop Ainsworth exhibited to the Conference the credentials of Lewis Garrett, a former member of the Mississippi Conference, whose name appears on the roll of "Our Sainted Dead," as having ascended April 28, 1857. The credentials are dated Nov. 28, 1797, and are signed by Francis Asbury and Thomas Coke, the first bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. The parchment is the property of a granddaughter of Brother Garrett, Mrs. Amanda Garett Cage, an elect woman of Canton, and an honored and useful member of the church here.

The reports of many of the boards and committees were read and adopted.

The special committee in the matter of the credentials of O. G. Halliburton reported favorably, and the Conference voted for the restoration of his credentials.

An assessment for an interest fund for $150,000 worth of bonds to be sold by the Trustees of the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg for the purpose of erecting a new hospital, was prorated among the districts as a special.

Dr. T. J. Bailey addressed the Conference in the interest of the Anti-Saloon League.

Questions Nos. 24 to 39 were called, and answered by the Statistical Secretary.

Fifth Day, Sunday.

The Conference love feast was held at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning, conducted by Rev. M. L. White. By special request, Brother White gave some account of his labors during the past thirty-five years.

At the 11 o'clock service, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth preached a great sermon on the subject, "The Characteristics of the Kingdom." After the sermon, the following were ordained deacons: O. B. Matheny, N. S. Loftus, H. J. Oakley, J. L. McNeese.

At the evening service, Rev. J. L. Neill, Superintendent of the Czecho-Slovakia Mission, delivered an address on the work of the church in Central Europe. After the address, Bishop Ainsworth ordained the following elders: E. B. Moll, J. C. Jackson, L. J. Snelgrove, M. L. McCormick, B. H. Williams, T. C. Cooper, E. M. Allen, M. K. Miller, T. M. Ainsworth.

After appropriate remarks by the Bishop, the appointments were read and the Conference adjourned sine die.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. F. B. Ormond was granted leave of absence from the Conference, being called home on account of sickness in his family.

Rev. Robert Selby stated that an $8,500 pipe organ has been bought by the Crawford Street Methodist Church at Vicksburg.

• • •

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, after several years in California, where he was eminently successful in his work, came back home and was cordially received.

• • •

The manager of the Advocate, Mr. C. O. Chalmers, was delightfully entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Muckle.

Six young men of Central Church, Meridian, were licensed to preach during the Conference year. This is a remarkable record for any church.

The new church at Canton is a thing of beauty, of which the whole community may well be proud. A $7,500 pipe organ has been bought, and will soon be installed.

• • •

The editor of the Advocate is greatly indebted to Rev. G. S. Harmon, assistant secretary, for many courtesies in connection with getting the proceedings of the Conference for the paper.

• • •

Dr. A. F. Watkins was again elected Secretary of the Conference, with G. S. Harmon and J. Lloyd Decell as his able assistants. No Conference that we know of has a better secretarial staff than the Mississippi.

The quartet composed of the Lewis brothers—B. W., H. P., J. M., and O. S.—sang several times during the Conference, to the delight and edification of the audience.

• • •

Rev. J. A. Wells and Rev. W. W. Nelson are well known throughout the Conference as sweet gospel singers, and their duets are real blessings to the hearers.

We noted with regret that Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, who was in the hospital several months ago with an infected foot, still has to walk with crutches. We are glad to learn, however, there is steady improvement in his condition.

Central Methodist Church, Meridian, has installed a $16,000 pipe organ—one of the finest musical instruments in the State. Mr. C. W. Cochran has also presented Central with a set of chimes, costing $6,000.

• • •

Rev. J. L. Neill, Superintendent of the Czecho-Slovakia Mission, now at home to assist in the collection of the Centenary pledges, was cordially welcomed by his brethren of the Conference in which he holds membership.

• • •

Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District, made the statement—as we caught it—that one-fourth of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference have come from the bounds of that district. That is, indeed, a remarkable record.

It was a source of sorrow to the brethren that Rev. L. E. Alford, of Pascagoula, had suffered a breakdown in health during the year and had to ask for the superannuate relation. It is hoped that he will be fully restored to health within a year.

Canton is a beautiful little city. Its streets are well paved, its homes are modern and attractive, and its churches are a credit to the town. The high school building is a magnificent structure. The people of Canton are proverbially hospitable and cultured.

One of the most delightful features of the Conference was the visit of the Millsaps College Glee Club on Friday and the musical numbers rendered by it. The club is composed of about thirty young men and women, and their singing is of an unusually high order.

• • •

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, for the Times-Picayune, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, for the Commercial-Appeal, gave the secular press full and accurate reports of the proceedings of the Conference. These two men are unexcelled as reporters of church gatherings.

• • •

Bishop Ainsworth has the respect, confidence and love of the brethren. He is a master in guiding the business of the Conference—never in a hurry, always considerate and courteous, and yet expediting matters so that the calendar is always

THE FIRST MILLION DOLLARS NOW NEARLY PAID—IS YOUR CHARGE HELPING?

By the time these lines are read it is practically assured that $1,000,000 will have been paid by the charges on Special Effort quotas. This fact seems important enough to inspire our thanksgiving and increase our courage to carry on. This million dollars now in hand out of the Special Effort, means $60,000 a year for the support of the Fogotten Man as long as time lasts. The thing thrills! It ought to send us to the task of raising the second million with greater zest than ever. The church is going to win this fight, and the preacher who does not do his part in the struggle will be an object of pity.

Consecration is the actual present surrender to God of the whole man and all we possess—hands, feet, eyes, lips, memory, affections, ambitions, time, reputation, friends, possessions, influence, family, all! How proper. Christ made us, keeps us, redeemed us, and has a right to us. The act of consercation is to recognize Christ's ownership and to accept it. It is not an act of feeling, but of will. It must be complete and eternal.—A. M. Hills.

Oh that we might live the higher life, the diviner joy, that we might taste the wine of immortality and rise up in its strength more than conquerors. The Lord, through the power of the cross, through the ever-pleading blood of Christ that has no words but a great look of love, help us to attain the heights heavenly, that we may come down again and do the earthly works without feeling their wearisomeness.—Joseph Parker.

The Home Circle

KOKOMO DOG ADOPTS HUMAN BABY.

The story of the unusually loyal devotion of a stray dog came to light at Kokomo, Indiana, recently. It is the story of "Jim," a big yellow nondescript, who "adopted" a little girl. He isn't homeless now, but we are getting ahead of the story, which is this:

When little Geraldine Rammel, a golden-haired child, was less than a year old, her mother took her on a shopping tour, the babe riding in a large perambulator. Stopping at a store to make her final purchase, the woman left the baby asleep in the perambulator in front of the store.

Coming out again, she was greeted by a deep growl when she attempted to approach the carriage. A strange dog, huge and tawny-coated, stood guard and refused to allow any one to come near. He also refused to leave. No one knew to whom the animal belonged, but evidently he proposed to stay where he was.

The mother became alarmed and was about to call a police officer to take away the unwelcome guardian. On a second thought, however, she realized that the big fellow was doing what he thought was right. She set about to convince him that she was a friend and approved his attitude.

She finally succeeded, and the dog consented to allow her to come near, but he did not leave. Instead, he walked sedately by the side of the perambulator all the way to the family residence. There was no foolishness from him—no cat chasing or rambling about in yards. He marched like a dignified soldier.

Arriving at the house, the big dog watched with interest while the little girl was taken out of the carriage. He insisted on going into the house. Not wishing to arouse his ire again, the family allowed him to enter.

After hearing the unusual account of the "adoption" of the baby by the strange dog, it was decided to give the animal a home, if he cared to stay. He did care to stay, and soon became "one of the family." Not knowing his real name, Jim was chosen for him, and he soon learned to answer to it. He was found to be a well-trained dog, above the average in intelligence, obedient and thoughtful of the welfare of his human associates. The family also discovered that he was not always as sedate and solemn as on the first trip home, but that he liked to romp and play.

But, while he made friends with Mr. Rammel and the two older boys, Jim's "true love" was the little girl. During the summer months he dozed for hours close to her crib in the shady yard, but he slept only lightly, and resented in no uncertain manner the aproach of a stranger.

When Geraldine learned to toddle, Jim's duties became manifold, but he took the increased responsibilities upon himself without question. When she could escape the eye of her busy mother, the child wandered all over the neighborhood.

Wherever she went, however, her self-appointed guardian was close at her heels. "Here come Jim and Geraldine" was frequently heard throughout the neighborhood. But the dog's devotion was not limited simply to trailing his charge. Time after time the child would wander toward the busy street, but the moment she started to step on the pavement Jim would catch the folds of her dress and gently pull her back into the yard.

(When first told of this feat, the writer gave little credence to it, but a personal investigation proved it to be true. In fact, he saw the dog pull the little tot back when she protested strongly.)

Jim's origin is still a mystery to the Rammel family, although it has been four years since he came into their lives and took it upon himself to care for Geraldine, who is now 5 years old. The dog seems to have a place in his heart for all members of the family, who are very fond of him, but it is to the back and call of the little girl that he responds most willingly.—C. F. Baker, in Our Dumb Animals.

A BOY WHO WAS BRAVE.

There is more than one way to be brave, as this little story shows. "Elton Tilton is just the bravest boy you ever saw, mother," said Wilfred "One day a big dog came along with his tongue hanging out, and we thought it was mad and scrambled over the fence; but Elton walked right along as calm as ever. He says he isn't afraid of bears or tramps or anything. I wish I were as brave as Elton, but I'm afraid I never will be."

"I heard a story about two boys the other day," said his mother, "and I thought one of them was very brave. They went to school together, and one day they thought it would be great fun to hide a frog in the teacher's desk. But the frog tipped over the ink bottle, and spoiled a number of examination papers and other things, and the teacher was very angry. He asked the guilty boy to own his fault like a man and take the punishment he deserved. He put him upon his honor, you see. Well, the older boy, who found the frog and first thought of the joke, sat still in his seat without a blush; but the little boy, though he trembled with fear, went to the desk before the whole school and owned his fault. And he sat for an hour on the dunce's stool, a target for fifty pair of eyes."

"O mother," cried Wilfred, "I was so ashamed! I'll never do anything so mean again as long as I live. How did you know?"

"I heard two little boys talking about it as I rode in the car. I was proud of my boy, Wilfred; and I pitied Elton Tilton's mother, for I said to myself: 'My boy was brave, but her boy was a coward.'"

"Why, I never thought that was being brave!" said Wilfred.—Presbyterian Banner.

THE RHINOCEROS' HORNS.

According to Dr. Herbert Lang, who studied the great white rhinoceros in the valley of the Nile, this animal has several very remarkable peculiarities.

Its lower lip is armed with a plate of horn as a protection against the sharp sword-grass, which constitutes a part of its food.

The strange thing is that the great horns which it carries on its nose—the front one of which is about twice as long as the rear one—do not grow from the bone, but from the skin. This is continuous under the base of the horn. The horns are attached to the skin by slender fibers, and two days after the animal is dead they can be plucked off with ease. Therefore these huge horns are not weapons of offense and defense, but merely tools which the big animal uses for pushing its way through the dense jungle. Dr. Lang says the white rhinoceros is a sociable and inoffensive beast. It never attacks men and never quarrels with its own kind. It has the habit of taking a daily mud bath. It is estimated that only about 3,000 white rhinoceroses remain, the others having been slaughtered as were the American buffalos.—Our Dumb Animals.

STRANGE COMRADES.

This incident occurred in Massachusetts during an unusually dry season several years ago when even large brooks were absolutely dry.

One hot Sunday afternoon in August I was reading to the children when we were startled by a barking and scratching at the kitchen door, which opens into a woodhouse. We knew it was not our dog, as he opens the door himself and goes in and out when he chooses.

I went to the door and, standing somewhat to the side, opened it, I'll admit, rather cautiously. In walked a harmless-looking brown dog the size of a hound, and directly after him stalked a full-grown deer with spreading antlers.

I closed the door softly, told the children, who were greatly excited, to keep very quiet, and then proceeded to find out what my strange guests wanted. The dog walked about sniffling the air, and at last located a pail of water that was in the sink. He put his forepaws on the edge and gave a most distressing howl. With all haste I filled a pan and placed it on the floor, and dog and deer drank together while I stood by, adding more water as necessary.

Both dog and deer were very friendly, and allowed us to pet them, but they soon became uneasy, and when the dog went to the door and barked to be let out the deer followed. We watched them out of sight, strange comrades indeed. The deer kept strictly to heel, and when the dog went under a fence the deer went over in the same place.

Upon making inquiries we learned that they were the property of a gentleman in an adjoining town. He had found the deer when very small and had secured permission to keep him. The animal was not given his freedom when hunters were supposed to be about, but it was a hunter's shot that eventually ended the beautiful creature's life while he and his "pal" were enjoying one of their Sunday runs.—Our Dumb Animals.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

in good shape. His leadership has been a blessing to Mississippi Methodism.

* * *

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, the host of the Conference, was untiring in his efforts to provide for the comfort of the members and visitors. Nothing was left undone that would make their stay pleasant. Brother Sullivan had the sympathy of all in the serious illness of his wife, whose condition, however, we are glad to state, was constantly improving.

* * *

The Conference heard gladly Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, of First Church, Memphis, in a series of addresses. Dr. Chappell is one of the most effective speakers on the American platform; but, what is more, he is one of the greatest preachers in the American pulpit. His messages reach the heart and stir the deepest emotions of the soul. He was a blessing to those who heard him.

* * *

The editor of the Advocate was most hospitably entertained in the lovely home of Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Howell. The happy associations of college days were delightfully renewed, and the whole stay was one of unalloyed pleasure. The home is blessed with three beautiful children—J. B., Jr., Katharine, and Baby; and the presence of the Doctor's mother, Mrs. Blanche Howell, is a benediction to all. Fellow-guests were Rev. A. M. Broadfoot and Rev. W. G. Forsyth. There is nothing more beautiful in this world than a Christian home.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle writes that he has reached Vaiden, Miss., his new field of labor, was cordially received, and that he is delighted with the outlook.

Rev. G. W. McLain, who has many friends in his "home" Conference, was changed at the recent session of his Conference from Clifton, Arizona, to Claypool, Arizona.

Rev. R. T. Ware reports a great meeting at Vivian, La., in which the preaching was done by Rev. Dan Kelly. There were sixty-eight additions to the church.

Rev. H. N. Harrison has had a prosperous pastorate this year at Slidell, La., having received about sixty members into the church, fifty-two on profession of faith.

The many friends of Rev. H. E. Partridge, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now of the Florida Conference, will sympathize deeply with him in the sorrow caused by the death of his wife recently.

The new church at St. Tammany, La., was dedicated last Sunday. Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, preaching the sermon. St. Tammany is on the Pearl River charge, Rev. H. W. Jamieson, pastor.

Rev. H. W. Jamieson, the pastor, held a fine meeting recently at Bush, La. There were ten or twelve accessions to the church. Rev. J. B. Grambling, of New Orleans, preached once during the meeting.

The board of stewards of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., passed resolutions highly commending Rev. Robert Selby for his diligent and effective labors among them during the past quadrennium.

Prof. J. E. Carruth, formerly a prominent layman of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, is now principal and supervisor of the Rural Training School, a department of the Texas State Teachers' College, at Fairlie, Tex. The Advocate goes to him in his new home.

Dr. Alonzo Early, host of the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference at Crowley, announces that Dr. F. N. Parker, of Emory University, will deliver three lectures during the Conference. Dr. Parker is a greatly beloved member of the Louisiana Conference.

The Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., has recently been thoroughly renovated and beautified. The first service in the "new" church was held last Sunday. On Nov. 13 a reception will be given in honor of the 540 new members received during the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Bishop and Mrs. Sam R. Hay, of Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, and of the faculties and students of Centenary College and Centenary Academy.

We announce with sorrow the death of Mrs. Jennie C. Norsworthy, widow of the late Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, of the Mississippi Conference, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. Durbin, in Meridian, Miss., on Oct. 20. The body was laid to rest in Yazoo City, Miss. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. E. Durbin and Mrs. W. B. Johnson, and one son, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING UNIFICATION ADOPTED BY THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The following resolutions were introduced by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb and unanimously adopted by the Conference:

Whereas, the Conference will be called upon at its next session to vote upon the pending plan of unification; and,

Whereas, it is vitally important that the membership of the church be informed and given ample opportunity to express their judgment on this important subject as they were given such opportunity to express themselves concerning its separate organization in 1845; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we recommend that all churches in the Conference elect their delegates to the district conference in some designated time, public notice of which church conference for the election shall be given at least four weeks in advance, and we would suggest that this be done in all churches at the first regular preaching services in the month of March.

Be it further resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that each church conference should take action informing its delegates of the church approval of or opposition to this measure.

Be it further resolved, That we would urge upon all our people to consider this vitally important matter calmly, judiciously and prayerfully, to the end that all our Conferences may act wisely and in the fear of God and in such a way as will promote the highest interest of our beloved Methodism and the Kingdom of God as we stand related to it.

CHANGE OF APPOINTMENT.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth authorizes the Advocate to announce that, to accommodate conditions of sickness in the family of one of the brethren, Rev. E. H. Cunningham has been appointed presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, and Rev. W. N. Duncan has been appointed pastor at Okolona, Miss.

BACK TO THE PELICAN PINES.

My time as pastor at Decatur, Ala., is out, and I am again free. I offer my services to any pastor who desires help. Write to me at Mansfield, La., and keep me busy.

S. A. STEEL.

TO OFFICERS OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Please observe that the address of my daughter, Mrs. W. V. Pittman, is 602 West Market Street, Greenwood, Miss. For two years I have gladly forwarded your mail to her. I will not be at Winona longer, hence will be deprived of this pleasure.

I bespeak for Mr. W. D. Hawkins, my successor in collecting Centenary pledges, your cordial cooperation. Let all letters, inquiries, reports and money go directly to him hereafter. His address is Meridian, Miss. Write down his name and address in your vest pocket diary, so it will always be convenient. That is the way I do, and can write any one of many persons, no difference where I am, nor how much I have forgotten.

Let us all keep on working and praying until all Centenary pledges have been paid. It makes my heart sick to contemplate the tragic consquences to be suffered on account of unpaid pledges.

I go to my new field of labor with much joy, and pray that all others may be as happy and more useful in Christ's kingdom.

Cordially,

BEN. P. JACO.

Shelby, Miss.

TO THE BRETHREN OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI, MISSISSPPI, AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

Dear Brethren: At the last session of the North Mississipi Conference I was appointed Conference evangelist, and take this means of informing any that may want my services that I am open for engagements for the coming year.

While I am assigned to the North Mississippi Conference, it does not prohibit my holding meetings out of this Conference when not at work in its bounds.

To those who may not know of me or my work, I shall be glad to furnish testimonies of the brethren whom I have assisted the past two years.

No "high pressure financial campaign" used. Envelope system used entirely.

I have been in the evangelistic work practically five years, but have given my entire time to it for the past two years in the two Delta Districts of the North Mississippi Conference.

Any inquiries will receive prompt attention.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN W. ROBERTSON.

Permanent Address: 677 Poplar Avenue, Memphis, Tenn. Phone Main 9875.

Board of Education.

The Board of Education is called to meet in the Methodist church at Crowley on Tuesday evening, Nov. 18, at 7:30 o'clock, to consider matters pertaining to the welfare of Centenary College.

H. T. CARLEY, Chairman.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA PREACHERS!

Separate report blanks are provided in the new forms for pastors' statistical reports for the Superannuate Endowment fund. This form must be used in making out your report to Conference this year. Please prepare your reports carefully and hand in not later than the closing session of the first day of Conference, as required by Conference action. This is very important. The work of the Statistical Secretaries will be heavier than usual this year, and every preacher in the Conference can materially assist by handing in his report promptly on arrival at Conference.

Thanking you for this co-operation, I am,

Faithfully,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. S. C. Moody, Heidelberg, Miss., 2; J. E. Whittington, Liberty, Miss., 3; Mrs. C. M. Lovitt, Pachuta, Miss., 3.

I ascribe to Bible study the help and strength which I have had from God to pass in peace through deeper trials in various ways than I had ever had before; and after having now above fourteen years tried this way, I can most fully, in the fear of God, commend it. . . . A man has deprived himself of the best there is in the world who has deprived himself of intimate knowledge of the Bible.—Woodrow Wilson.

The very same gospel which sets before the single believer the glorious issue of life, at the same time and by the same message binds up his hope with that of every other believer and, more than that, with destiny of the whole world. It is only by neglecting the resurrection that the Christian can be isolated.—Brooks Foss Westcott.

After passing her eighty-third birthday, MRS. LAURA L. DeLAP passed to her eternal reward a few weeks ago in the old city of Natchez, Miss. She was born there, and spent her long life, one might almost say, under the same roof where she was born. But the old home burned several years ago, and she was compelled to live elsewhere for the last years of her life. Her younger adult years were spent in the school room, where she was well beloved. When about 33 years of age she was happily married to Mr. E. George DeLap, a prominent business man of her home town, who died in 1911. One child, Miss Laura DeLap, lived to bless her father and mother. Mrs. DeLap joined the Jefferson Street Methodist Church in Natchez when she was 13 years of age, and during her long life no one ever tried to follow the Master's command to "judge not" more completely than she did. Her charity was not always wisely given—it was so catholic that many imposed upon it. But literally she gave as it was given her, and never sparingly. Her unselfishness was sublime; she never seemed to think of herself at all. I first met her in December, 1888, shortly after my father was appointed as pastor of the Jefferson Street Church. It was the holiday season, and her carriage was literally full of good things for the poor; with her little daughter for company, she was distributing cheer to the less fortunate. She did not wait for holidays, but gave daily throughout the years. I do not recall seeing her with an empty carriage, unless it was homeward bound—and then the marks of milk bottles, packages, etc., were clearly seen. The last ten or twelve years of her life were spent in much pain. She bore her afflictions uncomplainingly—her greatest sorrow being that she could do nothing for others. Gradually the life machinery moved less easily, and as the summer waned, she passed on to join the loved ones over on the other side.

"I was hungry and ye fed me" can be her epitaph.

J. C. BALLARD,
Lieutenant Colonel, Reserve.
Biloxi, Miss.

On the morning of Sept. 2, 1924, at 2:30 o'clock, at the Methodist Hospital, Hatiesburg, Miss., the spirit of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HEARST so quietly, so sweetly and so beautifully returned unto the God who gave it. All that faithful physicians, nurses and loved ones could do was of no avail, and with every member of his family at his bedside, after six weeks of suffering in hospitals, he quietly and bravely went to sleep and awoke in Heaven, where there is no suffering nor sad good-bys. Frankie was born Feb. 22, 1881, and at the tender age of 9 years gave his heart to God and joined the Methodist church, and was ever loyal to his Savior, his church and his family, whom he loved so well. His desire was to get well to be with his widowed mother, but he told her, "Mamma, if I don't get well, don't grieve for me, for I will be in Heaven waiting and watching for you." Precious brother, we know you are "safe in the arms of Jesus," but how we miss you! He said he loved every word in his Bible; and his life was beautiful in its service to his Savior. His pastor, Rev. B. H. Williams, assisted by Rev. Mr. Moody, a former pastor, conducted the funeral services, and his precious body was laid to rest by the side of our dear father and brother, and they are waiting for us now in Heaven.

"O, how sweet it will be,
In that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips,
And with harps in our hands,
To meet precious Frankie again."

SISTER.

MRS. AMANDA C. FULTON, (nee Currie), wife of J. B. Fulton, was born Sept. 4, 1859, and on Aug. 25, 1924, departed this life to be with God. She was married to Brother Fulton on April 4, 1878. To this union were born two daughters, both of whom, with the father and many relatives and friends, mourn their loss. Sister Fulton was a lifelong Methodist, having joined the church early in life, and lived a consistent member until death. She loved her pastor, and attended the services of the church regularly until her affliction rendered her unable to attend. She was in bad health the last two or three years of her life, and for about one year was confined to her bed. She underwent two operations, without avail, and suffered untold pain, but she bore her suffering with grace and fortitude, and an unflinching faith, and always manifested much patience and love. This pastor always found it a source of inspiration to visit her and behold her beautiful faith, and hear her speak of her home in Heaven, and express her desire to go when it might please the Lord to take her out of her suffering. She leaves indeed a heritage to the two daughters, the husband and relatives. To the bereft loved ones, permit me to say, only God can ease and calm the disturbed soul amidst such sorrow in life. To him I commend you, and pray that there may be another family reunion some day—a day which is not followed by night, and a coming together never to be separated one from the other.

Her pastor,
T. B. WINSTEAD.
Carthage, Miss.

SARAH NEILSON PARTRIDGE was born in Barnwell, S. C., Sept. 14, 1852, and died at Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 8, 1924. She came with her widowed mother, Mrs. J. H. Neilson, to Monticello, Fla., in 1868. There she was converted and joined the Methodist church in the fall of 1871, in a meeting conducted by the pastor, Rev. U. S. Bird, who was assisted by the young Wofford graduate, with whose life she later linked her own. She was married Oct. 29, 1873, to Henry Edward Partridge, then in his second year in the Florida Conference. Thus began a life of Christian service and happy wedlock,—which was to last through more than a half hundred years. Mrs. Partridge was an attractive woman, beautiful in form and feature, whose personal characteristics added charm to her life. She was a devoted wife and mother and friend, and was a sincere lover of her Lord. She was full of good cheer; and even in the midst of suffering, she retained the spirit and hopefulness of youth. She had a long illness, and finally underwent a severe operation, from which she could not recover. This good woman was the mother of eight children, five daughters and three sons, all of whom were present at the passing of their mother: Mrs. Ethel B. Hudson, Miss Frances H. Partridge, Henry E. Partridge, Jr., Mrs. Grace P. Hartridge, Mrs. Mortimer Johnson, Mrs. Mary Louise Starbuck, Paul W. and John N. Partridge. There are also twenty-six grandchildren and a great-grandchild. The pastors of our Methodist churches in Jacksonville acted as an escort and as pallbearers from the residence to the depot. The body was laid to rest in the family burying ground at Monticello, near that of her good mother. Better than my own words are those of her devoted and bereaved companion, which I now quote: "Her conviction was deep, her commitment full, and her conversion definite. Later in life she sought and obtained the experience of perfect love. Never did she falter or shirk or complain of the requirements or difficulties of the work. Nor did she seek better places. She was uniformly cheerful, patiently toilful in the interests of her home, and, as far as possible, of her church; and devotedly unselfish to those around her. She poured the wealth of her love and strength of her pure life into that itinerant's home; and her husband and eight children rise up to call her blessed. Her prime characteristics were sincerity, cheerfulness and faithfulness to obligations. She was not afraid to die, although the attack that took her from us was too sharp and full of pain to allow her to think much of going. Her life was, and still is her best testimony. At St. Luke's Hospital, in the early morning of Monday, Sept. 8, she slipped away from us to be forever with the Lord, and—please God—to await the coming of every one of her loved ones."

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. M. A. VAN HOOK.

"An angel came to earth one day,
And scanned the passing throng,
Some with a sigh upon the lips,
And some with everlasting song,
A face most sweet and passing fair,
With love beaming in her eyes,
And a halo o'er her hair.
So stooping low, he pressed a kiss
Upon her white forehead,
And smiling sweetly in his arms,
She passed into the light."

Henrietta Elizabeth George was born June 26, 1834, in Mobile, Ala., where she spent her childhood. Her college days were spent at Athens College, Athens, Ala., graduating from that institution in June, 1852. In the same month that she stood as a sweet girl graduate, she stood at the altar as a bride, entrusting her life into the care and keeping of her lover, M. A. Van Hook, going to his home in New Orleans, La. So young and beautiful, so gifted and accomplished, Mrs. Van Hook began to make the most of a wonderful life. She was not only a true wife, a home-maker and mother, but a writer. Many articles were written by her and published in the current magazines of the day, she being a regular contributor to Godey's Ladies' Book. She truly dedicated her fine voice and great musical talent to the glory of God, and for a number of years was leader of the choir at Old Felicity Street Church in New Orleans, La. She was prominent in church and social affairs in New Orleans, Selma, Ala., and Columbus, Miss, her accomplishments and wealth giving her a position of influence. During the Civil War, Mrs. Van Hook's home was in Selma, Ala., and she was a veritable angel of mercy to the sick and suffering soldiers. She was a leader in all the work, nursing, feeding and sewing for our boys in gray. In 1870, Mrs. Van Hook, with her husband and family, moved to Jackson, Miss. Mr. Van Hook passed away in 1896. The coming of this family was a blessing to the church and to the community. Mrs. Van Hook came of a long line of Methodists, her grandfather, Rev. Mr. Longly, being one of the Wesley's "Legal Hundred." This is the heritage she has left to her children. Only three of the ten children are now living: Mrs. George T. Howard, of San Antonio, Tex.; Rev. H. W. Van Hook, of Biloxi, Miss., and Mrs. J. T. Lowther, of Jackson, Miss., with whom she made her home; also to the seventeen grandchildren and the thirteen great-grandchildren.

"At times 'tis given us to know
A woman who to us doth seem a queen,
Such dignity hath she, such gentle mien;
Though age hath ripened her life below,
With love she ever ruleth, striving to bestow
Upon her world, ofttimes in ways unseen,
A richer life, dispassionate, serene,
To one of these, how great the debt we owe!

Just such a woman, gentle, true, was she,
Whom God has called to dwell with him above,
A recompense well earned and well bestowed,
Cultured, refined, adorned with piety,
A subject fit for kingdoms,
As revered she stands within that blest abode."

Makes Old Folks Feel Young Again

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets in Great Demand by Aged People.

Nowadays old folks are increasing their strength and vitality by the use of Cod Liver Oil, which according to medical men is full of vitamines and is the greatest body builder in the world.

Of course they don't take the nasty tasting, evil smelling, stomach upsetting oil itself. Few sensible people do that in these enlightened days, when McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—sugar coated and easy to take—are sold in every drug store in the land—60 tablets for 60 cents.

Old people who want to keep young and vigorous as long as they can will find that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are just what they need to keep in first class condition.

Scientists tell us that "Cod Liver Oil is useful during every stage and age of life" but at no time is its wonderful building power more clearly demonstrated than in old age.

Why not get a 60 cent box today and increase your already decreasing energy and strength. Take them for 30 days and note the pleasure you get from feeling younger again.

There is no question but what they will help you, but of that you must be the judge—if they don't help—your money will be returned by the druggist from whom you bought them—for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are rigidly guaranteed. Be sure, however, to get McCoy's—the original and genuine.

OUR WORK AMONG THE NEGROES

By Dr. J. W. Perry.

In 1860 the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, employed two hundred and forty-seven white ministers who were appointed missionaries to the slaves. They gathered large numbers of converts. There were about 80,000 colored members in the Southern Methodist Church when the war broke out. Many of them went away to other churches following the period of strife, but quite a large number remained loyal and would not leave the old "mother church" until authority was given by the General Conference and they were organized into a separate ecclesiasticism, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. They have their own bishops and own church officers and manage their own affairs, but with the assurance that the Southern Methodists would not cease to care for them and be interested in helping them.

They early began to look after the education of their race, and the heroic sacrifices they have made are amazing. Out of their poverty, they have erected some splendid plants, and this has been done with only small aid from the "Mother Church." They did have help in the development of Paine College and Lane College, and occasionally aid was given in all their institutions. They have labored under great difficulties, and in recent years the only means of expansion was for one of their bishops to appoint a young man for a new charge, who would come to the field and secure him a job out of which to make a living and as much time as he had left to gather his people, preach to them, organize them, and so build up the church. Despite all the difficulties, they have grown to a membership of three hundred and sixty-five thousand souls. We are now aiding them to support about one hundred and ten of their own men to serve in the needy places among their people, against two hundred and forty-seven white missionaries in 1860.

In addition to the evangelistic work of this kind, each year a school for their pastors, lasting for ten days, is conducted in some part of their territory. Last year there were two hundred and forty-six in attendance at the school at Texas College, Tyler, Tex. No more eager, earnest body of men ever assembled. They made the best use of their time; and how they pleaded for such a chance once every year! At present, it is not possible to have more than one of the schools a year, and it takes a period of about three years to cover the whole territory of the South.

Through the Centenary we are giving aid to five schools under the control of this church to the extent of a maximum of $50,000 each. It is encouraging to see the wise use they have been making of this money—three have erected much-needed buildings, one has added money to its endowment, and the fifth one is planning a building program. It was proposed also to provide $250,000 through the Centenary for Paine College, all of which is sorely needed if this institution is to fill the place it ought to fill in the development of these people and this church.

One of the greatest needs is a school for the preparation of teachers, preachers and social workers, and that is what is designed at Paine College. No graduate of this institution has ever been convicted of crime, and stands as one of the finest illustrations of co-operation between the races. Through all its years its faculty has been composed of both white and colored teachers. The Board of Trustees are of an equal number of white and colored members. Bishop Darlington is the president, and Bishop Williams, the vice president of the Board. They are both excellent presiding officers.

This is a fine proof and illustration of the fact that white and colored people can work together for the best interest of both races and live in peace and quiet and so glorify God in their lives. Fine grounds have been secured and steps are being taken for the erection of some very much needed buildings. The church must carry on this work. We cannot fail these brethren who so long have trusted us and looked to us for help.

EVANGELISM.

By Dr. R. L. Russell.

The church is called and commissioned to evangelize all nations of the world. And to evangelize all nations of the world means to make an attempt to make Christian every individual in the world. So that at the very heart of our Gospel is the doctrine of evangelism—one person winning another person to Christ.

The Methodist church is particularly called to evangelize, for she was born in a revival and has always been considered a revival church. It is the revival spirit that has characterized us and made us stand out as a distinct people. When we lose this power we have lost our greatness as a church.

We are better organized now for evangelistic work than we have ever been. We have our General Committee on Evangelism; our Conference Committees on Evnagelism; our Church Committees on Evangelism. The Sunday school and Epworth League are organized for evangelism with their groups. Evangelism is being taught in all our Summer Schools for Pastors. We have our general evangelists and our Conference and district evangelists, so that organically we are still a powerful evangelistic force.

What we need now is the spirit of evangelism to come upon our pastors and people in a remarkable and most outstading way. We need evangelists to go into the waste places of the church to strengthen the things that remain; to break new ground in new territory; organize new Sunday schools; new congregations; help the pastors on mission charges; go into the new sections of our great cities; hold revivals; visit from house to house and build up congregations.

We could employ the full time services of twenty-five men to do nothing else but the work of missionary evangelists. We are praying that the church will make it possible for us to employ these men. There ought to be twenty-five individuals, or twenty-five churches somewhere in the denomination who will take the salary of one of these men, and thus enrich their own lives, make stronger their Christian faith, and make it possible for many people in America to hear the Word of God and become evangelists themselves and thus reach others.

The Centenary has been largely responsible for increasing the salaries of preachers 43% in four years, a total of nearly $3,000,000 a year.

NERVOUS, RUN-DOWN MOTHERS

Worn Out Caring for Children and Housework—See how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps

Indianapolis, Indiana.—"I was in a very nervous and run-down condition while nursing my baby, and hearing some talk of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. From the second bottle I noticed a big improvement, and I am still taking it. I am not a bit nervous now, and feel like a different person. It is a great medicine for any one in a nervous, run-down condition and I would be glad to give any one advice about taking it. I think there is no better medicine and give you permission to publish this letter."—Mrs. Anna Smith, 541 W. Norwood Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

The important thing about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is that it does help women suffering from the ailments common to their sex.

If you are nervous and run-down and have pains in your lower parts and in your back, remember that the Vegetable Compound has relieved other women having the same symptoms. For sale by druggists everywhere.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Teacher Training Record.

Our Conference records show the following interesting facts: Nnmber of credits issued in 1921, 76; in 1922, 289; in 1923, 606; in 1924, 1,000 or more.

Nnmber of credits issued at our Standard Training Schools, 1924: Lake Charles. 22; Monroe, 49; Baton Rouge, 44; Ruston, 43; Houma, 27; Amite, 59; Alexandria, 66; Minden, 57; Shreveport, 84; New Orleans, 94.

Miss Cora Perkins, of the Nashville office, writes: "I was certainly glad to get the news from the New Orleans school that yon sent. I hope that the number of credits comes np to expectations.

"I am enclosing the figures that yon asked for. You will notice that this incldes only September, and that October is yet to be heard from. As we have quite a number of credits for October, one hundred and fifty or more, not including the New Orleans school, I wonld like to suggest that yon wait until yon get October's report from our office before making up your report. If you do, this will give Louisiana in the neighborhood of a thousand credits, something to be proud of."

Your Conference Superintendent had the great pleasure of visiting the Istrouma Sunday school at Baton Rouge, Sunday, Oct. 26. Rev. B. B. McCullin is the pastor and Mr. W. P. Carnes is superintendent. The membership of this school is about one hundred and twenty, with nine classes. They have just recently moved in their new Sunday school building, which has six class rooms. The prospects are good for this Sunday school.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of Opelousas, writes: " I want to know if you can come by and check up our Sunday school before going to Conference." We appreciate such invitations as this.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Our motto for the year: "Let us go forward on our knees."

Our goals for a five-year period: 75.000 enrollment in our Sunday schools; 400 Gold Seal Diplomas for our officers and teachers; 50 students from Millsaps and Grenada taking graduate work in religions education; $50,000 endowment for the chair of Religions Education in Grenada College.

For the present year: Eight Standard Training Schools, ten county and circuit schools; 100 schools adopting and using the program of work.

To carry out the above mentioned goals the Conference passed a resolution asking that the Sunday schools give the Sunday School Board the offering taken on the fifth Sunday in November. Can a man forget his own best interests? Do this much for your own teachers.

Our first school is to be held at Clarksdale, Nov. 22-27. The following courses are to be given:

A Methodist Church and Its Work, R. H. B. Gladney instructor.

Pupil Study, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, instructor.

Story Telling, Mrs. W. W. Templeton, instructor.

Missionary Message of the Bible, (teacher not secured).

Write Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Educational Director, Clarksdale, for further information.

HUMAN INFLUENCE.

By Rev. S. D. Howard.

"For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."—Romans 14:7.

You can see that the measure of our influence for weal or woe will be a hidden and terrible secret, until the day when the spirit, blindly driven to despair and guilt, shall stand writhing and wretched, to confront those by whom the offense came, and teach that human influence is eternal.

Almighty God has written upon the flowers that sweeten the air; on the breeze that rocks the flower upon the stem; upon the rainbow, that refreshes the sprig of moss that lifts its head in the desert; upon every peaceful shell that slumbers in the caverns of the mighty deep; and no less upon the mighty and glorious sun, which warms and cheers the teeming millions of creatures which live in its light. and upon all his work, the mighty and eternal truth, that no man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. This truth is as startling as it is eternal.

The idea of a human being without Influence is preposterous. Why, if you should stand still and shut your eyes and fold your arms, you exert an influence by the position you occupy. The human family is a unit: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth. and hath determined the times before appointed. and the bounds of their habitation." Acts 17:26.

There is the silent influence of example, which, after all, is the most powerful and effective. This silent influence of example is manifested more or less by every individual, and is constantly operating for good or evil. for weal or for woe. Of course, distinguished rank and position in society add greatly to personal influence. Look at the influence of such men as William Jennings Bryan, and Henry Ford; St. Paul has more influence in the world to-day than he did when he stood on Mars Hill and preached the gospel of Jesus Christ; and the same is true of John Wesley, John Knox, Fannie Crosby, Francis Willard.

There is the influence that comes with wealth, and with the man or woman of great education. The man or woman of wealth may use that wealth and influence to bless the world, or they may use it to curse the world; and the same is true of the man or woman of much education.

Influence is perpetuated! Long after a man or woman has crossed the river that divides time from eternity their influence goes on for good or bad. Look at Jereboam, long after he had passed into eternity, when men of Israel died the people would refer to the "sin of Jereboam that made Israel to sin."

Oh, the power of human influence! what a blessing when used to glorify God, and on the other hand, what a curse when it is not used to glorify God and make the world better!

No man liveth to himself, the Scriptures declare.

No man dieth to himself, is also stated there.

Human influence, will never, never end.

A blessing or curse, will it surely send.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS.

Amazing Results Secured In One Day By Use of Virex, Formerly Known As Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years standing, is improving wonderfully."

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, says: "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days I could hear my watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident, had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says, "Virex has stopped my head noises and I can hear the train whistle 3 1-2 miles away."

Roy Fisher, Iowa man, says, "I hadn't heard a watch tick for eleven years—now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says, "After being deaf 38 years, I used your treatment only a few days and hear fairly well."

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says, "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears.

Mrs. Ola Valentine, of Arkansas, says, "My little boy, now 5 years old, had been deaf since about 4 months of age. Now he hears very well and is learning to talk."

Mr. Mather Pelleys says, "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days and he hears almost as well as ever before."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 1659 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.

New Home Lamp Makes Its Own Fuel

Brilliant 300 Candle Power Light Turns Night Into Day.

A new home lamp which makes its own fuel, gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights and costs only one cent a night is the latest achievement of Mr. W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. According to experts the new lamp literally "Turns night into day." It has no wick or chimney and makes no smoke nor odor.

It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comforts of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial or even give one free to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. One active agent in each community can make $50 to $100 weekly. Write for full particulars to-day.

PRAY FOR THE WORK MENTIONED IN THESE ARTICLES

FROM TEXAS AVENUE, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: This is a difficult but interesting field in which to lahor for the Master. The constantly changing condition of the membership makes it hard to keep a well organized force steadily at work. We have taken in one hundred and forty members during the year, hut have lost almost half that number. Will report about seventy-five net gain.

If our plans work out, we will make the hest financial report in the hlstory of the church. Our plan now is to hegin the new church enterprise with the opening of the new year. Wo have church property here easily worth $28,000, based on the usual value of real estate in this section of the city. With what we hope to get in donations from the membership and other sources, we expect to have a $30,000 plant within the next twelve months.

All the departments of the church work are alive and growing. We were assisted in a few days' revlval by Rev. W. W. Perry, of Many, one month ago. Perry is a strong, logical preacher, and his work with us was fruitful of much good.

We are delighted to havo our Bishop Hay live with us in Shreveport. He ls genial, lovahle, brotherly, wide-awake and up-to-date in every particular. He ls very modest. He says he would rather be addressed "brother" than "bishop." He has promlsed to preach for us at Texas Avenue the last Sunday of the Conference year.

Yours cordially,

JAS. M. ALFORD.

PAINS IN BACK

Arkansas Lady Says Mother Gave Her Cardui and She Had No More Trouble of This Kind.

Lamar, Ark.—Mrs. Edith Seeman, here, recently made the following statement describing her experience in the use of Cardui:

"I had pain in my back and sides; had sick headaches and my nose would bleed. I couldn't sit up at all.

"My mother gave me Cardul. I took about a half bottle and at this . . . I was able to get up and help with tho work. Next time I took it again, and now, after taking two hottles, I do not have any trouble at all at this time. I gained, my skin cleared up, I am healthy and strong.

"My mother took Cardul for a weak, run-down condition. It did her more good for weakness and nervousness than any medicine she has ever taken. She took six bottles in all. We recommend it and certainly know its worth."

The foregoing is one out of thousands of statements which have been received from users of Cardul, the woman's tonic. If you aro a sufferer from womanly ailments, try Cardul. It may be just what you need. At your dealer's. NC-156

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only. Their continued use leads to permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Physicians advise lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt the habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

THE OFFICIAL ACTIONS OF OUR CHURCH ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL MERGER.

By C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

I—Action of the General Conference (May, 1922).

The duties of the General Board shall be:

"To arrange any needed co-operation in its own field of work with other denominations and agencies; provided, that no such arrangement shall interfere with the right and responsibility of the church to provide and control its own organizations and programs of work, hoth general and Conference, or with its right and responsihility, through its own properly constituted channels, to provide for and to supervise the training of its own Sunday school teachers and officers and for the religious instruction and training of its own children, youth, and adults; and, provided, further, that to the Annual Conferences shall be reserved the right to determine each for itself whether or not it shall undertake so to co-operate with other denominations or agencies."—Discipline, 1922.

II—Action of the General Board (July, 1922).

The Board accepts regular membership in the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education provided that hody consents to its membership on the conditions herein set forth.

The Board makes the following recommendations and suggestions to the Annual Conferences of the church which desire to enter into negotiations regarding co-operation:

1. That no Annual Conference has the right to commit itself to any policy of co-operation that does not recognize the duty of our church to dlrect and control the religious education of its own children and youth, and that does not provide for the carrying out of thc educational policies and programs adopted hy the General Sunday School Board under the authority and instruction of the General Conference.

2. That the Conference authorize the Sunday School Board to appoint a committee to give careful consideration to the whole question of the formation of a Sunday School Council of Religious Education in the State in which the Conference is located, and to confer on this suhject with the officially appointed representatives of other denominations and of the State Sunday School Association, in the effort to discover a basis of co-operation that is equitable and satisfactory to the Conference. In this connection the Board calls attention to the fact that in the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education the denominational Boards appoint directly one-half of the total membership of the body, the distribution among the several denominations heing on the hasis of their Sunday school membership, and in the judgment of this Board the organization of State Sunday School Councils of Religious Education should involve a 50 per cent representation appointed directly hy the denominations actually co-operating.

3. That the committee appointed hy the Conference Sunday School Board shall report its findings and the results of its negotiations to the Conference, which, in the light of all the facts, shall then determine for itself its future relations with the State Sunday School Council of Religious Education.

III—Action of Louisiana Conference, November, 1922.

Resolved, "That a committee, consisting of the chairman of the Sunday School Board, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and Rev. J. W. Pearson, he appointed to represent the Louisiana Annual Conference of the various denominations of this State and the Louisiana Sunday School Association relative to the reorganization of the Louisiana Sunday School Association into the Louisiana Sunday School Council of Religious Education, and that the committee report back next year to the Conference its conclusions in regard to the matter of co-operating in the State Sunday School activities of the proposed new organization."

IV—Action of Louisiana Conference, November, 1923.

"Whereas, our great church has put on an adequate program of religious education, and the records and facts show that the past year has been one of, if not the best in our history as a Conference; and, whereas, the Louisiana Sunday School Association has declared in its official organ that the past year has heen its best; and, whereas, all our relations to outside agencies are purely voluntary; therefore, your commitee appointed at the last session of the Annual Conference on the merger matter recommends that present relations with said organization remain the same for the coming year, and that the same committee be continued with Rev. J. C. Price in place of Rev. J. W. Pearson."

DEFINITE STEPS IN THE MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

By M. W. Brabham, Director.

In the call announced hy Dr. J. W. Shackford, General Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, looking toward an increased emphasis upon an enlarged Sunday school membership, several things are set forth as the chief features of this effort to make Methodism's Sunday schools more far-reaching. These things naturally call for more extended treatment than is possible in any one article. The purpose of this article is to indicate the definite steps recommended to Sunday school workers. Other material is available giving more of details than is here undertaken. This material is in the form of pamphlets, and these are being circulated without cost to the schools.

1. Making a Survey of Conditions.

Early in the campaign there should he a meeting of the officers of the Sunday school for the purpose of making a survey of conditions. This survey will involve at least two approaches.

1. A survey of the inner workings of the school. This survey should lead to an intensive study of the local school along such lines as the following: The bona fide enrollment of the school by classes and departments; the average attendance of the membership of the school as compared with the enrollment; the record system used in classes and departments; the average methods used in looking after absentee members, programs of Sunday school sessions in departments or in the school as a whole; plans of week-day activities. These are only suggestive of the studies which should be made. Other studies closely related to the foregoing will include plans in operation for training leaders and organizing efforts to secure new members.

2. A survey of conditions outside the school. Thls survey may take one or more of several worth while directions. Certainly it should include a careful study of the church membership roll as compared with the Sunday school membershlp roll. The unreached masses of people will also without question be one of the major interests of the survey. The survey will of necessity be definitely pointed toward things which will make for the advancement of the school, hut it will look heyond the interest of any one school and seek to make the community a hetter place for all. One of the points worthy of consideration is that of discovering all avallable sources within the community seeking to carry on Christian work. An investigation of the pdaces of recreation, amusement, and social gatherings will be one of the interesting angles of any survey which undertakes to discover facts bearing on the life of the school. A comparative study of the enrollment and attendance upon the public school as compared with the Sunday school will give facts likely to stir up a community to a new realization of its responsibility to its children and youth. A study of the church plant and its possible development for a well rounded program will perhaps lead to a new building enterprise.

2 Following the Beginning.

The meeting of the workers in the early part of the campaign will also include a discussion of plans for following up the facts obtained from having made the surveys of the inner and outer life of the school. The information will be of little value unless it leads to such things as the following:

1. Distribution of the information to all officers and teachers. Both as to the inner and outer conditions affecting the school life there should be full information given to the officers and teachers. Only in this way may they be expected to become thor-

FROM DE RIDDER, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed our revival here—the second one for the year—last Sunday a week ago. Twenty-two adults joined our church, among whom were the sheriff and the high school principal. While we had a good revival in the spring, the brethren think this one was better. I found out a long time ago that almost every church needs two revivals annually. The second one is always better than the first one.

The Lord has blessed these two years we have spent here. We have taken into the church just about as many members as we had when I came here. Of course we are happy over the results.

Yesterday was a good day—we took six members into the church as a result of the day's efforts. Our congregations were large, and God was graciously with us in all the services.

We would not have it thought that much of the work that has been done here is not due to the faithful people that make up this congregation. No finer people can be found. The preacher who is sent here next year will find that his "lines have fallen in pleasant places," indeed. This is truly a people to be appreciated.

The parsonage has recently been recovered, and new paper has been put on throughout. Before the new preacher arrives, the interior will be gone over thoroughly. So, brethren, here is a first-class church building, good parsonage, fine people, no debts, and nothing to do but just come here and go to work. Since the Bishop has promised to appoint me to the general evangelistic field, I want to say, "Hop to it, boys, the way is wide open."

Fraternally yours,
HENRY T. YOUNG, Pastor.

REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF FOR THE YEAR.

I have preached 145 times; 297 have joined the church; one Sunday school has been organized and 1 church built.

The following races joined the church: 55 Syrians, 21 Greeks, 9 Italians, 9 Chinamen, 2 Mohammedans, 7 Assyrians, 8 Negroes, 179 Americans.

I have collected $476.55 for expenses. I have spent: Railroad fare, $159.80; printing, $22.25; hotel and meals, $270.75; stamps, $12.50. Total expenses, $473.39.

Pray for me and my work. I have appreciated the opportunity of being with the brethren and their courtesies to me.

I am happy. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Your brother in Christ,
CHAS. ASSAF.

RESOLUTION EXTENDING TIME.

"That the time limit fixed in June for the submission of manuscripts of a book on evangelical Christianity, an alternative for a lost or decaying religious faith, for which the Board is offering $1,000, be extended from May 1, 1925, to Jan. 1, 1926, in order to give competitors for this prize time to do their best work and to get their manuscripts in the hands of the committee."

(Note. All who are interested in this competition are requested to write for full information to J. F. Love, Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Va.)

THE CALL OF THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

By Rev. R. H. Ruff.

Fully three-fourths of the membership of Southern Methodism worships at the altars of the country church. Here they found God. Here is the source of the strength and power which has made country folks the backbone of our national life. May it ever be so.

It will be a sad day for the church when it fails to minister adequately to the people in the open country and village communities. Conditions are changing rapidly as regards these communities. Good roads, automobiles, telephone and radio, increased tenantry, continued exodus to the large towns and cities, inadequate buildings and equipment, too often an underpaid and untrained ministry, are factors which affect the future of the country church. Our denomination must have a new and increased appreciation of the value of the rural church. A better trained and better paid ministry must be provided. Better physical equipment is a necessity if the country church is to meet the religious need of our community.

A comparison of figures in two districts in one of our Annual Conferences shows the comparative values of the church buildings, and reveals the following facts: Average valuation of the rural church building is $2,000, while that of the city church building is $53,000, or an average valuation of equipment per rural member of $192 against $920 for the city member. Is it Christian to provide nearly five times as much in the way of equipment for the city member as we do for the rural member? Why should not the rural member have physical equipment and a ministry that would compare favorably with that of the city church member?

The country church must have more preaching, and better preaching. It must have better Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, a thoroughgoing community service program—in fact, the rural church must have a program just as far-reaching as that of the town and urban community. Many of our country churches have died; a goodly number are losing membership, and the future is not hopeful unless the present-day conditions are remedied.

The Board of Missions is earnestly endeavoring to meet these needs. With a small amount of funds at its disposal it is rendering a large service to the struggling country churches. May we pray that this good work may not stop, and that God may continue to bless the work which has been so recently enterprised by the Board. This cannot be continued unless the people called Methodists are willing to place their gifts upon God's altar for this most important work.

GREATEST FORCE FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

The Church of Christ stands for law and order, good government and morals. It is the greatest force in America for righteousness. Its influence means more for our security than a million policemen. It restrains evildoers and is a dynamic force in the lives of our good citizens. Like our public school system, its presence enhances every piece of property in our city and nation, bootleg joints excepted.

The church is the outstanding, distinguishing mark of civilized people. Its presence makes for morality and decency. Its absence would mean moral and spiritual darkness and decay. If we remove the church from our midst, then our great Christian civilization would disintegrate and collapse, for no building can stand when the foundation is destroyed.

Men who knock the church are digging at the foundation of their own homes and happiness and security. Men who give no support to the church, personal or moral, or financial, are living off of its blessings and repudiating its claims. Every such one is an ingrate. It is the moral duty of every man who wants to hand down to his children and theirs a civilization guaranteeing peace, prosperity and happiness to give his presence, his purse and his prayers to the support of the church.—Selected.

COMPLETION.

To mean well is not enough; to begin well is not enough; to go halfway is not enough. Good intentions must be harnessed and put to pulling; good beginnings must be carried to good conclusions; the half journey must be finished, if the starting point is reached. Initial virtues should prove their virtue in completion.

Letters have been written and carried in pockets until out of date. Tasks have been commenced and allowed to go down in unfinished failure. Partial journeys toward desirable ends often stop at a quarter station or the halfway point. "In due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Students in school should finish the educational course. Apprentices in shops should master their trades. Missionaries should stick to their mission. Preachers should not fall by the wayside. Christian converts should pass cradle-days, go through religious adolescence, and reach maturity of faith and spiritual power.

To begin well is fine, but to end well is finer. "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved."—Methodist Advocate.

The Centenary has called out a large number of missionary volunteers from every field. These young men and women are now preparing themselves for their life work as preachers, teachers, and evangelists.

WARNING

Why you should take organic iron to enrich your blood instead of metallic iron —how to tell the difference.

While iron is absolutely necessary to your life and health always remember that your blood contains organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take; therefore when you take iron always take organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron and is an entirely different thing from organic iron. Organic iron may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron.

Millions of people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few days will often commence to enrich your blood, help revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. It costs about eighteen times as much to make organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, as it does to make metallic iron, though it costs you but little more. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark, telephone for a package today. In tablet form only; look for the letters N. I. on every tablet and refuse to take substitutes. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

DEFINITE STEPS IN THE MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

oughly interested in what is to follow.

2. Enlargement of the present organization to care for expected growth. There may be needed in many instances new officers and teachers to care for the increase which is sure to come as a result of the survey. New classes may have to be provided for, and this will result in a call for additional teachers. Some classes will have need for a different meeting place; this should be faced as one of the probable developments.

3. Extend personal invitations. After the information has been secured, and the organization strengthened by the observance of Promotion and Training Day, the school should be ready to go after those who have been discovered as logically belonging to it. Promotion Day comes the last Sunday in September. This occasion is not to be confused with Rally Day, which is soon to follow. On Promotion Day all classes and departments go through whatever readjustments are necessary because of the advancement of the pupils. Here let it be suggested that following Promotion Day there should be definite personal invitations systematically extended to those who are to be sought as new members. Class committees, special officers, and others will use the information secured in the survey so as to reach every possible member.

4. Observe Rally Day. This occasion should as a rule be observed the second or third Sunday in October. Special programs should be prepared and the community should be given a hearty welcome to this popular service. Particular attention should be given to securing an attendance upon this service by those whom the school is hoping to win to permanent membership. Enrollment cards should be on hand for distribution and classes and departments should be on the alert to greet those for whom they are responsible. Following Rally Day efforts should be continued looking to the winning of other prospects.

5. After pupils have been enrolled. An important part of the membership campaign is to make it more than a mere spasmodic effort. Pupils brought in under high pressure methods with loosely conducted contests are likely to drop out as rapidly as they came in, This campaign is to be more than a flare-up. It is to be a part of the continuous policy of the school. Therefore the information secured will be constantly used, and as it grows to be out of date it will be renewed from time to time by keeping the information fresh and up to date. Good records will be accurately kept; no absentee will be permitted to drop out through carelessness on the part of any one concerned.

3. Conserve Results.

This is a campaign to discover our conditions; to survey the field; to win new members; and to hold all to a high average of attendance.

The campaign of evangelism will naturally follow. Let us reach out now and touch the unreached that our harvest may be greater. These campaigns are very closely related and bear each on the other.

Details of how to make the survey and suggestions as to following it up effectively are contained in pamphlet material available by writing to your Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work, or the Department of Sunday School Administration, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

By developing hundreds and thousands of individual workers in the local churches and enlisting them in the great campaign, the Centenary has offered a veritable training camp of Christian service.

At the beginning of the Centenary we occupied seven foreign fields; we now occupy twelve.

Centenary has added Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Siberia, and Manchuria to Methodism's world parish.

The Centenary has invested more in missions in four years than the church raised in any previous twenty years.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A CRISIS IN OUR MISSIONARY WORK.

A plain statement issued by the Board of Missions recently shows that the church faces a real crisis in its missionary operations. The crisis is caused by enlarging work and diminishing income. The pledges made during the epochal Centenary campaign lack $8,000,000 of reaching the amount now due on the minimum askings of $25,000,000, and $15,000,000 of the amount actually subscribed. In addition to this deficit in the Centenary collections, the income of the Board of Missions from regular collections and specials has suffered a decrease of about $250,000 a year. In the meantime, the work of the Board has tremendously expanded in all its fields, and this work has had to be provided for. The result is that the Board has had to borrow money to carry on its work, and it now carries an indebtedness of $907,910.49.

It is profitless to dwell upon the policy of the Board that has resulted in this indebtedness; the matter that instantly demands the attention of the church is the debt. This debt must be paid, regardless of past, present, or future conditions. A debt is not a theory, but a fact, and it has to be dealt with as such. The debt is upon us—we must pay it.

It should not be forgot that this debt of the Board is the result of the debt of many individual members of the church to the Board. The five-year period of the Centenary, within which the pledges were to be paid, has expired; yet many of those pledges remain unpaid. These unpaid pledges are debts of those who made them. Of course, there are some cases in which these pledges could not properly be considered debts—those who made them having died, suffered severe financial reverses, etc.; but after full allowance has been made for all these, there still remain many who could have paid and ought to have paid their pledges by this time. If they had paid their pledges, the Board of Missions would have had ample funds with which to carry on its work, and it would not now be in the embarrassing situation of having to carry a heavy indebtedness.

What can be done? The simplest, most logical thing to do is for every church that has an unpaid balance on its Centenary pledges to begin at once an earnest, active, diligent effort to collect that balance. Some of it cannot be collected, but a good deal of it can be and ought to be. The collection of these unpaid pledges would relieve the critical situation in which the Board now finds itself.

What further can be done? Thousands of people who love the Lord, who have paid their own Centenary pledges, who are still blessed with an abundance of this world's goods, who are deeply concerned for the ongoing of the Kingdom of God, can make a freewill offering in this emergency that would lift the debt and put new life and fresh hope into all our missionary forces.

What needs to be done ought to be done quickly.

A NEW STANDARD OF POVERTY.

A citizen of a California county, according to a press dispatch, had proved to the authorities that he was an indigent individual and was about to be admitted to the poorhouse, when he asked, "Where do I put my car?" Upon being informed that the poorhouse did not provide garage accommodations for its inmates, he withdrew his application and motored away. Able to keep a car, but unable to make a living! Well, there may be a good many automobile paupers in the world. Some of them doubtless belong to the church.

PREACHERS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Perhaps more than of anything else, people and preachers are thinking at this time of appointments. It is perfectly natural that they should do so. The people want to know what kind of preacher they will have for another year, and preachers want to know what kind of people they will have to serve. Every charge wants a good preacher, and every preacher wants a good charge. Whether either is pleased or not, every preacher will have a charge, and every charge will have a preacher. There are several possible combinations of preachers and charges: Some good charges will have poor preachers; some poor charges will have good preachers; some good charges will have good preachers; some poor charges will have poor preachers. Whatever the combination, all things ought to work together for good to them that love God. A good preacher ought to make a good appointment of a poor one, and a good charge ought to make a good preacher of a poor one. A good charge and a good preacher ought both to be made better by the end of another year. A poor preacher and a poor charge together are an unfortunate combination—but where there is so much room for improvement, the situation ought not to be discouraging. There are just so many appointments to be filled, and just enough preachers to go around. Only omniscience and omnipotence could make a perfect adjustment in every case—and bishops and presiding elders are neither omniscient nor omnipotent. The best they can do is to do the best they can. Some preachers will be moved that ought to have stayed where they were—and some will stay where they are that ought to have been moved. Some charges will get the preachers they wanted, and some will get those they did not want. Some preachers will get good appointments, and some will get poor ones. The trouble in many cases will be that neither people nor preachers will want what they need or need what they want. If every preacher could pick his appointment and every charge could pick its preacher, some appointments would be without preachers, and some preachers would be without jobs. It is a good thing for all concerned that there is a kind of clearing house—the cabinet—where preachers and charges are brought together. The glory of the itinerant system is that it works. The glory of Methodist preachers and people alike is that they are loyal, faithful, consecrated. Preachers take what they get and do their best, and people take what is sent them and do their best. In the long run, all fare pretty well. Whoever the preacher, whatever the appointment, the work of the Lord needs to be done—and preachers and people must do it. Blessings upon every one of them!

SHALL WE STARVE?

A recent investigator has declared that the world will have more inhabnitants by the year 3000 than it can feed and shelter if the present rate of increase of population continues. He says: "The population of the globe has already reached 1,849,500,000 souls. Scientists estimate that the number of inhabitants doubles every century. At this rate, there will be 4,000,000,000 people on the planet by the year 2000. By 3000 A. D., the world's population will have reached the staggering total of four trillion people." The fallacy in the argument, as we see it, is that no allowance is made for a proportionate increase in the available means of sustaining life throughout these centuries. Scientists generally seem to be agreed that we have as yet scarcely touched the possibilities in the development of energy and, consequently, the production of the means of life. The comparatively recent theory of atomic energy points out possibilities in this direction that stagger the imagination. Anyway, since the situation is not to become acute until 3000 A. D., we find some consolation in the thought that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

TOO EASY.

These headlines attracted our attention in a local newspaper the other day: "Fourteen Fined for Rum—One Sent to Jail." If we may judge by frequent reports of this kind, it is altogether too easy for the bootlegger to make a living. He is a criminal without excuse—yet his punishment too often is a light fine. Of the fourteen referred to above, eleven of them, according to the report, pleaded guilty—and the highest fine imposed was $100! The Bible says, "The way of the transgressor is hard;" some of our courts evidently make it read, "The way of the transgressor is easy."

PRAY FOR THESE THINGS.

By Dr. A. C. Zumhrunnen.

During the Week of Prayer every member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is asked to pray for, make vital intercession for, the missionary work carried on hy the Board of Missions, General Work. Two million five hundred thousand Methodists are asked to pray definitely in this respect. Some information is here given so that each one may know what is being done in this regard, what the opportunities and responsibilities are, and the needs at the present time.

In the first place, it may he well to state that the program of the Board of Missions, General Work, has heen greatly expanded during the last six years. It is quite doubtful if the membership of our church at large is at all informed as to how great this expansion has heen. Some information is given here in that respect. It is most encouraging. It is cause for rejoicing. It calls for thanksgiving. It calls for earnest prayer.

What is the extent of this expanding program? What is its measure? What are the facts in the case?

The following table answers these questions from the financial point of view as concerns the Foreign Department. If the answer to these questions is wanted in dollars and cents, study this table:

Appropriations, Foreign Department, Board of Missions, General Work.

China: 1918, $62,331.29; 1924, $200,437.44; increase, $138,106.15. Japan: 1918, $86,188.11; 1924, $240,780.07; increase, $154,591.96. Korea: 1918, $47,888.98; 1924, $173,358.41; increase, $123,469.43. Brazil: 1918, $67,879.23; 1924, $263,853.71; increase, $195,974.48. Cuba: 1918, $39,969.84; 1924, $97,583.40; increase, $57,613.56. Mexico: $47,541.44; 1924, $130,118.54; increase, $82,577.10. Africa: 1918, $13,490.00; 1924, 32,188.43; increase, $18,698.43. Belgium: 1918, none; 1924, $95,410.00; increase, $95,410.00. Czechoslovakia: 1918, none; 1924, $106,000.00; increase, $106,000.00. Poland; 1918, none; 1924, $104,500.00; increase, $104,500.00. Manchuria: 1918, none; 1924, $43,850.00; increase, $43,850.00. Siheria: 1918, none; 1924, $28,150.00; increase, $28,150.00. General Expense: 1918, $35,025.00; 1924, $173,653.07; increase, $138,628.07. Miscellaneous: 1918, $3,050.00; 1924, $63,580.43; increase, $60,530.43. Total 1918: $403,363.89; Total 1924, $1,753,463.43; Total Increase, $1,350,099.61.

An increase of $1,350.099.61 in the annual appropriation is the measure of the growth of this department as concerns budget. It is over 300 per cent. The appropriations of the seven fields occupied in 1918 had increased 200 per cent hy 1924, or $773,031.47. The appropriation for the five new fields that had been entered was larger than that for all seven of the old fields in 1918, heing $377,910 for the former and $365,288.89 for the latter.

In this respect it is proper to state that notwithsthanding the ahove enormous increase in appropriations, they were far helow the askings coming from our several foreign fields. In some instances only 50 per cent of the request was granted. A distressing thing about it is that every dollar asked for is urgently needed, and every one denied represents fallure to meet a golden opportunity to witness in His name.

Territorially there has been large expansion. Five new mission fields have heen added. In addition, the area of lahor in each of the old fields has been enlarged. The growth of the program of education is indicated by the fact that in 1918 we had 186 schools enrolling 11,534 pupils, and in 1924 there were 381 schools enrolling 34,204. In 1918 we had 739 Sunday schools with an enrollment of 11,261. In 1924 there were 1,261 Sunday schools and 61,349 pupils enrolled. For the same dates we had 637 and 1,082 churches with a membership of 37,492 and 50,130, respectively.

Home Department.

The foregoing questions as related to the Home Department is answered in the accompanying table:

Appropriations, Home Department, Board of Missions, General Work.

Work among foreigners: 1918, $37,498.81; 1924, $191,826.21; increase, $154,327.40. Work among Indians: 1918, $3,638.93; 1924, $37,000.00; increase $33,361.07. Work among negroes: 1918, $3,020.00; 1924, $135,600.00; increase, $132,580.00. City Work: 1918, $2,184.00; 1924, $130,750.00; increase, $128,566.00. Industrial Work: 1918, $1,000.00; 1924, 42,000.00; increase, $41,000.00. Sustentation Work: 1918, $59,081.02; 1924, $61,500.00; increase, $2,418.98. Pastors' Schools: 1918, none; 1924, $12,500.00; increase, $12,500.00. Rural Work: 1918, none; 1924, $21,000.00; increase, $21,000.00. Mountain Work: 1918, none; 1924, $145,000.00; increase, $145,000.00. Miscellaneous: 1918, $39,824.63; 1924, $76,572.59; increase, $36,747.96. Total 1918, $146,247.39; Total 1924, $853,748.80; Total increase, $707,501.41.

The ahove tahle shows how greatly the program of the Home Department, General Work, has been enlarged in a semidecade. The work among the foreigners—the Mexicans, French, Italians, Cubans, Bohemians, etc., has grown fivefold; that for the Indians increased tenfold; that for the Negroes multiplied forty times; that in our cities multiplied hy sixty; and that in the rapidly developing industrial centers forty-two fold. For these purposes $47,341.74 were appropriated in 1918, and $537,176.21 for 1924. Only in one respect has the appropriation remained at approximately the same, and that was for sustentation.

In addition to the foregoing, the Home Department has added three new features to its program for which $178,500 was appropriated for 1924, a sum considerably larger than the entire appropriation for this department in 1918. There were fourteen pastors' schools conducted last year, enrolling 2,147 pastors, and a total of 3,024 credits were issued. An appropriation of $145,000 was made for educational and evangelistic work among the mountaineers in the several sections of our home field.

In 1918 the entire appropriation for this department was $146,247.39. In 1924 it was $853,748.80, an increase of 500%. In 1918 there were 347 persons supported in part or wholly by this department. In 1924 there was 585 supported.

Space prevents giving more data. It would take a large volume to present fully what has been accomplished in the way of entering open doors, answering Macedonian calls, hreaking the bread of life, preaching the gospel, resculng the perishing. Suffice it to say that every dollar expended has been amply justified. The Lord has greatly blessed every effort put forth in his name.

While there are reasons for great rejoicing at the progress made, there is great distress that more could not he done. We are scarcely touching the hem of the garment. We have approximately fifty thousand members in our foreign fields. We have fifty million people for whose salvation our church is responsible. Only one out of a thousand has heen saved. The others are perishing. We have an evangelistic responsibility of 5,000,000 in the home land. Unless we gather these souls into the garner of God, they will perish.

There is great distress because the income is so small that it seems we must retrench, abandon fields, call home missionaries. Shall it be? Is that the will of Southern Methodism? Of your church? Of you?

O, think of these things.

O, pray about these things.

O, give a free will offering for these things.

Do all in his name, and for his name's sake.

CONCRETE SUGGESTIONS FOR BUILDING A SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP.

By M. W. Brabham, Director.

Make Your Plans Continuous Rather Than Spasmodic.

There should he a regular committee on surveys and new membership plans. On this committee may well be included the general superintendent himself, as well as the secretary of the school. To this committee should be referred suggestions and plans from time to time with the thought that such plans may be considered for incorporation into the policy of the school. This committee should seek to keep the matter of continuous growth before the classes or departments through the officers and teachers of the groups concerned. This committee will also pass upon the plans which are contemplated by any class or other group in the school before it is undertaken or authorized. No one group or combination of groups should introduce methods which will cut across the greater good of the whole school.

The Information Should Be Made Available.

The information secured by means of surveys and otherwise under the general direction of the committee already referred to should be carefully arranged so that it will be easy of access. But it should be more than this—it should be distributed to the various groups which are to seek to reach the unreached. The list will include the names of those not now in any church or Sunday school; it should also include those within the membership of our church who are not now in the Sunday school. This list will, therefore, be a prospective membership list, and from this list during the year new members should be sought.

Distribute the Responsibility.

In any plan there must be definite placing of the responsibility if there is to be an avoidance of confusion and waste of time. When a new member is to be sought, definite, personal, and sympathetic invitations must he extended. Generalizations here as elsewhere in dealing with persons who are inclined to be indifferent will fail to produce desired results. Therefore the committee in charge of seeking new members should see that the name of a person is given to some one or to a group which would have immediate approach to the prospect.

Make the School Session Tell for Good.

Whoever goes after a "prospect" should not have to avoid telling what the school actually does in session. The session itself should be the chief feature to be spoken about when a "prospect" is invited. It should be possible for the worker who is trying to win a new pupil to say that the school gives value received for every moment of time and interest invested. This means that thoroughgoing organization is essential. It further means that the purpose of the school is definitely understood by its leaders and that no frivolous, worthless, and meaningless sort of program is to take place. Good, worth-while hymns, interesting uses of fellowship materials, well prepared leaders in charge of the classes, and kindred matters should be available as talking points.

When We Get a Member We Must Hold Him.

It is not enough to make a survey, properly to classify the results, distribute information, and seek the prospective members. These are the essential, but if they constitute the end instead of the means, our work is a failure. There must be care in placing the new pupil in the right group. There must be exceedingly great care used in enlisting the new pupil in worthwhile activities.

The pupil won must be an asset to be utilized rather than a fresh liability incurred. No absence should be overlooked or allowed to remain unchecked. No inclination to tardiness should be looked upon as without consequence in its possibilities. The average attendance of the pupil should he watched. A low average results in high average loss of membership.

Steps to Take Now for the Campaign.

1. Secure survey cards and make a careful survey of the community.
2. Study this information and see that it is carefully arranged so that it is accessihle.
3. Distribute the names of prospective new members to the groups into which they would naturally go if they attended the school.
4. Plan to have all prospective new members visited by persons who are likely to have an approach to them.
5. Observe Rally Day, using a printed program, and send prepared invitations to every prospective new member.
6. On Rally Day watch for these newcomers and greet them, seeking to make them feel at home. If possible, enroll them in the school that day; if this is impossible, follow Rally Day with other personal visits or invitations.
7. Continue to reach out after the "prospects," seeking to win every such person.
8. Inaugurate plans for looking after absentees. Strenghten your records if they are not providing for regular monthly reports to the homes in case of younger pupils, or to the pupils themselves.
9. Work for a good average attendance rather than a large enrollment.
10. Look forward to the coming campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school.

Further information.

For supplies of survey cards and further information concerning the ingathering of new membhers, requests should be sent to the Department of Sunday School Administration, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., or to Conference Sunday School Board headquarters.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: To me, the Mississippi Conference session at Canton was, from every point of view, the best I have ever attended. The presidency of our beloved Bishop W. N. Ainsworth could hardly have been better.

So far as one could see, brotherly love prevailed. A most gracious sense of the Holy Spirit's presence was constantly evident.

The resolution instructing pastors to take the membership into advisory counsel as to the all-ahsorhing and all-important question of the unfication of the two great hodies of Episcopal Methodists under the plan proposed was unanimously adopted. After careful study and much prayer, douhtless the right conclusion will he reached.

The world waits for the evangelistic message of Methodism, and will perish unless it is given. Should we fail in this, God may remove, even in our day, the candlestick from its place. God forbid this should ever be the case.

The work of the cabinet doubtless was meant to be done in faithfulness to the claims of pastors and churches. In some cases mistakes may have heen made. A holy enthusiasm on the part of pastors and people under the blessing of God will make 1925 the best in our history.

The interest manifested in the once Forgotten Man is most gracious and kind. For one, I greatly desire to have part in the active campaign. Brethren of the pastorate, if you think I can help solve your problems, please write me at Camden, Miss. If I can do no more, it will give me great pleasure to go with you in prayer for God's all-sufficient help.

Of course the splendid messages of our heloved Clovis Chappell did much to hring the Conference into the deep view and large life in holy fellowship in Christ. He won all hearts.

Blessings on you is the wish and prayer of your friend and brother in Christ.

C. H. ELLIS.

"THE GREATEST OF THESE IS LOVE."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

An intelligent mistress of a parsonage writes: "A lot of people have a good chance in this unification discussion to find out whether or not they have passed from death into life by seeing whether or not they love the brethren, North, South, East and West." This vigorous sentence has set me to investigating this matter in the light of the Word of God.

In Leviticus, 19:18, we are told that God through Moses said: "Thou shalt love thy neighhor as thyself." This is repeated frequently in the New Testament; but here it is immediately preceded by this strong prohibition: "Thou shalt not * * * hear any grudge against the children of thy people." I am afraid that some among us do not thus love our neighbors north of us; and really bear grudges against the children of men in the North who figured in the matter of 1844. I am afraid that the mistress of the parsonage did not overstate the case.

David taught the Hebrew church to sing: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."—Psa. 133. Thence on down the centuries unity in the church was stressed.

It would he well for all Methodists just now to study, even to memorize, that strong, clear prayer uttered by Christ the night before Calvary and recorded in John 17:21-23. The very highest (or wildest) of the so-called "higher critics," and the most daring of all douhters cannot tear out of that prayer its clear, strong, earnest pleading against divisions in his church. Let us look into it!

"Neither for these only do I pray, hut for them also that believe on me through their word: that they may all he one; even as thou, Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may he in us: that the world may helieve that thou didst send me. And the glory which thou hast given me I have given unto them; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may he perfected into one; that the world may know that thou didst send me."

It is for all men in all the years: "for them also that believe on me through their word." This includes us; for we are believing on him now through the word of Matthew and John and the rest—that they may all be one. He leaves out none—surely not us Methodists North and South. He makes clear and strong his meaning: "Even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may he in us." Then follows a glorious statement of a supreme motive for this universal unity of all his followers: "That the world may believe that thou didst send me." Divisions among the Christians retard the progress of Christianity. Philosophize ahout it as we may, the fact remains that our Christ under the very shadow of Calvary clearly indicates that it is true. I helieve the word of Christ; who does not? Never, never will I cast my vote against this unity of any Christians anywhere and anywhere, for which the dying Christ so earnestly prayed. Then follows the most tremendously strong and heautiful statement: "And the glory which thou hast given me I have given unto them, that they may be one, even as we are one." This is his meaning: "I have made it possihle for them to remain always united, and their union will be a glory—the glory which thou hast given me."

The leaders of the church in the Apostolic time caught the meaning and spirit of this prayer and voiced them all through that era. Peter, writing to the Jewish Christians of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bythinia, pleads: "Be ye all like-minded (of one way of thinking) * * * loving as brethren, tenderhearted, humble-minded"—1 Pet. 3:8. James, also to the Disperson, wrote: "When faction (division) is there is confusion and every vile deed"—3:16. This is strong, fierce language; hut James, the Apostle, wrote it. John, the beloved disciple, in his extreme old age—probahly over a century old—wrote: "Little children (such were all his hrethren to him) * * * antichrist cometh, even now have there arisen many antichrists. * * * They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us they would have continued with us." To this loving and lovely apostolic centenarian, who had deeper knowledge of Christ than had any other, the strongest, surest mark of these antichrists was that they were seceders from the church.

Paul, who did not hear Christ pray that night, hut who heard about it, wrote more largely and possibly more denunciatorily of church divisions than did any of the others. In his Epistle to the Romans: "Be of the same mind one toward another" (think alike)—12:16. "Now the God of patience and of comfort grant you to be of the same mind one with another according to Christ Jesus: that with one accord ye may with one mouth glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ as one man"—15:5, 6; in 2:3, he fiercely condemns those that are factious, i. e., inclined to schism, as deserving the wrath of God. In Galatians, 5:20, he classes "factions and divisions" as among the very darkest of sins in a list of the very worst vices known. In his First Epistle to the Corinthians, 1:10-13: "Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment. For it hath been signified unto me concerning you, my brethren, hy them that are of the household of Chloe, that there are contentions among you. Now this I mean, that each one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?"

How very much do some of the unnecessary issues that now divide churches resemble these here named by Paul! The same matter is reverted to in 11:18, 19, and with like condemnation, and again in 3:4-8. To the Philippians, 2:2, 3: "Be of the same mind * * * of one accord * * * doing nothing through faction." In Rom. 16:17, 18, "Now I heseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Christ, * * * and by their smooth and fair speech they beguile the hearts of the innocent."

The church, through all that era known as the Post-Apostolic or Patristic age, even on down to the Council of Nicaea, following these great Apostles, placed great stress upon the nnity of the church; so much so that our generally accepted Apostle's Creed presented the church as The Holy Catholic Church, i. e., the sacred universal church. The only differences recognized as allowahle in that olden church were those indicating locations: as the church at Rome, at Corinth, at Jersusalem, and so on, all alike in doctrine and general polity, and all only located churches or groups of churches making up the Sacred Universal Church. So when we recite the Creed, we ignore unfortunate, and often nnscriptural divisions, and try to get back in our thinking and believing to the apostolic idea of the undivided church. Do we not deal a bit in a fiction—or maybe in a golden dream that will one day come true? We are trying to foster an ideal. In the Apostolic Era there were "factions" or schisms and "divisions;" but they were not apologized for, hut heartily and often bitterly condemned as disloyal and dangerous.

The first really great division arising in the church was over the "filioque" ques'ion, as senseless as it was ruinous. It was followed hy corruptions in the church which are still with us, and by a consequent decadence in spiritual life. This is history briefly but accurately told.

The reformers who led the church out of mediaeval darkness were not schismatics, hut reformers seeking to bring revivals of New Testament religion to the decadent church of Rome. Luther did not wish to leave that church; but was forced to do so. This was true with both Calvin and Knox. Mr. Wesley died a member of the Church of England, positively forbidding his followers in England to leave the mother church; and they oheyed him until there came a time after his death, when they felt themselves forced out.

When he organized the American Methodist Church in 1784, there was no Church of England here; and the Protestant Episcopal Church did not get into activity until some years later, and presented no claims of parenthood to the American Methodists.

It is said by some in defense of their opposition to unification that Methodism has prospered greatly since the division in 1844. Have any of these brethren compared our growth proportionately since 1844 with its growth from its beginning up to that date? In proportion to the difficulties, such as paucity of resources, fewness and unpreparedness of workers in that era prior to 1844 and back to the beginning of time, was not the growth during that period of union greater than since? Until it can be proved (and it cannot be) that divided Methodism has prospered more than undivided Methodism did, it would be wise in these brethren not to raise the question. Is it not true that God has everywhere and everywhen favored and blessed unity and brotherliness and loving co-operation among his human children? It is certainly true that history as well as the Bible confirms the old adage: "In union there is strength."

Shall we vote for the pending plan of Methodist unification? If not, why not? Are we afraid that our Northern Methodist brethren will not deal fairly with us, but will try to swallow us up? In Leviticus 19:18, and repeatedly in the New Testament is written: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;" and Christ indicates in the Parable of the Good Samaritan that every man, regardless of social or racial limitations, must be counted as our neighbor. "Love"—the very essence of our religion—"thinketh no evil" of our brother, North or South. Some one suggests that our own Southern Methodist men might make trouble in a united church. We have no right as Christians to discredit the uprightness of brethren North or South. We Christians must love and trust all of our brethren. Would it not be far better for us as followers of the Christ to suffer anything that might possibly come to us through a misplaced trust than to harbor in our hearts an unchristly distrust of our brethren, which is probably unfounded? Which would be the greater calamity? To me, no misplaced confidence would be in any wise as calamitous as any unfounded distrust that I should entertain. The greatest is love.

I have failed to find aught but an unloving and faithless and unfounded distrust in every argument urged against this unification of Methodism. Not one has yet appealed to my reason, my sense of justice, my love of my brethren, South and North, my hope for my church, or my faith in God and his Christ. I shall therefore vote for unification as now presented, and work for it, and plead for it, and pray for it, and expect it.

PROTESTANT FAITH AND EDUCATION.

By Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D.

We live in a time when there is no immunity from the tongue of the critic. Individuals, organizations, movements, progress—everything must run the gauntlet of a furious discontent. In all this criticism there is, of course, a formal insistence upon results, and it is a perfectly legitimate demand if the criticism be of such a character as to help toward that end. In scientifically ordered production criticism takes into account every contributing factor in order that failure or wastage may be located and that the energies of correction may be intelligently directed. No sensible man would think of "junking" a machine which happened to have one defective part. Neither will a wise man discredit an organization by haphazard conclusion and suggestion because it fails of the highest efficiency in its functioning. The soundness of this general and unrelated statement will hardly be questioned. But when it comes to applying this principle to the progress of Protestant ideals, criticism not infrequently degenerates into a wail of pessimism and disappointment rather than an effort to discover the truth and to suggest a workable remedy. Just as Appolonius caused the panic-stricken people of Ephesus to fall upon a ragged beggar in the street as a means of curing the plague, so mere bungiers in Christian work produce frenzy among the people by a type of criticism which is neither intelligent nor constructive. Many a pastor has been changed by such foolish and unjust onslaughts. Many an individual church has been crippled in its usefulness by injudicious talk of this character. And it certainly avails little that is worth while to herald the unorthodoxy of Protestantism as a reason for delinquencies which are often more imaginary than real. Any tramp can destroy, but it takes solid work and serious thought to build up.

In traveling through the countries beyond the Atlantic I took note of the forms of religion as they appeared to be related to the peoples and classes of those lands. My study was not exhaustive but I have some very definite ideas as to facts which obtain. In the first place, in the Portuguese possessions and in the lands which skirt the Mediterranean Sea the type of religion which is overwhelmingly dominant delivers its message largely through material symbolisms. No great moral and religious verities are presented as an appeal to the judgment of the people. Conclusions are ecclesiastical and not personal, and they are delivered in the form of mandates which lay tribute upon the blind loyalty and the unreasoned devotion of those who know nothing of the processes back of such conclusions and who do not understand the implications of what is taught. In the second place, the people whom I saw at these altars appeared to be of the ignorant and the peasant class. In many cases barefooted and in rags they bowed before images and altars, and their very faces proclaimed the order of intelligence to which they belonged. There may have been a more intelligent class upon whom those churches lay tribute, but they were certainly absentees when we were there. In some instances the very breath which called the people to prayer preached a racial and religious hatred which they had little capacity to resist. How could such people be other than superstitious, fanatical, and sensuous devotees of a material shrine?

The Protestant missions which we visited reflected these conditions, but in a different way. These missions were seemingly grappling with people who had great difficulty in measuring the moral and spiritual values of the Protestant message. For this very reason, I think, our mission approach is mainly through some form of charity. In one chapel which we visited practically all of the small audience appeared to have come from the mendicant class. In another instance what was begun as a mission to the natives had become a church for foreigners. And in most instances these missions were adopting some of the symbolism through which competitive religions maintained their hold upon these ignorant masses.

Another interesting thing which I observed was the reaction of the intelligent American to the crude symbolisms and the impossible traditions employed at the altars of his own faith. The fact that it was sponsored by his own ecclesiastical connection was not sufficient to keep it from being shocking and repulsive. I traveled with a cultured young woman from the Pacific Coast who volunteered the opinion that she was "carrying back home less religion than she had brought over." In other words, her order of intelligence was quite beyond what was offered her at the altars of her own church in those lands of poverty and of illiteracy. I might cite also the case of a young college man from a city in the Middle North who did not speak out so frankly, but who was certainly perturbed by the intellectual difficulty which faced him in that sphere of his own communion. Italy, in my opinion, is breaking away from her traditional allegiance. And France is notoriously infidel because she lacked proper leadership in the hour of her ecclesiastical revolution.

The meaning of this is, I think, that Protestantism, so far from being a religion of sense impressions and arbitrary commands, makes its appeal to the spiritually sensitized intelligence and individuality of men whom God calls independently of any organized system of control. Coarse symbolisms which affect the senses and stir the prejudices may be adapted to the purposes of those who would control the unintelligent; but finer types of mind require a message which will square with thoughtful individuality. No form of excommunication or of denunciation can make a man abdicate his intelligence. I believe with all my soul that Protestantism has a message for the world. It is the man-building message among all the forms of religion on earth. I think, too, that Protestantism has failed to get a substantial footing in Mediterranean lands, not so much because those lands were pre-empted, but because it failed to find a forum to which it might speak. And whatever else may be true, I believe that our faith began as a protest against the abuse of human intelligence. There came a day in the progress of thought when revolution became both a moral and an intellectual necessity.

If we do not discover truth until we reach the stage of development to which that truth belongs, neither may we expect to deliver a message until there is a condition of sensibility capable of interpreting it. I am not a missionary expert in any sense, but I am thoroughly convinced that our real problem on the mission field is to elevate the standard of thinking to the point where the empty pageantry and tradition of false religions will not be able to control the people. But the whole truth is that the standard of thinking must be elevated to where the understanding of the Protestant message will leave no doubt as to its superior value. But to stop with saying this is to carry away from home a truth which faces every Christian worker in America and in every other Protestant land. The hope of Protestant ideals does not lie in the ability to adapt our message to the intelligence of the masses. Certainly there is no hope for us in an effort to adapt to our practice the symbolisms of discredited religions. An ecclesiastical wizard in the pulpit offers no guarantee of the triumph of our cause. The hope of Protestantism lies in a comprehensive educational program which will lift the intelligence of the people to the point where they can interpret the truth and have a conviction of their own. There is a thought standard which is necessary if Protestant Christianity is to be turned to triumphant account. I do not mean by this that I hold that there is an educational qualification necessary for salvation. But just as surely as there is a certain measure of intelligence necessary for an effective use of the apostolic office of proclaiming the message of Protestantism, so there must be a mind sharpened to the extent of comprehending that message when it is delivered. We can never triumph through an effort at ecclesiastical control which shall be independent of an intelligent judgment coinciding with our commands. I would say this, also, that the demand upon Protestantism is not only to sponsor thought but to sponsor progress as well. It may fit the requirements of certain systems to insist upon education which shall be dominated by dogmatism. I would not want to see education divorced from religion. But I believe that Protestantism has nothing to fear from the man who thinks and the man whose thought is really unfettered. In my opinion, education in a Christian atmosphere will bring the people to where the great truths of our faith will command their hearts. We need to be done with carping criticism of our colleges. There is no place for that whimpering lamentation which is a species either of ignorance or of hypocrisy.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

If the heart were full of God, the tongue could not refrain to talk of him: the rareness of Christian communication argues the common poverty of grace. I will think of thee always, O Lord! So it shall be my joy to speak of thee often; and if I find not opportunity, I will make it.—Bishop Hall.

FULFILLING THE CONDITIONS.

"But, Dr. Marston," said the young man, "these so-called doctrines of the church sound ridiculous. How can an educated man swallow such fairy tales? They're all very well for ignorant people, but I'm a scientist. I must have proof."

Quietly the older man smiled at the younger man. "Have you fulfilled the test conditions?" he inquired.

"Test conditions, Dr. Marston? What do you mean?"

"Every scientific experiment that I know of has to be tried under some specified condition. Take the simplest example: Suppose I were to tell you that your story of a teeming world in that drop of water sounds like a fairy tale; that I don't see or believe it. What would you say?"

"That all you had to do was to look through my microscope."

"Suppose I were to doubt the rings of Saturn?"

"You should look through a powerful telescope. But what—"

"Just a moment, Herbert. Suppose you were to describe some wonderful chemical experiment that had to be carried on in a darkened room, and I were to try it carefully out of doors. What if I should deny the theory because the experiment would not work?

"I think you have omitted a test condition that is more important than the telescope, the microscope, or the dark room. It is Christ himself who says: 'If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine.' You have been trying, so you say, to 'know of the doctrine.' Have you fulfilled the test condition?"

"That's begging the question, Doctor. If a man doesn't believe in the doctrine, how can he know his will?"

"Because there is something inside us that often tells us more than we care to know. You and I have a pretty clear idea of what God's will would be, in some things at least, if there were a God. Have you honestly lived up to the will of that hypothetical God as far as you could? Of course, if you have—"

"I haven't lived up to the requirements of even such a God as I could formulate for myself. But at least I see the absurdity of demanding results before the conditions of the test are fulfilled."—Youth's Companion.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

What Have We Done for the District?

At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference we changed the membership of the district conference, so that now the Aberdeen District will have 181 members; Columbus District, 168, and the Corinth District, 190. Only our largest towns can entertain us. I suppose, though, this change was meant to stand one year only.

COLLEGE EDUCATION PAYS.

College students and their parents, who usually pay the bills, are constantly confronted with the query: "Does college education pay?" To some it does not. Education does not insure success. But it does make better the chance of success. It is well enough occasionally to present some facts in proof of this position.

The dean of the Agricultural College of the University of Minnesota published recently some statistics showing the effect of education upon the farmers of that State. His study showed that men of high school education on the farms in that region earned $500 a year, while those with complete college training had average annual incomes of more than $3,000.

Some one else has worked out these figures for us: Only thirty-one persons out of five million with no schooling attain distinction in their work, 808 out of three million with elementary schooling achieved some distinction, 1,200 out of two million high school graduates rise above the average in accomplishment, and 5,000 out of a million with college education render notable service.

This is a good time of the year for all members of the family to keep in mind that figures prove that the college graduate has ten times the chance of making good that the high school graduate has and that his chances are twenty-two times as good as the one who takes only a grammar school education.

Yes, college education pays. The few failures among college-trained men do not disprove this statement.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

AN APOLOGY.

To Whom It May Concern: After due consideration, and much prayer and repentance, I take this method to say to any brother, sister, or friend who perchance might have become offended or hurt in mind or spirit at any word said, or suggestion made by me during the talk I made before the Epworth League, Sunday evening of our Conference in Canton, Miss., that I am heartily sorry for the same, and most earnestly beg forgiveness.

I am a man of very deep convictions at many points, and it is indeed hard under certain conditions for me to hold in check my convictions. But when I come to feel that I have allowed convictions to run away with my better judgment, and cause me to make a hurtful mistake, no one is more willing to recant than I.

I love my church, and my brethren, too, and my policy has ever been to be thoughtful and kind to every one, and as much as in me is to go the full length of my cabletow to do a kindness, whether friends or foe.

Kindly,

C. C. EVANS.

Some men preach a sermon, and some men preach Christ. The people can get along without the sermons, if they can find in the spoken word the Christ.—Selected.

BUT---WHAT DO YOU SAY?

What we do with our schools and colleges will determine the moral and religious destiny of this Nation and of the world. Without Christian leadership the future is an unthinkable menace.

OUR DISCIPLINE SAYS

That "Education sound in principle and Christian in spirit is fundamental to the work of our Methodism.". "Institutions dedicated to a distinctly Christian culture are a necessity to the Church's divinely appointed ministry of service."

OUR SCHOOLS SAY

That they are "special agencies of the Church for the salvation of the world;" that they are "best fulfilling their mission when they are doing most to fashion the character of youth in the image of the Master."

REASON SAYS

That no college can lift itself up by its bootstraps. Inadequately equipped schools cannot produce adequately trained Christian leaders. Without the backing of the Church our schools must inevitably fall short of their great spiritual purposes.

WHAT DO YOU SAY?

Your part in the Christian Education Movement is your answer. Our schools will be firmly established when these millions are paid, but colleges cannot live on promises.

YOU HAVE PLEDGED---HAVE YOU PAID?

A CONTENTED MIND.

By Mabel S. Merrill.

There's goldenrod on the roadside bank,
  There are red leaves fluttering down,
And a bumblebee hums there all day,
  The busiest bee in town.
"I must have more honey, more honey," he hums;
  "Jack Frost may come 'round to-night
To wither the asters and goldenrod
  And everything else in sight."
So he hums and he works and he goes and comes,
  A twinkle of gold and black,
And the air is so warm I can half believe
  Sweet Summer has just come back.
Yet the red, red leaves and the goldenrod
  Spell "Autumn" in letters bright,
And it's time for Jack Frost when asters bloom,
  So I guess that the bee is right.
But it's pleasant here on the roadside bank,
  And I don't mind Jack at all,
For Autumn is nicer than Summer, almost,
  And Winter is best of all!

—Zion's Herald.

A YOUNG HERO.

One afternoon almost a century and a half ago, so goes an oft-told tale of one of England's heroes, three lads were idling along a country lane in Ireland.

"Come on, let's go swimming," said one of the boys.

"Oh, yes," chimed in the second, tossing up his cap into the air. "Come on, Arthur. You haven't any objections, have you?"

The lad called Arthur, a blue-eyed, freckled-faced fellow with a shock of brown hair that half covered his high forehead, hesitated briefly before he answered: "No, I haven't any objections, and I think a swim would do us all good, but we promised old man Goodhue that we would hoe his garden for him, and we ought to keep our word."

"Oh, come on, don't be a ninny, Arthur!" cried the first lad. "As if you, an earl's son, would hoe a poor man's garden!"

"But we promised," replied Arthur, "and, besides, he is an old soldier, and I mean to be a soldier, too, and a soldier must always do his duty."

"Oh, pshaw! As if it was your duty to care for an old man's garden! I am going to the river." This from the second boy.

"And I am going to keep my word," answered Arthur sturdily. "I can have my swim afterward."

"Well, I wish you joy in your task," shouted the others as they kept on their course to the swimming-hole, where the boys of Dublin School were accustomed to take their weekly swim.

The boy called Arthur turned in at the rustic gate of a poor cottage, where an old man with a crutch and a wooden leg greeted him.

"Well, you have not forgotten the old soldier," he said. "Some boys would."

"I try to keep my word on all occasions, and I could not forget a man who lost his leg at Culloden."

The old man gazed at the proud face and grave eyes of the boy, and something that he saw there made him say: "My lad, you will be a great man some day."

The boy's face flushed. Praise from an old soldier was very pleasant.

"But I want to be a great soldier like Marlborough."

"Well, if you are a soldier, you will be great, too. Determination, hard work, and faithfulness to duty will help any one to succeed."

With these encouraging words lingering in his ear, the boy stripped off his coat and vest and went to work. It was toil he was unaccustomed to, and before an hour's time his hands were sore, and he was dusty from head to foot. But he worked on with a brave spirit till the task was done.

It was the very afternoon—an eventful day, as it happened, in the career of the young student—as he was returning from his belated swim in the river that he showed himself a hero of another kind. A carriage driven by a coachman in livery was dashing along one of the streets of Dublin. Suddenly and without apparent cause the leading horse took fright. In the driver's attempt to hold in the frantic steeds one of the reins snapped in twain, and the coachman sat dazed and helpless in his seat. A glimpse of a young girl's face pale with terror and that of a middle-aged gentleman, evidently her father, and the frightened, tearing horses and the heavy coach lurching dangerously from side to side was enough to set young Arthur's feet flying. Darting swiftly across an intervening street, running at right angles to the other, the lad rushed out in front of the galloping horses. A leap like that of a bloodhound, and he had the frightened animals by the bridle.

He was lifted from his feet, but he clung like grim death. He could not be shaken off. Dragged forcibly along, he did not relinquish his grasp, and at last succeeded in checking the horses' mad pace. In a few minutes more they came to a halt, and as the coachman and outriders sprang to the ground the coach door opened, and the gray-haired gentleman and the girl alighted. The gentleman said in surprise: "Why, if this is not my friend Lord Morington's son! You have saved our lives and proved yourself a hero. I am Lord Longford, and this is my daughter, Catherine Pakenham. Young man, I predict great things for you. England will not hold your fame." And as he marked the lad's flashing eyes he placed his hands upon the boy's head as if pronouncing a benediction: "And, dying, you will sleep with England's great men."

These words all came true, for young Arthur became the great Duke of Wellington, field marshal, conqueror of Napoleon, and peer of the realm, who was accorded honors beyond those given to any other of England's heroes. Great victories were to be his, great honors, and moments of supreme exaltation; but never in a life that was destined to touch the summit of early glory did he show greater manhood than in keeping his word with Master Goodhue, nor did he ever perform a braver deed than when he saved the life of his future wife at the risk of his own.

"A CUP OF COLD WATER."

"Spare the rod and spoil the child," remarked the mother in a tone of finality, after a somewhat strenuous ten minutes in the bedroom, as she again seated herself and prepared to entertain her guest.

But what about the wee, woebegone, little heap of humanity in the corner of the room, with streaming eyes and heaving shoulders? "I did not mean to be naughty and spill the berries. I just wanted to help, so I did." What about spoiling the rod and sparing the child?

"Do you always punish wrong doing?" inquired the mother's guest.

"Why, of course," was the reply. "I must do my duty!"

"I think I'll tell you about an experience I had when I visited my sister." her visitor remarked. "One day, I found my two nephews, boys in the early teens, quarreling fiercely, and instead of scolding, their mother filled a glass of water for each and presented it with the simple command, 'Drink.' Too surprised to refuse, each did so. My sister had proved in her days of school teaching that nothing so quickly cools anger as cold water. She sent one boy to the kitchen and the other to the bathroom to wash their faces and hands. Then she visited each in turn, and spoke a few words about the beauty of self-control. When both boys came into the living-room, all traces of anger had disappeared, and they ran off to play, the greatest of chums. During my stay any mention of a glass of water never failed to restore good nature."

"Well," remarked the mother, "it's worth trying, anyway."

A year later when the visitor again came in the home, she was delighted with the change in the family, and especially in the mother herself, who was so bright and cheery and whose laughter frequently bubbled over. When a chance came for explanation the mother declared: "It is the cup of cold water that has changed the atmosphere. It helped the children so much that I thought I would try it myself; so instead of scolding, I would take a drink of water first, and though even yet it is hard sometimes to keep cool, even in January, it has helped. I really feel I needed it as much as the children did. What we have gained in health and happiness can never be estimated, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart for introducing 'a cup of cold water' into our home."—Mary Hart, in the Christian Guardian.

IMPORTANT NOTICE—CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

Brethren of the patronizing Conferences who have changed appointments will please notify us at once, that we may make corrections on our mailing list. In writing, please give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Louisiana Annual Conference is in session this week at Crowley.

The Southern Medical Association will meet in New Orleans Nov. 24-27. The Association is made up of twenty sections.

Statistics show that more than 70 per cent of Southern Methodists live in the country or in towns having fewer than 2,500 inhabitants.

Rev. W. J. Wood has gone to his new appointment, Dubiin, and has been cordially received. He had a happy pastorate at Woodland, his former charge.

The Tyro circuit, Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, paid out in full on salaries, benevolences, and Superannuate Endowment. Good for Tyro!

The quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches will be held in Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3-9. This is the first time the meeting has been held in the South.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, the new presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, was given a most cordial reception upon his arrival at Columbus.

Advance orders for the biography of Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, by Dr. W. W. Pinson, have exceeded the advance orders for any similar publication ever issued by the Publishing House.

Rev. James A. Poe, who has many friends in Mississippi, has been transferred from his former appointment, Brandenburg, Ky., to Monticelio, Ky., where he is delightfully situated.

Rev. D. R. McDougal, moved from Potts Camp to Belmont at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, has reached his new field of labor and is greatly pleased with the outlook.

Rev. Mark N. Terrell, one of our general evangeiists, reports the best year of his evangeiistic career. There have been over a thousand conversions in his meetings, and hundreds of additions to the church.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth authorizes the Advocate to announce that Rev. C. A. Schultz has been appointed pastor at Logtown, Miss., and that Rev. J. T. Weems has been appointed pastor at Bolton, Miss.

The Hammond (La) Vindicator, in its issue of Oct. 31, pays high editorial tribute to Rev. James E. Selfe, the pastor of the Methodist church at that place, and expresses the hope that he will be returned for another year.

Rev. W. L. Boome, former Centenary Secretary for the East and the West Oklahoma Conferences, has retired from that work. He has been appointed pastor at Altus, Okia., one of the leading appointments in West Okiahoma.

The many friends in the Louisiana Conference of Rev. J. L. Greenway, Jr., will be giad to learn that his health is steadily improving and that he hopes to be able to return to the active work before a great while. He is at present with his father, Rev. J. L. Greenway, at Mendenhall, Miss.

The following should have appeared in the appointments of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference: "Student at Milisaps College, J. H. Sharp." This appointment was inadvertently left off the copy of the appointments furnished the Advocate.

ATTENTION!

PASTORS AND PRESIDING ELDERS!

The Harmonizing Committee provided by the General Conference has fixed the period,

October 15 to January 15,

for the Christian Education Movement.

This committee says: "During the period of special emphasis of any Board or Commission, the other Boards or Commissions will carry on in a normal way the ordinary processes of cultivation and collections, without calling upon the general organizations and public agencies of the church."

Rev. J. Lambuth Evans, of the Louisiana Conference, has been transferred to the North Arkansas Conference and appointed pastor at Bentonville, Ark. The change was necessary for health reasons, a higher climate being desirable. West Monroe, the appointment he served in Louisiana, will have a fine report at Conference.

The board of stewards of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., passed resolutions highly commending the services of Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the former pastor, and sent a telegram of welcome and assurance of co-operation to the new pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot. This was a gracious thing to do.

Rev. A. H. Williams, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, was moved at the recent session of the North Alabama Conference from Center Star, Killeen, Ala., to Point Rock, Ala. He is greatly pleased with his new appointment. The North Alabama Conference reported a gain of about 4,000 in membership last year.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, the new presiding elder of the Grenada District, in a note requesting a change of his address of his Advocate, says that he has been graciously received in his new appointment. He also speaks in a highly complimentary way of the work and influence of his predecessor, Rev. R. A. Tucker.

Dr. W. F. Tillett, author of the new book, "Paths That Lead to God," published by Doran, and priced at $4, has made arrangements whereby the price will be $3 to all preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, if ordered from Lamar & Barton, agents. This price will not be allowed if ordered from any other booksellers than Lamar & Barton.

"More of our people ought to take the church papers. The New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Nashville Christian Advocate should each be in every home. Their influence would be worth many times their cost." So says Rev. Del Longgrear, of Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., in "Methodist Matters." Thank you, Brother Longgrear.

According to Dr. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, reports from all but eleven districts show 319 members of the House favorable to prohibition enforcement legislation and against a wine and beer amendment, and 105 wet. In the Senate, of the 33 Senators elected, only one can be classed as wet.

Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, has announced the following committee on centennial of New Orleans Methodism, to plan for a proper celebration in 1925: The presiding elder, pastors of all the churches, H. R. Haffkesbring, C. O. Chalmers, O. L. Dunn, P. A. C. Voss, W. W. Carre, A. J. Oswald, E. H. Prescott, T. L. McKnight, T. J. Ferguson, M. B. DePass, B. Romain, Miss Mary Werlein.

The Shreveport Methodist Preachers' Meeting passed resolutions highly commending the services of Dr. R. H. Wynn, who has just completed a quadrennium as presiding elder of the Shreveport District. Notable among his achievements as presiding elder is the organization of the Shreveport Board of Missions and Church Extension, which has built one new church and materially assisted several weak ones.

Rev. W. A. Hays, of Waynesboro, Miss., writes: "Since returning to Waynesboro, we have received many expressions of kindly feeling, and assurances of co-operation in the work during the coming year. Among other tokens of appreciation, was a surprise gift of supplies for the pantry, and other household needs, sufficient for several weeks. The outlook here is hopeful. Brother Sibley, pastor of the Waynesboro circuit, has been cordially received for his third year."

The members of the board of stewards and their families of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, presented to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Carter a sterling silver sandwich tray and a bouquet of flowers on Friday evening, Nov. 7, the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The Woman's Missionary Society also presented them with a silver vase. Brother Carter is superintendent of the Sunday school and chairman of the board of stewards, and is active in all the work of the church. The Advocate joins their many friends in wishing them many more years of wedded happiness.

ADDRESS OF DR. HUNT.

Until further notice, those desiring my service in evangelistic meetings, should address me at Gloster, Miss.

ROLFE HUNT,
Mississippi Conference Evangelist.

"EVILS" OF PROHIBITION.

Since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment the automobile industry has grown to such an extent in this country that now there is a car for every ten people. Eighty per cent of the automobiles of the world are operated in this country. Perhaps this is an extravagance, but certainly it is better that we should spend our money for a convenience that gets us into the open with our families rather than spend it in saloons for liquor.

This offer applies to NEW subscriptions only. Cash must accompany order.

Another extravagance perhaps is the levying of higher school taxes to build better buildings for the housing of larger numbers of students that are flocking to the public schools. Having more money for this purpose than they used to, parents are demanding higher education and better accommodation for their children. There are no open saloons, but there are many more schoolhouses.

Again, the efficiency of the workingman has increased to such an extent that he is invading the markets of the earth with American goods as never before. It is hard for labor in its cups to compete with clear-headed, strong-muscled labor that is free from the besotted influence of alcohol.

It is often said that conditions are worse under prohibition than formerly. Is there any truth in it? We have the word of prosecuting officers that there is not ten per cent of the drinking and debauchery that we had in other days. A drunken man on the streets of Cheyenne is a rare sight. When there were more than thirty saloons here it was common. Bootleg whisky is being made, and many are there who drink it, often to their extreme sorrow, but the number of stills is growing smaller and smaller and the number of those who use liquor or who make home brew is growing less. Most of the bootleg whisky is poisonous, and even those who used to drink heavily are afraid to use it.

The number of those who violate the law are exceedingly few compared with the entire population. If we are honest with ourselves, we must admit that conditions are infinitely better than they were prior to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and that we are rapidly adjusting ourselves to the cleaner, better, higher plane of civilization.—American Issue.

BUILDING.

Methodism has no cathedrals, and probably never will have. But it is beginning to find expression in monumental ecclesiastical buildings, which have their origin in the needs of the modern city. Across the way from Westminster Abbey and near by the Houses of Parliament the Wesleyans have erected their imposing Central Hall. Chicago Methodism follows with this superbly modern expression of business sagacity and Christian faith. Soon, if New York meets the challenge of its opportunity, the Broadway Temple, a composite building, as individual in its purposes, as striking in its conception, and as eye-arresting in its soaring lines and masses as either of its predecessors, will crown Washington Heights. All these buildings are intensely practical in their combination of worship and utility, and all strike another common chord in the hearts of all who see them, the chord that means faith in God and Christ. Like the cathedral which medieval faith lifted high above the clustering roofs of the city's shops and dwellings, but with another accent and in another architectural dialect, they utter the same insistent message of faith, a message which London, Chicago, and New York need as much to-day as it was ever needed in Seville, or Chartres, or Canterbury.—New York Christian Advocate.

Rudyard Kipling, who comes of good Methodist stock on both sides of the house, was quoted by the Rev. E. L. Macassey in a sermon in Westminster Abbey last summer. "The other day," he said, "I asked that famous author, Rudyard Kipling, to tell me his opinion as to what class of men get most in touch with the sorrows of men to-day. And he said, 'Had you asked me that twenty years ago, I should have said the soldier at once, but to-day I am sure that the man who reaches the sorrows of men is the clergyman every time."—New York Advocate.

HENRY HIRAM WOMBLE was born June 23, 1861, near where the town of Winnsboro, La., now is, and died Aug. 3, 1924. Brother Womble had been a sufferer with heart trouble for some time, though he was not confined to his bed excepting for a day or so at a time. He had several severe attacks at intervals preceding his death. His father came to Franklin Parish, when a young man, from Virginia. His mother, Eliza Ann Osborn, belonged to a family of early settlers in this parish. The deceased was married at the age of 24 to Miss Nina May Rapp. To this union nine children were born, five of whom, with their mother, survive. Brother Womble professed religion and united with the old Magnolia Church when a 14-year-old boy, and remained a faithful member there until his death. His home was always the Methodist preacher's home. He served as steward and trustee. His ancestors were Methodists as far back as we have been able to trace them. He was a successful farmer, a member of the Parish School Board, and active in community affairs in general. In the presence of a large congregation the writer preached his funeral sermon and conducted the burial ceremony at the old family cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. W. J. MURDOCK, adopted by the Young Women's Auxiliary of First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., Nov. 12, 1924.

WHEREAS, God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our most faithful members, Mrs. W. J. Murdock; and

WHEREAS, her Christian cheerfulness and her unfailing loyalty to the Young Women's Auxiliary will always make our years of association with her remain a bright inspiration,

BE IT RESOLVED, That we strive to emulate her Christian example and to carry on her Christian influence and that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her devoted family in their sorrow. They have lost a good wife and mother, we have lost a faithful member, and the church has lost a Christian woman whose place can not be filled. At a time like this, human words are futile, but we can all look to the God, whom she loved and served, for comfort.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, our church publication.

Signed: Mrs. L. S. Crumbley, Mrs. F. C. Turner, and Mrs. H. E. Graves. Committee.

PAUL TEMPLETON—AN APPRECIATION.

Many of the readers of the Advocate will be profoundly grieved to learn of the sudden death of Brother Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., who was one of the useful gospel singers of our church. He has been heard in many churches and camp meetings in Louisiana as evangelistic singer and personal worker with the writer and others. He had been employed the past year as Y. M. C. A. secretary in Meridian, his home town, and was acting in that capacity when stricken with paralysis on Oct. 27, dying the following day. A friend of the writer who resides in Meridian informed us that Brother Templeton's funeral attracted one of the largest audiences that ever gathered on such an occasion in the city of Meridian. He also stated that the greater portion of the entire city were bowed in sorrow over his untimely death. It was further stated that there was a constant volume of praise to be heard on the streets and in various places from all classes concerning his usefulness as a man, and his uprightness of life.

It was the privilege of the present writer to become acquainted with Brother Templeton about four years ago, having engaged him as evangelistic singer. He came to our home a number of times, and we can truthfully say that his presence was always a thing of joy. Our correspondence was steadily maintained until near his death.

Paul was a fine Christian fellow. His qualities as a gospel singer were of a high order, indeed. No one could fail to preach better after having heard him sing. To be in his company always meant a continual round of frolic and fun. He never seemed to see a moment of gloom, but all was cheerful and bright with him. The church has lost one of its sweetest gospel singers, but with many of us who knew him, his influence will abide. If there are choirs of those who sing in heaven, we feel sure that Paul Templeton has taken his place among them already. May the blessings of God rest upon all who mourn his going from us.

His friend,

ROBERT A. BOZEMAN.

METHODISM AND THE RED MAN.

By Rev. R. H. Ruff.

From its beginning Methodism has been deeply concerned over the spiritual welfare of the red man. John Wesley, himself, came first as a missionary to the Indians, and Charles Wesley and Whitfield both answered the same call. The first American Methodist missionary was John Stewart, a Negro, who in 1816 began his work among the Wyandotts in what is now the State of Ohio. In 1844, the Southern Church took over the missionary work among the Indians and the ministry of those who followed in Stewart's footsteps has been characterized by its deep devotion and great fidelity to the evangelical ideals of Methodism. As a result of their labors we have to-day a devoted and loyal Indian membership.

Much remains to be done. Not only must we carry on as we have been doing, but new classes should be organized and additional church buildings should be erected.

In writing on the Indians' call to the church of to-day, Doctor Clark, in "Healing Ourselves", well says:

"The red man calls to the church in pathetic tones; his long oppression, his present great need, his longing for the gospel, his readiness to accept it and live according to its implications as best he can—these things combine to constitute a challenge to the Christian forces of the world. Missionary work among the tribes is not the romantic activity which uninformed persons imagine it to be. The romance has departed from the Indian. He is not the tall, lithe, striking personage who formerly owned these lands; his is a downtrodden, oppressed, and ignorant race, stripped of his birthright and doomed to live on the bounty of those who stripped him. But it must be remembered that the white man made him what he is to-day; and only by giving him every service and opportunity can we in any measure clear our skirts as a people and do our duty as a church."

Let us pray earnestly for Brother Orlando Shay, Superintendent of our Indian Mission, and Professor W. B. Hubbell, Superintendent of Fulsom Training School, and for Brother R. M. Templeton, missionary to the Kiowas, the presiding elders and Indian membership. May we ask God that the white members of our Southern Methodist Church may not fail their Indian brethren and sisters in this hour of need, and that they will respond with their offerings and gifts so that the great work of evangelization of the Indians may continue.

THE METHODIST MOVE.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

The Annual Conferences are now in full swing—the Methodist move is on. Methodism is in some things the envy of other churches; it is a fine system of preventing stagnation—it keeps its ministers always on the move. I know Methodism too well to say that the results always means freshness and light; sometimes it means staleness and dimness. There are ministers who, true to the Methodist ideal, "shine more and more until the perfect day;" there are charges that always keep a fine tune; your readers know them.

The Methodist itinerant system may have its advantages, hut I have not found them; its travelling preachers are an essential part of its economy.

Methodists are always ready to welcome the incoming, and just as willing to speed the parting guest; sometimes it is a case of welcoming the prodigal home; if so, the congregation soon finds out the nature of the pasture the prodigal has heen feasting on. The old adage, "change of pasture makes fat cattle," depends on the truth of the pasture on which the cattle move. We assert that the ministry should he a "teaching ministry;" it certainly must he "feeding ministry." We have good authority for saying that even "the ass knoweth his master's crib," most of us are assos of that sort—I speak for the hearers.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

REV. HENRY T. YOUNG.

Rev. Henry T. Young, Box 786, De Ridder, La., whose picture appears above is to be appointed to the general evangelistic field of our Church hy Bishop Hay at this session of the Louisiana Conference. He has been a successful evangelist and evangelistic pastor during the seventeen years of his ministry. More than 3,000 people have accepted Christ under his ministry, and the De Ridder Church has douhled in membership during the two years of his pastorate there. He will he open for dates after Decemher 1.

Where there is a good feed, there we shall he found; many congregations like tid-hits. It is very bad for the spiritual stomach, for pampered souls are just as had as pampered stomachs, hut the flock must be fed; so much depends on the provender which the church should supply.

A man recently coming out of church—not a Methodist church—complained that he had only haif a meal; it had lasted only twenty minutes, then the table was cleared. But there is another side; in another church the minister preached a sermon on Nature, and said that "in every hlade of grass there was a sermon." Next day the minister, affected with "Mondayishness," was mowing his lawn, when one of his flock passed by. "Hello, parson," said he, "I see you are cutting your sermons short."

Most congregations like a square meal; if it is good, why object to forty minutes?

Elijah is said to have gone in the strength of the angel's food forty days, until he came to Horeb, the Mount of God. So many hearers have to go seven days on the strength of the food they get on Sundays. Men spiritually are ruminating animals. They must have enough in their stomachs to bring up and chew over. To many a man his food for thought is what the pulpit gives him. If the hungry sheep look up and are not fed, it is a pitiable pass to which things have come.

This paper was started in praise of the itinerant system; "We get," says the pew, "a different cook every time." So ye grumhlers who have found the table hare, or been filled with food for which you have no appetite, now you get your chance.

And you good folk who have had all that you can sweetly enjoy, thank the Giver of all good things that the grousers are now to have a turn; and you who have learned the highest wisdom of all, to he content with such things as ye have, who can feed on whatever is supplied—well, you have a continual feast.

The new minister faced the usual curious congregation on Sunday morning for the first time; he was a very tall man, he ascended the pulpit stairs with great courage, threw off his overcoat, hent his head for a short prayer and began the service hy saying, "Let us sing Hymn 341,"

"Into a world of ruffians sent,
I walk on hostile ground.
Where human hears on slaughter bent
And ravening wolves surround."....

Another minister, very short so that he had to stand on a hassock in the pulpit, announced his farewell text, "A little while and ye shall not see me," the hassock turned over and the preacher fell against the pulpit door which flew open and precipated him down the pulpit stairs. An old lady in the congregation shouted, "Oh dear, he is gone."

Sunday School

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Eighty Sunday schools have sent in Sunday School Day offerings, amounting to $1,447.76. The Shreveport District leads in amount of money sent in, followed by the Monroe District, with Baton Rouge District coming third.

The Year Book for the General Sunday School Board for 1924 reports our Conference as having eighty Wesley Bible classes in good standing. The North Arkansas Conference leads all other Conferences in Wesley Bible classes in good standing with 303.

The Conference Superintendent has just finished a statistical report of his work for the Annual Conference. This report shows the following items which may be of interest:

Miles traveled this year, 22,443.

Number of people addressed, 19,694.

Has held 118 group conferences and 536 individual conferences on Sunday school work.

Has visited 55 Sunday schools in session.

All of the Sunday schools observing Children's Week have not sent in their report to their district superintendent. Three of our seven district superintendents have reported on Children's Week.

Our office records show about thirty-five of the preachers in our Conference that took one or more credits in Teacher Training last year. We have not a complete record before us of this year's credits, but we think the following preachers have taken one or more credits this year:

J. A. Alford, O. W. Bradley, J. M. Alford, A. J. Coburn, W. W. Drake, Alonzo Early, Martin Hebert, H. L. Johns, P. O. Lowrey, A. K. McLellan, H. W. Rickey, A. M. Serex, A. W. Waddill, J. B. NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Missions in the Sunday School.

By Rev. R. G. Lord, Superintendent of Missions.

The Discipline, 1922, paragraph No. 392, concerning missions in the Sunday school, reads as follows:

"1. Let every Sunday school be regarded as a missionary and social service organization, and promote education in missions and social service; let the superintendent, after consultation with the pastor, appoint annually a committee which shall have special responsibility for the promotion of instruction and training in missions and social service.

"2. Let one Sunday in each month, preferably the fourth, be observed as Missionary and Social Service Day, and let the offering taken this day, as the Workers' Council may elect in advance, be a special for missions, for objects selected by the General Sunday School Board in its own field of work, or for the general or conference benevolences."

Let us carry out the direction of the Discipline in missionary instruction. Put some one definitely in charge of this work in every Sunday school. Have programs one Sunday in each month. Take an offering for missions and support a missionary special with this offering.

If your school is working under a program of work, either A, B, or C type, you will find that one of the points in this program of work calls for instruction and training in missions. It is possible for any school to carry out this point in its program of work. If your school is an A or B type, you can get programs suited for all the departments.

Centenary.

According to the latest data, the following schools have paid their Centenary pledges in full: Eupora, Columbus (First Church), Booneville, Guntown, Saltillo, Sherman, Coahoma, Moorehead, Friars Point, Leland, Shaw, Philip, Rome, Tutwiler, Grenada, Goodman, Pickens, Water Valley (First Church), Winona, Coffeeville, Byhalia, and Sardis. About ten other schools have very nearly paid in full. One hundred and eighty-five schools made pledges and fifty-three have paid nothing on their pledge.

Specials.

I am listing below a few Missionary Specials. If you are interested, I will be glad to furnish you further information and a more extensive list.

Home Field.

Indian Work. Willis-Fulmer Academy.—200 shares in dormitory, each $200; 40 scholarships, each $200; 5 native workers, each $50.

The Work in the West.—Preachers on mission fields; workers in Sunday school work, each $90 and up; workers in Sunday school work, each share $25.

In the Navy.—Chaplain U. S. S. Wright, J. H. Brooks (who is from our own Conference), $300.

Foreign Field.—Every phase of all the work in all the foreign fields is divided into shares of $25 each. You can get a share in any field you may like.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Conference Board adopted the calendar of the General Board. From now till January is set apart for a Membership Drive. All materials will be furnished free. If you do not have an order blank and did not preserve the one in the Advocate, please write for one. Send for samples.

The only way your workers can see for the large advanced program adopted by the Board at Conference to be carried out is for those who love to pray and can pray to join us in prayer that God will lead and give us a great victory.

The first service held this year resulted in one conversion. This cheers our hearts and gives us greater determination.

The Conference officers elected by the Board for the year are as follows:

Superintendent of Rural Work, Mr. O. C. Hull, Lawrence, Miss.; Superintendent of Missionary Education, Rev. R. H. Clegg, Union, Miss.; Superintendent of Leadership Training, Rev. B. F. Lewis, Jackson, Miss.; Superintendent of Intermediate, Senior, and Young People, Rev. H. R. McKee, Benton, Miss.; Superintendent of Adult and Home, Rev. O. S. Lewis, Biloxi, Miss.

Rev. Van R. Landrum's name did not appear upon the Honor Roll for Leadership Training, because the report from Nashville did not reach my office till after Conference. Brother Landrum becomes the first for tho coming year.

Six names were added to the Sunday School Day Honor Roll at Conference, making a total of 52 names.

The Lord is leading, let us follow.

Epworth League

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Epworth League Union Meets.

The New Orleans City Union Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held its monthly meeting at the Algiers Methodist Church, Tuesday night, Nov. 11. The devotional part of the program was of a patriotic nature, in observance of Armistice Day. A special feature was a stirring talk by Rev. A. M. Serex, assistant pastor of the First Methodist Church, on the topic, "Are the Christian People Prepared to Help Others to Know the Christ?"

It was announced that the Church Choral Club would give a benefit concert for the Memorial Home on Dec. 15. The concert will probably be given either at the Roosevelt Hotel or the Little Theatre.

An Intermediate Union of all the Intermediate Epworth Leagues of Methodist churches in New Orleans will be organized at the Felicity Street Methodist Church, Nov. 21, at 4 p. m. Officers will be elected and plans laid for a permanent organization.

Miss C. Martinez was elected recording secretary for the Union, to take the place of Miss Azeline Morris, who has left the city. Mrs. E. R. Swan, of Rayne Memorial Church, was elected corresponding secretary over Miss Ruth Templeton, of St. Mark's.

The City Union "Stunt Night" will be held at St. Mark's Hall, Dec. 4. Each chapter in the Union is to present a stunt, the winner to receive $5 towards the starting of a League library. The annual banquet will be held some time in January. Plans for the local institute are under way, and it will be held the first or second week in February.

At the close of the meeting, the Rev. J. B. Grambling, former Louisiana State Epworth League President, presented efficiency certificates to those chapters in the New Orleans District who carried out the Standard of Efficiency for the past year. Local chapters receiving certificates were: Second Church, 80 points; McDonoghville, 90 points; Carrollton Avenue, 90 points; Houma, 100 points; Epworth, 100 points.

Christian Culture diplomas were also given those who had completed six units of Epworth League work at the annual Summer Assembly held in Mansfield, La., during the month of June.

FROM ST. MARTINVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We are closing our fourth year's work on the St. Martinviiie charge. Marked progress has been made along the Teche in "the Land of Evangeline" immortalized by Longfellow. Fifty-seven have been received in the church this year. The parsonage has been renovated, one church building erected and already dedicated, and another repaired. Thus we are beginning to reap permanent fruit of our labors.

This is one of Romanism's strongest points in south Louisiana, but our efforts have not been in vain. Those who have long been in darkness, bound in the fetters of sin, desire to be brought to light and be delivered from bondage. The French people within the bounds of this work, having a radius of sixty miles, are most susceptible to the Gospel. Besides our regular work, we have been successful in estabiishing a nucleus here and there throughout the charge with great possibilities for future development.

Fraternally,
A. J. MARTIN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Merryville Auxiliary.

The Week of Prayer was observed by the W. M. S. in Merryville, La., each day, following the program assigned. Mrs. Charles Gott gave the program on Monday afternoon, which was enthusiastically attended. Mrs. Mary Roberts had Tuesday's program in charge, Parral, Mexico, being the subject under consideration. Those taking part were Mrs. J. M. Grady, Mrs. V. H. Fuller, Mrs. J. S. Bennett. Mrs. Lula Smith spoke on Foreign Mission Specials.

The Young Peoples' Missionary Society, in charge of Mrs. D. W. Smith, gave their program on Thursday and the largest attendance was present on that day. Miss Anna Bakak, president of the Young Peoples' Society, presided and gave the Bible lesson. Miss Esther Newton led in prayer. Miss Lucille Franklin sang, "If I Were a Voice," accompanied by Miss Lois Yawn. Dialogue, "Missions," by Misses Alpha Houston and Fannie Bell Walling. Miss Dolly Grady led in prayer. Duet: "Something for Thee," sung very sweetly by Misses Yawn and Max Dawson. Mrs. Smith read a very interesting letter from our missionary to India, Mrs. Pearl Hite. This was the first letter received from her and was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Hite has charge of a girls' school and orphanage in India.

The Juniors had their part of the program on Friday afternoon and did credit to the part assigned them. Those taking part were: Alberta Mathews, Clyde Sims, Mildred Franklin, Muriel Hemigau, Herman Hilton, Eunice Avery, Bertha Mae Meadows, Reba Frazer, Clara Sims, May Ward and Myrtle Harkebroad.

A Notable Meeting to be Held in Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3-9.—Visitors Welcomed.

One of the most important religious gatherings that have ever been held in the South will be the Quadrennial Session of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is one of the 28 constituent Protestant churches represented on the Council. The Federal Council will meet in the South for the first time in Atlanta, Ga., December 3-9. While there will be a fixed official delegation, visitors will be welcomed and may share in all the privileges of the Conference except voting.

A preliminary announcement of the program of the Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to be held at Atlanta, Georgia, December 3-9, has been made by the Special Committee on program, of which Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is Chairman. The program indicates that the Quadrennial Meeting of the Council will be discussing some of the most urgent and important issues before the Protestant churches of America.

The general theme of the meeting as a whole is, "The Church in the World." Among the specific subjects which are to be considered are: "The Co-operation of the Churches;" "The Evangelistic Work of the Church;" "The Educational Work of the Church;" "The Church and the Community;" "The Church and Race;" "The Church and the Nations;" and "The Churches Facing the Future."

The evening meetings during the entire session will be devoted to a series of public meetings centering around the theme, "The Common Tasks of the Churches." The several subjects to be considered in this series are: "Training the Youth for Christ;" "Winning Men to Christ;" "Christianizing our Social Relations;" "Christianizing our International Relations;" and "Winning the World to Christ."

Each noonday there will be a series of meetings of a devotional and inspirational character upon the theme, "A Call to Personal Religion," emphasizing the great convictions and experiences which Christians of all denominations share. Included in this series are: "Faith in God, Loyalty to Christ, Prayer and Personal Religion, and Public Righteousness."

Among the speakers who are already announced are: Dr. Robert E. Speer, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and President of the Federal Council; Governor William E. Sweet, of Colorado; Bishop William F. McDowell, of Washington; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburgh; Bishop Frederick F. Reese, of Georgia; Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Nashville; Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta; Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, of Hartford, Conn., Moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches; Justice Florence E. Allen, of Columbus, Ohio; President E. Y. Mullens, of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky; Rev. M. Ashby Jones, Pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist Church, Atlanta; President John Hope, of Morehouse College; Rev. Peter Ainsley, of Baltimore; Rev. James I. Vance, of the First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tenn.

One of the most notable features of the gathering will be the presence of

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

Right After a Severe Illness

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets Helps You Gain Strength and Put on Needed Weight—Great.

Nothing like the vitamines in Cod Liver Oil to help convalescing people to quickly get stronger and well—everybody knows that.

But nobody wants to take the ill-smelling, horrible tasting stomach upsetting oil itself, so nowadays, up to date medical men are ordering a tablet of Cod Liver Oil and it surely does do the work.

Ask any regular druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. They are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on five pounds or over in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist will return your money if you don't take on five pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, run-down children, too, and gives them a hearty appetite—60 tablets, 60 cents.

"Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet."

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

MRS. J. H. McCOY.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 5. 1924.

Reason for Thanksgiving—Revolution in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

A recent letter from one of our missionaries says: "The fighting and shelling have been confined almost entirely to our section of the city the last seven days. Three days ago our consul advised us to flee. The day we left our homes was the worst day auy of us had ever passed through. Our Central Church is a refuge station and Red Cross hospital and on this day it seemed to be the object of the Federal forces' wrath. Eight shells fell right around the church, but I am glad to tell you not one struck it. One fell just in front of the church, and a piece of it went into a window of Brother Lee's home."

Another missionary writes: "The revolution in Sao Paulo lasted nearly a month and was real civil war; none of our property was seriously damaged and none of our missionaries wounded, although they stayed in the city, converting the church into a hospital and the Puhlishing House into a camp for the homeless, where they fed and housed hundreds every day. After nearly a month of siege the rehels managed to escape and are now trying to reach the frontier. There is still movement of troops and the whole country is more or less restless, hut the trouble is practically over. Telephones, telegraphs, railways were all cut so that we in the south could not get any exact information. Thousands were killed and wounded."

What an opportunity our missionaries had in ministering to these wounded, hungry, homeless people! They came in contact with people that they never could reach in normal times and no doubt were the means of presenting Christ to the thousands that never would have had an opportunity to hear of Christ otherwise. We should not fail to sing praises and thanksgiving to our loving Heavenly Father who watched so tenderly over our co-workers while they were in such danger.

In this compound in Sao Paulo is a publishing house that is the best printing plant supported by any denomination in South America, printing Christian literature for all the boards; a great church that they say is the best Protestant church in South America and built largely by Brazilians; a bishop's residence next door; two splendid residences for missionaries—all these in one compound.

THE WORK OF THE STUDENT PASTORS.

By Dr. J. W. Perry.

There are a large number of State colleges and universities throughout the South institutions supported by taxation. Enrolled in these institutions in 1921 were 120,531 pupils. At least one-third of these are of Methodist parentage and faith, so that there are no less than 40,000 of our Methodist young people attending these tax supported institutions. One institution has a Methodist constituency in the student body of approximately 1500 and another has 1200. These are quite considerable fields in themselves. A large number of these institutions are located in small towns or communities where there is no Methodist church and no Methodist ministry, while many others are located where the Southern Methodist Church could not possibly seat on any occasion the entire Methodist student constituency.

The General Conference very wisely enacted that the unused portion of the "War Work Fund," estimated to yield something like a million and a half dollars, should be used to aid in building houses of worship, in proximity to educational institutions, with special reference to State institutions and independent foundations. By the use of that fund, about forty such churches are now in process of construction, approximating a total cost of more than $3,000,000. These will be modern, well equipped buildings, adapted to a program of religious education. As rapidly as its income will permit, and in co-operation with the Board of Education, the Board of Missions is placing in these tax supported institutions what are called student pastors; yet they are really pastors of students. Whenever it is possible, we find specially trained young men, and they are sent to organize and train the Methodist constituency in the stu-

A Wise Old Trapper

In the state of Ohio there lived a bunch of boys who had this trapping business down to a science. They each sent for separate price lists every year and then sent all their furs to the house giving the best quotations. After five years they decided they weren't so dreadfully wise because they didn't have enough profits to make their efforts worth while. One day they met Tom McMillan driving a new car to town. Tom said he made the price of his swell outfit shipping pelts. He told how he got wise to those funny prices and found it was better to deal with Chas. Porter because he always knew in advance just what he was sure of getting. He said that Porter never offered $5 for a $3 pelt, but he always paid the $3 which he promised and sometimes a little better. Chas. Porter now has five wise trappers in that section instead of one.

Don't take a Chance With Your FURS

Your furs mean real dollars to you. Why sell them to some fellow who offers you $1.25 when you know very well you are lucky to get fifty cents. Ask the wise trapper who knows. Once a Chas. Porter shipper and you will always be one. You know in advance that we give a square deal and every shipment brings sure money.

Send us your name and address. Get our Price Bulletins, Shipping Tags, and full particulars. Do it right now. This means real dollars to you, so don't put it off. Write to-day.

THIS BRIGHT BABY GIRL

Brought Joy to Home. Mrs. Price's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scootac, Pa.—"I never felt like working, and when I would try to do any work standing on my feet, I would just drag around all day long. At times I would have terrible pains and would be in bed three or four days. I was in this condition about a year when I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound mentioned in the papers. I had heard different women say it was fine for women's troubles, and my aunt thought it would help me as it had helped her. So I took the Vegetable Compound and it brought this baby and I was in good shape before the birth, a mother again. I believe I suffered a great deal less with this one. I thank you a thousand times for the good your medicine has done me. It has surely made our home happy one."—Mrs. ROBERT PRICE, Scootac, via Lockhaven, Pa.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE

Annually use organic Nuxated Iron to build up red blood, strength and endurance.

There are thousands who are ageing and breaking down at a time of life when they should be enjoying that perfect health which carries defiance to disease simply because they are not awake to the condition of their blood. Without organic iron your blood carries no oxygen, and without oxygen there is nothing to unite with the carbon in your food so what you eat does you no good. It is like putting coal into a stove without fire. You can now obtain organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils, and apples from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron also contains the principal chemical constituent of active, living nerve force; it is, therefore, a true blood and nerve food. It helps create and rebuild new and stronger red blood cells. It feeds the body the substances which nerve force must have to give it that vital, electro-magnetic power which is stored in the nerve and brain cells of man. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, rundown men and women in two weeks time. The manufacturers guarantee successful results to every purchaser or they will refund your money.

The District Stewards are called to meet me at Seashore Camp Ground at 11 a.m., Tuesday, Dec. 2. I wish that every district steward shall be present, feeling the great responsibility that rests on him. I believe that the secret of the progress of our Zion rests very largely in the hands of our district stewards. The collection of the funds for the carrying on of the great work of our church depends largely on the just and equitable distribution of the assessments to the charges, and this is entirely the responsibility of the district stewards. Brethren, won't you measure up to this great responsibility?

I also wish every pastor to meet me at the above time and place for a conference, in which to plan our work for the new year. Please don't let anything but death or serious sickness keep you away. Brother Van Hook will serve us dinner on this occasion, and show us the work of our Camp Ground School.

THE WORK OF THE STUDENT PASTORS.

dent body. The effort is to care for our own.

A pretty definite program has been worked out through the aid of the Home Mission Secretary, and in nearly every one of the institutions where student pastors are working an organization has been effected, which is very much like that of the Methodist Church with its board of stewards and committees. They work out their own programs and activities. In addition to all that, the student pastors conduct classes in religious education, and in most of the universities credit is given for this work toward the Bachelor of Arts degree. This would indicate that the university authorities are in hearty sympathy with this work.

We are now undertaking to aid in the support of eleven of these pastors. This, of course, does not begin to meet the need; it is only a small start. Last year, we had reports from seven of these institutions, and it was revealed that in them were forty candidates for the ministry. Forty of them had definitely decided after entering the universities to give themselves to the ministry of the gospel, and in addition some thirty others had decided to become home and foreign missionaries, and these have fellowship bands to aid them in their preparation. Their purpose is to continue their theological preparation after finishing at the university. This is something new. We have never gotten ministers out of State universities. One of the oldest furnished three preachers in thirty years, and another five. Others furnished still smaller numbers. If in one year, by means of the program of religious education, training, and exercise, forty young men are brought to recognize the call of God to preach, surely there will be many hundreds, both young men and women, who will go out to occupy their place in the work of the world to be more useful church members and more efficient in the service of the Kingdom. This seems to be an enterprise greatly needed—one which ought to be extended. Some central agency of the church will be obliged to foster it. Have we not waited too long to enterprise it, and shall not our church hasten to enter this door of opportunity and service?

Vol. 71—No. 48. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1924. CHAS. O CHALMERS Manager.

Proceedings of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

First Day, Wednesday.

The seventy-ninth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the beautiful church at Crowley, La., on Wednesday, Nov. 19, at 9 o'clock a. m., Bishop Sam R. Hay in the chair. The Bishop announced and the Conference sang the opening hymn, "And Are We Yet Alive?" The Bishop led in the recital of the Apostles' Creed and in prayer, after which he read a Scripture lesson from the fourth chapter of the Book of Acts, and commented thereon.

The roll was called by R. H. Harper, secretary of the preceding session of the Conference, and most of the members answered to their names. A notable feature of the roll call was the fact that every lay delegate from the Baton Rouge District was present.

R. H. Harper was elected secretary, and, upon his nomination, the following were elected: John F. Foster, W. L. Doss, Jr., and A. M. Serex, assistant secretaries; R. W. Vaughan, statistical secretary. Upon the nomination of R. W. Vaughan, W. C. Childress and J. M. Boykin were elected assistant statistical secretaries.

Various communications were referred without reading to appropriate boards and committees.

The Bishop instructed all committees of examination to be ready to report at the Thursday morning session.

Upon nomination of the presiding elders, the following committees were elected:

Public Worship: Alonzo Early, J. H. Wiliams, W. H. Moore.

Conference Relations: H. W. Rickey, R. T. Ware, A. A. Bernard, A. H. Parker, T. J. Holladay, L. N. Hoffpauir, C. W. Crisler.

District Conference Records: P. H. Fontaine, J. E. Selfe, P. O. Lowrey, W. J. Sharp.

Sabbath Observance: R. E. Goodrich, Dr. M. F. Wilson, F. J. McCoy.

Prison Reform: H. S. Johns, O. L. Tucker, J. W. Wynn.

Memorial Home: J. W. Lee, H. L. Johns, K. I. Bean.

The following substitutions were made: Ellis Smith, in place of H. N. Brown, on the Commission on Budget; W. L. Doss, Jr., in place of H. N. Brown, on the Committee on Admissions; J. F. Russ, in place of F. M. Ragdale, deceased, on the Board of Temperance and Social Service; W. L. Doss, Jr., in place of W. L. Duren, on the Hospital Board.

The following were announced as the Board of Lay Activities: T. W. Holloman, F. D. Richardson, L. A. Sims, R. J. O'Neal, S. W. B. Colvin, E. M. Decker, H. H. Bain.

E. L. Savole, president of the board of stewards of the local church, was presented to the Conference, and he delivered a cordial address of welcome, to which Bishop Hay responded in fitting terms.

Rev. Byron Harwell, recently transferred from the North Arkansas Conference and appointed assistant pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport; Dr. H. M. Whaling, vice president of Southern Methodist University; Dr. E. L. Shettles, representing the Publishing House; Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, and Rev. R. H. Hamburg, of the Pacific Conference, were presented to the Conference.

The time of meeting and adjourning was fixed at 9 o'clock a.m. and 12 o'clock noon, and the bar of the Conference was fixed to include the pews as far back as the third window.

Bishop Hay announced that Dr. F. N. Parker would conduct the devotional exercises on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday mornings.

Question 21 was called, "Are all the preachers blameless in their lives and official administration?" The names of all the presiding elders were called, they were passed in examination of character, and they reported their work, as follows: C. C. Wier, Alexandria District; H. N. Brown, Baton Rouge District; J. B. Williams, Lake Charles District, W. D. Kleinschmidt, Monroe District; W. W. Drake, New Orleans District, K. W. Dodson, Ruston District; R. H. Wynn, Shreveport District. The reports showed that the work of the church has prospered during the year. The number of accessions on profession of faith was especially gratifying.

The names of the superannuates were called, their characters were passed, and those present addressed the Conference briefly, as follows: R. A. Davis, W. F. Henderson, Sr., F. G. Hocutt, S. S. Holladay, R. S. Isbell, J. F. Patterson, Robert Randle, J. T. Sawyer, S. A. Steel, F. N. Sweeney, W. J. Porter, J. G. Sloane, B. T. Crews, S. J. Davies, B. H. Sheppard.

At their own request, and upon motion of their presiding elders, the names of H. W. Bowman and G. D. Anders were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. The statement was made that Rev. H. W. Bowman was steadily improving in health, with the prospect that he would be able to take work at the next session of the Conference.

On motion, the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of love and sympathy to R. O. Randle, an honored lay member of the Conference, who is seriously ill. W. D. Kleinschmidt led the Conference in prayer in behalf of Brother Randle.

Question 14, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called and the gratifying answer was made that there had been no deaths either of preachers or of their wives during the year. Bishop Hay led the Conference in singing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." Tender reference was made to the recent death of E. N. Evans, a former member of the Conference.

The report of Centenary College was read by President George S. Sexton, and, on motion, referred to the Board of Education. On motion, consideration of the report was made the order of the day for 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

The Class of the Third Year was called, its members were passed in examination of character, and, the Committee of Examination reporting favorably, the following were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year: H. L. Johns, C. H. Mayo, C. L. Tucker, J. L. Greenway, Jr.; Leon Picone was passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the Third Year.

The Class of the Fourth Year was called, its members passed in examination of character, and, the Committee of Examination reporting favorably, the following were graduated from the Course of Study and elected to elder's orders: B. D. Watson, W. F. Roberts; L. R. Sparks, already an elder, was graduated from the Course of Study.

Announcements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction by Dr. F. N. Parker.

Afternoon.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Dr. F. N. Parker delivered an address on the subject, "The Changeless Christ," to a great audience.

Evening.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening, the Board of Education observed its anniversary, addresses being delivered by Dr. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, and Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College.

Second Day, Thursday.

The Conference convened promptly at 9 o'clock, Bishop Hay in the chair. The hymn, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," was sung, after which Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr., led in prayer. After singing the hymn, "O Happy Day," the Conference listened to a devotional address by Dr. Frank N. Parker on the subject, "The Great Adventure of Knowing God."

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved. The roll of absentees from yesterday's session was called, and, upon motion, further calling of the roll was dispensed with. Several alternate lay delegates were seated in place of absent principals.

Announcement was made of the receipt of a telegram by Rev. F. P. Moss, of Melder, announcing the death of his mother in Georgia. The Conference expressed its sympathy for Brother Moss in his great sorrow, and presented him with a purse of $167 to pay his [illegible]

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was [illegible] the Conference, called to the [illegible] presented to the Conference and [illegible] with the presiding bishop Dr. L. F. [illegible] Secretary of the General Board of [illegible] Dr. O. P. Lowry of the Mississippi Conference [illegible] Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the General Board of Education, were [illegible] the Conference.

The time for the order of [illegible] having arrived, Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was presented, as follows:

Board of Education, Report No. 1.

In view of the splendid [illegible] people of Shreveport to Centenary College, [illegible] particularly of Dr. Sexton and that group of public spirited citizens who [illegible] and carried to completion the campaign which resulted in the raising of $[illegible] for the [illegible] and equipment of Centenary, and in view of the campaign now under way in the city of Shreveport to raise another $[illegible] as a centennial offering commemorating its one hundred years of honorable history and invaluable service to both church and State:

Therefore, be it resolved, That, as a token of our profound appreciation of the generosity on the part of the people of Shreveport and expressive of our interest and in recognition of our responsibility, the Conference [illegible] itself to raise a sum which shall represent a minimum of $5 per member.

Resolved, further, That we co-operate with the Centennial Committee of Centenary College for completing an organization for carrying this campaign to every church, and that we recommend to every church the assumption of an amount not less than the minimum of $5 per member.

Pending the adoption of the report, addresses concerning the history, work and needs of Centenary College were made by George S. Sexton, W. W. Drake, Briscoe Cutter, C. C. Miller, N. E. Joyner, R. W. Tucker, and Bishop Hay. The question was then put and the Conference, by a standing vote, enthusiastically [illegible] with practical unanimity adopted the resolutions. On motion, the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of greeting and appreciation to the citizens of Shreveport for their magnificent support of Centenary College.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was presented to the Conference, and he spoke of the great work now being done in Brazil, which is [illegible] episcopal district.

Dr. Luther E. Todd addressed the Conference concerning the raising of the Superannuate Endowment fund of $10,000,000, which is steadily being carried to completion. More than $1,000,000 has already been received in cash for this sacred cause. The Louisiana Conference was complimented by Dr. Todd upon its interest in this cause as shown by its payments thus far upon its quota.

At the request of Bishop Hay, Bishop Dobbs took the chair during Dr. Todd's address.

A telegram from the [illegible] church at Lafayette, inviting the Conference to attend the laying of the corner stone on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, was read, and many of the members of the Conference expressed their intention of attending that historic event. This church is being erected at a total cost of about $100,000.

Reports Nos. 1 and 2 of the Sunday School Board were read and adopted. These reports filled some vacancies on the Board and requested the Bishop to reappoint Rev. C. D. Atkinson as Conference Sunday School Superintendent.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson addressed the Conference concerning the great educational work of the church.

The Committee on Conference Relations made its report granting the superannuate relation to those whose names had been referred to it. The report was adopted.

Rev. T. W. St. John, having completed the Course of Study and having met all disciplinary requirements, was elected to elder's orders.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, an

PRESIDENT KEY'S REPORT OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

To the Bishop and Members of the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences.

Dear Brethren: I wish to make report of your institution at Jackson, Millsaps College, as follows:

The work of the session of 1923-24 carried out the promise indicated in my report at your Annual Conference last December. The total enrollment for the year was 339, the greatest number in the history of the institution until this fall.

Judging by reports from professors and by grades reported, there was very good application on the part of students to their studies. The following figures indicate the comparative grades made during 1923-24 as compared with 1920-21, a year chosen at random by the registrar.

	Average, 1923-24	1920-21
Entire student body	79.23	76.29
Boys	77.8	73.5
Girls	83.00	84.00
Preachers	81.1	71.8

I happen to have, and give for purposes of comparison, the average grades for the year 1922-23 at a great Northern school, the University of Michigan:

	Millsaps 1923-24	Univ. of Mich. 1922-23
All men	77.8	71.0
All women	83.0	77.7
Entire student body	79.23	72.4

These figures are given you merely to confirm our belief that the school is making good progress in its primary task of training character through diligent work. The spirit of both faculty and students has been fine, earnest and aggressive. All of the organizations, particularly the religious organizations, of the college have been active. During the spring an inspiring and helpful religious campaign was conducted by Dr. R. H. Bennett. The work of the year was closed with a notable commencement when 44 young people received the bachelor's degree, and 3 the master's degree.

I should like particularly to call your attention to the fine work being done by our Department of Religious Education, under the consecrated leadership of Prof. C. A. Bowen. Nearly three-fourths of the entire student body were enrolled in Bible classes or Religious Education classes of the college. In addition to this, 136 Millsaps students were enrolled in Christian Service classes in the various Sunday schools of Jackson. In May we awarded 760 Standard Teacher Training certificates to college students. At commencement we were privileged to award joint diplomas of the college and the Sunday School Board in Christian leadership to five young men. I understand that those were the first diplomas of this character ever awarded by our church.

The enrollment to date for the session 1924-25 is 353, having already gone beyond the total enrollment of last year, and accordingly set a new mark for attendance at Millsaps College. This increase has come largely from the Mississippi Conference outside of Jackson. While there has been a steady growth of interest and support on the part of the city of Jackson, naturally a larger proportion of Jackson students attending Millsaps than any other college; the actual attendance from Jackson has not greatly increased in the last four years.

	1921-22	'22-23	'23-24	'24-25
The number of local students for the last four years has been as follows	126	128	129	133
The attendance from the Mississippi Conference outside of Jackson has been	100	98	101	134
The attendance from the North Mississippi Conference has varied considerably, being	59	71	64	67
The number of young ministers in attendance during the past four years has been	32	36	38	34

A notable feature has been the number of young ministerial students of superior ability coming during the last year or so. This is reflected in the class standing given above.

	1921-22	'22-23	'23-24	'24-25
The number of students who give no church affiliation during the last four years has been	7	18	11	15
The percentage of non-church members in our college community has therefore been	2.3	5.5	3.2	3.1

The number of the unchurched in the average American community runs from about 90 per cent in cities like San Francisco and New Orleans to some 60 per cent in the most godly of Mississippi villages. In San Francisco only 10.8 per cent of the people belong to an evangelical church; in New Orleans only 12.7 per cent; in the whole United States, 27.7 per cent. The boy may easily be in a safer moral environment in Millsaps College than in his own home town.

Progress has been made in collecting the directed subscriptions of the Christian Education Movement, and the treasurer has been able to report to the General Education Board that upwards of $100,000 has been added to our endowment from this source since the beginning of the movement. In consideration of these collections, the General Education Board has paid over to the college $42,500. There yet remains to be raised $143,500 in order to meet the proposal of the General Education Board and collect from them the balance of their gift that is available, viz., $52,000. Every possible effort should be made to complete our collections as they fall due, and secure this amount, since it may be that no further assistance of this sort will be offered us. The last annual report of the General Education Board states that the resources of the Board for appropriations of this kind are "practically exhausted," and that the Board has gradually come to the conviction that its possibilities of usefulness in this direction are drawing to an end. It is imperative, therefore, that nothing that is possible be left undone to meet this opportunity to the full.

If our people will but make good their pledges, we shall succeed gloriously. Success will mean a million of endowment for Millsaps, and make the growth of the college enrollment to 500 possible. It will likewise mean success for our other splendid schools. Our interests are identical. Let us all work together in order to provide adequately for the Methodist boys and girls who are asking in such great numbers for a Methodist education.

Because of the increase in endowment above reported, it has been possible to employ two additional full-time instructors, thereby providing adequately for the present enrollment of 353. However, any further increase in enrollment will be impossible unless the increase in endowment is secured. Besides these two additional instructors, R. H. Moore, M.A., and Mrs. Fadra Holmes Wilson, M.A., two other new members of the faculty have come to us this year, Prof. J. T. Hooker, M.A., H.R.E., taking the place of Prof. Summers in the Religious Education Department, and Prof. J. F. Walker, Ph.D., succeeding Prof. McKnight in the Education Department. All of these people are members of our church, active and consecrated workers, and thoroughly trained for their duties.

The Carnegie Corporation has given the college $50,000 for the rebuilding of the library, and this work is now being done. With the material available in the old building, this will enable us to construct a modern library building, completely equipped with steel stacks and all necessary furniture, with a total valuation of approximately $60,000.

A reputable landscape architect has been employed by the Board to prepare a comprehensible plan for the future growth and beautification of the campus, having in mind not only the needs of the college for present service, but also the growth in the future that is inevitable if our church is to measure up to the opportunities for service to her people and to the State that are now upon us.

In our task we earnestly beg the co-operation of all our pastors.

1. In presenting the claims of the Christian Education Movement to their congregations during the months that have been set aside for this work.

2. In securing a full canvass by the local collector of the subscribers in your charge.

3. In sending us the names, parents' names, and address of Methodist boys in the senior class of your local high school. We are now making up our mailing list for next year, and shall expect you to help us.

4. In maintaining a close touch with the boys from your congregation who are now in Millsaps College. You are their pastors still. A note from you will cheer the boy when lonely, and help us in cultivating his religious life.

Respectfully submitted,

D. M. KEY, President.

Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

A GREAT THANK OFFERING FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Preliminary plans for the most important and one of the largest philanthropic enterprises ever undertaken in Louisiana, were laid recently at a meeting of the Executive Committee in charge of the Centenary Centennial celebration. Moved by the memories of one hundred years of honorable service to the State and nation brought forcibly to mind by the opening of the one hundredth session and its attendant ceremonies, the Executive Committee, under the leadership of E. A. Frost, general chairman, including A. J. Peavy, F. T. Whited, R. T. Moore, G. S. Prestridge, R. O. Roy, John McW. Ford, W. K. Henderson, Dr. John L. Scales, Dr. George S. Sexton, and J. R. Russell, planned to raise a thank offering to Centenary College in appreciation of its century of service.

Since the summer of 1922 it has been apparent that additional facilities would have to be provided for the college. New buildings and improvements are needed, and in order that the field of service may be enlarged and strengthened, additional endowment is necessary to provide an ample working fund.

The opening of the one hundredth session of Centenary College has been marked by an enormous growth, even in excess of all expectations. More students have been enrolled than ever before in the history of the school. This demands that the next step in the twenty-five-year building program, adopted in 1921, be taken. Class rooms and dormitories are overflowing, and lecture rooms, laboratories and study rooms are taxed to the extreme.

Every community with an eye for the future includes in its program of development a college—for it is universally recognized that an urban college does more for the cultural development of a city than any other adjunct aside from the church. History has proved that cultural and business development go hand in hand. When Centenary moved to Shreveport, she not only filled that need, but also brought with her the distinction of being the oldest institution of learning in the South. The names of her classmen and alumni are inseparably linked with every important movement in the history of the South.

Mr. Frost, in announcing the enterprise, said: "Centenary, with her educational ideals and her wealth of tradition, is a heritage passed on to us by our forefathers, and in augmenting her facilities, and strengthening her resources as we plan, we are keeping faith with the founders, who, bent on providing educational advantages for future generations, sacrificed to make Centenary possible."

Louisiana and her civic-minded citizens appreciate that fact, and will, by raising the one million dollar thank offering, place Centenary in the front rank as to equipment and facilities, where she already is as to scholastic and spiritual standards.

Many outstanding people have already pledged their support and co-operation. The personnel of the Centenary College centennial celebration committee, composed of one hundred prominent people of Shreveport and Louisiana, will be announced shortly. In order to organize thoroughly the interests friendly to Centenary and give every one in Louisiana an opportunity to take part and share in this thank offering, a committee of the following prominent business men have volunteered their services in conjunction with the Executive Committee: H. H. Bain, H. B. Hearn, N. C. McGowan, Wm. D. Keith, S. J. B. Whited, W. A. McKennon, T. C. Clanton, E. E. Cunningham, Sam. W. Mason, S. H. Bolinger, Yandell Boatner, Rabbi Abram Briff, R. E. Smith, George S. Sexton, Jr., E. R. Jones, D. W. Spurlock, George Freeman, George T. Bishop, E. P. Mills, D. A. Brown, S. R. Elliott, E. A. Gillespie, Roy Bennett, Jack Cox, F. T. Whited, Fred Armbruster, W. A. Robinson, J. W. Turner, Wynn Taylor, M. A. McCutcheon.

Headquarters have been established in the Commercial National Bank building, Shreveport, La., where the organization work is well under way.

It is planned that this thank offering will be raised early in the fall.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Did you ever see a thoroughbred race horse when they were waiting for the signal to start! How his muscles quiver, his nostrils dilate, his eyes flash with eagerness to go, and he champs his bit in high-spirited impatience to be off; and just before the bugle blows, a man takes hold of the bridle, and leads him from the track. Well, that was the way I felt when we had to leave Decatur. We never lived among more lovable people. They did everything they could honorably do to have us sent back. The official board unanimously passed a resolution requesting our return, and sent it directly to the Bishop. Prominent citizens wrote letters urging it. A committee went to the Conference to plead with the Bishop to return us. Everybody, big and little, wanted us back, and said so; but it was all in vain. We had to move. When it was known we would not be returned, the good people vied with each other in showing us kindness. At the last mid-week service, a purse of nearly $100 was handed me to get a new suit of clothes. The next day a check was sent me for "moving expenses." That evening one of the stewards called, and handed me a note in bank "cancelled," and a costly fountain pen, the gift of the large men's Bible class, to keep on writing against unification. Many hands were pressed, and eyes were moist, and no word was spoken because our hearts were too full to speak. One of the most touching incidents was a visit of several hundred children from the public school to say good-bye. They completely filled the parsonage yard, and each one had a flower of some sort. I made them a little good-bye talk, and they passed by, handing me their flowers and piling them about me, while they sang to the tune of Tipperary,

"It's a long way to Louisiana,
It's a long way to go;
We are all mighty sorry,
But good-bye, Doctor Steel."

Yes, I was too full for many words, for nothing is more genuine or beautiful than the love of children and young people. It is especially grateful to me, since I understand I am debarred from service because I am "old," and the church "wants young men." We said good-bye, and closed one of the most delightful pastorates we have ever known.

Did "Providence" have anything to do with it?—Excuse me. Did it hurt? Ah, yes, it hurt to break heart-ties when we could see no reason for it; but the deeper hurt came from the fact that after fifty-seven years of earnest service in my church, during which I have never sought an office or declined a task, I am left outside, and there is no place in all Southern Methodism for me to work. If I were infirm and feeble, I could understand it; but the fact that such a church as Decatur unanimously wanted us back, and the fact that the church in Mansfield wanted us so earnestly that when they found out we would not be sent back, but superannuated, the whole community in a couple of hours contributed money to get us a permanent home there—these facts show that in the opinion of competent judges I am still efficient. We made good, but that counts for nothing in the "system."

Yes, it hurts to the bone, but it doesn't help matters to pout about it, or get sore over it, or turn pessimist and think that everybody is bad except us, or kick the dash-board out. There are times when we need to sit steady in the boat. A crushed flower gives forth fragrance. I found my tears as they fell arranging themselves in a little string of pearls as follows:

Our trials test our faith in God,
And purify the soul;
Give vigor to our wavering wills,
And teach us self-control.

The cross when borne with fortitude,
Will lift us into peace;
Smooth all the wrinkles from our brow,
And make our sorrows cease.

For tribulation, patience proves;
Patience, experience brings;
Experience blossoms into hope,
And hope forever sings.

Because the love divine is shed
Through all our heart abroad,
And we rejoice to realize
The saving strength of God.

The presence of the living Christ
Along the Sunny Road,
Drives all the shadows from our path,
And lightens every load.

Then welcome all our hardships here,
If Jesus is along;
We'll not complain, we'll dry our tears,
And sing a happy song.

Grateful for all the blessings past,
That Providence has given,
And confident the Sunny Road
Will end at last in heaven.

My little song, like Jonathan's honey, has revived my spirit, and I push on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. I don't find it hard to believe in miracles; but I do find it hard to live up to Paul's ideal of religion—"In honor preferring one another." My, aint that a steep grade! But there is no way to get around it, or to get over it, except by the grace of God. Sister Steel, who has been the angel of the Sunny Road for thirty years, keeps as sweet in the shadows as in the sunshine. We have returned to our little love-nest in the Pelican Pines at Mansfield. Of course, I shall not be idle. That is sin. I will read, and study, and write with redoubled zeal. I have carefully prepared a course of messages on the Bible, which those who have heard them say are especially helpful to the spiritual life of the church. They are cultural and inspirational in their character. I hope our pastors will open their churches for me to come and give these messages. They can help me to keep busy and to keep the traces tight. I have offered myself as an emergency man to several of the bishops, and I think I can hope they will keep me in mind, and use me when they can. I think the bishops are kindly disposed to me; but the Lord and the bishops together have their hands full to handle presiding elders!

I have already started. After leaving Decatur, I spent Sunday with my son, Rev. Edward Marvin Steel, in his new charge at Mount Pleasant, Tenn., peeped into the Publishing House at Nashville, then went to Augusta, Ga., where all the Methodist churches assembled in a union service, filling the spacious St. John Church, to hear about The Pioneers. We had a great time. I like the Georgians. Dr. Ellis says my "feet are tied by the cords of tradition"—said that on the curbstone in Talladega. But he is mistaken. Here's my doctrine thrown into rhyme:

Let our past bury its dead;
Loud the living present calls;
Gird your loins; quit you like men;
For the enemy appeals.

Keep the faith by martyrs sealed,
Rooted in a glorious past;
Welcome every new advance,
While you hold tradition fast.

No church can live on the heroism of its past; no church deserves to live that disdains its past. So listen for my bugle from the Pelican Pines, and remember it never sounds retreat.

Mansfield La.

CLEAR THE WAY.

Men of thought, be up and stirring
Night and day;
Sow and seed, withdraw the curtain,
Clear the way!
Men of action, aid and cheer them
As ye may.
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow,
There's a midnight blackness changing
Into gray.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Once the welcome light has broken,
Who shall say
What the unimagined glories
Of the day?
What the evil that shall perish
In its ray?
Aid the dawning, tongue and pen;
Aid it, hopes of honest men;
Aid it, paper—aid it, type—
Aid it, for the hour is ripe,
And our earnest must not slacken
Into clay.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Lo! a cloud's about to vanish
From the day,
And a brazen wrong to crumble
Into clay.
Lo! the right's about to conquer—
Clear the way!
With the right shall many more
Enter smiling at the door;
With the giant wrong shall fall
Many others, great and small,
That for ages long have held us
For their prey.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

nouncements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the Conference was adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Dobbs.

Afternoon

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Dr. F. N. Parker delivered the second of a series of great addresses to the Conference.

Evening.

At the evening hour, the Sunday School Board observed its anniversary. W. S. Holmes, chairman of the Board, presided. Brief addresses were made by W. W. Drake and N. E. Joyner, after which Dr. John W. Shackford, Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, delivered the principal address of the evening.

Third Day, Friday.

The Conference convened promptly at 9 o'clock, with Bishop Hay in the chair. The devotional excercises consisted of singing; prayer led by W. L. Duren, and an address by Dr. F. N. Parker.

The minutes of the preceding day's session were read and approved.

Dr. J. W. Perry, Secretary of the General Board of Missions, Home Department, and Rev. J. B. Peters, pastor at Mansfield, received by transfer since Conference last year, were presented to the Conference.

B. W. Waltman, of the Baton Rouge District, was admitted on trial into the traveling connection. J. T. Parsons, of the Alexandria District, was received as a traveling preacher from the Methodist Protestant Church.

The Bishop announced the following transfers to the Louisiana Conference: H. E. Pfost, an elder, from the North Arkansas Conference; C. F. Cady, in the Class of the Second Year; from the Texas Conference; Cleanth Brooks, an elder, from the Memphis Conference; R. H. Bamburg, an elder, from the Northwest Conference; Byron Harwell, an elder, from the North Arkansas Conference; W. C. Scott, an elder, from the Little Rock Conference.

The following were passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Second Year: P. B. McCullin, H. W. Jordan, T. F. King, A. M. Serex, E. J. Buck, J. F. Dring, G. M. Hicks, D. F. Anders, H. B. Hines, Jay Coburn, D. E. Dulaney.

The following were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the First Year: F. P. Moss, J. A. Knight, J. B. Grambling.

A. M. Serex, having been accepted by the Board of Missions for msisionary work in Europe, was elected to deacon's orders under the missionary rule of the Discipline.

A. Brulet was discontinued at his own request.

The following were passed in examination of character, and advanced to the Class of the Third Year, and elected to deacons' orders: C. K. Smith, J. L. Greenway, A. K. McClelland, E. V. Duplantis. C. E. McLean, already a deacon, was passed in examination of character and advanced to the Class of the Third Year. R. A. Bozeman was passed in examination of character, advanced to the Class of the Third Year, and, having been a local deacon four years, was elected to elder's orders. D. C. Bennett, already an elder, and C. F. Cady were passed in examination of character and continued in the Class of the Second Year.

A letter from Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League Board, a greatly beloved member of the Louisiana Conference, was read, explaining that his absence from the Conference was due to an injury received by his wife in an automobile accident. A telegram of sympathy was ordered sent to Dr. Parker.

The Bishop announced that the class for admission into full connection would be received shortly after the reading of the journal on Friday morning.

B. W. Waltman and R. L. Armstrong were elected to local deacons' orders.

At the request of the Epworth League Board, Byron Harwell was made a member of the Board in place of C. C. Weir.

Bishop E. Cottrell, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, was presented to the Conference. He spoke of the work being done in the State by his church, and asked the sympathy and help of the Louisiana Conference in building a church in Baton Rouge. A collection, amounting to $148, was taken for this purpose.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the Western Methodist Assembly at Mount Sequoyah, Ark., was presented by Briscoe Carter and, on motion, referred to the Board of Education.

Mr. J. M. Way, Associate Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, and Dr. John W. Shackford, General Secretary of the Sunday School Board, were presented to the Conference.

On nomination of Briscoe Carter, Chauncey French was elected a member of the Legal Conference in place of J. C. Foster.

Announcements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by Dr. J. W. Shackford.

Afternoon.

On account of the laying of the corner stone of the new church at Lafayette, no service was held at the church in Crowley in the afternoon. Bishop Hay and most of the members of the Conference went to Lafayette, where the corner stone was laid at 3 o'clock, the address being delivered by Dr. F. N. Parker, and the ritual service being conducted by Bishop Hay.

Evening

At 6 o'clock in the evening, the members of the Conference were the guests of the Board of Lay Activities at a banquet. T. W. Holloman, Conference Lay Leader, presided as toastmaster. A musical program was rendered, and short addresses were made by J. W. Sharp, of Mansfield, and J. M. Way, of the General Board of Lay Activities.

At 7:30 o'clock, the Board of Lay Activities held its anniversary service at the church, the address being delivered by J. M. Way.

Following the address of Mr. Way, the Board of Missions observed its anniversary, J. G. Snelling, chairman of the Board, presiding. A statement concerning the Missionary Centenary work of the Conference was made by Briscoe Carter, Conference Centenary Secretary, after which a great address on the achievements of missionary activities in China was delivered by Dr. L. D. Patterson.

Fourth Day, Saturday.

The Conference convened promptly at 9 o'clock, Bishop Hay in the chair. The devotional exercises consisted of singing, prayer by R. H. Wynn, and an address by Dr. F. N. Parker.

The minutes of yesterday's session were read and approved.

J. J. Morgan, of the American Bible Society; Edgar Cayard, president of the State Epworth League Conference; Miss Julia Reid and Miss McGowan, of the Epworth League work, were presented to the Conference.

The class for admission into full connection was called to the chancel, addressed by the Bishop, and, the Disciplinary questions having been answered, were admitted by vote of the Conference into full connection, as follows: C. K. Smith, E. V. Duplantis, C. E. McLean, R. A. Bozeman, A. K. McClelland.

On motion of H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, the name of J. T. Warlick was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

A resolution, presented by the Sunday School Board, to the effect that the Conference should not enter into official relations with the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, was adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions, pledging the hearty support of the Conference to all our missionary work, was presented. Pending the adoption of the report, Dr. J. W. Perry, Secretary of the Board of Missions, addressed the Conference. Dr. W. W. Drake took the chair at the request of the Bishop. At the conclusion of Dr. Perry's address, Bishop Hay resumed the chair.

Rev. J. J. Morgan addressed the Conference concerning the work of the American Bible Society.

Rev. John F. Foster, of the secretarial force, announced that a telegram of greeting had been received from the Baptist State Convention in session at Shreveport, and that an appropriate reply had been made.

President W. M. Bratton, of Mansfield Female College, addressed the Conference concerning the work of the college. He gave a gratifying report of the attendance, and called attention to the needs of the institution in order that it may meet the demands that are being made upon it.

At the request of the Board of Education, R. H. Wynn and R. E. Goodrich were added to the Board.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Lay Activities was read and adopted. By the adoption of this report, T. W. Holloman was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

Reports of Boards and Committees were read and adopted as follows: Budget Commission; Committee on District Conference Records; Board of Trustees of New Orleans Depository; Orphanage Board; Committee on Prison Reform; Committee on Sabbath Observance.

The report of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society was presented and ordered to record.

The report of the Committee on Evangelism was read and adopted. By this action, A. W. Turner, Louis Hoffpauir, O. H. Cline, and all the presiding elders were added to the Committee. R. A. Bozeman was recommended for appointment as Conference evangelist.

On motion, an afternoon session at 2:30 o'clock was ordered.

On motion of R. W. Vaughan, H. Wade Cudd was added to the force of the Statistical Secretary.

By the adoption of the report of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service, A. W. Turner was recommended for appointment as Legislative Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League.

Announncements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction pronounced by Briscoe Carter.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference convened promptly at 2:30 o'clock. The devotional exercises consisted of singing, and prayer by R. W. Tucker. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

Chas. W. Lahey, from the Baton Rouge District, having met all other Disciplinary requirements, was admitted on trial into the Conference under the provision requiring a two-thirds vote when certain educational standards have not been met.

Reports of Boards and Committees were read and adopted as follows: Hospital Board; Bible Society Board; Memorial Home Committee. J. G. Snelling addressed the Conference concerning the great work being done by the Memorial Home.

The Bishop announced that the following transfers had been made from the Louisiana Conference: O. W. Bradley, to the Memphis Conference; F. W. Dick, to the Northwest Conference; J. L. Evans, to the North Arkansas Conference; Roy Moore, to the Virginia Conference; A. W. Waddill, to the Little Rock Conference.

Question 42, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" was called. Homer was placed in nomination by R. W. Tucker, and New Orleans was placed in nomination by W. W. Drake. New Orleans received a majority of the votes, and on motion of R. W. Tucker the choice was made unanimous.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Education was read and adopted.

Question 21 was resumed, "Are all the preachers blameless in their lives and official administration?" The names of all those who had not previously reported were called one by one, and their characters were passed, except that the name of F. W. Dick was referred to the presiding elder of the Lake Charles District for investigation concerning certain matters.

The report of the Board of Christian Literature was read and adopted. Pending the adoption of the report, the Conference was addressed by A. M. Shaw, by the editor of the New Orleans Advocate, and by Bishop Hay. By the adoption of the report, Jno. F. Foster, C. C. Miller, and W. W. Drake were made members of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

John F. Foster, representing the Publishing Committee of the Advocate, addressed the Conference concerning the request of the Publishing Committee that the presiding elders of the patronizing Conferences be requested to give special attention to the interests of the Advocate at the second round of quarterly conferences.

R. W. Vaughan addressed the Conference concerning the work of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston. The Conference, by a rising vote, expressed its appreciation of the services of Brother Vaughan in connection with this great institution.

Reports were read and adopted as follows: Conference Treasurer; Epworth League Board; Board of Missions, Report No. 2.

On motion, a session of the Conference was appointed for 7:30 o'clock on Sunday evening.

The report of the Statistical Secretary was read. This report showed that there has been a net increase of membership during the year of 2956. The Bishop commented favorably upon the progress indicated by the report.

The following announcements were made for the Sunday services: Methodist church, 9 a.m., Love Feast, conducted by W. F. Henderson, Sr.; 11 a.m., sermon by Bishop Sam R. Hay, followed by the ordination of deacons; 3 p.m., sermon by Frank N. Parker, followed by ordination of elders.

Presbyterian church, 11 a.m., sermon by J. B. Peters.

Baptist church, 11 a.m., sermon by F. M. Freeman.

Christian church, 11 a.m., sermon by R. W. Tucker.

Announcements were made, the Doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction prononnced by Bishop Hay.

Evening.

The Epworth League Board held its anniversary at the evening hour. Preceding the Epworth League program, the Scout Executive of that district of the State presented the work of the Boy Scouts, and demonstrated briefly the work by a troop of Scouts.

The League anniversary was presided over by W. W. Holmes, chairman of the Conference Epworth League Board. Brief addresses concerning the Epworth League Assembly, held annually at Mansfield College, and concerning the work in general were made by W. W. Drake, F. J. McCoy, Alonzo Early, A. S. Lutz, H. L. Johns, J. B. Grambling, Edgar Cayard, Byron Harwell.

Fine music was rendered by a double male quartet and by A. M. Serex, who sang a solo.

Leon I. McCain made a statement concerning the building of the new church at Lafayette.

Fifth Day—Sunday.

The pulpits of the various churches were filled at 11 o'clock by visiting preachers, according to previous announcement.

After the sermon by Bishop Hay at the Methodist church, the following were ordained deacons: E. V. Duplantis, C. E. McLean, A. K. McClellan, A. M. Serex, C. K. Smith, B. W. Waltman.

After a sermon at 3 o'clock by F. N. Parker, the following were ordained elders: R. A. Bozeman, W. F. Roberts, T. W. St. John, B. D. Watson.

Evening.

Long before the hour appointed for the session of the Conference, the church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Bishop Hay took the chair. The devotional exercises consisted of singing, and prayer led by H. T. Carley. The minutes of the preceding session were read and approved.

The Bishop announced the transfer of Samuel J. Starkey, an elder, from the North Arkansas Conference to the Louisiana Conference.

The Bishop announced the names of those who had been ordained deacons and elders during the day.

The reports of the Board of Church Extension and of the Committee on Conference Relations were read and adopted.

The report of the Board of Finance was read, amended by the omission of that section instructing the editor of the Minutes to use the figures of the General Board of Finance instead of those reported by the Statistical Secretary of the Conference, and adopted.

Resolutions of thanks to the good people of Crowley and to all others concerned in making the Conference such a delightful occasion were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. Resolutions of appreciation of the services of the Secretary, R. H. Harper, and of F. N. Parker for his addresses, were also unanimously adopted.

R. H. Wynn called attention to the critical illness of Rev. A. J. Bonnett in a local sanitarium and suggested that the Conference express its sympathy in a material way. A collection was taken for the purpose of helping meet the necessary expenses of his illness, and the sum of $226 was realized.

Briscoe Carter, Centenary Secretary, addressed the Conference, calling attention to the fact that an adjustment would be made with all churches during the year by which pledges that manifestly cannot be collected would be deducted from their quotas. Bishop Hay also addressed the Conference concerning the collection of Centenary pledges.

The minutes of the evening session were read and approved, a hymn was sung, the appointments were read, and the Conference adjourned sine die with the Doxology and the benediction pronounced by Bishop Hay.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. H. W. Rickey and Rev. L. P. Moreland were called home during Conference to officiate at funerals.

* * *

Rev. D. B. Boddie was delayed in reaching the Conference on account of a death of a near relative. The Conference expressed its sympathy for his in his sorrow.

* * *

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, former Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Conference, was a visitor at the Conference, where he was cordially greeted by his many friends.

* * *

Rev. F. P. Moss had the sympathy of the Conference in the death of his mother, which occurred early in the session. He left at once for Georgia that he might be present at the funeral.

* * *

When all the lay delegates from the Baton Rouge District answered to their names at the first roll call the unusual happening was greeted with applause, and the Bishop commented on the incident.

* * *

The addresses of Dr. F. N. Parker at the morning devotional hour and in the afternoons were great blessings to the Conference. Dr. Parker is easily one of the foremost expository preachers of the church.

* * *

An interesting event during Conference was the baptism of Jack Bascom and Esther Marie, children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Brooks, on Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. J. Gearheard officiating.

* * *

Bishop Hay expressed himself as opposed to the budget system so far as the benevolences are concerned, his view being that it is peculiarly the duty and privilege of the pastor to secure these assessments.

* * *

The visit of Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, though brief, was a great pleasure to the Conference. Louisiana claims Bishop Dobbs as at least a part of her own, since his wife is a Louisianian, her home having been at Arcadia, La.

* * *

The editor of the Advocate was most delightfully entertained in the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Freeland, prominent and devout members of the Presbyterian church. The hospitality of the home was beautiful and cordial.

* * *

With his return this year, Rev. F. J. McCoy begins his eighth year as pastor at Houma, where he has done a magnificent work in the development of the French field. The progress of Methadism has been remarkable in this difficult field.

* * *

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, was a welcome visitor to the Conference. He came to present certain matters to the Board of Education concerning the Seashore Camp Ground and School.

* * *

It was a cause of rejoicing that not a preacher or preacher's wife had died during the year. Kindly mention was made of the death of Rev. E. N. Evans, formerly a member of the Conference, who had retired to the local ranks several years ago.

* * *

Dr. R. H. Wynn called attention to the fact that the presiding bishop, the Conference secretary, the editor of the Advocate, and four presiding elders are sons of preachers. The representative of the Times-Picayune, Mr. H. H. Ahrens, is also the son of a preacher.

* * *

An unusual occurrance was the completion of all the business of the session of the first day ten minutes before the time set for adjournment. In commenting upon this, the Bishop said that he could complete the business of any Conference he had ever seen within two days if all the committees would have their reports ready when called for.

* * *

We have never seen a Conference whose sessions were more largely attended by the local public than the one at Crowley. The house was full at practically every service, the afternoon and evening services being especially well attended. On Sunday evening, all available space was occupied an hour before the time appointed for beginning.

* * *

Never was a Louisiana Conference more hospitably entertained than this one was by the good people of Crowley. All homes were thrown open to the guests of the occasion, Jews and Catholics joining in the general welcome. Dr. Alonzo Early, the pastor, and his capable committees were constantly "on the job." Crowley is a beautiful little city, and the Conference is always delighted to hold its sessions there.

* * *

The opening service of the Conference on Tuesday evening was presided over by Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District. The address of the evening was delivered by Dr. W. L. Duren, of the Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. It was an interesting and profitable description of his recent trip through the Holy Land.

* * *

The brethren greatly regretted the absence of Dr. F. S. Parker, who was kept at home on account of a recent serious automobile accident to his wife. This was the second time Dr. Parker had missed a meeting of the Conference, the other being when he was abroad in the performance of his official duties at the time of meeting. A telegram of sympathy and greeting was ordered sent him.

* * *

In his address to the Conference concerning Centenary College, President Sexton made the interesting statement that the college has the record of every meeting of the board of trustees from 1825 to the present. When those who had attended Centenary College were requested to stand, the result showed that a large number of the members of the Conference have been students in this historic institution.

* * *

It was a great privilege of many members of the Conference to attend the laying of the corner stone of the magnificent new church at Lafayette on Friday afternoon. Enough automobiles were provided for the trip to carry all who could go; in fact, there were more than enough. Rev. Leon I. McCain is indefatigable in his efforts to bring to a happy consummation this enterprise of a great Protestant church in a city that is predominantly Roman Catholic. It is an evidence of good feeling between the Protestants and Catholics in Lafayette that many of the latter have contributed liberally to the building fund.

* * *

The manager of the Advocate was delightfully entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Embry. He had as fellow guests Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr., Rev. W. E. Akin, Rev. C. F. Sheppard, and Brother Sharp of Mansfield.

* * *

Rev. H. T. Young, who enters upon the work of a general evangelist by appointment of the Bishop, has served seventeen years in the ministry. In an announcement printed in last week's Advocate it was stated that "more than 30,000 people had accepted Christ under his ministry." We are advised that the number should have been stated as 30,000, instead of 3000.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Those who have not sent in their Prayer List, I would appreciate it if you would let me have it right away. The response we have had to those we have mailed out has been very fine indeed.

In a few days you will receive a card showing the standing of the Centenary in each church on your charge. If there is any error please notify us. You will notice on the last line of the card, the balance due on the amount requested from the church by January 1, 1925, and I trust you will use your very best efforts to get this amount paid before the first of the year.

I trust everything goes well with you, and assuring you of my every kind wish, I am,

Yours for Service,

W. D. HAWKINS

Field Secretary Treasurer.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: I trust you will push the Centenary collections from now until the first of January, in order that we may collect enough money to do our part towards the relief of our missionary enterprises; and as soon as I can, I want to have the pleasure of meeting you and assisting in the work in every way possible. It is my purpose to be a co-worker with you and do what I can toward the advancement of the missionary interests of our church, especially through the collection of the unpaid Centenary pledges. I covet your hearty co-operation in this work.

It will be my plan to adjust the churches as rapidly as possible, and, in the meantime, I trust you will push the collections, and either deposit in the bank and send me duplicate deposit slip, with the name of your church and charge written on it, or if you have been in the habit of sending direct to the Centenary treasurer, you may mail it to me, and receipt will be issued for it.

I will mail the pastors in a few days a statement of the standing of their charges in the Centenary, as shown by the records of the former treasurer. Should there be any error either in the name of the treasurer or the amount pledged and paid, I would be glad to have you take it up with me.

Anticipating with pleasure meeting you all during this Conference year, and assuring you of my every kind wish, I am,

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS.

A THOUGHT GETS NOWHERE UNTIL IT IS FASTENED TO SOMETHING—THINK ABOUT YOUR QUOTA.

Rambling thinking is a poor means of definite accomplishment. If you want to reach a definite goal with any task, you must fasten your thought persistently to the thing you want to do. In the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, the first year's portion of total quotas will not be raised until the mind works fixedly on plans to collect them. At this writing (Nov. 8, 1924) considerably more than $1,000,000 has actually been paid to the Board of Finance on these quotas. Evidently thousands of preachers throughout the church have been doing something more than mere rambling thinking on the subject! Think your plan until it is as clear to you as the letters of the English alphabet, and then follow your mental picture with unfailing persistence. Whoever does this is sure to pay in full.

LITTLE OLD STORY-BOOK TOWN.

By Constance I. Davies.

How dear to the hearts of the children all
Is little old Story-Book Town,
With its giants and fairies and hobgoblins small
And heroes of old renown!

Here Jill and her brother still scramble uphill,
And both with their pail tumble down;
The greedy Jack Horner is eating pie still
In little old Story-Book Town.

The Spider still frightens Miss Muffet away
When near her he dares to sit down;
And Jack after giants climbs Beanstalks all day
In little old Story-Book Town.

The little Old Woman who lives in a Shoe
Still wears a most worrying frown;
With so many children, what else can she do
But spank them in Story-Book Town?

Oh, who would not live where the moon is green cheese,
In a cottage of gingerbread brown,
Where candy and sugar-plums grow on the trees,
In little old Story-Book Town?

CHINESE ANIMALS.

By R. D. Van Hoosier.

Chinese horses are not numerous and are ill-fed and poorly cared for. They are of a poor and stunted breed. Donkeys are most commonly used for riding and for drawing vehicles. Dromedaries are used as beasts of burden, particularly in the north. The slate-colored buffalo (water-buffalo) is used in plowing and in the wet rice fields. The use of milk is a rare thing; Chinese do not like it. Cattle improvement has never been encouraged, consequently, cows are scarce and of inferior variety. The pig has been given the best care of all the domestic animals, and is given many privileges. We have made many importations of this stock into our own country. Chinese sheep and goats are large and are found in great numbers. There is really only one pure type of dog. It is about the size of our Spaniel, pale yellow, reddish-brown, or even black; it has coarse, bristly hair; the head is much like the head of a fox—peaked with sharp upright ears. This dog, frequently imported to America as the "Ming" or "Chow" dog is a good watch-dog, clever and affectionate to its master only.

Domestic fowls are found in great numbers, and, with mutton, form the staple meat food. The wild fowl are plentiful, also. Immense flocks of wild geese and ducks are on the wing at all seasons. Sparrows, thrushes, larks and swallows are common. Ring doves and quail are common; the latter birds are trained to fight. A crow peculiar to China has a white ring around its neck. The Chinese rat attains to an unusual size, and is said to be eaten by some of the lowest orders of natives.

Birds of prey and scavangers are present in vast numbers. There are, besides, common insects, scorpions, lizards and centipedes—also huge spiders that destroy some of the smaller birds. The butterflies are large and strikingly brilliant.—Our Dumb Animals.

THE LOCKET IN THE POCKET.

Mary Alice had come to spend two weeks with her little cousin Cornelia on the farm. Oh, such fun as they had! Especially Mary Alice, for never before had she romped the livelong day in the beautiful outdoors. She grew as brown as a berry and slept like a top at night. As for chubby little Cornelia, never before had she had such a happy time. Think of having a playmate all day long and some one to sleep with and hug up at night!

"I hope it doesn't rain a single teeny tiny drop the whole time I am here," said Mary Alice one day as she came in from picking berries.

"See here, Mary Alice," spoke up Uncle John. "Don't you go to making any such wishes, as badly as the crops need a drink of water."

One morning before she opened her blue eyes Mary Alice heard a pittter-patter, plitter-patter on the tin roof. In two winks she hopped out of bed and ran to the window and saw that the rain was coming down in a torrent.

"Rain, rain, go away!" she cried.

But Cornelia, who was truly a farmer's daughter, clapped her hands and cried, "Oh, goody! Now father's corn will grow."

Poor Mary Alice did not share Cornelia's enthusiasm, and at breakfast she presented a woful face.

"I tell you what," said Aunt Flora, "suppose you children go up in the attic and play this morning. Mary Alice, your mamma and I loved to play up there on rainy days."

"That will be jimsy," cried Cornelia, hopping up and down. "May we dress up in those funny clothes in the old green chest?"

"Yes, indeed," answered her mother.

So Mary Alice's countenance gradually changed, and after they had tidied their room they set off in hilarious spirits for the attic. Such quaint-looking old dresses, festooned and ruffled and berib-boned, as they found in that old green chest! And what a happy time they had dressing up and playing "ladies" and "social."

About the middle of the morning Aunt Flora's voice came from the foot of the stairs, "O children come down. Hot cookies and milk for a little party!"

"Goody!" cried Cornelia delightedly.

"Goody, goody!" cried little Mary Alice.

There was a shuffling to get out of the funny dresses. Of a sudden while Mary Alice was struggling with her beruffled dress her hand went into a pocket.

"Cornelia!" she exclaimed. "Here's a deep pocket—and, my goodness, there's something in it!"

"Mother," cried Cornelia, running down the steps, "Mary Alice has found a pocket in the dress she has on, and she says there's something in it."

Mary Alice, still wearing the beruffled dress, ran down beside Cornelia.

"Aunt Flora! Aunt Flora!" she cried. "Do please look; it's a good locket—I found it in the pocket."

"Mary Alice!" exclaimed Aunt Flora, reaching for the gold locket. "Why, you've found the gold locket your mother lost when she was a little girl. It's just too lovely that you should have found it. You see, your grandmother gave us each a locket, and your mother lost hers. Our names were engraved on them, here is Mary Alice, your mother's name. See it, child?"

Mary Alice gave a little squeal of delight and clapped her hands and cried, "My name, too!"

"Of course," laughed her aunt.

"But, Aunt Flora," began Mary Alice "how do you suppose it ever got in the pocket of this funny old dress?"

Aunt Flora looked down at the little figure in the quaint dress, and then of a sudden a light darted over her face. "Child, I know!" she cried softly. "Why, it seems like yesterday, your mother and I were playing in the attic, just as you and Cornelia were playing there to-day, and I suppose your mother was afraid she might lose the locket, and she took it off and slipped it into the pocket of this dress and never remembered a thing about it after that."

Uncle John poked his head in the door and cried in his funny way: "What's this? Is Mary Alice going to a masquerade party?"

The little girls just shouted with laughter. Then Mary Alice told him all about the locket in the pocket, and Uncle John said, "Ho, now, you were the little person who wished it wouldn't rain; and if it hadn't rained you wouldn't have gone to the attic to play."

"And then I shouldn't have found the locket in the pocket," said Mary Alice softly as she fondled the locket at her neck.—Linda Stevens Almond, in the Youth's Companion.

Does my life please God?
Is there any one I can forgive?
Am I studying my Bible daily?
Am I enjoying my Christian life?
Have I ever won a soul to Christ?
How much time do I spend in prayer?
Am I trying to bring my friends to Christ?
Have I ever had a direct answer to prayer?
Is there anything I cannot give up for Christ?
Just where am I making my greatest mistake?
Am I doing anything I would condemn in others?
How does my life look to those who are not Christians?
Is the world being made better or worse by my living in it?
Have I ever tried giving one-tenth of my income to the Lord?—Canadian Churchman.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Union Theological Seminary, New York, has begun a campaign to raise $4,000,000 for additional buildings and endowment.

Dr. R. H. Harper is entering upon his sixth year as pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city. He has wrought a great work during these years.

Rev. G. B. Love has been kindly received on his new charge, Mooresville, Miss., and has entered upon his work hopefully.

Dr. Theodore Copeland has recently held a meeting in Bristow, Okla., in which there were 300 additions to the membership of the churches of the city.

Dr. W. L. Duren was returned for the fifth year to Rayne Memorial, New Orleans. His administration has been marked by substantial gains in all departments of the work.

Rev. H. E. Carter is entering hopefully upon another year's work at Black Hawk, Miss. On Friday evening, Nov. 14, he received a great "pounding" as an expression of love on the part of his people.

The Annie Demoss Missionary Auxiliary of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., passed resolutions expressing high appreciation of the leadership of Rev. Robt. Selby during his pastorate at that church.

The "Centenary Alumnus," a publication of, for, and by the alumni of Centenary College, will appear shortly. It is intended to strengthen the ties between the graduates and former students of this historic institution and their Alma Mater.

Rev. J. F. Campbell made his home in Wiggins, Miss., last year while doing work of a Conference evangelist. He and his family were held in highest esteem, and they will be missed by the entire community. Brother Campbell goes to Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian.

Miss Lillian Hudson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hudson, of Sumrall, Miss., and Mr. Otis F. Kimmons, a young business man of Hattiesburg, Miss., were married in the Methodist church at Sumrall on Nov. 16, Rev. W. F. Yarbrough, of Hattiesburg, officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

The fourth quarterly conference of the church at Franklinton, La., passed resolutions highly commendatory of the services of Rev. L. W. Cain, who served the church with great acceptability and success for four years. The appointment of Brother Cain to Parker Memorial makes the only change in the pastorate in New Orleans.

Both pastor and people are delighted with the return of Rev. W. H. Lane as pastor to Purvis, Miss. Brother Lane and his wife were both taken ill shortly after his return from Conference; Brother Lane is now able to be about his work, but his wife is still under the care of the physician.

Rev. J. S. Purcell has been most cordially received for another year on the Wesson charge, Mississippi Conference. On Friday evening, Nov. 14, the congregations from Wesson and Beauregard went to the parsonage almost en masse with many and varied gifts for the pastor and his family, and many good wishes for the new Conference year.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, appointed Conference evangelist at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, will make his home at Laurel, Miss., where his address will be P. O. Box 446. Brother Jones has proved himself effective in evangelistic work, and those desiring his services should address him at the above address. He began a meeting with Rev. E. J. Coker, at Deemer, Miss., last Sunday, to continue two weeks.

This offer applies to NEW subscriptions only. Cash must accompany order.

This sad news comes from Rev. J. R. Jones: "Mrs. P. H. Howse, wife of Rev. P. H. Howse, of Avera, Miss., passed to her final reward, Monday, the 17th inst., and was buried from the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., on the 19th. Revs. Robt. Selby, L. Carley, J. B. Cain, Claude P. Jones, T. A. Ferguson, and myself taking part in the burial service." The Advocate joins their many friends in extending sincere sympathy to Brother Howse and children in this hour of sorrow.

Rev. Earl B. Moll, Mississippi Conference evangelist, requests us to call attention to the fact that his address now is Jackson, Miss., Box 175, instead of Meridian, Miss., as formerly. He is now arranging his engagements for the next conference year, and would be glad to hear from any of the brethren who may wish his services, even though it be later in the year. Brother Moll has been active in the evangelistic field, and his labors have been greatly blessed.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough and family were given a very warm welcome by his congregation at Wiggins, Miss., on his return from Conference. Representatives from almost every home of the membership gathered at the parsonage on a recent Monday evening to express their pleasure and to spend a social hour. Refreshments were served by the ladies, and many material remembrances were left as tokens of goodwill and affection. At the close of the hour, Rev. J. F. Campbell led in prayer for God's blessing upon pastor and congregation. Brother Sharbrough is beginning his fiftieth year in the active ministry, having joined the Conference at Canton forty-nine years ago. Of those joining the Conference with him, only Dr. H. Walter Featherstun is left

Brother Sharbrough spent twenty-eight years in California and Arizona otherwise his name would appear at the head of the list in the Minutes of those still on the effective list. The Advocate expresses the hope that the church may be the happiest and best of all the years of this great ministry.

ATTENTION!

PASTORS AND PRESIDING ELDERS!

The Harmonizing Committee provided by the General Conference has fixed the period,

October 15 to January 15,

for the Christian Education Movement.

This committee says: "During the period of special emphasis of any Board or Commission, the other Boards or Commissions will carry on in a normal way the ordinary processes of cultivation and collections, without calling upon the general organizations and public agencies of the church."

IMPORTANT NOTICE—CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

Brethren of the patronizing Conferences who have changed appointments will please notify us at once that we may make corrections on our mailing list. In writing, please give the old address as well as the new.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

The Centenary has enabled our church to occupy many important cities in the West such as Glendale, California, Tucson and Bisbee, Arizona, Las Vegas and Clayton, New Mexico.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us one or more subscriptions recently: Rev. C. W. Wade, Pontotoc, Miss., 2; Mrs. G. M. Shaw, Lumberton, Miss., 2; Rev. L. Carley, Ellisville, Miss., 2; Rev. H. E. Carter, Black Hawk, Miss., 8.

To pursue joy is to lose it. The only way to get it is to follow steadily the path of duty, without thinking of joy and then like sleep it comes most surely unsought, and we, living in the way, the angel of God bright-haired joy is sure to meet us.

A. Maclaren

The Centenary is solving the problem of the country church by supplying a number of "demonstration charges" and "demonstration districts" in various parts of the church and in them working out practical country programs.

A total of $131,000 of Centenary money to date has been expended in work among foreign-speaking people or people of foreign birth in the United States.

G. W. HODGES was a son of J. H. and E. M. Hodges, also a brother of the Rev. Sam Hodges, who died of yellow fever some years ago, in the Mississippi Conference. His death was a surprise to all, though last year he was an invalid, being in the hospital three times and at Brown's Wells once, and the remaining part of the year in bed at home, bearing all this affliction with the patience of Job. He always greeted one with a smile, and said to me often, "Prayer is the greatest of blessings to me." After a partial recovery, he laid down his crutches and took up business again, but in performing his duties he was stricken again and soon passed away. A good man is gone. He leaves a wife (who was Miss Alice Carruth), father, two sisters, Mrs. Clara Lucas and Mrs. Annie Latham; mother, brother, and other kin to mourn his loss. May the Lord bless and comfort the sorrowing ones.

His pastor,

J. S. RUTLEDGE.

Clinton, La.

The two dates, April 11, 1851, and Nov. 5, 1924, mark the temporal life of MRS. ELIZABETH WINDHAM (nee Thompson), but the influence of her life cannot be measured by days and years. From girlhood she had been a member of the Methodist church. In early life she was married to Mr. Frank Windham, who preceded her to the grave by several years. Sister Windham was indeed a choice spirit. Her love for God and his church was beautiful. Her pastors had no better friend. For many months she had been practically an invalid, but her sufferings only strengthened her faith in God and sweetened her experience in Christ. It was a source of constant regret that she could no longer attend the services of the sanctuary. She was always glad when her pastor came to the home, and always wanted him to read the Scripture and pray. Hers was a victorious life. When she stood on the border line and realized that the time of crossing was at hand, she spoke calmly about it, and said: "I just wanted you to know that it is all right." Tender, loving hands ministered to her in her sufferings as only love can. One daughter, Mrs. Taylor Cooper, of Morton, with whom she made her home, and from which home she passed to her heavenly home, and five sons, together with a host of relatives and friends, are made sad by her going, but the sorrow is sweetened by the assurance that she has entered into eternal blessedness. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer to us since she has gone. May God help all who grieve for her to be as ready as she when the summons comes.

A LETTER FROM A MISSISSIPPI WOMAN.

Alpine, Tex., Nov. 5, 1924.

Dear Little Sister: Your letter received and read with pleasure. I seem not to have any time for letter writing any more. The days are so full. I haven't any help, so I don't find time to stop in the mornings. It gets daylight here about an hour later than with you, so it certainly makes the mornings short. I have to rush to get the children off to school. Fortunately school does not open till a quarter of 9.

They have school on Saturdays instead of Mondays, and get home at 3:30. We went to Fort Davis last Monday, and I wish you could have been with us. The drive was beautiful. The road wound around the mountains, and the immense rocks looked as if they were ready to topple on our heads. John Wright pretended to be very much afraid, and kept saying: 'I don't like it. I want to go home." He is getting to be a perfect monkey—always up to some trick or joke. He calls Caroline, "Hick," and calls me, "Mubby." He is all the time saying, "My poor little Mubby," whenever he thinks anything hurts or bothers me.

Alpine is almost surrounded by mountains, but they haven't a tree or shrub on them. They are bare of everything but rocks.

We had such a nice piece of venison sent us Sunday—a huge piece of the hind quarter. It was so fat and tender. How I wished I could share some with you. I didn't tell you about what we went to Fort Davis for. There is a wonderful apple orchard there, and we went over to get some apples. They have an immense orchard and ship the fruit by the carloads. It was certainly a sight. The apples had all been gathered, so we did not get to see the fruit on the trees. They gave us all we could eat and some fresh cider to drink. We bought a box and then got a sack nearly full of smaller apples that were not culled for a dollar. It was a twenty-five-mile drive, but the roads were good and we drove it in a little time.

There is a Mexican village over there made entirely of adobe houses. It certainly looked odd. The Catholic church was of adobe, too. The night we spent in Fort Stockton we stayed in an adobe hotel. Quite a lot of the houses here are made of adobe, too. One lady said something to me about her home being adobe, and Ellis said: "Oh, I wouldn't like to live in a mud house," she laughed, and said: "Why, young man, wouldn't you like to live in a mud house? I live in one." He said: "I'd be afraid it would rain and the mud would all melt down on my head." She asked him how long he had been living here, and when I told her a week, she said: ."Well, young man, you'll be grown before you ever see it rain here, and that is why we can live in mud houses."

John is going to El Paso to-day to the district steward's meeting. It is about two hundred or more miles, so the board of stewards here voted to pay his expenses over there. The train he goes on is an entire Pullman train, and carries no day coaches at all.

Halloween night everything here went "spooking"—they took in the town. It was quite a bit like the carnival. Five little spooks came to call on us; they marched around the center table two or three times and departed without a word.

I hope papa will have a good time at Conference—guess he is there now. I found a letter locked in the desk here from him after we had been here a week. The preacher had left the desk locked, and nobody had a key. We finally had to get a man to come and pick the lock.

Lots of love from all. As ever, your loving sis,

MABEL.

(Wife of Rev. J. W. Chisholm, and daughter of Rev. C. H. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference).

AMERICA ENVIED RATHER THAN LOVED.

There is no doubt about it, America is the world's El Dorado once more. If her people appear sometimes to show a trace of unconscious arrogance, it may easily be pardoned, human nature being what it is. But the outer world may also be pardoned, if the same concession be made to the outer frailty of our human judgments, if it feels a certain amount of irritation. America ought to know, and one's real friendship for her should not make us shirk the truth, that Europe as a whole thinks that America suffered comparatively little in what was a world-tragedy, and has not yet borne her full share in the toils and sacrifices of reconstruction. She is envied rather than loved. Her magnificent charities are admitted, but can never be a substitute for her co-operation. It is unfortunate that her restricted immigration laws and her enhanced tariffs synchronize with the form of an old woman, sitting on the financial leadership of the world. —Rev. F. W. Norwood.

HOPE FOR THE REST OF US.

We are hearing much to-day about the terrible importance of young people. We are all impressed by that importance, but the attitude adopted today, that it is impossible to do anything with grown-up people, is very discouraging. It is a gospel of despair. If you cannot teach grown-up people anything, how are you going to get at the child who is in their hands and so much under their influence?—Maude A. Royden.

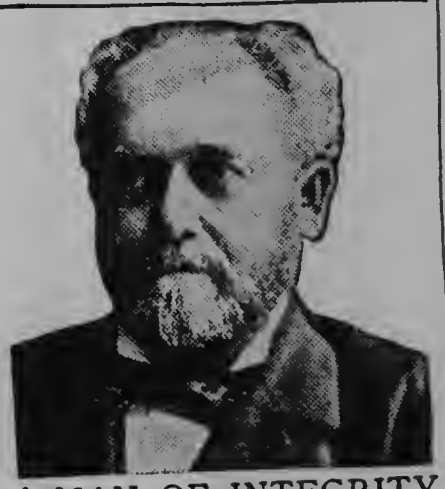
FROM REV. A. S. OLIVER.

Dear Brother Carley: We have had a great time since our return from Conference. Have been visiting the membership and found quite a number of them sick. We have tried to leave a ray of sunshine, a word of cheer and our prayers with them.

We had two good services yesterday. Six were received into the church at the 11 o'clock service, and four at the evening service, making seventeen received since Annual Conference.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralise this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralise the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.



A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

Our Sunday school is steadily increasing. The attendance yesterday was the largest in the history of this church; yet there are many others who should be here, and we are looking for them to come. We are praying and believing God for the greatest ingathering of souls this year, of any year, since we have been in the Conference.

PASTOR AND WIFE ARE THANKFUL.

Flock's Appreciation Was "Pounded" Into Them Tuesday Night, Nov. 11.

We, as pastor and wife of La Branch Street Church, have much to be thankful for.

In looking over our past year's work, we can see that it has been attended with a degree of success—not a perfect success, as we should like to have seen it, but God has smiled upon the honest efforts of honest hearts, and assures us that he will be with us even unto the end.

We are now back on the job of beginning another year's work for our God and our King.

We have before us a "brand new" year without a blot or blemish. Help us, oh God, to start right, to keep right, that we may hear "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

I don't think we have ever in our fourteen years in the ministry received such a hearty welcome "back home" from the people whom we have served. It makes us feel so humble and unworthy of all these blessings and of being a representative of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Our prayer has ever been: "Lord help us to be worthy of the vocation whereunto thou hast called us."

Of course, the news had reached the people that all the pastors were returned to their respective places. Some were glad; others, possibly feeling that a mistake had been made. Such is human nature.

The ladies of our church were awfully kind and thoughtful, as several met at the parsonage to fix dinner for their new pastor. Others prepared dishes and brought them in; so we found a dinner fit for a king ready and waiting for us. Boiled ham, salad, fried chicken, rice and gravy, apple pies, chocolate pies, lemon pies, and everything else needed to make up a feast for a hungry man and his wife.

Many of our people phoned us that they were glad we were returned to them. And I assure you they proved it by many of them coming to see us Tuesday night, with Brother R. R. Jones and his wife in the forefront. These people had loaded a truck full of groceries and brought to the parsonage. My! My! Such a pounding! It was wonderful. Brother Wells, you would think we were going to open up a grocery store if you could have seen it all.

Brother Jones made such a sweet talk and prayed, and Oliver prayed and cried. So we felt that God was here and that it was good for us to be here.

We are so happy and thank God that we came this way, and we say God's blessings upon our town and that our lives may be such that McComb City may be better by us having lived in it.

Dear Friends:

I want to tell you, as well as thank you, for what your preparation has done for my baby. He was a little, cross, crying baby, awfully constipated all the time, when I started to give it to him. But now he is a big, fat baby, and I cannot speak too highly of your preparation.

I know there is nothing that can come up to Mrs. Winslow's Syrup for a baby and I feel that it was a God-sent blessing to me. I will tell any mother what it has done for my baby.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday School Board is asking all the Sunday schools of the Conference to observe November 30 as Training Day. On this day it is expected that the superintendent will secure a list of all the teachers who have read one or more approved books during the year and have taken one or more courses for credit, to make public the work that has been done by the teachers, to enlist them anew in training work, and to give the offering of the school for district training schools. If no offering is taken, no district training school can be held; if every school takes this offering and sends it to the treasurer of the Sunday School Board we can hold one or more schools in the district. You know that the Conference passed a resolution to this effect and every preacher and presiding elder are heartily in favor of this plan. The teachers give their services to the church, and the church is willing to provide these schools for the teachers. Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., is the man to whom the report of Training Day and the offering should be sent. To neglect this matter is neglecting your own best interests.

A few of the preachers have sent for literature to make the survey of their charges, and after making the survey they are going to use the information they get to help them increase the enrollment of their schools. It is said that our State has 229,734 illiterates. It is further said that eleven counties in Mississippi have more than 25 per cent illiteracy. The most illiterate county in the State is Tunica, 45.3 per cent. The least illiterate county in the state is Pontotoc, 5.1 per cent. I do not say that these figures are correct. We have got to prove their inaccuracy by making careful surveys. One thing I know we have more religious ignorance than we are aware of. It is sad not to know how to read and write, but infinitely sadder not to know God. We must do more intelligent and effective work to save the present generation than was done to save the past generation. We have one hundred men in the North Mississippi Conference who are willing to do this work of the church, but these good men are procrastinating. Write for survey literature today.

The Centenary has enlisted 5,000 life service volunteers, and 750 of these are now at work at home or abroad.

Texas Lady Says Her Family Has Been Taking Thedford's Black-Draught, When Needed, for Many Years.

Alto, Texas.—"We inherited the use of Black-Draught in our family," says Mrs. Mary Shuptrine, who lives near here on R. F. D. 2. "My grandmother was an old woman when she died about ten years ago, and she had been using it literally ever since I can remember. She gave it to her children and grandchildren for biliousness and stomach complaints, so when I went to housekeeping we just naturally used it, too.

"I give it to my children for a purgative whenever they need one, and we are never without it. Made into tea, it surely is fine. It's the best home remedy for headache and constipation I know of."

During over 80 years of its continued popularity, Black-Draught has become the standard liver medicine in many thousands of homes, where it has been found of great benefit in the treatment of constipation, biliousness, indigestion and other common liver, stomach and bowel complaints. Ten million packages of Black-Draught are now sold a year, as more and more people are learning of the value of this well-known remedy.

Insist on Thedford's, the only genuine Black-Draught powdered liver medicine. At all dealers. NC-154

The district stewards are called to meet at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, at 11 o'clock, Dec. 2, 1924. I have addressed a personal letter to each of the stewards, urging them to be present at this very important meeting. The duty of the district stewards is to properly distribute the assessments to the charges of the district, and they should be present to attend to this important work.

I have also asked the pastors, by special letter, to attend a meeting at the same time and place for the purpose of discussing policies for the year. The three topics to be discussed are: Early Collections; Better and More Effective Organization; Pastor-Evangelism. Let every man be in his place for the greatest service possible.

JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD

Often Prevented by Female Trouble

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brings Joy to Homes by Removing Cause of Trouble

Brooklyn, N.Y.,—"I was working after I got married and the young lady who worked next to me asked me if I had any intentions of having a child. I told her I would be the happiest woman on earth if I could become a mother, but I always had terrible cramps, backaches and headaches. She then told me of a woman she knows who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the same troubles and it helped her greatly. I took about a half bottle and found that the following month I did not suffer any pain, so I kept on taking it. I have a wonderful baby boy six months old and he is as strong and fat as any one could wish a baby to be. I still take the Vegetable Compound regularly because I have looked fine all the time and felt fine and my mother told me that was the reason. I will be glad to have you publish my testimonial with my name and address." — Mrs. EDWARD WERBECK, 1824 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Free From Old Trouble

Auburn, Maine.—"I suffered with inward weakness for ten years and had doctored all this long time but never got any help. One day I saw my sister and she told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I went and got me a bottle of it. I took two bottles and a half and I was just as free from my old troubles as I could be. I had only one child and I was afraid that I could never have any more, for I had been told that I never could have a living child for I was not strong enough to carry one. But they were mistaken and I had a nice baby boy and now I have five children. I can't praise your medicine enough. My youngest sister has taken it, too, and praises it." — Mrs. G. L. WISWELL, 43 Mechanics Row, Auburn, Maine.

These cases are similar to many others reported to us. It is well for women to carefully consider such statements and to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It may bring great joy to your home.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a medicine for women.

For sale by druggists everywhere.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

White Gift for Wesley House, Houma.

As the Christmas season approaches, and we plan gifts for our loved ones, it would not be Christmas if our giving stopped there. There would not be much joy in our lives, nor could we give much joy with our gifts, if we did not include those outside the circle of personal friends. The Christ-child came to bring cheer and gladness to mankind. We want to get the real spirit of giving. Give because we love—because "he freely gave." Let us get above the thought of selfish giving.

This year the women of Louisiana are going to have the rare privilege of making a White Gift to our own work in Houma. This splendid work is very much in need of an electric washing machine and an electric ironer. With these two very necessary articles for the laundry installed, the work could be accomplished much more economically. They together will cost $200 or $250. We are sure each auxiliary wants a part in this gift. We want it to be a real White Gift from the women of Louisiana. Individuals caring to contribute may do so also.

Send all donations to our Conference Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. H. L. Baker, Plattenville, La.

Our Plunkett Family.

One Sunday morning, one of the members of our Missionay Society reported that there was a family in the community who needed attention. She was asked to investigate the case and report at the meeting the next day. She reported the condition deplorable! After the meeting a committee of four and the president drove down to see in what way we could help. No pen can describe the picture! Want in the extreme. At the back of a little negro cabin there was the form of an old woman, sitting on a bucket. She was in rags. Her worn shoes were tied on her feet with strings. She was making a cup of coffee in an old bucket that sat on three empty tomato cans.

She invited us into the cabin, where we found an old mattress and two ragged quilts in one corner of the room on the floor. On the wall were two worn-out old coats. In the kitchen, all that we could see in the shape of food was some crackers in a box.

This is the story she related: The husband had lain sick for five years. Finally he died, but during his illness the oldest son died. Now the family consisted of four children—two boys, 17 and 11, and two girls, 15 and 13, with the mother. They all had a starved, worn look, and were so ragged and dirty.

After the father's death they tried to do farming, but everything failed. Finally the man to whom they still owed but three payments on their home took it, leaving them homeless.

She brought tears to our eyes as she described the scene of their leaving home, endeavoring to find work and food. They gave their beds and furniture for a wagon and horse, and other household effects for groceries. They drove for days and weeks seeking employment, but no one seemed to need them. Being without provisions, they camped about a mile and a half below our town, and while there some one stole their horse, leaving them with nothing but the wagon.

The man who keeps the public highway came by, and the mother told her story. He took the family to the negro cabin where we found them.

That was a few months ago, but the present picture is quite different to what has already been described. Now a house rented by the Missionary Society, with the rent for four months paid. Two bedrooms furnished comfortably. A kitchen with all that is necessary in it. The older boy has a job at the sawmill, receiving two dollars and twenty-five cents a day. The mother is janitor of the Methodist church, with a monthly wage. The three younger children are in school, and all the family are members of the Sunday school. They attend the League services regularly. The mother and older daughter have joined the church. The younger daughter, a curly-haired brunette, was not with the mother when the ladies first called. The afternoon before that a man had stopped in front of their house to do some work on his car. The mother, in her anxiety for work, told her deplorable condition to the man, who immediately offered to take the younger girl. Not having but a moment to consider the offer, the mother agreed to let her go for three dollars a week. Paying her in advance, he took the girl with him. The mother was asked if she knew anything about the man. She did not, but thought that the hungry child would at least get Brilliant 300 Candle Power Light Turns Night into Day.

A new home lamp which makes its own fuel, gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights and costs only one cent a night is the latest achievement of Mr. W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. According to experts the new lamp literally "Turns night into day." It has no wick or chimney and makes no smoke nor odor.

It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comforts of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial or even give one free to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. One active agent in each community can make $50 to $100 weekly. Write for full particulars to-day.

GIOVANNI DIODATI STILL LIVES IN THE ITALIAN BIBLE.

He has been dead for almost three hundred years, yet letters addressed to Giovanni Diodati are frequentiy received at the office of the American Bible Society in the old Bible House on Astor Place, New York City.

Italian people in various parts of the United States, seeing for the first time a copy of the Bible in their own language, and noting on the title page that it was translated by Giovanni Diodati and published by the American Bible Society, address the translator at the office of the publisher, expressing a desire to own a copy of the Diodati Bible or Testament.

These requests are gladly received at the Bible House, and with each volume sent out goes the story of Giovanni Diodati and his translation of the Bible into the Italian language.

Born in 1576 at Lucca, in the republic of Venice, when a boy he fled with his family to Geneva to escape religious persecution. A few years later, at the age of 19, he was appointed teacher of Hebrew in the Academy of Geneva, where he later became professor of Dogmatics.

His version of the Bible, translated into Italian at Geneva in 1607, met with a success comparable with that of Luther's translation, and superceded all earlier translations into that tongue.

Because of the clearness of its diction and its adherence to the original texts from which it had been translated, it was chosen in 1808 by the British and Foreign Bible Society for its first publication of the Bible in Italian. Since then it has been reprinted many times by the British and Foreign Bible Society and the American Bible Society, and is considered the best translation in the Italian language.

Diodati died in 1649 at the age of 73. He was a rigid Calvinist, and the ambition of his life was the conversion of his native land, and especially the republic of Venice, to his own creed.—Margaret Louise Muir, American Bible Society, New York City.

The Centenary is reaching the coming leadership of America by churches, dormitories, student pastors, and departments of Religious Education in our college centers and at the universities of Missouri, Virginia, Texas, Arizona and California.

The Centenary has built six new churches, five of which are self-supporting, by an investment of $5,000 in a North Carolina cotton mill community.

"Cyclone Mack," Famous Evangelist, Tells Why He Takes Nuxated Iron

TO INCREASE STRENGTH, ENERGY AND POWER BY BUILDING RICH, RED BLOOD

Says Nuxated Iron Enables Him To Do More Work Today Than Ever Before, Without Being All Worn Out, And Recommends It To Any Person Who Feels The Need of Tonic Blood and Nerve Builder.

Prominent Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Is The Most Valuable Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder Available to Physicians.

TO anyone who has seen the Rev. B. F. McLendon, "Cyclone Mack," in action, the man is not only one of the greatest of our modern envangelists—but he is also a veritable cyclone of almost superhuman power, force and energy.

The pastor of one of the largest churches in America says of him, "To give a description of McLendon is like trying to describe forked lightning. It can be seen, but never the same thing twice, and always producing results. It is like describing Niagara Falls.... He is a keg of dynamite."

Yet few realize how exhausting such work as his really is. It means giving one's all, soul and body—throwing every last iota of one's force and power, both physical and mental, into the scale. It would quickly knock out a champion athlete. Indeed, without special care it would even floor a "Cyclone Mack." The story of how he preserves his wonderful health and energy undiminished, and rises to greater and greater heights of success with every new effort, may be of as much help to the physical bodies of thousands of run-down, weak, nervous men and women as his marvelous sermons are to their spiritual beings. Here are his own words:—

"Anyone who thinks that the work of a revivalist is easy has never had any experience preaching to eleven or twelve thousand people in a sweltering tent through long, hot summer days.

"When a man devotes his life to a great cause, he must give himself completely, mind and body. The strain is terrific—at times every nerve and fibre of your body seems totally exhausted and only the great work keeps you going. The problem of restoring physical power to the worn, tired-out body is so vital that for years I have employed a special person to keep me in condition.

"Only recently a friend of mine, who has been associated with religious work for over thirty years, told me about Nuxated Iron. He explained how the iron in your blood and the vital forces in your nerves are used up and must be replaced, telling me that Nuxated Iron contains iron in the form like the iron in your blood, and the principal ingredients of active, living nerve cells. He said that whenever any member of his family felt tired, worn-out or run-down, they had always used Nuxated Iron with excellent results.

"Ever since then I have used it regularly. It seems to give me new power, strength, energy and endurance. I believe I can do more work today without being all worn out than ever before, and I do not hesitate to recommend Nuxated Iron to any person who feels the need of tonic, blood and nerve builder."

B F McLendon

Any physician will tell you that iron is absolutely essential to life itself. Without sufficient iron the blood loses its power to change food into living tissue. Therefore, nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you don't get strength out of it. As a result of this blood deficiency people become weakened, nervous and all run-down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. As one physician puts it, "Thousands of men and women are impairing their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally losing their grip on health, simply because their blood lacks iron. To help make strong, sturdy men and healthy, beautiful women, there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron."

Another prominent surgeon and former medical professor says, "I have never had recourse to so valuable a remedy for building up the health and strength of debilitated and convalescent patients as Nuxated Iron. By enriching the blood, Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instil renewed energy and endurance into the whole system, whether the patient be young or old. In my opinion Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood builder available to physicians."

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test:—First see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take Nuxated Iron tablets for just two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. If even in that short time you do not notice a wonderful improvement, take the bottle back and the druggist will promptly refund your money.

NOTE: Nuxated Iron which is so highly recommended above is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to the druggists everywhere. Unlike the older iron tinctures and pills made from mineral iron it contains a wonderful new combination of organic iron like the iron in your own blood and like that in spinach and lentils. So it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth and make them black, or upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser, or money refunded. But be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron with the letters NI on every tablet, and not substitutes. Nuxated Iron is the only kind sold under the above money-back guarantee. At all druggists.

Picturesque "Cyclone Mack," the Rev. B. F. McLendon, has long been recognized as the leading evangelist of the South, and is known and loved by millions of people for his tremendous power for good.

A Remarkable Man

The Rev. Baxter F. McLendon ("Cyclone Mack"), evangelist extraordinary, is just coming into the prime of a world-wide evangelistic career. Although a great deal of his work has been in the South, his birthplace, he has also preached often in the North and West, and everywhere thousands and tens of thousands flock to hear him. Not only this, but he is responded to by young and old, men and women alike. Thousands of men of red blood and backbone have mustered into service in his campaign.

One of the greatest newspapers in the country has this to say of him:—"Saying things like Sam Jones, and like Sam Jones getting away with it, swinging into a Hallelujah lick like Billy Sunday, but more impressive than Billy—swaying his audience to a fever heat at times like Dr. Frank Norris of Fort Worth, and then smoothing them with the gentleness of a Gypsy Smith—that is the composite picture of "Cyclone Mack" (Rev. B. F. McLendon)."

When a man like this voluntarily gives his strong endorsement of Nuxated Iron, as printed above, it must convince every intelligent reader that this remarkable preparation is everything that is claimed for it. No doubt Mr. McLendon felt that in recommending Nuxated Iron to thousands of others who feel the need of the best tonic, blood and nerve builder they can get, he could be of as great service on their physical side as he is through his wonderful preaching on their spiritual side. Naturally, too, he could never afford to lend his name to Nuxated Iron unless he were certain (as he is from personal experience) of its marvelous value in increasing and maintaining abounding health, strength and energy

The District Stewards are called to meet me at Seashore Camp Ground at 11 a.m., Tuesday, Dec. 2. I wish that every district steward shall be present, feeling the great responsibility that rests on him. I believe that the secret of the progress of our Zion rests very largely in the hands of our district stewards. The collection of the funds for the carrying on of the great work of our church depends largely on the just and equitable distribution of the assessments to the charges, and this is entirely the responsibility of the district stewards. Brethren, won't you measure up to this great responsibility?

I also wish every pastor to meet me at the above time and place for a conference, in which to plan our work for the new year. Please don't let anything but death or serious sickness keep you away. Brother Van Hook will serve us dinner on this occasion, and show us the work of our Camp Ground School.

food. We sent for the girl, who was found that afternoon and brought to her mother. She was with very questionable characters, living in the Mexican quarters, in a little village twelve miles from town. We are happy to say that this same girl took part in the Junior Missionary Society Week of Prayer service.

The children have not been in school for two years because of the illness of the father and poverty of the family, so are very far behind their grades, but the women of the Missionary Society help them every afternoon with their lessons.

With the Adult and the Young People's Missionary Societies helping this family to help themselves, we think we can make as great a change in them as was made in the original Plunket family.—Sent by Mrs. J. N. McDonald, President Leesville Society.

In June, for the Social Service department, a leaflet was sent out describing a needy family—"The Plunket" family—and how one auxiliary was the means of helping them "get on their feet" again. The injunction was: If there is a Plunket family in your neighborhood "go and do thou likewise." So far, the Leesville auxiliary is the only one that has found such a family. We rejoice with them in seeing this family restored to usefulness, and pray that each one in the family may find Christ as a personal and abiding Saviour.

AMALGAMATION OF BENEVOLENT BOARDS.

By Dr. W. E. Hogan.

The General Conference at Hot Springs created a "Commission on Reorganization of Boards." In view of the fact that the report and recommendations of this Commission will presumably be one of the important questions to be considered by the next General Conference, the policies of other churches in this regard are of more than ordinary interest to us at this time.

A little investigation reveals the fact that within the last few years there has been a decided drift towards the merging of benevolent boards and other agencies. In some denominations there have been drastic changes of organization and reduction of number of boards; in others only those boards and agencies which were the most closely related have been amalgamated. It seems, however, that in most, if not all cases, it was desired that the reorganizations should be real consolidations, not mere federations—organic unifications, not mechanical rearrangements. As an indication of what is taking place in other denominations I can give in this article only a brief statement of what some of the larger churches are doing.

1. The Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (frequently referred to as the Northern Presbyterian Church), has for three years been perfecting the radical reorganization and consolidation of boards ordered by the General Assembly of 1921. As a result this church has reduced thirteen boards and agencies to four general boards, and has committed the work heretofore done by three other committees to one office of the General Assembly. The four new boards of this church are: The Board of Foreign Missions; the Board of National Missions; the Board of Christian Education; and the Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation. While the work which has heretofore been carried on by any one of the thirteen old agencies may be divided, some going to one new board and some to another, it may be said that in general the present Board of Foreign Missions has taken over the work of two old boards, the Board of National Missions the work of five, the Board of Christian Education the work of five, while the Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation remains practically unchanged.

Several years ago two of the important boards of this church—the Board of Education and the College Board—were consolidated into the General Board of Education.

2. The Methodist Episcopal Church, at the General Conference of 1924, enacted legislation looking to the uniting of several connectional boards. This will reduce the number of boards in this church from ten to six. The six new boards will be: Foreign Missions; Home Missions and Church Extension; Education; Hospitals and Homes and Deaconess Work; Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals; Pensions and Relief. The consolidations made were the merging of the Board of Education, the Board of Sunday Schools, the Board of Education for Negroes, and the Board of Epworth League into one board, to be called the Board of Education, and the uniting of the Board of Hospitals and Homes and the General Deaconess Board into one board, to be known as the Board of Hospitals and Homes and Deaconess Work. The new legislation also provides that the educational supervision of the Training Schools for Deaconesses will be committed to the new Board of Education.

3. The Lutheran Church has been concerned with consolidations and mergers. Six years ago the three General Bodies of that church, each of which was in reality a separate church, were merged into the United Lutheran Church of America. And then at the recent biennial convention of this United Church five separate agencies of the United Church were consolidated into one General Board, to be called the Board of American Missions. All five of these agencies were more or less closely related to the work of Home Missions.

4. The Congregational Church has a committee of twelve working on the problem of consolidation of Congregational Societies. One of the earlier proposals of this church was that all benevolent agencies be merged into two—foreign and homeland. But this has never been carried out, and it seems now that this church will favor a fourfold system similar to the Presbyterians—foreign, national, educational, and ministerial relief.

5. Three other churches, the Northern Baptist, the Episcopal, and the Disciples, are reported to have made mergers and consolidations of one kind or another. An article in the Congregationalist of Oct. 30, by Dr. William Horace Day, chairman of the Committee of Twelve of the Congregational Church referred to above, says that these denominations "have drastically changed their missionary organization."

It is not the purpose of this article to present arguments which have been made for or against such consolidations or reorganizations. I am simply giving a few facts which seem to indicate a decided tendency on the part of several larger denominations. I think, however, in this connection two statements should be made which may prevent a complete misunderstanding of the reasons which have been advanced in favor of these amalgamations of boards.

1. These consolidations are not being made in the interest of economy, although there will be a reduction of expenditures at certain places. There will be expended on the work of the former boards as much as has heretofore been expended on the work of the larger number. It is not a decrease in the total amount expended which these churches have in mind. They hope that consolidation and reorganization will result in the elimination of much overlapping, duplications and conflicts so that for the same expenditure there will be a larger return of effective service. If every dollar expended under the new arrangements should give a return of more nearly one hundred cents of value than has been possible in the past, the churches will have effected the only sort of economy which they desire.

2. These reorganizations and consolidations require much time and sympathetic cooperation. In no case have the details, legal or otherwise, been worked out in advance. The highest authoritative bodies in the churches have declared that certain mergers should be made and have set up the machinery for doing it. The old boards continue to function until the new ones can be made legal functioning bodies. Any attempt to work out the difficulties in advance would have resulted in the defeat of the whole plan. Such consolidations of boards can be made when the church wants to and they can also be prevented when a considerable opposition attempts to block them by insisting upon perfecting the whole scheme of consolidation in advance.

ACCURATELY ACCOUNTING FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS.

By M. W. Brabham

During the past few weeks a great deal has been written and a good deal has been done concerning the enrollment of new Sunday school members. Thousands of survey cards, letters and other pieces of membership campaign material have gone out from the offices of the Director of the Membership Campaign and from cooperating Conference Boards. These materials have been issued at no little expense to the General Sunday School Board, and have been furnished without charge to the local schools. More of the materials are on hand, and will be kept in stock for future occasion demands. The campaign is not a spasmodic affair but rather a part of a continuing effort. Any school desiring campaign posters, cards and leaflets may secure them by addressing M. W. Brabham, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

The schools which have made systematic and energetic efforts to win new members and reclaim absentees will find themselves rejoicing in their achievements. If the suggestions offered in the leaflets have been followed, no school is now in

THE POWER OF THE MISUNDERSTANDING.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

"Great as the power of understanding is supposed to be, the power of the misunderstanding is greater still." This saying from the pen of Borden P. Browne came immediately to my mind upon reading Bishop Candler's reply to my recent article in which I pointed out how the good Bishop has misunderstood the plan of unification and how he is misleading others.

I.

Before coming to the discussion of the main points involved, I will make a few preliminary observations.

A Word About "Sharp Personalities."

Bishop Candler complains of "sharp personalities and unbrotherly insinuations." I greatly fear that my Senior Bishop takes the position that any criticism of his opinions is a criticism of him personally. Long ago did I learn to permit men sharply to differ with me, while continuing to love them. And I hope my dear Bishop will allow to others the same liberty to express their opinions that he claims for himself and that he exercises so freely.

The Plan of Unification and the League of Nations.

Bishop Candler objects to my drawing a parallel between the League of Nations and the plan of unification. He says: "The two things bear no slightest resemblance to each other," and continues, "It goes without saying that there is no element of idealism involved in this issue." "No element of idealism involved," in unification of Methodism, and yet an element of idealism involved in the League of Nations! A most remarkable statement, that! And this is a painful thing, that our beloved Bishop Candler sees "no element of idealism involved in this issue." The pity of it! If he only saw his opportunity, what a contribution he might now make to the progress of the Kingdom!

The Noble Words of Jefferson Davis Quoted.

I quote the words of Jefferson Davis:

"The past is dead. Let us bury its dead, its hopes and its aspirations. Before you lies the future, a future full of golden promise, a future of expanding national glory before which all the world shall stand amazed. Let me beseech you to lay aside all rancor, all bitter sectional feeling, and take your place in the ranks of those who will bring about a consummation devoutly to be wished—a reunited country."

The Bishop objects to my having quoted these words in connection with this discussion. I do not wonder that he objects. For the argument made for two separate and distinct Methodisms leads directly to two separate and distinct republics here in America. Few agencies to-day are keeping alive "rancor and bitter sectional feeling" as does the existence of two separate and warring Methodist churches in the United States.

My Former Communication Produces a Most Gratifying Result.

My former communication has produced one most gratifying result. It has drawn from Bishop Candler a strong assertion of his interest in the religious welfare of the colored people in our midst. For this I am duly grateful. And it was needed. I had written the following: "We ought to ask in the presence of God, what should united Methodism do to save the Negro providentially here in America?" Bishop Candler declares that he agrees with me in this. Say that again, dear brother. For your writings touching the Negro had led some of the best men in the Colored Methodist Church to ask, "Does Bishop Candler represent the attitude of the Southern Methodist Church toward the colored man?" And some of them had sadly said: "We had thought that the Southern Methodists were our friends." And certain leaders in our own church, charged by the highest authority in the church with giving direction to our work among colored people, had felt that a check had been given to our work by some things that had been said.

II.

I Now Make an Examination of Bishop Candler's Witnesses.

Bishop Candler attempts to show that there is great difference of opinion among Northern and Southern advocates of the plan of unification. He says: "With such contradictory interpretations of a most essential feature of the plan, what agreement could be expected of the Southern delegates and the Northern delegates in the first General Conference."

Let me say flatly: There is no disagreement between Northern advocates of the plan of unification and Southern advocates of the plan touching any essential point.

The Bishop quotes from certain brethren in an attempt to make good his contention. The uninformed reader, who does not know who the leaders are in the Northern Church, may be somewhat impressed by Bishop Candler's array of names. But look at them for a moment:

Bishop I. W. Scott is a retired colored missionary bishop. He can hardly be called a leader. But as a matter of fact, Bishop Scott is not discussing the plan of unification in the quotation made, but the status of colored bishops in the Northern Methodist Church. Here, again, Bishop Candler is guilty of the logical fallacy of non sequitur. The status of colored bishops in the Northern Church has nothing whatsoever to do with the question. Their status will be entirely different in the Southern Jurisdiction of united Methodism.

Bishop Candler quotes Bishop Thirkield as he makes perfectly plain the status of Negro bishops in the Northern Church. Once again Bishop Candler proves the wrong thing. The question is not, what is the status of colored bishops in the Northern Church, but, what does our plan of unification provide? And the answer is that our plan of unification protects our Southern ideals at every point. I cannot allow even so good and so great a man as Bishop Candler to confuse the minds of our people.

Bishop Candler then quotes from the editor of the Central Christian Advocate, the Rev. Cladius B. Spencer. Dr. Spencer is a good man. But many of his utterances have not had the approval of leaders in the Northern Church. His extreme views have been an embarrassment to Methodists both North and South. There are editors in the North who do not represent Northern Methodism any more truly than certain editors in the South are now representing Southern Methodism.

Bishop Candler goes on to quote from the well known Bishop Thomas B. Neely a sharp criticism of the plan of unification—a criticism which reminds one of the language of some of our Southern opponents of the plan. Some of our good Southern Methodists do not know who Bishop Neely is, and that he is as much opposed to unification "and all its works" as is Bishop Candler. He objects to it as "the worst scheme ever invented," because it is not "organic union." Bishop Neely's criticism and objections are an argument in its favor. As a general rule, whatever Bishop Neely is for, Northern Methodist leaders are against; and whatever he opposes, they will stand for. Thank you, Bishop Candler, for quoting Bishop Neely!

Bishop Candler quotes at length from the Rev. Bob Shuler, the brother who made the closing appeal for the anti-unificationists at the Chattanooga General Conference, and waxed so warm that he first took off his collar and then proceeded to remove his coat. Brother Shuler reports that Bishop Waldorf said that the plan of unification is "the purest nonsense." I make no further reference to this until we hear from Bishop Waldorf himself. While Bishop Candler was quoting from the Rev. Bob Shuler it might have been well for him to have quoted the following:

"I realize that something must be done. I think that if we cannot honestly unite, our church should cede every charge we have in Washington, Oregon, Utah, California, Montana, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Illinois, and possibly Oklahoma, to the Northern Church."

I ask, does Bishop Candler agree with the Rev. Bob Shuler?

Why does not Bishop Candler bring some quotation from Northern Methodist leaders who favor the plan of unification in which they state that at any essential and vital point they do not agree with the exposition that we of the South who favor it have made? He does not do so for the good and sufficient reason that he cannot do so. There is no disagreement among us at any vital point.

I invite Bishop Candler to find a single utterance from any of the Northern Commissioners or from any Northern bishop who favors unification which will sustain his position that Southern leaders and Northern leaders do not agree at every vital point in their interpretation of the plan.

Bishop Candler quotes a noble passage from Bishop McDowell's Episcopal Adress to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I take pleasure in giving it in full:

"Union is not desirable unless it is right. For the union of like-minded bodies, bodies that are one in heart and spirit, any person might heartily favor. On the other hand, the prevention of a formal union between bodies that are not one in heart and spirit would be a worthy endeavor. Because of its tremendous importance the union of any churches must be on the right basis. The goal is so desirable that we must not be turned aside into a false path or give up our effort to find a true one.

"We must ask of all movements for union or federation four questions and determine our attitude to them by the answer they make: 1. Does the movement make for a real brotherhood of Christian people? 2. Does the movement make for the real unity of all sections, races, nations, and classes, within Christ's church? 3. Does the movement make for unity of life, unity of sacrificial, atoning purpose toward men, unity in the holiness and passion of the church's life, like the unity between Christ and the Father? 4. Does the movement make for evangelistic efficiency and the triumph of the cross among all peoples, all classes, all races, and on all continents? By its answer to these searching questions the movement must be tested both in its general and in its particular features.

"For the church of Christ is not a racial church. The church of Christ is not a national, sectional, or class church. Plans of union that sectionalize the church are not plans for Christian union."

Bishop Candler then asks: "Does Bishop Mouzon agree with Bishop McDowell?" I reply: Most emphatically I do. And I ask: "Does not Bishop Candler agree with Bishop McDowell?"

Lay that lofty Christian utterance down by the Sermon on the Mount and the writings of St. Paul and see how well they harmonize. If I did not believe that our plan of unification answered affirmatively the crucial questions asked by Bishop McDowell in the great Christian utterance that Bishop Candler quotes, I should have nothing to do with it.

I am wondering if Bishop Candler objects to the following language: "The church of Christ is not a racial church. The church of Christ is not a national, sectional, or class church." This is certainly true of the New Testament Church. And this is certainly true of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the present time. Ours is not a "racial" church—Chinamen, Japanese, Koreans,

Mexicans, Brazilians, Africans, Cubans of mixed blood, and still a few colored people in the South, are all members of our church. And we are not a "national" church—we have gone into distant lands. No longer are we a "sectional" church—we have spread over a large part of America. Long ago we went beyond the "cotton States." And certainly we are not a "class" church—we take in rich and poor, learned and illiterate. We take in Northern people as well as Southern people. We "invite all alike to become fellow-citizens with the saints and members of the household of God."

III.

The advocates of a divided Methodism are now making their chief appeal to race prejudice.

We now come to the main contention of Bishop Candler's long articles—the fear of social equality with Negroes in the united church. Confessedly this is a difficult matter to deal with. For no man can reason with prejudice. Reason did not get it into a man's head, and reason cannot get it out. Bishop Candler is a man of very tender feelings. He does not like to have anybody disagree with him. But I must say it out frankly, that some of us have been disappointed and pained beyond measure that in the "cotton States" the appeal against unification has been made to center here, and chiefly here.

There is no possibility of "social equality" under our plan of unification. To raise this question, is to raise a false issue and to appeal to fear where argument has failed. That such methods have been used in the discussion of the greatest issue now before the Protestant churches of the world, is disappointing and humiliating in the extreme.

Note several things carefully:

1. In my former article I called attention to the fact that the color line runs everywhere in the Northern Methodist Church.

Bishop Candler challenges that statement. He affirms that they have one policy in the North and another in the South. If that were a correct statement (and it is not), what would that have to do with leading Southern Methodists to change their proper attitude in the South?

Will the Bishop point out anywhere in the United States a mixed Annual Conference? Will the Bishop point out anywhere in the North a church in which the colored membership is large enough for that church to be called a "mixed congregation?" The fact of the business is there are still a few colored members remaining in our Southern Methodist churches. And our Discipline makes it the duty of our preachers to keep a register of church members, "distinguishing between white persons, colored persons, and Indians." (Paragraphs 160.) And there is no law whatsoever to prevent a colored man from joining Bethel Church, Charleston, S. C., any Sunday morning.

As fully confirming what I have said, I quote from the Western Advocate, a Northern Methodist paper:

"It is not known to certain grand divisions of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that the Negro already has a certain form of independent jurisdiction. He has his own bishops, his own district superintendents (presiding elders), his own churches. He is not seen among white folks. He lives his own life, goes his own way. He is given fellowship only in these places where his interests come in contact with the common good and where they overlap those of the other members of the community."

This appeal to fear of "social equality" fails to make any impression in Missouri, and Oklahoma, and Kentucky, where the facts are known. It is of service only where our people are not fully informed.

2. Bishop Candler fears that Negroes may become members of the Judicial Council.

His language is interesting. He writes: "They may be members of the Judicial Council, and it is certain the Negro members of the Northern Jurisdiction will be represented in that Council by a Negro bishop or by some other Negro." Observe the "may be" in the first part of his sentence becomes "it is certain" in the second. The Bishop then goes on to say: "No Negro has ever been appointed to serve in the Supreme Court of the United States, but they may and will sit in the Supreme Council of Methodism if the plan of unification is adopted." I ask the Bishop please to write to the church papers and plainly tell all our people why "no Negro has ever been appointed to serve in the Supreme Court of the United States." Will the Bishop kindly point out any provision in the Constitution of the United States, or anything that looks like the shadow of a provision, that would keep a Negro from serving in the Supreme Court of the United States? And I ask: Has Bishop Candler any fear that a Negro will ever serve in the Supreme Court of the United States? I thank Bishop Candler for mentioning the Supreme Court of the United States in this connection. Bishop Candler's method of criticism applied to the Constitution of the United States would tear it all to pieces, and show to his own satisfaction that Southern people, with their views of "social equality," could not possibly live under the American Constitution.

3. Bishop Candler insists that under our plan Negro bishops will have superintendency over white churches in the South.

Well, they do not now have superintendency over white churches in the North. How can that happen in the South that will not happen in the North?

Nobody questions the fact that at the present time the Northern Methodist Church has two colored bishops who are legally bishops. That those colored bishops have a right to preside over the Northern General Conference and to assist in the ordination of Northern bishops, everybody knows. But when Bishop Candler argues that exactly what those colored bishops can now legally do under the constitution of the Northern Church, they will do in the united church, I come with an emphatic denial. His statement is in direct contradiction of the plan of unification.

Bishop Candler even goes so far as to write: "The General Conference is thus empowered to tell each jurisdiction how many bishops it may elect, and of what sort, white or black." The suggestion that the General Conference, by a majority of Southern votes, might tell the Southern Jurisdiction to elect a number of "black" bishops is too absurd to be brought into a serious discussion. But I thank the Bishop for writing that, as this far-fetched absurdity can only weaken his argument in the minds of thoughtful readers.

Bishop Candler says that "Negro bishops will participate in fixing the assignments of all bishops, both Northern and Southern." Bishop Candler must be the only intelligent man in the church who does not know that such a statement is in direct contradiction of the plan of unification. The article in the plan which covers this matter is the following:

"A bishop may be asisgned to administer in any part of the church, provided that when he is assigned to administer within the Jurisdiction other than that by which he was elected it shall be with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved."

Southern bishops are elected by and for the Southern Jurisdiction, and Northern bishops are elected by and for the Northern Jurisdiction. Southern bishops, will be assigned by Southern bishops, and Northern bishops by Northern bishops. There will, however, be this advantage and gain, "with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved," a Southern bishop may go North for a time, or a Northern bishop may come South. "Negro bishops participating in fixing the assignments of Southern white bishops!" If a man wishes to draw on his fancy rather than make a study of the plan of unification, there is no limit to what he may say. But in the above one wonders if the limit had not been reached.

"The administrative superintendence is by jurisdiction, and no bishop will be so inconsiderate as to raise his voice where he has no business. The most valuable feature of the meeting of the bishops is the review of all the work obtained through the report of the individual bishop of what has been done in his area and what is planned in their respective districts. By the review each bishop may know what the Church is doing in every part of the country and throughout the world, and the bishop of each Jurisdiction will be kept acquainted with the labors and plans of the bishops and preachers in the other Jurisdiction. The Southern bishops, by the reports of the Negro bishops, will be kept acquainted with the labors, thoughts and purposes of Negro Methodism in their own territory, where the majority of the Negro membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church now live. To say that this is not best for the Negro and not desirable for us is to regard lightly the responsibility of the white people of the South for the religious development of the Negroes of the South." (Report of Commission on Unification to Report of Minority, Pages 18 19.)

Bishop Candler quotes from my discussion of the modified plan of general superintendency of the church provided for in our plan of unification. I had said: "Under the plan of unification there will be something not altogether different from a modified episcopacy." I had shown plainly that the bishops of the united church would be servants of the church, serving how and where the church instructed them to serve, and that in course of time we would almost certainly have not only colored bishops serving Colored Conferences, but Chinese bishops serving in China, and European bishops serving in Europe, and Brazilian bishops serving in Brazil. Now comes Bishop Candler and holds up his hands in horror, saying that this "violates the Constitution." What Constitution? Certainly not the Constitution of the united church, for all that is in the plan of unification will go into the Constitution, as soon as the Annual Conferences approve it, and the plan provides exactly what I have indicated. The Bishop is always interesting when humorous.

From the Atlanta office there has recently been sent broadcast over the church a so-called address "From Laymen to Laymen." This address makes an attempt to do at this hour what the Bishop tried to have done at the Chattanooga General Conference, namely, get everybody to quit and go home. Dear friends and brethren, yours is a vain attempt. It is told of one of the old kings that sitting one day by the seashore, he commanded the tide not to come in. But the tide came in all the same. And now a great tide out of the Infinite is coming in. You cannot stay it with a wave of the hand.

FROM THE CORINTH DISTRICT.

Dear Advocate: Both Brother E. Nash Broyles and myself and our families were most cordially received by the good people here in Corinth. Even the "elder's" pantry was full.

Brothers Broyles at First Church and Davenport, at South Side, have made wonderfully fine beginnings, and are preaching to large congregations. Brother Brister has begun well his work on the Corinth circuit.

I have been over the district considerably and the work starts off well.

At district stewards' meeting here today all the interests were considered and the distribution of the apportionments for both General and Conference work were made cheerfully, and the presiding elder's salary fixed at same figure as last year.

December 7 first Sunday was decided upon as the day for securing the Grenada College special throughout the district.

With best wishes for the Advocate and expecting to assist in securing some new subscriptions and renewals.

Your friend and brother,

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

The Home Circle

THE TONE OF VOICE.

It is not so much what you say,
As the manner in which you say it.
It is not so much the language you use,
As the tones in which you convey it.

"Come here," I cooed, and he looked and smiled,
And straight to my lap he crept.

"Come here," I sharply said,
And the baby cowered and wept;
The words may be mild and fair,
And the tones may pierce like a dart;
The words may be soft as the summer air,
And the tones may break the heart.

Whether you know or not,
Whether you mean or care;
Gentleness, kindness, love and hate,
Envy and anger are there.

Then would you quarrels avoid,
And in peace and love rejoice,
Keep anger not only out of your word,
But keep it out of your voice.

—Youth's Companion.

STAINS.

One day Ruth came home from school with three stains on her pretty white dress. When mother saw them, she said: "You may get them out yourself. I'll tell you how."

So Ruth rubbed the cocoa stain in cold water. That disappeared. Then she poured boiling water through the strawberry stain. The red turned to pink, then faded away. The ink stain was hardest of all. Mother gave her something in a bottle that banished the ugly black. Some drops from another bottle kept the acid from eating the cloth.

It is easy to take the stains out of cloth, but do you know how to take stains out of thoughts?

There is a quarrel stain. Your playmate does something that you do not like. Soon there is an ugly brown stain on your friendship. You can make it disappear by pouring on the water of remembrance. Think of all the fun you have had together and of all the kind things which your playmate has done. Away will go the quarrel stain.

Some stains are very hard to get out if you let them get old. There is the bad word stain. It is hard to get that out if you keep thinking about the words or even repeating them. Take them out at once. Make yourself think of the last Sabbath's golden text of your favorite stories whenever words want to say themselves over.

Whenever you make a thought stain, see if you can remove it as quickly as the boiling water faded the strawberry stain.—Dew Drops.

MOLLY'S PLAN.

"When I get big I'm going to be a famous general," said Ted; marching up and down the room in his little soldier suit. "I'll go out to war and help anybody that is in trouble."

"And I'll be a nurse and take care of the wounded soldiers," said Dora, pinning a piece of red flannel on her arm to look like the cross worn by a nurse she had seen a few days before.

"I'll be a great doctor and help the sick soldier, too," said Herbert. "I guess that's about as nice as winning battles. Dr. Graves wears a sword, too."

"Children," called mamma from the kitchen, "which one of you will run to the grocery for butter for my cake?"

"You go, Molly," said Ted and Dora together. "You don't mind doing errands."

So the little girl ran off with her basket, and the talk in the sitting room went back to what the children would be when they grew up. It was a cold, windy day, and they all had to play indoors; so Herbert and Addie had come over to visit their cousins and have a good time together.

Just the week before the children had seen a great parade of soldiers, so their minds were take up with the swords and uniforms and gold braid.

"Mamma, which one has the best plan?" asked Ted when the cake was finished and they all sat together in the sitting-room. "Addie wants to be a great singer, and all the rest of us but Molly are going to war to help people. Molly says she is going to stay at home and help you always, so tell us which has the best plan."

There was a queer little light in Mrs. Kile's eyes as she took the baby on her knee and said: "I think I'll let you decide which is best. While I was baking cake I noticed that the Red Cross nurse was too busy to untagle baby's foot when he caught it in the rug, and the famous general never saw the puppy upset him in his rough play. You know this general said he would help any one in trouble when he grew up, so the baby called loudly for aid. The general marched right past without ever noticing him, and the doctor stepped on his fingers as the army retreated. After that the famous singer was too busy to sing 'Rock-a-by' for the baby, and he had a hard time generally."

"You left out Molly," said Dora when her mother paused for a few moments. "You didn't say anything about her."

"I thought you all knew what Molly did," said Mrs. Kile. "She picked up the poor baby and put medicine on his bruised fingers, she ran several errands, and then had time to sing 'Rock-a-by' for this little man. You see, she is working at her plan right now, instead of waiting till she gets big."

"Molly's plan is the best!" cried all the children together. "We'll try to begin now, too."—The Herald and Presbyter.

GETTING READY FOR CHRISTMAS.

From Thanksgiving to Christmas is a short leap. So we must hustle about as fast as we can to do our Christmas buying, for this is the giving time of the year, and we wish to remember all of our friends.

There of the younger years have innumerable things from which to choose. Men work all the year that youngsters may be made happy on one day of the calendar. In Bavaria, for instance, one whole city, or at any rate most of it, spends its entire time in making toys. This is the city of Nuremberg. Toys have been made there since the thirteenth century about 700 years! Making toys is a family business in Nuremberg. There are no great factories turning out thousands of animals and Noah's Arks, but hundreds of households where these cunning creatures are deftly and carefully cut out by the father and his sons, and doubtless his daughters too. This has been going on for generations, the art of it being handed down from parent to child. It is a profitable business, too. It is estimated that about thirteen million dollars worth of toys will be (or have been) imported into this country this year, and the greater part of these are from Bavaria.

Another great industry of the season is the supplying of Christmas trees. This, we regret to say, is sometimes very wasteful and thousands of fine trees are needlessly cut. But there is one place where the business is carried on scientifically and that is in your Uncle Sam's natural forests. Hundreds of small trees come up every year and they have to be thinned out, so that there will be room for a few of the stronger ones to grow to full-sized trees. These little pines that are doing no good, really some harm, are therefore marked by the foresters and are cut down by Christmas tree-dealers and sold to the public. Who knows, maybe your own tree this year will come from one of your Uncle Sam's forests.

These are things one can buy—the toys and trees and sweets. But the thing that really counts in all our Christmas giving and receiving is the spirit of it. And that is the spirit of unselfishness.—Exchange.

Large sums of the war work fund supplied by the Centenary are now being used to build churches in educational centers.

The Centenary has established fourteen Summer Schools for pastors, and these train more than 2,000 preachers annually in modern methods.

In Florida, the Woman's Department has expended more than $100,000 of Centenary money for clinics, day nurseries, and social work among the Cuban cigar-makers.

Five schools for Negroes are being helped by the Centenary. One of these, Lane College, is adding its Centenary money to the endowment. Another, Paine College, is becoming a real teachers' college.

New Orleans Christian Advocate

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies, Rev. C. C. Miller.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. E. K. Means.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

NOTE.

On account of the severe illness of the editor of the Advocate since Nov. 24, during which time he has been confined to his bed with an attack of "flu," the usual editorial departments of the Advocate are omitted this week. Dr. Carley is convalescing satisfactorily and expects to be back in the office within a few days.

GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNCIL MEETING.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the General Sunday School Council of our church will be held in the Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15 to 19, 1924. Mr. Clarence M. Dannelly, Sunday School Superintendent for the Alabama Conference, is the Council's President, and will preside over the session of the forthcoming meeting.

The Council is made up of a membership including Conference employed Sunday school workers, employed workers of the General Sunday School Board, the chairmen of Conference Sunday School Boards, directors of religious education in local churches, professors of religious education in educational institutions, and other persons interested in Sunday school and religious educational work.

The program of the Council meeting last year specialized on the rural Sunday school and its work; this year the general subject will be the town and city Sunday school, its work and problems. Leaders in Sunday school work in our church think this session of the Council will be exceedingly important and hope our Conference will be fully represented.

MEETING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

The Appropriations Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in the office of the Board, No. 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky., Jan. 6, 1925, at 10 a. m.

All applications must be approved by the Conference Board of Church Extension, and in the hands of the General Board on or before Dec. 31, 1924. No application will be entered on the Calendar after this date.

EVANGELISM.

By R. Flowers, General Evangelist.

No form of Christian activity in recent years has been subjected to more severe attacks and criticism than has evangelism. That any agency as active and aggressive as this should make a mistake is no more than is to be expected. But it is better to make mistakes occasionally, even frequently, than not to make any. It may not be wholly to the credit of other lines of religious effort that they have not met with equal opposition. The tree that bears the most fruit is the one that receives the most pruning. But it is the part of right and reason to acknowledge frankly any fault, and seek sincerely the remedy and removal.

Criticism Just and Unjust.

Some criticisms of evangelism are just, others unjust. It is manifestly unfair to hold up one or two glaring examples as ordinary or usual type. There are evangelists and evangelists. It is not to be wondered at that, in the numerous and varied forms of evangelistic work in the past two decades, some incompetent and unworthy workers should arise, and some abuses should creep in which fail to be recognized and remedied.

For instance, there has been in some quarters too much emphasis placed upon the number of converts. Some have given undue prominence to finance. Sometimes the sensational and spectacular have been carried beyond the bounds of reason. But none of these faults are integral parts of evangelism. It would be unreasonable to charge all the above extreme things to evangelism.

The over emphasis on numbers cannot altogether be charged up to the evangelist. There are committees who select their evangelist upon the report of how many hit the saw-dust road during previous meetings. Consequently some evangelists have so broadened their call as to get numbers. "Hitting the trail," so called, in many instances becomes a procession and not a profession.

Now as to the claim that the evangelist has been spectacular and sensational, even when true, has more frequently had a good rather than a bad significance. For instance, there is nothing so significantly sensational as the fact of salvation itself, and its power to interest and transform human lives. In these busy, hurried times, when so many things are clamoring for recognition, and absorbing and distracting attention, it is frequently necessary that things be said and done in an extraordinary way in order to arouse the attention and awaken interest. The power of the Gospel is so compelling when once it is given proper consideration that it fails seldom to convince the intellect, charm the affections and move the will.

But the public has undoubtedly endured, even welcomed some of these absurdities as a protest against formalism, barren ritualism in many religious services. A grave yard is much more of a regular and orderly affair than is a factory, but it is much less attractive and productive. Dullness too often passes for dignity. Better sensationalism in the pulpit than stupidity.

The Professional Evangelist.

There is a common criticism of evangelistic workers expressed by the epithet "professional." Such criticism is surely shallow and superficial. It is no more unreasonable to speak of an evangelist as a professionalist than to speak of a lawyer, doctor, pastor or farmer as a professionalist. We are living in an age of specialists. The more developed the science the more numerous the divisions of the workers into clearly defined and special forms of activity. The time was when a teacher of natural science in college endeavored to cover the entire subject. To do so would be regarded as an absurdity. There is not only the botanist, the geologist, the physiologist, the biologist and psychologist, but each of these has been subdivided so that any of the subdivisions may claim the entire time of an individual. This is true of law and medicine as well. No lawyer or surgeon would object to being called a professional lawyer or professional surgeon. It seems that we have yet to learn that evangelism is as much of a science as law or surgery. The fact is that evangelism itself, one branch of the Christian ministry, is capable of subdivisions into a number of most useful and serviceable specializations. The modern, up-to-date evangelistic party presents the example of efficiency as applied to Christian service. It is a surprising thing that the most rampant antagonist of evangelism has been the Christian worker who has accomplished the least.

Argument for Evangelism.

First: No substitute for evangelism has ever been found. I challenge any one who advocates the elimination of evangelists and the abolition of evangelism to produce anything that will take its place.

Second: Evangelism has shown its right to live because it follows a natural and scientific method. There is in nature a harvest time as well as seed time. I would not, for instance, decry the importance of culture, but there must be life before there is anything to cultivate. Evangelism is not a substitute for the work of the pastor and teacher, but is an addition to it. The task of bringing souls to spiritual birth is one of the most delicate, most difficult and most scientific.

Third: Evangelism has proved its claim to permanency by its results.

At least seventy-five per cent of Christians who are vigorous and active were reached in revival meetings. Evangelism is one of the great agencies that the Holy Spirit has been able to use to get the backslidden Christian back into the place of service. Evangelism is one of the foremost agencies in promoting reforms. The liquor business of America received its hardest blows during revival meetings in this country fifteen years before it was put out of business.

Its Message.

Any evangelism that is to endure will have to hold to the essentials. Its message must be, the need of regeneration, repentance, reality of sin, the Deity of Christ, atonement through the Death of Christ, justification by his resurrection, and other like vital themes.

Its Methods.

Evangelism must do more than just call people to repentance. I believe that more must be accomplished during the special revival season than just get people converted. A reasonable effort must be put forth to get the converts to unite with the church and the various organizations of the church even while the meeting is in progress. And more especially a proper enlisting program for the Sunday school should be carried on. The revival season affords an especially opportune time to enlist people for every department of the church. Such a program of enlistment helps to make permanent the results of a revival. The evangelism that we need in 1925 is an evangelism that will co-ordinate every organization of the church—Sunday school, Missionary Societies, League, etc., not only for the purpose of rescuing the lost, but also for the purpose of conserving the results of the revival. In this way the reaction that sometimes follows a revival will be largely eliminated.

THE PREACHER'S GREATEST NEED.

It is in this element that the pulpit oftener fails than in any other element. Just at this all-important point it lapses. Learning it may have, brilliancy and eloquence may delight and charm, sensation or less offensive methods may bring the populace in crowds, mental power may impress and enforce truth with all its resources; but without this unction, each and all these will be but as the fretful assault of the waters on a Gibraltar. Spray and foam may cover and spangle; but the rocks are there still, unimpressed and unimpressible. The human heart can no more be swept of its hardness and sin by these human forces than these rocks can be swept away by the ocean's ceaseless flow.

"This unction is the consecration force, and its presence the continuous test of that consecration. It is this divine anointing on the preacher that secures his consecration to God and his work. Other forces and motives may call him to work, but this only is consecration. A separation to God's work by the power of the Holy Spirit is the only consecration recognized by God as legitimate.

"The unction, the divine unction, this heavenly anointing, is what the pulpit needs and must have. This divine and heavenly oil put on it by the imposition of God's hand must soften and lubricate the whole man—heart, head, spirit—until it separates him with a mighty separation from all earthly, secular, worldly, selfish motives and aims, separating him to everything that is pure and Godlike."—E. M. Bounds, in Christian Index.

LIVING IN GOD'S WORLD.

That this really is God's world seems to be a very difficult thing for some people to believe, at least in any practical and helpful way. But the far-reaching truth of the contention is not open to argument. Of course there is another truth that has to be put alongside that one: this is man's world too, and that latter fact modifies and changes things at very many points. Whether or not man remembers that this is God's world, and lets the fact have its due weight and influence in his life and actions, God never forgets that this is man's world, and never once does He fail to respect the rights and privileges that are yours and mine. The universe must be the expression of His thought and the wonder and beauty that are all about us are revelations of Himself, but He doesn't compel us to see and to understand for ourselves. This being His world He must have wonderful and beneficient plans and purposes in regard to man, who is the crowning thing upon it, but He doesn't force those plans and purposes at any point; indeed He often leaves it to man to search out for himself what they in reality are and how they may be realized. He is wonderfully generous and fair and just in His treatment of us in this regard. If we only remembered that it was His world as He remembers that it is ours!—Christian Guardian.

ACCURATELY ACCOUNTING FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS.

a disorganized state because of the special effort. That contingency was guarded against by a strengthening of the organization before the campaign was started.

Nevertheless each school is faced with the question of holding its membership, and herein comes the necessity for making an accurate plan for pupil accounting. This involves a system of records.

The record systems of the Sunday school are frequently regarded as very secondary and without particular significance. For this as well as other reasons little attention is devoted to them. If a pupil is to be recorded as a member and then permitted to attend irregularly and without definite aims consciously kept before him, there is not much need of a record of any kind. But where the attendance of the pupil is looked upon as an opportunity for a genuine service to be rendered for him and by him, then there is a peculiar significance to the kind of records.

Two systems are recommended for Methodist Sunday schools. For small schools the Fowler's Secretary-Treasurer's Record Book and the Meigs Star Class Record Book should be secured from the Publishing House. For larger schools of ten or more classes, the O K Record System is advised. This last named system is graded for the departments and classes and is available in loose leaf form, tight-bound or in card form.

When you have won a member make a record of it. When he is enrolled keep in close touch with him. Report to the home from month to month as to his record. Mark on points which are fair to the pupil and have significance for his development in the Christian life. Keep a historical record of his development in the Sunday school career, showing honors won, when he was converted, when he was promoted, and kindred matters. Pupil accounting is a great service and demands care and painstaking effort.

W. W. CARRÉ CO.

Carré's EVERYTHING for Building

BUT---WHAT DO YOU SAY?

What we do with our schools and colleges will determine the moral and religious destiny of this Nation and of the world. Without Christian leadership the future is an unthinkable menace.

OUR DISCIPLINE SAYS

That "Education sound in principle and Christian in spirit is fundamental to the work of our Methodism." "Institutions dedicated to a distinctly Christian culture are a necessity to the Church's divinely appointed ministry of service."

OUR SCHOOLS SAY

That they are "special agencies of the Church for the salvation of the world;" that they are "best fulfilling their mission when they are doing most to fashion the character of youth in the image of the Master."

REASON SAYS

That no college can lift itself up by its bootstraps. Inadequately equipped schools cannot produce adequately trained Christian leaders. Without the backing of the Church our schools must inevitably fall short of their great spiritual purposes.

WHAT DO YOU SAY?

Your part in the Christian Education Movement is your answer. Our schools will be firmly established when these millions are paid, but colleges cannot live on promises.

THE ITINERANT WHEEL.

Just two years ago, the little place I occupied in the great itinerant wheel turned and I was transferred from the North Mississipi to the Louisville Conference. On the 4th of November, 1922, I started in a Ford car on a journey of more than six hundred miles; after a weary journey of five days' travel, interspersed with breakdowns and delays, we reached Brandenburg, the romantic and picturesque county site of Mead County, Ky. Here we met with a royal reception, found a loyal band of Methodists, and for two years we loved and labored with these good people; and they were fruitful years. The church was built up, and all the departments of the church became active. We shall always recall our pastorate there with deep pleasure and satisfaction, for they were years of harmony and good fellowship.

On Sept. 23, 1924, we turned our faces toward Camphellsville, the seat of our Conference. The day was cool and crisp, but bright with a mellow sunshine that suffused our souls with a sad, peaceful joy like that which we experience when we stand in the presence of venerable age, quietly waiting for the close of a life well spent. The roads were good, and the motor of the car hummed in unison with the throbbing heart and living nature; the distance was less than one hundred miles; and about 5 o'clock, after a pleasant drive through a most beautiful country, whose deep green foliage was just receiving the first golden touches of autumn's frosty fingers, we drew up to the hospitable home of a good Baptist brother, whose doors were thrown open to us, and where we found most congenial entertainment. Those uplifted hills with their crested fronds mottled with crimson, gold and green, declare the glory of God. With Emerson we might well say:

"Think me not unkind and rude,
That I walk alone in grove and glen;
For I go to the god of the wood.
To fetch his words to men."

The little city of Camphellsville is a wide-awake town of several thousand inhabitants. The churches are wonderful for such a town. We found the Methodist church where our Conference was to he held a new structure of ample proportions and adequate in every respect for modern church work. The great pipe organ, with the pipes high up in the corners of the building, and the chimes, were the unusual features of this modern church.

Rev. L. F. Piercy, who had been pastor for the past five years, was a great host, and the great Conference of more than two hundred and fifty was well entertained. Bishop Darlington was at his hest, mellow with deep feeling, zealous, fervent, spiritual. He is in great favor with this Conference.

There was cause for deep gratitude on the part of the members of the Conference—not a death in the active ranks, not a reproach on the good name of a single preacher. The entire session was marked hy peace and harmony.

Well, after five busy days, the Conference is about to come to a close, and become history. The Bishop looks haggard and careworn. He was with the cabinet till 2 o'clock. How hard it is to make the appointments now! It seems that we may have to modify our system in the near future. People are restless and hard to please; preachers are ambitious for place and prominence. Some rehel at almost every Conference.

Our supply of efficient pastors is not sufficient to meet the pressing needs of our great and growing church. Much territory in the open country is lying waste, ripe unto the harvest of the very best blood of our nation. There is no hetter material out of which to mold the finest Christian characters than the youth of the country. The church that best cultivates this field is destined to be the dominant church of this nation.

The good Bishop delivers a deeply touching address on the eve of announcing the appointments. He expresses regret that some preachers will have to he disappointed, and some good women and helpless children will have to endure privations and undergo hardships. But as a compensation he points to the reward that comes through sacrifice and service. A deep silence steals over the great throng as the Bishop, with a voice broken and vibrating with pathos, pleads for Divine grace to sustain those who are about to receive their commission at the behest of the church. What expectancy! What fond hopes and forehoding fears! No one but a Methodist preacher and his family can tell. The reading or announcement of the assignments has hardly well started till I am startled with: "Monticello, J. A. Poe." My, where is it and what is it? Can we go to that unknown place? Peace, be still, anxious heart: God rules and all is well. I am an itinerant preacher under vows to go where sent, with a promise ringing down through the ages: "Lo I am with you to the end of the world."

"Praise God from whom all hlessings flow," breaks from five hundred lips and rolls through the huilding; the henediction is pronounced; all is commotion, some are receiving congratulations, others condolence; some faces are pathetically sad, others are wreathed in smiles; some eyes shine with a light of joy, others swim in tears of disappointment. There is nothing else under the sun quite comparable with the reading of the appointments at an Annual Conference.

Soon the seething mass of humanity melts and vanishes away. One hundred and seventy-eight traveling preachers, with their wives (some of them) and lay delegates turn their faces toward home, more than half of them to pack their small possessions and say a sad good-hy to dear friends with whom they had lahored one, two, three, four and five years. Many hearts hleed and many eyes are dimmed with tears when these pastors and people say good-by.

A touch of pathos in the stolid hreast.
Brings to the weary soul peace and rest;
And when the heart hreaks and hleeds,
The spirit on the hread of heaven feeds.

The return home; earnest discussions of places and people; the packing, the loading of the overland trucks, that seem destined to seriously cripple the husiness of the railroads; the journey by auto over good hard-surfaced roads; the arrival at the new appointment; the reception at the hands of strangers (they are not strangers, for are they not our people, and do we not love every one of them?) is an experience that is common to all the great army of Methodist itinerant preachers.

Our lot fell to us in a pleasant place; a nice, two-story parsonage, well furnished, set in the midst of beautiful shade trees; a garden well set with vegetahles; the larder supplied with good things to eat, and a hearty welcome to the pastorate of a full-time church, located in a good town that is the county seat of one of the best counties in this section. Our natural resources are great, consisting of coal, oil, gas, timher, with a farming section well adapted to growing of all kinds of grass, grain, fruits, vegetables, tobacco and cotton (hut cotton has not hecome king yet). We expect a great pastorate here with this most genial, hospitahle people. We are now enjoying a wonderful "Indian summer," with a mild atmosphere that is surcharged with pure ozone, making as healthful a climate as can be found in any country.

Our Conference is growing very rapidly in some respects. The salaries are advancing rapidly, and all the financial budget is keeping pace.

With best wishes for the dear New Orleans Christian Advocate and the dear readers, I am, yours in fond memory,

JAS. A. POE.

HUSBAND SAID WHY NOT TRY IT

Wife Said She Would. Result, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

East Hardwick, Vt.—"Last winter I was not able to do any work at all. I had backache, headache, side ache, and was sick all the time for six months. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers, and my husband said to me, 'Why don't you try it?' So I said I would, and he went and got me a dozen bottles. It has done me more good than I can ever tell, and my friends say, 'What have you done to yourself? You look so well.' I tell them it is the Vegetable Compound that makes me so well and strong. There is no use to suffer with backache and pains. I will tell every one what it has done for me." —Mrs. FRED. PRIMO, Route No. 2, East Hardwick, Vermont.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so ill that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their household duties.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Sunday School

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Dr. John W. Shackford, General Secretary of the Sunday School Board, was a welcome visitor at our recent Conference at Crowley.

The Sunday School Board at the Crowley Conference elected the following Sunday school officers:

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

Mrs. R. C. Culpepper, Elementary Superintendent.

Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Young People's Work.

Dean R. E. Smith, Superintendent of Adult Work.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, Leadership Training.

A tentative date, March 23-26, was announced for our ninth annual Sunday school conference, the place of conference to be announced later. Bishop Hay and Dr. Parker have consented to take part on the program of thia coming conference. This State-wide conference has met at the following places: Alexandria twice, Mansfield twice, Shreveport once, Ruston once, Lake Charles once, Homer once.

Our records show that one out of three of our Sunday schools supported financially our conference program by sending in an offering, the total amount being $1,591.85. The amounts by districts are as follows:

Shreveport	$316.00
Monroe	275.19
Baton Rouge	229.31
New Orleans	218.74
Ruston	218.00
Alexandria	185.62
Lake Charles	148.99

Our Conference goal for Sunday School Day offering for the coming year is $4,000, this amount to be raised by each school setting as a goal a silver offering of 10 cents from each pupil.

The following resolutions were adopted at the Crowley Conference:

"Whereas, there has been pending before the Louisiana Annual Conference for several years negotiations which pertained to the formal entrance of our church as a denomination in Louisiana into membership in the International Sunday School Association, now reorganized as the Louisiana Council of Religious Education; and,

Whereas, the International Sunday School Association has been a great pioneer in the field of Sunday school work in Louisiana and has rendered an excellent service, giving inspiration to many hundreds of pastors and lay workers; and,

Whereas, our Southern Methodist Church has as a Sunday school program a work calculated to achieve a tremendous upbuilding of our Methodist Sunday schools, and is both an adequate program and inferior to none; and since our Conference Sunday school work is accomplishing desirable results, and needs to have the whole-hearted and unhampered support of every Methodist Sunday school in the Conference; and,

Whereas, finances have been inadequate for the support of this work within the bounds of our Conference; therefore,

Be it resolved (1), That after a careful study of the merger problem and of the relationship of our Conference Sunday school program to the work of the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, it is the mind of this Conference that we should not enter into official relationship with that organzition. (2) That we express to this agency our cordial appreciation of their work in the past and wish for their success in their own particular field.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We are closing the Standard Training School at Clarksdale to-morrow—Friday. We have four courses and will issue about fifty credits. The interest has been deep from the first day and has grown deeper each day. The leaven of the gospel is being thoroughly planted in the hearts of the leaders, and it is working in the whole social order, and will continue to work until the entire lump is permeated with its transforming power. One class has been studying the origin, the genius and purpose of Methodism. This class love their church more intelligently and are better equipped for the work of the kingdom after learning more of this most wonderful, world-wide organization. Another class has been studying human nature with its deep and ever growing needs, and how to meet these needa as they are evidenced. This class has been taught by Mrs. Randolph.

Another class has studied Stories and Story Telling, the one universal and most effective method of conveying the truth. The Master used this method of teaching constantly. Mrs. Tempelton, of Atoku, Tenn., taught this class. The Missionary Message of the Bible, a new Bible course, was taught by Rev. E. S. Lewis. This course gives the mind and heart of the Master as he thinks and feels for a lost world. Through these studies we are helping to build the kingdom of God. It is gratifying to witness the whole-hearted response the people are giving to this work. We thank God and take courage.

FROM COUSHATTA, LA.

The members of the First Methodist Church of Coushatta were gratified at the return of their minister, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, who has been with us as a pastor for the last two years. Mr. Hoffpauir is very popular with all denominations, and is given a warm welsome by all. Under his energetic leadership a handsome brick church has been built. The church has advanced spiritually, and the membership has increased; the work prospers in every way. We expect fine results in the coming year with such a leader as our pastor.

MRS. EMMA STOTHART.

EVANGELISM IN MY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By W. I. Canter, D.D.

The most successful evangelistic campaign I have had in the Sunday school was on the occasion of using the literature and methods of the General Sunday School Board just as they came to me.

During the months preceding the intensive period I made use of the literature provided for the members of the Council, studying the leaflets, and discussing them with the school workers—bringing the distinct thought of the month clearly to their attention.

In addition to this, letters were sent to parents, as well as to teachers, urging them both to work and pray for the salvation of every member of the school.

The most important thing in this connection is to keep the idea of mechanical manipulation entirely out of mind, and work for a spirit-led corps of leaders.

No child or other person was overurged. Sabbath after Sabbath, the plea was made. Easter Sunday was looked forward to as a time of decision and confession. The matter began to be discussed in the homes. Inquiry became a daily occurrence.

It may here be emphasized that we sought to make all these things the vehicle of the Holy Spirit—to make it easy for him to reach the hearts of the unsaved of the school.

After the three months' period of preparation we received on Easter Sunday a number equal to 25% of the active membership of the church. And one of the most encouraging features was that they came from every department. Old men and children, with the intermediate ages, were present at the altar.

EVANGELISM IN MY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

This was only a few years ago. Some of the most active members, both official and private, in that church have come from that Easter morning group. Two at least, if not others, are preparing for life service. The growth of this church has continued until it is now more than twice as strong in every way as before.

I have used the method proposed by the Board each year with varying success. But my experience is that the more nearly we follow the plan outlined, the more fully our workers acquaint themselves with the literature, and above all, the more strongly the spiritual feature is emphasized in the list of workers, and in the work itself, the greater the success.

A Sunday school which does not lead its members to Christ is worse than a failure. It is not worth the cost in labor or money. I would say that the plan given us, with the necessary variations to meet local conditions, carried out in the right spirit each year, will help mightily in solving the problem of the future growth of the church and the salvation of the new generation.

But we must never allow it to be mechanical. And we must seek and have the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Merryville Young People Give Program.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, of the Methodist Church, the Young People's Missionary Society gave an interesting costume program on Sunday evening. Program—Chorus, "Jesus Calls Us." "The Kingdom is Coming;" Scripture reading, Romans 12, by Miss Anna Bakak, president; prayer, Lonnie Willis; duet, "Christ for the World We Sing," Clarence Fuller and Ester Mae Newton; reading, "A Delegate to District Conference," Miss Doily Grady; "The Missionary Society Around the World," was given in costume by the following, and proved unusual and attractive; Huehow, China, Miss Rakak; Osaka, Japan, Miss Lucille Franklin; Seoul, Korea, Miss Lidia Meadows; Havana, Cuba, Miss Bonnie Bell Walling; Chihuahua, Mexico, Miss Mildred Coehran; Congo Belge, Africa, Miss Alpha Houston; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Miss Lois Yawn; Janesville, U. S. A., Miss May Dawson. Song, "Follow Me;" selection by orchestra; dismissal prayer by Mr. Luther Newton.

SNAPSHOTS FROM BRAZIL.

Installment II.

If it be true that "the more kinds of people you see, the more things you do, the more things that happen to you, the richer you are," then we are all millionaires this day. Awfully diffieult reporting things, with events popping so fast.

Bello Horizonte, Brazil, Sept. 8.

Sao Paulo, Piraeieaba, Rebeirao Preto, Bello Horizonte, Juiz de Fora, Pètropolis, Rio de Janeiro, a list of plaees dear to Southern Methodism. And we have seen them all with their ehurches, parsonages, ehapels, eolleges, day schools, the Publishing House, Institutional Chureh, student groups and chureh members. We have been in the homes of friends whose names are long familiar, we have eaten at their tables, laughed with them, and rejoieed with them. Never again will Brazil be a strange field.

Miles and miles of maroon red roads as smooth and dustless as a floor, that is the road from Piraeieaba to Ribeiro Preto, and we did it in a Ford. Nobody eould tell us the distanee, but it is about 150 miles, and it took seven hours. At places from horizon to horizon the eye met only eoffee bushes, and it was easy to believe that we were in the greatest coffee field in the world. It was a lonely way. Nobody traveling but us. We met a few ox-carts, some stray eattle, a horseman or two, and some groups of people on foot. One mother raised her baby hastily so the little one might see the roaring eoncern go by. (Silent operation was not one of the virtues of that Ford.) The rude wayside shrines were objeets of interest. We ecunted ten of them, eaeh with its eross and the remains of offerings. As we neared our destination darkness eame on. The dust thickened, we met more Fords going home to the eoffee ranches, and from the top of a hill we could see the lighted city of the valley. It was a glorious ride, with thrilling scenery at intervals, but we agreed that the best sights of the day were the one we left and the one we reaehed: Misses Stradley, Schaleh, Kennedy, and Porter waving us farewell from the beautiful Piraeicabano; and the other quarette, Misses Putnam, Matthews, Moore, and Clark as they appeared in the broad glow of weleoming light that formed the Collegio Methodista doorway.

No, we did not see the diamond mines. They kept them a short but safe distanee away, up in the mountains. We did see the chureh day sehools whieh pry some of the poorest children loose from the clay setting and polish them into the likeness of Christian men and women. They are the true jewel mines of Brazil.

We saw our first leper yesterday, another one to-day. No wonder Naaman the Syrian was willing to give ten talents of silver, six thousand pieees of gold, and ten changes of raiment to be eured of that.

If those of you who have traveled the Freneh Broad Valley between Knoxville and Asheville will imagine those hills strangely eovered with royal palms, Parana pines and bamboo thickets, bananas, pineapples, and oranges, eoffee bushes, sugar eane, and blooming orchids, you will have an idea of the Valley of the Parahyta between Barru de Pirahy and Juiz de Fora.

Put a Swiss chalet or two amongst the folds of the hills, tiny eross-erowned ehapels or big ornamented churches here and there, thatehed-elay huts for the barefooted Negro people, blaek goats browsing around conieal anthills, long horned eattle with Roman noses, and burros almost hidden under their loads. There is plenty of loeal eolor. Men and women are working in the fields or along the river banks, two, four, or even twelve-team ox-carts ereak along in the dust, soldiers stroll about in the blue and searlet of the national troops, priests are present with shovel hats and long blaek gowns. Men embrace each other in fervent greeting, and there are erowds going on a pilgrimage to the shrine at Congonhas de Campo. The river eascades along absorbed in its own pusuits. Little ehildren wave hands at the train, and we conclude that humanity works and plays and worships among the mountains of Minas Geraes much as it does among the mountains of Tennessee.

We are not in the least deceived. We recognize you at onee, Linimento de Sloan (Sloan's Liniment), Ageneia Ford e Fordson, Underwood Maehina de Eseriver (Underwood Typewrlter), Farina Lactael Nestles (Nestles' Food), and Dr. Ayres' Salsaparilha. Your Portuguese eostume is no disguise, and you do not look a bit better on Brazilian billboards than you do in the States.

There are a few adverse superlatives which need to be used about the approaeh to Bello Horizonte; the roughest road, the queerest ears, the hardest seats, the least elean diner,

Hear What This Woman Says

Jacksonville, Fla.—"Two or three years ago I had bad health. I suffered with my head a great deal and was weak and nervous. My doctor said I should take a good tonie and reeommended Dr. Pieree's Favorite Prescription. By the time I had taken two bottles of the 'Prescription' I was feeling all right—had regained my strength and was relieved of the headaehes and the nervousness. I hope to help others by recommending Dr. Pieree's Favorite Preseription."—Mrs. L. H. Winter, 628 Rosselle St.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old-style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size, thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

TURN TO THE RIGHT.

When you walk along the streets of an American city now you will find that frequently you have to turn to the left or collide with some person whose feet have not yet been Americanized. In his own country he turned to the left, and his feet insist upon pursuing that fashion here.

That small thing illustrates a big fact. Americans are learning to turn to the left, in social observances, in morals, and in their institutional ideals—all to avoid collision with alien purpose.

We have talked a great deal in this country of assimilating the newcomer. Instead of assimilating him, we are being assimilated by him.

And with the new purpose now so resolutely held in Congress, to give to the country a wise and restrictive immigration law, and with Americanization projects in operation under the churches, reform societies, schools, and clubs, it is time for American citizens to stop all their turning to the left and come back to the good old fashion to Turn to the Right.

As we walk our streets let us Turn to the Right. Let foreign feet change their custom. They will learn after a time to accommodate themselves to the right custom of this country.

In our acceptance of books and plays let us Turn to the Right. If necessary, let us have legal and moral collision with the decadent literature and drama which imported and unmoral intellectuals are delivering to American youth. These overripe intellectuals are pandering to their own vicious taste and to their greed for money, and are seeking to corrupt the taste of America. There is one quick remedy. Let us Turn to the Right and compel these aliens to Turn to the Right or else to collide with an irresistible force.

Let us Turn to the Right once more in our observance of the Sabbath day. The peoples who have swarmed in here from continental Europe, with no regard for Sabbath observance in the Protestant sense, would make God's holy day a time of riotous pleasure. They turn to the left on Sabbath day, and our all too tolerant Americans are turning to the left to avoid collision. Let us Turn to the Right, no matter what it costs.

Let us Turn to the Right on the reading of the Bible in the public schools. If Bolshevists, atheists and others want to turn to the left, never mind. Turn to the Right in the historic American fashion. It is sanctified in the law of God and in the traditions of this country.

Let us all quit turning to the left to accommodate the ignorant and arrogant purpose of the alien.—Christian Statesman.

ENOUGH OF THE ARMCHAIR.

We have had enough of armchair, pulpit or merely "spoken" Christianity. What is needed is to put acted Christianity on the stage of history, or, if you will, to make it a dominating social force, as Buddhism, Hinduism, and Mahommedanism are dominating social forces in certain communities which profess them. Hence there is a connection, and a deep one, between play-acting and religion. The trouble about our religion is that for the most part it remains an unacted drama in our social life. And for that reason its deepest truth escapes us. In spite of all the eloquence and the arguments employed to make it clear—L. P. Jacks.

15% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

FROM GEORGETWN. MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: To my delight we were returned to Georgetown for another year, and say, a cyclone struck the parsonage on the night of the 15th, but nothing was injured but the dining table.

The people of the town, both Methodist and Baptist, brought in good things to eat, until it seemed the table could support no more.

May the blessing of God rest upon every one that helped to make the pastor's heart glad. Our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places, yea, we have a goodly heritage.

We are planning for, praying for, and hoping for a great year in the Lord.

W. W. NELSON, Pastor.

FROM OAKDALE, LA.

In the wisdom of the powers that be and the providence of God, we have been returned to Oakdale for the fourth year. The people have given us a most gracious reception; all seem pleased with the "new preacher," and the outlook is most promising. In a home where we dined the day after Conference closed, a sweet little girl, still under 6 years, said to her mother privately, as she was about to start for school: "Tell Brother Shaw that if he had been moved, I would have cried my eyes out!" There's enough inspiration in that to carry one a long way.

Our presiding elder, Brother C. C. Wier, is entering upon his second year with faith and zeal. He keeps close to the heart of the preacher and leader, and knows the pulsebeat of his district. We have laid ourselves on God's altar anew, and expect by his grace to make this the greatest year of the four. Among our first endeavors shall be the placing of the New Orleans Christian Advocate in just as many homes as possible. We who are on the Board of Christian Literature realize how greatly our people need the paper, and how much the paper needs the support of this entire field. May God give the Advocate a gracious year.

I have addressed a personal letter to each of the stewards, urging them to be present at this very important meeting. The duty of the district stewards is to properly distribute the assessments to the charges of the district, and they should be present to attend to this important work.

I have also asked the pastors, by special letter, to attend a meeting at the same time and place for the purpose of discussing policies for the year. The three topics to be discussed are: Early Collections; Better and More Effective Organization; Pastor-Evangelism. Let every man be in his place for the greatest service possible.

NOT SOLD ACROSS THE COUNTER

He had the money and there was no end to the things that he could buy. In a vague way he knew that whenever he tossed a coin across a counter he got back not a coin but the work and skill of men and women. But then he had the money, had always had it, and they had the skill and did the work, were indeed glad to do the work. He had always enjoyed the thing he bought, his toys and sweets, his clothes and theatres, his house and automobile, his books and pictures and all the rare old beautiful things from everywhere. He dreamed, and presto! his dreams came true, all by the magic he had in his pocket. All that he wanted he got, until one day he needed, and desperately, faith, and hope, and the love of God. He would have given all that he had, had these, too, been for sale.—Albert B. Cohoe.

the poorest food, and the most comfortless surroundings we have found. There are no friendly porters to brush us, and we reached the city looking as though we had spent the summer sliding down the cellar door. But Miss Christine and Miss Jarret met us at the station, greeted us as the father did the prodigal son, whisked us to the college and popped us into three waiting bath tubs. Then Miss Johnson and Miss Morgan fed us hot chocolate, sandwiches and cookies (real American stuff), and made us so comfortable we almost purred.

Sour oranges at five for a penny make a good substitute for the water one cannot get when traveling some places.

And then there are the scholarship girls. I could give a hearty Brazilian "viva," which is a concentrated American "hurrah," for the scholarship girls. We have met them all and have had heart-to-heart talks with them, ten at Bennett, seven each at Ribeiras Preto, Piracicaba, and Bello Horizonte. They are varied types, but they have a uniform desire to make the most of opportunity and to be of service. The faculties of these schools have selected their best girls to be educated on the American scholarships. You who give of your abundance to train these girls would be proud of them.

Do you wonder why more is not said about the work and staff and the new buildings? I am leaving that wonderful narrative for the administrative secretary. I must tell, however, that we have bent attentive heads over yards of blueprints and specifications, have studied buildings and property, and have discussed for hours the possibilities of advance. The Centenary must pay its pledges to this country.

Sept. 15 is the day set for our departure to the far south of Brazil. It will take six days' travel by boat and two more by train to reach Santa Maria, where the Woman's Society of South Brazil Conference is holding its annual meeting. It reminds us of the pioneer days of meetings in the States, of which Miss Gibson tells, when the delegates went a week early to rest before the meeting, and stayed a week after it was over to rest before the home journey. More about it in the next set of brevities.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A FEW FLOWERS.

It is the custom in many homes to have a few flowers on the table at mealtime. As a rule, they are not expensive; they are not intended to be eaten, of course; as often as not, no mention is made of their being in place; yet the meal would be poorer without them. Their value arises from their beauty, their fragrance, their silent expression of the sentiment that life is infinitely more than meat and bread. The meal itself may he simple, consisting of little more than the hare necessities of life; yet the flowers make the simple meal a feast and the plain table a banquet board. Life itself is all too often a mere succession of drab commonplaces, uninteresting, monotonous, wearisome; a few flowers would make it a never-ceasing joy. The flowers of life are cheerfulness, love, sympathy, hopefulness, faith; their beauty is seen in a smile, and their fragrance is exhaled in kind words and deeds. Blessed is the man or woman who scatters a few flowers along the pathway of life!

THE BOARD OF STEWARDS.

There is no more important group of men in the economy of Methodism than the board of stewards. The success of the local church, both materially and spiritually, depends largely upon the character of the stewards, their interest in the work of the church, and the faithful performance of their duties as laid down in the Discipline. A good board of stewards can make a good church in spite of a poor preacher; and a poor board of stewards can make a failure of the pastorate of the most gifted preacher. The preacher is a transient, moving from one charge to another with more or less regularity; the stewards are permanent residents, charged with the responsibility of managing the affairs of the church year after year.

The success of the year's work will depend largely upon the vision, determination, zeal, and faithfulness of the stewards as expressed in their first meetings of the new Conference year. The fixing of the pastor's salary is no small thing, for upon it depend the peace of mind and comfort of body of the preacher and his family for a whole year. An underpaid and overworked ministry is the cause of comparative failure in more churches than we like to think of, in spite of the fact that there may be somewhere in the connection some preachers who get more than they are worth and do less than they ought to do. However, when a preacher is underpaid, it is the fault of a large group—first, the board of stewards, and then of the whole congregation; when he is underworked, it is the fault of one man—the preacher himself. As a rule, fair pay insures fair work.

Our experience with boards of stewards has convinced us that they are, as a whole, composed of as fine type of men and women as the church affords. They are upright in character, diligent in business, and they serve the Lord earnestly and faithfully throughout the year. We honor them for what they have done for the church in the past and for what they are doing for it to-day. In these important first meetings of the new Conference year we are confident they will do that which will make 1924-25 one of the best years in the history of our beloved Methodism

"LICKING STAMPS."

On Nov. 13, Mr. Otto H. Kahn, one of the foremost business men and financiers of the United States—known, indeed, throughout the world—delivered an address to young business men at the Harvard Club, New York. The whole address is well worth reading for the sake of its clear, forceful presentation of the principles that underlie all real success; for lack of space, however, we give only a quotation. We quote this passage because it is applicable to all of us, whether we are engaged in purely secular affairs or in the work of the church. Mr. Kahn said:

"Eliminate from your vocahulary in working hours the word 'perfunctory.' Every task is a test. However trivial it may be, your manner of performing it will testify, in some way and to some degree, for or against you. Shrewd observers sometimes will 'size up' a man from the way he acts in unimportant matters, rather than from his conduct in more weighty things, because it is when not observing himself, and not believing himself observed, that he is most apt to disclose an unvarnished picture of his true self.

"Let me tell you, as an instance, how and why I got my first promotion in business: The firm with which I was employed used to send out many hundreds of circulars daily. In the somewhat primitive circumstances of that day and place, sponges for the wetting of stamps were an unknown luxury. The process employed was the natural one of licking the stamps. From a sheet of one hundred stamps you tore off a row of ten, passed your tongue over the back of the row, and then by a deft manipulation despatched ten envelopes. Three of us, sitting in a line, were engaged for a certain period each day in that proceeding. By dint of strenuous application, I soon became an adept at the job, and accomplished the triumph of holding the office record as to speed in licking stamps, while yet observing the requirements of neatness and accuracy in placing each stamp straight and square in its proper place in the upper right-hand corner of the envelope. Two or three times I noticed our 'boss' standing near the place where we worked, but I had no idea that the—to me—great man would deign to observe our humble activity. After awhile, he called me before him and informed the blushing youth that I was promoted out of my turn, in recognition of the zeal, energy, and accuracy with which I had accomplished the functions of a stamp-licker. It was a valuable lesson to me, both then and in later life."

Having a faint recollection that we ourselves have at times spoken of certain tasks as "perfunctory," and having the feeling that we have derived somewhat of profit from Mr. Kahn's friendly words, we pass them along for the benefit of such as may be benefited by them.

ORPHAN CHILDREN.

Chrstmas is supposed to be a time of cheer for chilren. It is, too, thank God. But there are 40,000 Armenian and Greek orphans in the Near East Relief orphanages in Bible Lands to whom Christmas will be just the 25th of December unless American Christians remember them in their need and minister to them in the spirit of the Golden Rule. These orphans do not need toys and gewgaws—they need clothes to wear and something to eat. We can make our own children happy and still have enough left to help clothe the naked and feed the hungry. May it be a "Merry Christmas" to the little sufferers beyond the seas!

IT STILL PAYS.

It is worth while now and then to refresh our minds with the facts concerning the value of a college education. For that reason, we give the following, taken recently from one of our exchanges: "The United States Bureau of Education brings out some statistics to bolster up the self-respect of that much derided thing, the college diploma. It points out that although less than 1 per cent of all Americans are college graduates, this 1 per cent has furnished 55 per cent of the presidents, 36 per cent of the members of Congress, 47 per cent of the speakers of the House, 54 per cent of the vice presidents, 62 per cent of the secretaries of State, 50 per cent of the secretaries of the treasury, 67 per cent of the attorneys general, and 69 per cent of the justices of the Supreme Court. As it figures it, the college man's chance for eminence is 370 to 1 against the non-college man. Even more surprising is its showing that 277 times as many college men had amassed wealth as had non-college men. This proportion is expected to grow sharply in the next fifty years, for the colleges are now turning their attention largely to preparation for success in business careers."

The man nowadays who makes fun of a college education is twin-brother of the man who still believes that the old oxcart is the best means of locomotion.

THE CAMPAIGN OF MEMBERSHIP INCREASE AND EVANGELISM IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By Dr. John W. Shackford.

The General Sunday School Board has committed itself anew to a vigorous program of ingathering. This involves a well defined program of membership increase and a definite procedure in regard to a church-wide program of Sunday School Evangelism.

During the autumn and winter months there is being conducted, through the efforts of the General Sunday School Board, the Conference Sunday School Boards, and the district and local Sunday school leadership, a church-wide effort to discover and bring into the Sunday school membership those who are on the outside. The effort is being made to direct attention everywhere to the unreached of the community, the neglected areas, and those who for any reason are without religious instruction and training. Through surveys and various forms of inquiry the unreached are being discovered and efforts are being put forward to bring these into the regular membership of our Sunday school. The Board has provided literature which outlines the various phases of this membership campaign, and which is designed to give wide guidance to those who are participating in this important service.

The General Sunday School Board, however, is laying large emphasis upon the fact that the enlistment in Sunday school membership is but the first step in a process designed to bring every member of the Sunday school to the feet of Jesus Christ and into full acceptance of personal salvation through him. Throughout the year it is the mission of the Sunday school to work for the development of the pupils in the Christian life and character. But the Board has committed itself to the position that there ought at least annually to be a special season devoted to evangelism in the Sunday school. More than any other agency outside of the home the Sunday school is in a position to touch the lives of the boys and girls in a personal way for Jesus Christ. Its very contacts and associations are such that it furnishes the largest possible opportunity for the church to lead our boys and girls into a vital Christian experience. While the evangelistic aim must always be held in view, there are many reasons why the Sunday school ought to concentrate annually upon a special season of evangelism for its pupils.

In order that this evangelistic work in the school may be done with that degree of care and thoroughness which its importance calls for, the Board recommends that our schools observe some such well defined plan as the following:

"That three months of the year, or three periods in consecutive order, be devoted as follows to evangelism in the Sunday school: That the first month or period be given to the preparation of the forces, the training of the teachers, and other Sunday school workers in mind and spirit for the work of evangelists; that the second month or period be given to active evangelism in the Sunday school, in the classes, and by personal effort, this period culminating with Confession and Decision Day; and that the third month or period be given to special preparation of pupils for reception into church membership.

"The Board suggests that the program begin with January as the month of the preparation of the forces, that February be devoted to the active evangelistic campaign, leading up to Decision or Confession Day; and that the remainder of the time before Easter be used for the careful preparation of those who are to be received into church membership on Easter Sunday.

"The plan is intended to be sugestive only, and is, of course, subject to such modifications as regards the months indicated and minor details as practical considerations may demand. However, the three lines of emphasis represented by the three periods as indicated are regarded as essential to the best and most abiding results."

It should be noted that the essentials of this plan are in its three-fold emphasis—a period ot preparation of the teachers and officers, a period of active evangelism, and a period of training for church membership. There may be modifications of the plan in detail, but no plan will be adequate that neglects any one of these three essential phases of a thorough-going program of evangelism.

The Sunday School Board has prepared a series of leaflets on evangelism for the use of our Sunday schools. These are being sent out free of charge and may be ordered from the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. They include the following:

"A Practical Plan of Sunday School Evangelism."

"The Sunday School Teacher as an Evangelist."

"The Child and Evangelism."

"The Evangelization of Youth."

"Two Experiences in Evangelism with Young Men."

"Confession or Decision Day."

"Preparation for Church Membership."

"The Sunday School and the Home in Christian Evangelism."

These leaflets are designed especially for use of the officers and teachers in the period of preparation of the forces. Pastors who gather working forces together to study and pray and plan for a thorough-going evangelistic campaign in the Sunday school will find these leaflets helpful as the basis of study and planning. There is nothing frigid or final in the suggestions of the Sunday School Board, but they are offered as the outcome of experience in this field for the assistance of those who are anxious to make evangelism in the Sunday school vitally effective.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Hay fever, grippe, flu, are a very pestiferous, pestilential, communicative family. They are treacherous, silent rascals, and creep upon their victims unawares and unseen. Their favorite season is the fall, when all the myriad forms of vegetal life are dispersing pollen, and ambient air is filled with dust from the parched, dry earth, while the frequent mists and fogs hold these in store for helpless humans to breathe. We have had a dry summer and a dryer autumn. Rain, blessed rain, beneficent rain, life-giving, refreshing, cleansing, has been withheld from the dependent thirsting fields and meadows. The hurricane, that brings the moisture, gathered in its waltzing arms from the vast Caribbean, has not visited our shores with its sometime too fearsome march. So the air has been still, almost stagnant, throughout the larger portion of our Gulf States for a series of months. And now these malignant disease germs are riding the air. They are worse, more deadly, than the fabled witches astride broomsticks. No place is immune from them, darkness and light are alike to them. And they will get you, even if you do watch out. After all our sanitation, our boasted science, with all its wonder, praise, and achievement, how helpless and dependent we are! Men talk about the laws of nature, and secondary causes, and scientific discoveries, and what my rural friend might call "baccilice" and bacteria, and forget to recognize God Almighty, who made all, and is behind all, hidden, it is true, in the mystery of his divine purpose.

I am simple enough to believe if you call the lesson that I have learned from God's Word, together with some thought, observation and experience, simplicity, that our Heavenly Father holds all things, nature, winds, rain, pestilence, at his command. Men cannot escape God. He has not resigned his throne, nor laid aside his sovereign power. So in spite of all, I trust God and sneeze on.

But divine power does not necessarily interfere with free will and human agency. If you walk into a cloud of pollen in the open field, laden with disease-bearing germs, or into the foetid atmoshere of a room polluted with foul emanations from an infectious plague, you had best watch as well as pray. With the one you enlist human judgment and discretion, with the other, divine care and providence. The "grip of circumstance" is a pretty firm hold, nor does it unloose its grasp, except when a mightier power grapples therewith.

The Master gave us a great lesson as well as warning when he spoke of an armed man who keepeth his palace in peace until one stronger came upon him and took away all the armor in which he trusted. Dependence on God is not a weakness, it is frequently a source of calm courage. Sometimes we can't do anything else, but sit at his feet in faith and prayer, waiting and longing for the dawn of a better day.

But let's be careful just here. "Leaning on the everlastiug arms" does not mean lying in the shade and watchiug others gathering the grain in God's great harvest field. There is toil, heat and weariness out there, but these are the price of garnered sheaves and the joy of reaping. And this is what counts in God's kingdom. The angels know it and are sharers with you. Oh, Shepherd of immortal souls, teach us to know somewhat, at least, of the angelic joy that gives a new note in heavenly praises, when a waudering, penitent sinner comes home! The saddest passage possibly ever written under divine inspiration is, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Frequently, if not always, men must, in a sense, lose themselves to save others. "All of Christ and none of me," is the point where true life begins, the life laid up in God's storehouse, richer far than earth's treasures, deathless, eternal.

THE HIGHWAY TO VICTORY.

By Rev. George Cleaton Wilding, D. D.

There never was a period in the history of the church of our Lord Jesus Christ when such great and wonderful opportunities opened up in front of her as in our day. Fences and barriers all are thrown down, and the gates of entry to every nation of the world are wide open. Methods and means of travel are convenient, swift, comfortable, even luxurious. Human hearts are weary of all substitutes, and are hungering for the love of their Heavenly Father. And all of the modern appliances and machinery, the result of recent inventions—we need not stop to describe or even name them—lie at our feet begging to be used to benefit and bless our needy and eager fellowmen.

The church never faced more intelligent, active and powerful foes than those challenging her progressive advance to-day. And to win the day these all must be conquered and won to the standard of him whom they are now opposing. This is a stupendous undertaking and demands an intelligent, loyal, active and enthusiastic church to march out to oppose and engage them in open battle.

The first and most imortant step to this end—with a church of soundly converted men and women—is that they be fully informed and educated as to the field to be entered, the foe to be faced, and the surrounding situation. There are many valuable books floating out each year from the church publishing houses, that would help in informing and equipping the soldiers for this Holy War. We need not name these now. You will naturally learn of these later.

This all-important point is a reading, thinking church. This can be accomplished only through the medium of the church papers. The paper of your Conference should, by all means, enter every home in your territory, and be read each week by every member of each family. As your people read of the movement of the Kingdom of God, in all branches of the Lord's Zion, the great Missionary—home and foreign—Church Extension, Educational, Hospital, Orphan and other philanthropies, and of the refreshing revivals in the home churches, their hearts will be warmed, and they will be aroused to have a part in this great and blessed work.

The best way to do this is to put the church paper of your Conferences, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, in the annual budget of your local church, send a copy to each family on the church roll, and put the keenest young business men of your church in charge of the movement. When a family moves away simply transfer their paper to some new family.

After all, this is a simple and easy thing to do—is not at all difficult or burdensome. Take an average church of 300 members, there would be about 100 families on the roll. To send the church paper to all of these families would cost but very little. In a budget of $4,000, what a trifle it would be to add this small amount to it!

And think for a moment of the tremendous benefits to be derived from this slight investment. Your members grow in intelligence and information each week during the year. As a result of this they become more deeply interested in all of the affairs of the local church, the church at large, and the Lord's kingdom in general. As this interest grows they come to desire a part in this movement, and early they have found a place to work that fits them and is congenial, and soon they are found regularly in the mid-week prayer meeting.

And your pastor—what of him? The pews are well filled at the Sunday services, and he preaches to an attentive, hungry-minded congregation of well-informed people. The Sunday school is running over with scholars, teachers and enthusiasm. Everybody notices that the pastor preaches a lot better than he used to. Of course he does. How could he help it? Who can blame him for this improvement? The average duration of ministerial life and usefulness would be greatly lengthened and sweetened. And the editors and business managers of the church papers would live to be a hundred years old, and never grow gray-headed or bald inside or outside of the head. If the churches don't believe all of this prophesying let them just try the plan and see for themselves the beauty of it.

I am worshiping here in Avon Park, Florida, this winter, with the plucky little Southern Methodist organization. A few Sundays ago the pastor, Rev. W. G. Allaben, asked me to present to his congregation the claim of the Florida Christian Advocate, their Conference organ. I did so, cheerfully. The habit of a lifetime was on me good and strong. As the fathers used to say, I had "a degree of liberty." At the close of the service a meeting of the official board was held, and they voted unanimously to put this paper in the church budget. This heroic little church has but 125 members and is only four years old. If this little flock could afford to do such a brave thing, how much more easily could our larger and stronger churches do it. I am proud of this little band of noble people. It is a joy to worship with them. We Yankees feel much at home among them, and there are a lot of us here. They are as kind to us as if we were their very own. Long may they live and thrive!

Now, having attended to these Conference organs, let us give our full attention to another item of very great importance. While you have some sixteen weekly Conference organs, there is but one general paper for the entire field of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This is the Nashville Christian Advocate. I read regularly each week, the leading papers of the three Methodist denominations, and the United Brethren, the Baptist and the Presbyterian churches. I do not hesitate for a moment in pronouncing your general organ fully equal to any of them. And I am a "Northern Methodist." So, there now! Yes, your "Great Official" is a noble paper. It is a perfect job of typographical and mechanical execution and work, printed on excellent stock—a most handsome paper. And it is ably edited and packed to the brim with the choicest of reading matter. Every official of your great church should be a reader of this able and inspiring weekly. I don't see how any of them can get on without it. I am sure that I would not try to, and I am a Northern Yankee. Need I say more?

It is dirt cheap at $2.50 per year. One good cigar or a soda will pay for this paper for two weeks. Think of it! And yet hundreds of our church officials indulge themselves in these luxuries and many others just as needless, and yet claim that they cannot afford to bless their homes by the weekly visits of this splendid paper. The good Lord only knows how much they are losing by this course. As the old adage puts it, they are "saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung hole." If this paper were read each week in the homes of all your officials, it would be the dawning of a new day for your great church. I should love to live to see that golden day.

I may say that I have taken this step at my own option and responsibility. No official of your church is in any way back of me in it.

TWO SAINTLY VOICES FOR UNIFICATION.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Not my voice, nor my pen speaks in this article.

On a day in our General Conference of 1914, when the matter of unification was under consideration, that saintly man, so widely known and so generally and deeply loved, Bishop E. E. Hoss, was presiding, and took occasion to say, with deep earnestness:

"During the past twenty years I have been on the Federation Commission. We have moved slowly, very slowly; so slowly at times that I have been almost in despair of any practical results. But, brethren, I do not desire to despair while Jesus Christ, with all power in heaven and in earth in his hands, is sitting at the right hand of the Majesty on high. I think that you are moving on the right lines. This is not final; nobody dreams it is final; no one man is wise enough to frame a final plan of union of all Methodism. We should go on; and after a time Almighty God will put his hand in, and this thing come to pass. We cannot cure all the ills of the past by rehearsing them. Some things are buried; let them stay buried until the angel of the resurrection comes. I pray God that the day may come somehow and at some time in which all the forces of Methodism may be organized into such a form as to constitute an organized, disciplined army for the spread of the kingdom of God."

I devoutly wish that we all could be led to ponder well this one sentence at least: "We cannot cure all the ills of the past by rehearsing them."

In 1915 Bishop Earl Cranston, Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, another beloved and far-seeing saint, said:

"As for myself, I speak for Methodist unification because I must. Woe is me, if I preach not this gospel of reconciliation. Are the separated bodies of Methodism, for example, faithfully representing the normal apostolic church, with its one body, one spirit, one Lord, one faith, one baptism? Let us come still closer to the issue. Today, now, in America, under one national flag, does our divided Episcopal Methodism fairly express to the world the saving grace of Jesus Christ? Our answer must be that, on the contrary, these two Methodisms among all ecclesiastical bodies of to-day present the most conspicuous example of perverse persistency in perpetuating strife where unity should prevail.

"It ought not to require argument to show that an apostolic church will obey Christ. The chief discouragement in the outlook for unification today is that the most distinctive teachings and commands of our divine Lord are forgotten or ignored in his family strife. It is not preposterous to ask, Do these two Episcopal Methodist apostolic churches recognize the authority of their acknowledged Lord? If they do, why are they not one communion to-day? And if all their preachers and people and properties and institutions really belong to him, why should the first question in considering any proposed plan of union be, What will the plan give to us, and what to them? Who will have the better in the bargain? It does seem as if these two apostolic bodies should be asking rather, What will our Lord receive by the arrangement? What advantage will accrue to his kingdom? What waste will be avoided? What increase of power and efficiency to his Gospel and its influence among men may be expected?"

YOKED TOGETHER.

We read the other day of a couple of Methodist preachers who were trying to raise money for church purposes, and the writer described them as "a team of workers that pulls any load to which they are hitched." We didn't know the men and had never heard their names before, but we were struck by the way the writer described them, and it came to us that there were not a few cases where the church and the world had a right to ask that any team when yoked together pull its full load.

One common team is the preacher and the official board. The church has yoked these together and the load they are expected to pull is usually heavy enough to demand of each member of the team his full pulling power. A lazy or an indifferent preacher is a crime; and a lazy or an indifferent board seems, if anything, even worse. For the church's sake, for the community's sake, and even for the preacher's and the board's sake the load should be moved, and the work should be done. And this demands close co-operation. They must not only pull, but they must pull together.

It is a tragedy when the minister and the church's official representatives fail to adjust themselves to each other, and the whole church suffers because of it. Perhaps the minister is a little too aggressive, perhaps the board is a little too slow; perhaps the minister wants his own way, and perhaps the board is just the same; perhaps the fault is all with the minister or perhaps it is all with the board; but in any case when they fail to pull together the work is soon at a standstill.

What shall be done? It is easy enough to move the minister and to get another, but too often the board which could not work with Peter finds it just as hard to adjust itself to Paul. The habit of balking, once acquired, is not easy to abandon. The old-fashioned idea was to have a revival and to trust to the Spirit of God to put more religion into the hearts of some unsanctified brethren. And smile as we may, this seems to be the best and, in some cases, the only remedy. There is nothing that takes the cantankerous spirit out of men like the Spirit of Christ: and there is nothing like the baptism of the Spirit to stop men fighting each other and start them fighting the devil.

Yoked together! Husband and wife; parents and children; teachers and scholars; employer and employees; the man of millions and the man in the shack; what a world it is, with our happiness and prosperity linked inseparably with the happiness and prosperity of others! And how easy it is to make the yoke gall when one of the teams refuses to pull his share. Fortunately, the most of us really mean to deal fairly; we really aim to be square; we like to feel that we are not slackers nor shirkers in any of life's tasks. But most of us, probably, have yet much to learn in the matter of adjusting our movements to those of our yoke-fellows. Yet this way alone lies happiness and true prosperity.—Christian Guardian.

UNIFICATION.

By Hon. Baxter McFarland.

The Methodist Church separation plan of 1844 contained solemn agreements prohibiting invasion by either church, North or South, of territory of the other church.

These wise and indispensable provisions for the protection of both were intended to be permanent unless modified or repealed by mutual consent.

It was not long, however, before Northern Methodists, without consent of Southern Methodists, began erecting for their own use within the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, churches, parsonages, school institutions and other buildings, subject to the control and jurisdiction and owing exclusive allegiance to the Northern Methodist Church just as if situated within its territory, in flagrant violation of their agreements and of their "brotherly love" obligations as well, which wrongful invasions they have increasingly cotinued, against the protests of Southern Methodists, to this day. Thus originated so-called "overlapping" or "altar against altar."

These invasions resulted in the virtual establishment of "a kingdom within a kingdom"—imperium in imperio—a dangerous menace, dreaded by all peoples since governments were established amongst men. From a church point of view, they came as invaders, and remain as intruders. Their members are amongst us, but are not of us. They stand apart, aloof, like intruding colonists of a far-away mother country; aliens inevitably becoming more and more alienated, and less and less welcome, as the years go by. This has caused much wrong and injury to Southern Methodism, and has been going on, over our protests, including the period of negotiations for unification, ever since, with no prospect of discontinuance or rectification—unrepented of, and still persisted in.

The reason given for their bad faith is, according to high authority, that "times have changed since 1844"—a view of agreements and obligations which robs them of all force and sanctity.

Advocates of the several plans of unification dwell upon the evils of overlapping and strenuously urge it as an all-sufficient practical reason for adopting the present plan, just as if its adoption would assure the speedy discontinuance and ratification of that wrong.

Many Southern Methodists doubtless will be surprised to learn that there is no reason whatever to suppose that the Northern Methodist Church will put an end to the practice if the pending plan is adopted. That it will then do so is a gratuitous and baseless assumption fully contradicted by the evidence bearing upon the point.

That church, although earnestly urged by Southern Methodists to do so, coldly refused to permit any agreement in this plan to discontinue or rectify it, knowing that the refusal would lessen the likelihood of its adoption by Southern Methodists; the reason given for the violation of their agreements in the plan of 1844, that "times have changed since 1844;" the obvious absence of all sense of responsibility for their wrongdoing and their utter indifference to it; the refusal of the intruders to consent to any change, and many other facts and circumstances, unmistakably evince their intention to continue "overlapping," right or wrong, unification or no unification. So far, that church has declined unification, if it depends upon discontinuance by it of "overlapping." Many Southern advocates seem to think that because unification was urged as the way to stop overlapping, it would stop if unification takes place.

Unification, of and by itself, would not and could not put an end to the evil, more especially as the Northern Church is determined to continue the wrong at its will and pleasure.

When attention of advocates of the plan is called to the circumstances under which overlapping begun and has been continued, they promptly retort that the Southern Methodist Church invaded Northern Methodist territory, thereby seeking to justify the former by the latter by way of set-off before the public. They forget that they are as deep in that mire as opponents are in the mud—both belong to the Southern Methodist Church. Had they opposed the alleged Southern invasion at the time, or since, it might have been prevented. Failing then, or since then, to do so, the so-called invasion cannot be used by them now solely for their own benefit in this controversy with their brethren. In any event, to the Northern Methodist Church alone pertains that right, and that church has not availed itself of it, nor has it offered to rectify its own wrong in a mutual adjustment. It remained for advocates of the plan to seek to use it against their own church and against their Southern Methodist brethren for their own advantage in this argument, and for no other reason. According, however, to high authority, there has been no invasion by Southern Methodists of the Northern Methodist jurisdiction, which was only touched in a few places by the movement in 1870, and not invaded, as in the case of overlapping by the Northern Methodist Church.

The silence observed during the discussion of the several plans by many advocates respecting the willful wrong resulting in overlapping; their readiness to excuse its perpetrators, and to accuse their own church of a like wrong, and other things, show their biased attitude. Not a few appear so obsessed and infatuated by the idea of unification that they seem willing to attain it under almost any plan. Such a state of mind and feeling does not lend itself to wisdom in the consideration and determination of the many profoundly important questions in that hazardous movement.

The published views of many advocates betray scant knowledge of numerous vital facts, and as little of the meaning, significance and bearing upon the situation of many others.

A very large majority of the millions of Southern church members have not fully investigated the subject. Comparatively few take Methodist church papers and magazines, and their access to sources of definite information is limited. Yet they are as much concerned as any Methodists, whatever their station, and have as much right to a full understanding of the matters involved as other fellow-members more fortunate in their situation and opportunities. Too many advocates of the plan seem to take the view that the opinions of those in authority—the few—should be adopted at once and without question, the great body of the laymen having little to do but accept the dicta and fall into line. Many of the millions, however, believe it more consonant with modern ideas that a church movement of this kind, especially one of such transcendent importance, should not be made without the fullest deliberation, and should not be made at all unless based practically upon the informed consent of the lay membership, as well as of those in authority.

That, set in the scant framing of a small beginning, and in a different age, a plebescite was not provided for in the church government for an unforeseen contingency of this kind, is no reason for stifling or disregarding the wishes of lay Methodists, who furnish the money and means to carry on and extend the church and its varied institutions of learning and other establishments, by those invested with authority. Times have greatly changed since the primitive organization of the early church. The trend toward democratic principles and policies has forced their recognition in all bodies invested with governmental powers in a large degree throughout the civilized world. To shut out the wishes of lay members in matters like this would be conspicuously autocratic and archaic. This is not to criticise the government of the Methodist Church. Whilst the church did not provide a plebiscite, it did not interdict one, or the use of other means adapted to the same end, if need should arise. It is not enough to say that no plebiscite has been authorized by the church, as a reason for ignoring the wishes of laymen in this church movement. It is not provided that the wishes of laymen should not be consulted and acted upon in such a matter. What is insisted upon is that justice requires that their wishes should be ascertained and cousulted iu a great movement that affects and concerns them so deeply as does this plan of unification with another church—especially iu view of past history deeply affecting both.

It is the plaiu duty of those iu authority to take steps to ascertain the wisiics of laymen and to have such regard for their wishes iu this movement as is called for by the prevailing and enlightened influences of the times.

This is the true, wise and just course to pursue in determining the issuc, and it can be done consistently with all existing rights and authority. For those in authority to go their way regardless of everything except their own wishes, views and preferences would be wholly unjustifiable, merely because of the absence of a plebiscite or other expressed meaus of ascertaining the wishes of the laymen.

In urging the ascertainment of the wishes of lay members coucerning the present plan of unification, it is not at all the writer's idea to submit the question of its adoption or rejection to a majority or any specified proportion of the members, any more than it is to leave it to any proportionate vote of those in authority.

If upon the inquiry it is not found that practically all of the laymeu and laywomen are in favor of the plau of unificatiou, those in authority should not adopt it, even if all in authority should personally favor it. Practically all the membership should favor it to justify the movement. Unification is not in the category of questions to which proportionate votes are applicable iu the ordinary routine matters of the church, but is of a fundaiuental nature quite apart; is iutegral iu the life and destiny of the church itself, and its membership is not subject to be dragged into such relationship against its will, or the will of a part of it, by the decision of a few haviug authority for controlling and guiding iu other matters.

The power and authority for so radical a change resides in the body of the membership, and has not, it is respectfully submitted, been delegated to any represeutatives it has created for other nccessary purposes. Such a thing as unification was not within contemplation when making its laws and regulations. The power to make that movement resides in the church membership and must receive the sanction of the body of the church, its members, in order to be effectual. Even if it might be effectual, it most assuredly would not be expedient, or wise, or just, to unify against the wishes of the lay membership or of practically any part of it. Old and tried members and brothers must not be offended or lost in the struggle to secure affiliation with another—and probably uncongenial body.

It seems to be the policy of many advocates in power to rush the measure through, much as do political managers, rather than Christians dealing in Christian affairs involving difficult and doubtful church questions. Many of our Southern brethren, lay and other, are taking things too much for granted in disposing of the proposed plan. Numbers of our ministers and bishops long ago decided in favor of unification with too little regard for the plan, or for the wishes of the lay members. They have favored every plan proposed, and are manifesting rising impatience with others who hesitate or oppose.

They urge the utmost confidence in the "brotherly love" obligations of Northern Methodists "to do what is right," and are assuming to criticise and reprimand Southern Methodists who decline unification upon any plan failing in adequate safeguards, as narrow-minded and prejudiced. Such child-like confidence in the "brotherly love" obligations of our Northern Methodist friends is amazing, in view of the easy-going way in which those friends put aside "brotherly love" obligations and the most sacred agreements and understandings to invade our jurisdiction, and brought on us the evils of "overlapping," and who ever since have lived in the daily violation of both, and are determined to continue so doing at their will and pleasure, despite their full knowledge of the wrong and injury they are inflicting upon us, against oft-repeated protests.

THE MEHODIST ORPHANS' HOME.

Dear Brother Carley: Our people will be glad to know that our new building for a dormitory is assuming splendid proportions. The workmen are to the second story and pushing the work as fast as they can.

It will be roomy, with many added conveniences and comforts, with safety and protection the old one did not have. Mr. M. S. Enochs, of Jackson, says it is the best planned building ever drawn by Mr. Austin, the architect.

Not only are the Superintendent and workers deeply interested and watch its progress daily, but children are anticipating a great time when they can move in. They are anxious to help, and often ask us how we are getting on "getting the money."

As Commissioner, we are grateful to the pastors and people for their deep interest, and bespeak the same for another year, that the children may be properly provided for. Think of twenty-two of these girls in the high school last session, several at Millsaps College this year, and these colleges will take more of them as they are prepared to enter. Eighteen graduated from high school in six years past.

There are ninety girls in the Home. One of our girls became a missionary, teaching in Holding Institute, Laredo, Tex.

The boys are a manly set, are under fine Christian influence, taught to work, go to school, go to church and Sunday school, and are as responsive as any lot of boys that can be found.

Many tender experiences come the way of the workers; and these will appeal to any people who love God.

Write the Commissioner and open the way for me to visit every church on your charge, and we shall try and help the people to love God and humanity more.

Yours in His service.

SARDIS DISTRICT MEETING.

Dear Advocate: The presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Lewis, and the ministers of the Sardis District had a great preachers' meeting in the Methodist church at Hernando, Miss., on Dec. 2, in the interest of the Kingdom of God, and how best meet the great problems and obligations resting upon our church to-day. We had a most inspiring meeting and a splendid time together. One who has been in the ministry for many years said that it was the best preachers' meeting he had ever attended.

Our presiding elder had planned a splendid program, consisting of excellent advice and many helpful suggestions for all of us.

During the meeting six great obligations of our church were announced and discussed as follows:

1. Our Hospital: This great cause was represented by Dr. L. H. Estes, who gave us the plan for raising $10,000 from our district for a memorial room.

2. Orphans' Home: We were urged to get in the minds of our people a sentiment that will enable Sardis District to do her part for our Orphans' Home building.

3. The Centenary: A sentiment was expressed that we give Mr. W. D. Hawkins our co-operation in winding up the Centenary work.

4. Superannuate Endowment: A plea was made that Sardis District raise her quota for this great cause.

5. Benevolences: Brothers W. S. Shipman, C. A. Northington, and W. M. Young, who have always been successful in raising their benevolences, told us the methods they used. The secret of their success has always been visiting their members and praying with them.

6. Educational Interests: This cause was represented by Rev. J. H. Holder, who announced that this was the beginning of the fifth year and urged us to make it the last by getting all pledges paid in full. He also spoke in the interest of the Special for Grenada College, explaining how important that $15,000 be raised before the first of January.

Our presiding elder gave a splendid talk on how to meet the above six great facts before the church, which consisted of the following points:

1. Faith in God; faith in the cause; faith in our people; and faith in ourselves.

2. By developing the great program of the church.

3. By circulating church literature among our people, with special reference to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Nashville Christian Advocate.

4. By using the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and Missionary Society in the interest of the church.

5. By getting as many people as possible, official members and others, out to the quarterly conferences to hear specially prepared messages in the interest of the work of the church.

Before the close of the meeting, Rev. T. M. Bradley presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

"1. We, the ministers of the Sardis District, assembled, do express our deepest thanks to the pastor, Rev. E. B. Sharp, and his good people for the splendid hospitality extended us.

"2. We also pledge our loyal support to Rev. J. T. Lewis, our efficient presiding elder.

"3. We pledge ourselves and will urge our people and laymen of this district to support the church in the program before us this year, relative to the Superannuate Endowment, the Centenary, the Orphans' Home, Benevolences, the Hospital, and educational interests. Especially at this time is it important that we raise the $15,000 Special for Grenada College during December. This must be done to save our church school.

"4. In May of next year we pledge ourselves to raise $10,000 for our new Methodist hospital in Memphis.

"5. We urge our people to prayer and a more loyal support of our church."

After the adoption of the above resolutions, the meeting closed with a consecration service.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AND THE REVIVAL.

By L. F. Sensabaugh, Director of Leadership Training.

There has been a tendency of late on the part of some who have not thought through the problem of evangelism, to set the program of religious education over against the program of evangelism as it is expressed in the revival effort. The setting of the two great enterprises of the kingdom in antithesis one to the other will lead to many misunderstandings and necessarily hinder the work of the church in promoting the Kingdom of Christ. The spirit and genius of Methodism makes a very definite place for each of these great movements. Wesley and the church fathers were as definitely committed to the idea of Christian nurture and training of childhood and youth as they were committed to the revivalistic effort for reaching mature persons who had gone away into sin and had departed from God.

One program represents the effort of the church in the conservation of the God-implanted capacity for religion and the construction and development of Christian character by utilizing the educative processes. Hand in hand with this line of endeavor, Methodism makes a place for a great program of reclamation, reformation and reconstruction. The combination of these principles distinguishes Arminianism from Calvinism. It will be a sad day for Methodism should the time ever come when the leaders of these great movements within the church shall so misunderstand the mission of Methodism as to promote one of these great efforts to the injury of the other.

The story which follows is taken from a paper in the Supervised Study Course on Rural Sunday School Management, written by the wife of a pastor in our Western territory. It clearly indicates the interdependence and intimate relation that should exist between the leaders of these two movements. I submit the story with all of its implications to the careful consideration of all of those who would place their sole dependence upon a program of religious education, as well as to those who place their sole dependence upon the evangelistic effort as it is expressed in the periodic revival. In answer to the question, "If you were pastor of a circuit with as many as three unorganized, indifferent Sunday schools, how would you go about building up a Sunday school spirit on the charge?" the following experience is related:

"In answer to this question, may I tell you just what we have done? In one town out in the hills, there was a church building, but the membership of the organization consisted of about five old folks who had not been away from their community in years. They seemed to care very little whether there were religious services in the town or not. It was a common affair for dances to be held on Sunday, and everybody went and took their dinner. Our hearts ached for the children and young people. Some of the old people said they had tried to have a Sunday school, but by the time the literature would arrive the enthusiasm was all gone.

"During a meeting, which could only have night services, for no one would attend during the day, we decided to have a story hour in the morning for all the children of any age who would come. I began by using our Beginners' literature, giving the story to five children on the first day. The second morning we had eight, and the class continued to increase to about twenty. Some of the children were as old as 15, but since they had had no religious training they knew nothing of the wonderful stories in the Bible. We learned that a little widow of about 18 years of age, who had a little daughter, and had returned to her father's home near the church, had been taking the baby over to the church each Sunday to recite a Sunday school lesson which she had taught her at home. Though there was only one teacher and one pupil, we felt that this was a Sunday school to build on. There was no other material at hand, so this little woman was appointed superintendent, teacher, secretary, treasurer and organist. She had already been acting as janitor. She took the story-hour class and went on with the work after the meeting had closed.

"When we returned to this appointment for the next preaching day, this Sunday school had grown to twenty-five in number. The superintendent had secured some of the older pupils to help as they could; there was money enough on hand to buy a quarter's literature. About this time the public school appointed a young lady teacher, who took charge of the Junior group of the Sunday school; so there were two classes, and both of them grew.

"During the first meeting a young man was converted and wanted to do something, so he was put to work among the young people and organized a class. The people were so scattered through the hills that the parents had to come to bring their younger children, and in this way we reached both the parents and children; and this young man held the parents in his class for quite a while.

"We left this charge three years ago, but the other day I learned that the old dance hall was padlocked, the owner had become a member of the church, and the church now had a live membership of fifty."

Surely a program of religious education, even though it was being conducted by a lone widow for her baby girl, contributed its share to the building of the kingdom in that community, as also did the revival which discovered a young man and set him to a definite task. Rev. Arthur Moore says, "The redemptive forces of a community are the resident forces." The meeting served as a means of awakening the community; the young man and the widow and the little child were "resident forces."

Let no one who understands the spirit and genius of our Methodism undertake to set religious education over against revivalism, or revivalism over against religious education. Together, they must be used; and as Methodism continues to use both of these great channels, her power and influence for advancing the kingdom will be increased.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo

LET US GIVE THANKS FOR WHAT HAS BEEN DONE AND PRESS ONWARD WITH ENTHUSIASM TO DO MORE.

When these lines are read, undoubtedly $1,250,000 will have been collected on Special Effort quotas for Superannuate Endowment. The first fiscal year of the movement will end March 31, 1925. By that time the total given above is practically certain to increase to at least $1,500,000. Such an accomplishment for the first year is not to be despised. In fact, considering the conditions out of which this figure has been reached, it is remarkable. We have already succeeded enough to prove that we can raise the $10,000,000 in five years if we give ourselves faithfully to the task throughout the entire perlod.

A LITTLE CHANGE FOR VARIETY'S SAKE.

Since the beginning of the Special Effort, I have published weekly a page in every Conference organ of the church in behalf of the movement. After this week this matter will discontinue In the Conference organs until March 1, 1925. Then it will begin again, and continue weekly until about Dec. 1, 1925. There are two reasons for this break in the usual proceedings: Frist, it will save a considerable amount ($6,000) on the expense of such publicity; and, second, it will provide a change of pace, which is absolutely necessary to sustain interest in any kind of effort over a prolonged period.

This does not mean that a vacation time has come for Special Effort workers. On the contrary, these workers are urged to give themselves to the task with greater abandon than before. Let it not be said of us that we cannot go ahead with this work except when somebody is tootin' a horn. Some athletic teams play furiously when the cheering is loudest. But there are other such teams so perfectly poised that they go right on winning notwithstanding the silence of the band. Surely we love the cause of the superannuates enough to work for it with determination under any and all conditions.

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE ON THE JOB.

During the three months' silence of the writer in the Conference organs, his enthusiasm for the cause will be published weekly in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) as usual. If any preacher of the church does not take this valuable paper, now is a good time to become a subscriber. It will help him to keep informed about the progress of the Special Effort, and render him good servlce in many other ways. The same can be stated concerning the lay members. If you have been reading weekly about the Forgotten Man in your Conference organ, and you want to keep posted on the subject, why not order the Christian Advocate (Nashville) on trial for the months of December, January and February? Its page twenty-eight will give you the information every week. When once you have this valuable paper in your home, you will never be willing to stop its coming.

By the way, this is a good place to state something about our general organ (Christlan Advocate—Nashville) that ought to be emphasized. Sinve November, 1918, six years, this paper has published page twenty-eight weekiy in the interest of the Forgotten Man. And not one penny has been charged for this valuable space in ail that time. Perhaps no other means of publlclty has accomplished more for the cause. Surely every pastor ought to be grateful enough for this service to secure a few subscriptions from hls people for the paper.

THOSE WHO PAY ONE-FIFTH OR MORE.

For several months the Conference organs have published weekly the names of the charges paying one-fifth or more of their total quotas. This information, concerning additlonal charges doing this, will continue to appear, but as already stated it will be found only in the Chrlstlan Advocate (Nashville) during the next three months. Beginning April 1, 1925, which will be the start of the second year of the Special Effort, the names of all the charges paying two-fifths or more of their total quotas will be published, not only in the Christian Advocate (Nashville), but also in all of the Conference organs. Every pastor should not only be anxlous to have hls charge published as paying at least one-fifth by March 31, 1924, but also he shouid be anxious to have hls charge published as among the first paylng the second year's portion of the total quota. Remember, the second year of the Speclal Effort begins Aprll 1, 1925. Get your second year's portion right now and send it to the Board of Finance, Security Bullding, St. Louis, Mo. In this way your charge will be among the first published as paying two-fifths or more of the total quotas.

DO THE SAME THING IN A NEW WAY.

Have you initlative? If I should state that you have not, you would be fiercely angry with me. Of course you have it, because you are a live one and not a dead one. Then use your initiative. Plan a new and appealing way to raise your second year's portion of your Special Effort quota. Think of something unique, and then follow your vision. When you succeed with your plan, write me all about it. I wlii publish it for the benefit of others. It seems to me that out of 6,500 preachers working at this task, there ought to be brought out and worked out some wonderfully clever ideas for getting the amount due the second year. Come on, let us work together on this thing. In this way we will not only succeed but have a jolly time doing it.

PLEASE KEEP THIS IN MIND.

During the first year of the Spccial Effort a great deal of literature and supplics were sent to every charge in the church in care of the pastor. Nothing will be sent to every charge in the church for the second year, unless it is requested. If the literature which was sent a year ago was carefully used, the people ought to be thoroughly informed about the cause. It remains now to appeal to them on the subject each year for five years, or until the charge has paid its total quota in full.

Of course if any charge needs literature or supplies, such as the Board has in stock, a request can be made for the things needed, and all such requests will have prompt attention. But please do not wait to make such requests until almost the time the supplies are needed, for it takes time to deliver parcel post packages. Also, the pastor might look around to see if the charge has not sufficient supplies left over from those received a year ago. Many presiding elders have told me about seeing packages of Forgotten Man literature stored in pastors' offices, and none of it has ever been distributed. See what you have before ordering more!

AN APPEAL TO MY BROTHERS IN THE PULPITS.

Mr. Preacher, do you realize that the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is a movement looking to the old-age comfort of broken-down and retired preachers? Do you know that right now is the only real opportunity we have ever had to get this endowment? Do you understand that not again in our lifetime will we, you and I, have a chance to do this thing? If these convictions have not come to you, they should. As sure as fate, we have a fighting chance now to do something worth while for our fraternity of preachers in this age and that of all ages to come. But that chance is already one year old. It is an elusive, short-lived thing. In four years it will have spent itself—then it will be superannuated. Think of it! It is bad enough to superannuate a preacher without a comfortable support, but O the tragedy of superannuating a chance to make provision for the needs of the superannuated preacher! I am in this fight to win. I shall give my best. Not once shall you find me shirking. Will you join with me in such consecration to this holy task, that no person of any generation hereafter can say that the thing could have been done if the preachers of this age had not failed to do their duty when opportunity offered?

Remember, please, that all payments on quotas must be sent direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Thou didst not shun death; shun not life.
'Tis more brave to live than to die.
—Owen Meredith.

The Home Circle

THE PIECE DE RESISTANCE.

(A True Story.)

By Mrs. E. L. S. Middleton.

School had "turned out" for the Christmas holidays. Joyous shouts of "Hurrah for Christmas," "Ma's already killed our gobbler!" "Ole Santy's goin' to bring me the biggest doll!" the town children called to each other as they noisily gathered up their books and hurried on down tho hill to their homes.

Only eight-year-old Lucy Strong seemed to regret the vacation, and very slowly passed out without a word to her companions. For once her eyes failed to feast on the bronzed outlines of the autumn woods in the distance or on the nearby pretty homes, as she followed her brother Tom down the street to the woods road that led to her country home. She walked slowly with head down, for there was to be no Christmas in her home—"no Santy nor nothin'."

So busy was she with her own thoughts, Mrs. Graham, her Sunday school teacher, had to call twice to make her hear—Mrs. Graham, Lucy's ideal woman with the ideal home and surroundings. "Ma'am," said Lucy, "Why, Mrs. Graham, I did not hear you call," as she hurried back to the gate and waited while Mrs. Graham came on down the walk, stopping to pick the biggest, freshest violets to pin on Lucy's coat, as was her custom. "They are as blue as your eyes, my dear. I've a message for your mother, Lucy, but do eat some of my failure cake while you wait—my boys always like my failures—so rich they fall, you see. Tell your mother we are planning to accept her oft-repeated invitation and spend the day with her—Christmas day—if she will promise to bring you all to us for the day after. It is our preaching day, you know, and our new pastor will be with us, so I am saving my dinner until then. You just must come, all of you. Tell her to let me know by some one passing to-morrow." Assuring Mrs. Graham that her mother would be delighted with the plan, Lucy hurried on.

To take dinner with the Grahams! The Grahams were easily the wealthiest people in town, and their home was as a heaven to Lucy: the lovely pictures, the silver and china, the dinners noiselessly served by trained servants, and the parlor, with its great piano, where Lucy had moments of stolen ecstacy when her untrained fingers wandered over the keys in imaginary harmony.

What joy! Christmas with the Grahams! Lucy's feet fairly flew on air, then came to earth with a plunk! Oh, the Grahams were to eat dinner with her mother, first! Only the night before, her father had told them that there would not be the usual dinner this year—cotton was so low and taxes so high! And then only last week he had sold all the turkeys while prices were good. Even the fat hens had been sacrificed, for big sister must be kept in school; for wasn't she to teach and help next year?

And now the Grahams, of all people, for Christmas dinner! True, there was the smoke house, with its treasure; troughs of fresh meat, barrels of red apples, nuts, ropes of popcorn and such things; but what was all this when there was "no turkey nor nothin'." Mrs. Graham and her family had spent the day with her mother often in the summer, but then there were great platters of fried chicken and corn, melons and fruit, all served out under the great oak trees. But tho Grahams in the Strong's humble home for Christmas dinner when there was to be "no turkey nor nothin'," was unthinkable to Lucy.

Reaching the big gate just above the old home, Lucy stopped, for how could she tell her frail little mother! The dilemma was more than she could bear, and tears began to make grimy streaks down the chubby face. Then, "what a little ninny you are, Lucy Strong, you forget just everything." Down on her knees behind the gate post dropped the tired little figure to pour out her great sorrow to tho Father of all. "Dear Lord," she sobbed, "I am in a terrible fix, you know, but only last Sunday Mrs. Graham told us how you took care of your children in the wilderness, and, dear Lord, I am in such a wilderness. Oh, Lord, send us a turkey or somethin', and I'll do somethin' for you some time sure. Amen."

With a smiling face Lucy ran on down the lane and on into the kitchen to her mother, and gaily told of the splendid Christmas plans. "Why, that will be lovely," said Mrs. Strong, "but we must get busy, for we've only a day in which to get ready. As soon as I put away this milk we'll go to the smoke house and see what we can find."

The smoke house—a great hewn loghouse, completely covered with grape vines, was a treasure trove to Lucy (unless she had to be kept busy there certain days "keeping up" the smoke for the fresh meat).

"Come on, Lucy," said Mrs. Strong; "while I draw a gourd of soap and a jug of molasses you get the popcorn, nuts and apples. My! Aren't you glad we saved our apples for Christmas?" After filling her other baskets, Lucy climbed on to the great meat block and reached into the apple barrel for the long-forbidden fruit. Then shriek after shriek reached Mrs. Strong as she stood just outside the door holding high the lantern. "Oh, mother, a bear bit me, or a dog or a snake or somethin'. He growled at me and his mouth is all wet and cold, and he bit me, I most know he bit me. Oh, oh, I most know he did," sobbed and shivered the child. Terrified, all kinds of thoughts rushed through Mrs. Strong's mind, as Lucy fell into her arms. The loghouse was very old, and although filled with its treasure, the door was never locked, and its dusky interior could well harbor just anything. Scrambling over barrels and boxes, Mrs. Strong reached the apple barrel, looked in and gave one scream. "Oh, run Lucy, run quick and call your father;" then stumbling back she grabbed the round top from the soap barrel, and just as she was about to slam it over the apple barrel the lantern fell over and left them in total darkness. Locating the apple barrel by horrible, low growls, she finally got the cover in place and held it down with all her frail strength, terrified lest she should faint and release the monster.

After what seemed an eternity, steps were heard running to her assistance, then her dear husband's voice said: "There's no light; Tom, run back to the kitchen for a torch, quick." Then his assuring, "Wait, wife, I'm coming, don't be afraid," he found her side. "What in heaven's name is it?" cried Mr. Strong? "Oh," said Mrs. Strong, "You hold me while I hold down this lid. I'm so afraid to turn loose, for fear he may escape."

With great flaming torch held high, Tom, followed by the hired man, rushed in with his gun, ready to fire. "Where's the bear? Where is he, Dad?" cried Tom. "What luck, just let me to him. To think I've always wanted to kill a bear. You get out, mother, and I'll shoot him. Gee, isn't this great? Where is he? Over there? A good place for you, Mr. Bruin, under that meat trough, you old rascal!"

"No, no," cried Mrs. Strong, "he's here in this barrel. Hold up the light and lift the lid just a little!"

As the torch was raised, Mr. Strong, acting upon her advice, peeped into the barrel, and with a shout fell back. "Boys, take a peep, just peep at him. Did you ever see such a bear?"

The hired man "peeped" next and flung himself out of the way with a stifled roar, "Oh, Massa, Massa!"

Jostling the others out of the way, Tom drew off the whole top and "peeped." "Holy Moses, mother, but this is great. What a whopper! You fat, juicy rascal, eating all the Christmas apples, were you? They were not 'forbidden fruit' to you. Say, mother, let's have him for Christmas dinner, for I heard Mr. Graham say he prefers this meat to turkey any day, as you cook him."

"Why, of course," said Mrs. Strong; "I think this great luck. This gentleman shall be our 'Piece de Resistance,' and we will give the Grahams a dinner they will always remember pleasantly, I hope; but I do wish I had recognized Mr. O'Possum's disposition," she laughed.

Over behind the soap barrel knelt a tired but happy little girl. "I knew it, Lord, and I mean to keep my promise, too. I'll do somethin' for you some time, sure. Thank you, Lord. Thank you. Amen."

WM. B. REILY & CO., Inc., New Orleans, La.

School Board, will inaugurate on Jan. 1, 1925, "The Extension School for Pastors," which is characterized as "the most practical and constructive plan for religious study and training that has ever been offered to the minister who cannot leave his pastorate for study." A catalogue containing full information will be mailed to all pastors on Jan. 1.

Mr. J. B. Duke, of North Carolina, who has been a great benefactor of Trinity College, has established a trust fund of $40,000,000 for charitable and educational purposes in North and South Carolina. One provision is that the trustees are to spend $6,000,000 in establishing in North Carolina the "Duke University," with the provision, however, that if Trinity College sees fit to change its name to "Duke University," the $6,000,000 may be spent in expanding and extending that institution.

Rev. W. R. Lott is having a great pastorate at Amory, Miss. He is in favor with his people, and the official board has shown its appreciation of his services by increasing the salary $200 for this year. Brother Lott is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons, which are attracting unusually large congregations, on these topics: "A Sacrificing Young Man;" "A Determined Young Man;" "A Heart-broken Young Man;" "A Deceived Young Man;" "A Sad Young Man;" "A Wise Young Man." We should like to have the privilege of hearing these sermons on such suggestive topics.

FUNERAL OF REV. J. IVY HOFFPAUIR.

Funeral services for Rev. J. Ivy Hoffpauir were held by Rev. J. B. Williams at the Indian Bayou church on Monday, Dec. 8, at 10 o'clock. Revs. H. W. May, Martin Hebert, Lastie Hoffpauir, H. W. Giles, L. M. Miller, L. I. McCain, J. W. Lee, Hervey Hoffpauir, L. C. Wilson and L. E. Crooks assisted Brother Williams in the services.

Brother Williams led the way into the church, reading the lesson in the ritual, after which, "Shall we gather at the river," was sung. Rev. H. W. May led in prayer, followed by Scriptures, read by Brothers Williams and Crooks.

Brother Williams spoke very beautifully of his service to the church and community and the joy he had found in his associations with Brother Hoffpauir.

Brother May spoke very feelingly of the close friendship that had existed between himself and Brother Ivy. They had worked together for years—preached together, prayer together—and of how close his and their families' associations had been. Beautiful tributes were also paid him by Revs. M. Hebert, L. C. Wilson, and L. I. McCain.

The services were concluded at the grave in charge of the Masonic Lodge. Beautiful floral offerings attested the esteem in which he was held by friends.

Brother Hoffpauir is survived by his wife, two daughters (Mrs. Perry and Miss Irene), and three sons (Ellis, of Jackson, Miss., Sweeney, of Birmingham, and James, of Indian Bayou), and one sister, Mrs. Thomas Hoffpauir. He was 67 years of age, and had been in the ministry about forty years.

A TELEGRAM FROM REV. WALDO W. MOORE.

"New Orleans Christian Advocate: Our church owns in Biloxi, just south side of Back Bay, a small house and choice corner lot. The lot faces on the street 309 feet; the house is in the midst of residences of seven oyster factories (150 residences), and not over 300 yards from one of Biloxi's $7,500 new school buildings, one block from street car line. One thousand dollars will enlarge and improve the house. There is no debt on what we have. By God's help and your co-operation we will enlarge and improve, keeping clear of debts. Send donation to C. B. Welch, trustee, or to me, at Biloxi, Miss. It spells opportunity. Presiding elder heartily approves.

REMEMBER THE CHRIST LANDS AT CHRISTMAS TIME.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

The Christmas season is by all consent the children's pre-empted time of the whole year. "What will make the children glad?" is the great question that dominates December. From the first of the month, and even before, we have been planning what is best to bring a happy light into their eyes on Christmas morning. This is our thought for the children of our own homes. But shall we let our heart of Christmas interest be no larger than takes in the boys and girls of our family circles only? All about us there are children whose own home folks are able to supply them with little or nothing of Christmas cheer, and there are many who have no home folks even to think of them.

Among these latter those of us who have been in their far-off countries to see them, must always think, as Christmas draws near, of the 40,000 Armenian and Greek orphans whose sole home life is in the great orphanages that Near East Relief maintains in such cities as Alexandropol, Beirut, Sidon and Jerusalem. These motherless little people I have often heard cheer for America as being their mother now, and they have an infinitely appealing faith that America will not fail them in anything that they need. Shall not all of us, ourselves the children of Mother America, bring into the range of our Christmas thought all this multitudinous orphan family along with the lads and lassies of our own land?

Too often, perhaps, we think of gewgaws and toys for the small folks and perhaps needless luxuries for the young people a little older—our Christmas giving is very largely on the plane of the unnecessary. But these orphans live too close to the stern realities of existence to be allured by trinkets and trifles. It is food and raiment which count with them, and visitors find them radiantly happy in the enjoyment of what would be to us monotonously plain fare and sternly simple accommodations. And a wise compassion for them will translate the Christmas thought in their behalf into the kind of generosity which will insure them the continuance of shelter, food and raiment until Christmas comes again. How often fathers and mothers complain that Christmas toys are all broken before New Year's. Here is Christmas giving guaranteed to be good for spring, summer and autumn and so on through winter again.

I am inexpressibly eager that our Methodist homes shall have large part in this benevolence which telegraphs the Christmas spirit half-way round the world and projects its light through all the twelve months of the coming year. To lose parents and all by the sword of mad and fanatical foes; then, when hope was lost in a sea of unspeakable trouble, to find one's self cast up on a shore of kindness where all life was renewed in the sunshine of America's love and benevolence—this has been the lot which has filled the mouths of these orphans with praises to God for our land and its good Samaritanism. They are now absolutely dependent on America for all they eat and wear. Can anybody think with calmness on what a fearful blow would smite their trust and gratitude if America should fail now to continue the support which keeps them housed and fed and clothed? One doesn't dare think of turning these helpless and friendless little folks out of doors. And that is just the reason why we must for a few years go on giving to the Near East Relief with a liberality which will put all its work far beyond the danger of such collapse.

OF LITTLE FAITH.

By Sarah Josselyn Wilson.

The great outstanding need of our people is not, it seems to me, more power to give, but more power to ask. Strange as it may seem to those who watch the restless turmoil and spectacular achievements of our time, we are, as a people, too content. We are content with small gifts, small attainments. We ask for paltry millions of dollars when we might give ourselves to building a character that dominates the ages and holds fellowship with the Most High. We ask for peace and comfort when we might demand as a right the glorious privilege of martyrdom to a superb cause. We ask for honor and popularity among our fellows for the day, when the undying laurels of genius may be ours for the taking. Thus by our small crawling ambitions do we commit the unpardonable sin against our winged spirits.

Truly, our imagination fails us when we are seeking for ourselves the greatest gifts. We did not have a Christ until the dreams of the ages had prepared the way for Him. The prophets of old asked largely, the mother of Jesus asked largely, Jesus himself asked with a daring confidence which even yet we have not fathomed. It is not too much to say that the measure of a man or a nation is the measure of their power to ask. —Zion's Herald.

THE DAY SHALL REVEAL IT.

Time is truly the great revealer. It is he, and he alone, who holds the key that will unlock a thousand of the doors that stand closed upon the pathway of our life. And how impatient we get about that sometimes! How we do long to know to-day and this very minute many of the things that can only be made known with the passing of the years! And how thoroughly foolish we are in that! There are probably several good reasons why we cannot know to-day numbers of the things we are going to know one year from now, and it is certainly true that in the case of many of them we are vastly better off in our ignorance than we would be if we had knowledge. Knowledge is like many other things, it is good as we come into it legitimately, and the legitimate and fruitful way into knowledge is usually a way that opens up but very slowly. We cannot know it all to-day, but we have the privilege of knowing a little more to-morrow than we do to-day, and it is the opening path into wisdom by experience that gives life much of its satisfaction. Jesus had to tell some of His early disciples that there were some things that they could not know just then, but He was also able to tell them that the Great Revealer would be ready to give new truth to them through all their days, and a great joy of life lies in the fact that every day may bring its revelation.—Christian Guardian.

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska. — "I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treating for a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your advertisement in the newspapers and thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a good trial for if it had helped others, why not me? I have taken 36 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. When any one has troubles like mine, or any ways like mine, I am always glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound so that they will get the right kind of medicine." — Mrs. JOE NOVAK, Box 662, Louisville, Neb.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Orders are coming in most every day for literature to be used in making a survey of our work. Now is the time to do this; other important matters will be upon us next month. Write for samples of the literature and see what your church is asking you to do.

Have you ever used the material on the second page of the Nashville Advocate in giving a missionary program for the whole school? These truths are startling enough to create a new interest in building the kingdom of God. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." So many do not take the Advocate and numbers who take it do not read it. Tell it to them from the pulpit, whether you have a program or not; get the truth to them any way you see fit, but give the truth to all the people.

The Missionary Message of the Bible is a new course of study to be used by Adult Bible classes, Epworth Leagues, the Woman's Missionary Society, and Leadership Training. When this course is completed you receive two certificates, one from the General Board of Missions and one from the General Sunday Scohol Board's department of Leadership Training. This is a course that will stir the heart to its depths and put you to work. Give it a trial and see what it will accomplish.

So many good people do not know that the church has no other lesson material for children 4 or 5 years old except the graded lessons. The Olivet Picture Card was never intended to be used as lesson material. Again, when you order "Our Little People" and "Junior Lessons," be sure to order "The Elementary Teacher;" for this periodical has material and instruction for the teacher. When the children cry for bread, do not give them a stone.

During the past month two credits were issued to each of the following: Mrs. Maud V. Hull, Miss Minnie Crowder, and Mrs. J. W. Allen, all of Kosciusko. Mrs. J. H. Blakemore received a credit on Adult Psychology. Mrs. Blakemore is from Corinth. Mrs. G. H. McMorrough, of Lexington, received a credit on Learning and Teaching. Mrs. Ben M. Scott, of Booneville, and Rev. H. D. Suydam, of Arcola, each received a Blue Seal diploma. Miss Corinne Rogers, of New Albany, received her Gold Seal diploma.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt is preparing to teach a class, using as a text "A Methodist Church and Its Work," and Mrs. Wyatt a class in "Learning and Teaching." The people at Tchula are following the leadership of these two splendid workers. Mrs. Wyatt writes: "We have the membership campaign on in full swing here. Started it after we arrived. We finish the survey this week. You ought to see how it opened the eyes of the five teams doing the house-to-house work. They are making all kinds of interesting 'finds.'" The people will respond to this kind of work. They are eager to help do something that counts. An unchanging church cannot grip an ever-changing condition.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The General Sunday School Council will meet in its fifteenth annual session at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15 to 19. We hope our Conference will be well represented.

Winnfield, La., which is near the center of our State, will entertain the ninth annual session of the Sunday School Conference. Winnfield is now in the "new" district, with Brother Porter M. Caraway as pastor. The local congregation at Winnfield will do all in their power to make it the greatest conference we have yet had. The general theme of this conference will be "The Rural Sunday School."

Dr. A. S. Lutz, the new Conference Superintendent of Teacher Training, is planning to attend the General Sunday School Council, that he may be better equipped for this great feature of our Sunday school program. Last year our Conference received 1,013 credits from the General Sunday School Board in Teacher-Training.

Last year our conference made great progress with Daily Vacation Bible Schools. This year we have asked Rev. A. K. McLelland, of Barham, to act as Conference Superintendent of this feature of our work. He writes: "Thanks for the new job you created for me—count on me to do the best I possibly can."

The Conference minutes for 1923 show we had a net gain in Sunday school membership of 357; the new minutes will show a net gain this year of over 1,500 new members.

* * *

While at the Crowley Conference, the writer assisted in the baptism of three children, a grandson and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Griffin. The third child was Barbara Ann Toou, a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lyons.

* * *

Mr. T. W. Hollyman, vice chairman of our Conference Sunday School Board, is delighted that the next Statewide conference is to go to Winnfield. He wants 500 men present at this conference, March 23-26.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

To all the Sunday schools in the Conference who are not now taking a Mission Special, the Conference Board extends an urgent invitation to send your missionary offering to Rev. J. C. Chambers, 211½ West Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss. He is the treasurer of our Mission special. Half the money will be spent in the home field and the other part of the money will be spent in a foreign field. The money spent in our Conference so far has resulted in the organization of one new Sunday school, reorganized three other schools, 18 family altars promised, 3 adults united with the church, and 74 reconsecrated themselves to the Lord. If this kind of work appeals to you, send in your fourth Sunday offering and get in on this.

The campaign for membership is growing. Many reports are coming in. There are two things it seems to me that ought to mean much in this effort—"The 100 per cent Sunday School Homes," and the survey. Both ought to build the schools.

The following Standard Training Schools are being planned for this year: Meridian, January 11 to 16; Jackson, some time in the early spring; Biloxi, in first part of June; Brookhaven and Vicksburg have not set a time as yet.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY.

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Cost One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 621 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall, or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the N. O. Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of this free offer. Agents wanted. Write him to-day.—Advertisement.

General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennnesee

FROM HAZLEHURST, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Several things have come up that have kept me from writing a few words about the great meeting had here just before our Conference met, and about the Conference session at Canton.

Under the leadership of the pastors of this town, supported by the Flying Squadron and the membership of the churches in general, and the preaching of Rev. W. B. Hogg and his assistant, Rev. S. J. T. Williams, this town and surrounding section never had such a spiritual outpouring in all the history of the churches here. There were over one hundred new conversions, and many reclamations—yes, as many as seven hundred and more consecrations came as a result of this campaign. It is a delight to walk the streets and hear the greetings that come from all parties as you meet them. People came in increasing numbers from the first day the meeting opened, and hundreds were turned away because room could not be found.

This is the home of Brother Hogg. His mother and sister live here, and the people all claim him as their very own, without regard to what church they belong. They are proud to claim him, and all predict that he will soon rank as the very best of evangelists in the church anywhere. His preaching grips the souls of all who hear him, and it is quite evident that his own soul is held in the power of the Holy Ghost, and that his consecration is complete. It is my humble judgment that he is in the right relation to the church, and that he has made no mistake by entering the evangelistic field. Brother Williams is an able assistant, and they make a team.

Well, the session of the Mississippi Conference was held in the new [illegible] at Canton, and a good session it was. Bishop Ainsworth was at his best, and the business ran without a jar from start to finish.

Reports revealed the fact that in spite of crop failures in some places the year was a good one.

The power of the Master was in evidence in the preaching during the year, and a good ingathering was reported.

The preaching was of a very high order, and that done by Dr. Clovis Chappell was the great of the session. He captured the whole body of preachers, and the town as well.

The people gave us a royal entertainment, and the weather smiled in warm, genial rays from start to finish.

Things did not turn out as some [illegible] in the making of [illegible]. I am sure that if [illegible] the work of the [illegible] and in the work of the church. He will be in the field after the appointments are made, and during the year, and the [illegible] will be.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

REV. DAN KELLY BECOMES GENERAL EVANGELIST.

The Rev. Dan E. Kelly, who has, for [illegible] years, made his home [illegible] Hattiesburg, was recommended as [illegible] general evangelist by the Committee on Evangelism of the Mississippi Conference in its recent session, which [illegible] Sunday night at Canton, Miss. While this did not come as a surprise to Mr. Kelly, it came without his solicitation, he being contented to do his [illegible] work as a Conference evangelist.

With Mr. Kelly will accept the work as general evangelist, he will continue to live in Hattiesburg.

Mr. Kelly has been Conference evangelist of the Mississippi Conference [illegible] the last fifteen years. In these fifteen years he has held meetings [illegible] West and West, holding revivals from Virginia and Florida across the country to California.

FROM GALLMAN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We received a warm welcome on our arrival at Gallman, our new charge. The people have been very kind and thoughtful of us. I am still on crutches; however, I have been able to fill all my appointments (I am learning to preach sitting down).

The evening before Thanksgiving, we received one of the most severe poundings of our lives, which, of course, we appreciated very much. But, best of all, after filling the pantry with good things to eat, they came into the sitting room, and representatives of the different churches on the work spoke words of welcome, appreciation, and encouragement, and pledged their support and co-operation. After response by the pastor and wife, we had a special song, and were led in prayer by Brother Weeks, all of which made us feel more determined to do our best for the Master, and to show our appreciation of these good people.

With best wishes for you and the Advocate, I am,

Your friend and brother,

J. E. J. FERGUSON.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Young People's Missionary Society—A Letter from the Superintendent.

My Dear Young People: This is my first letter to you as your new Superintendent, and there are so many things to tell you it is difficult to make a start. Mrs. Keys' place is a tremendously hard one to fill, but I'm asking you to help me this quarter to realize her plans and dreams for the year. In doing this we shall not only express our love and esteem for the leader who so lovingly and prayerfully piloted us through the past four years, but also we shall experience that great and deep happiness that comes though having served faithfully and well in helping to establish the kingdom of God throughout the world, and most particularly among our own young people.

1. I would remind you of our Week of Prayer, which is almost upon us, and urge you to present the program on Young People's Day with the prayers and devotionals being led by you.

2. You know there is a membership contest between the Conferences. Our Conference is trying to get more members and more societies than the Florida Conference. Let's show Florida that we are alive and working—they are working for six new societies in each district (and, by the way, they have nine districts); can we not do as well in Louisiana? Don't you think a "Publicity Campaign" would help? Put on a 'publicity campaign," first enlisting the interest and support of your pastor and Sunday school superintendent. Have a member of the Young People's Missionary Society, appear before every Sunday school class and tell everything about the Young People's Missionary Society, and in the classes of the right ages make a personal, definite appeal for members. Have your members present the Young People's Missionary Society at prayer meeting, also let the Adult Missionary Society know more about you.

3. To remind you again of the Importance of reporting promptly at the end of each quarter. Our quarterly reports to the Council Superintendent do not do our work justice because never do more than 50% of our Societies report. At the end of each quarter hold an executive meeting, discussing special work and making plans for the following quarter, and make out reports, sending treasurer's report to Mrs. C. C. Carver, Rayne, La.; sheet market "District Secretary" to District Secretary of your respective districts; one for Superintendent of Study to Mrs. Z. T. Gallion, Jr., Natchitoches, La.; the one for social service to Mrs. Joe Wynn, Rayne, La., and the one marked "Conference Superintendent" of Young People to me.

4. We feel that we cannot stress too much the value of Bible and Mission Study—the one to deepen our faith and understanding of His Word, the other to broaden our knowledge of the activities and conditions in the mission field.

5. Boxes of supplies. Send two boxes this year—one to St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, and one to MacDonell Wesley House at Houma, La. Notify Mrs. H. L. Baker, Plaquemine, La.

6. Societies making 100 points will draw for Baird Cup. Pauline Randle Cup will go to district making largest gain in members and organizations.

7. Let each auxiliary emphasize and work for a great Harvest Day in December.

8. Our goals for 1924 are:

(a) Eight new societies (we have five).

(b) Five hundred members. (My reports are not accurate enough to give you figures on that.)

(c) $425 to Council. (We need $165 to meet pledge.)

9. Let's develop our Social Service possibilities to the uttermost. Some one says social service boiled down to two words is "Helping others."

I can hardly wait to get your December reports, for then we'll know how you are "carrying on" and how Louisiana Young People will be rated for 1924 in the Council.

Please write me personal letters about yourselves and your work. I love to receive them, for they bring you very close to me.

Lovingly yours,

MRS. F. W. RAGGIO.

P. S.—Don't forget to mail me names as soon as you elect your new officers, as literature can be mailed promptly.

Please study enclosed questionnaire.

Questionnaire.

1. What is the object of the Young People's Auxiliary?

To hasten the coming of the Kingdom of God throughout the world by enlisting the Young People in active missionary service, by raising funds for mission fields at home and abroad, for maintenance of the institutions supported by the Missionary Council, and for the betterment of civic and social conditions everywhere. Also for the purpose of Bible and Mission Study.

2. When and to whom do you report?

The last of each quarter we report to our District Secretary, Conference Treasurer and the Conference Superintendent of Young People. This is very important.

3. When is a Society not a Society?

When it does not send dues and pledges to the Treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Carver, Rayne, La.

4. What are the Young People's colors?

Green and gold.

5. What is the Young People's watchword?

"Each one win one."

6. What is the Young People's motto?

"Loyalty to Christ."

7. Who is your district secretary, and where does she live?

Ask your adult superintendent.

8. Who is Mrs. P. L. Cobb?

Council Superintendent of Young People's Work.

9. What are the Louisiana Conference goals for 1924 for Young People?

(a) Eight new societies and no losses. (b) 500 members. (c) $425 for Council.

10. What is the Woman's Missionary Council?

The administrative body of the Woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. Cobb represents the 36,000 members of the Young People's Missionary Society and speaks for us.

11. How many missionaries are out under the direction of the Council?

About 260.

12. In what foreign countries are we working, and what form of work are we doing in our own country?

The Council directs work in China, Korea, Japan and Manchuria in the Orient, in Mexico, Cuba, Brazil and Africa. We have settlement homes and mission work in almost all of the large cities of the South for Americans, foreigners and Negroes.

13. For what is the Young People's Missionary Society money used this year?

For Scarritt College for Christian Workers.

14. What is a Wesley House?

It is a house in a needy district where deaconesses and missionaries live and make friends with and help the people who come needing help or friends. It is a Methodist "House by the Side of the Road." We have forty-two Wesley houses.

15. What is a Bethlehem House?

It is a Wesley House for Negroes. There are five Bethlehem Houses.

16. How many Young People's auxiliaries in Louisiana Conference?

Thirty-six.

17. Name the Conference having largest number of Young People's Societies?

Virginia, 233.

18. What is the membership contest?

See Mrs. Raggio's letter.

19. What must a member do before being counted as a member?

Pay three months' dues.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

SNAP SHOTS FROM BRAZIL.

Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 20, 1924.

We were awakened the first morning in beautiful Collegio Bennett by the sound of singing. From the window could be seen a single mountain standing guard on the inner rim of Rio Bay. In a neighboring garden a row of stately royal palms lifted plumey tops away up towards the blue sky. On the college campus alien shrubs and strange fruits made a lovely winter setting. A Brazilian girl in the dormitory sang with a voice as fresh and sweet as a Missouri meadow lark. The tune was Tipperary, but the words were, "'Tis a long way from old Virginia, 'Tis a long way to go." Yes, yes. But how did she know that?

* * *

Miss Denison and Miss Kellog, the juniors of our party, left us this morning. They moved to Nictheroy, across the Bay, to live in a Brazilian home which speaks no English, and put intensive study on the Portuguese language. We took a ferry boat late in the day and went to see them. They have a second floor front room with typical double-leaved windows opening on an iron balcony, from which they can view the mountains and the sea. The waves rippie up into what would be a front yard if they had such a thing. We stayed until the fishing boat came home to harbor. The red, round sun fell into the water. The twilight deepened until there was a band of smoky opal behind the mountains and a rosy promise of the day to come. Then we left them full of hope and overflowing with enthusiasm for the new life.

* * *

It is a great satisfaction to really behold the places and the people whose names are so familiar. Cattete Church, Villa Isabel, the institute, the other churches, Bennett College, Case Cottage, the student body, Moore Hall, the Union Hospital, day schools, the scholarship girls, the Bible women, are all even better than we had expected to find them, just as the Bay is bluer, the mountains higher, and all nature on a grander scale than imagination had pictured. Missions in Rio are full of promise.

* * *

Is this a straw which shows which way the wind blows? The older girls at Bennett were asked to take a religious census of the student body. They omitted a tiny little girl in the grades who looks to be a scant eight, but she declined to be passed by. So they said, "Well, what is your religion?" She meditated a moment, then bravely lifted her dark eyes and answered in all seriousness, "I think I am a Christian feminist."

* * *

Yes, we went to the Annual Conference in Petropolis and saw Brazilian preachers and lay delegates transact the business of the year. Please notice that "saw"—couldn't understand a word. But when the ear fails, the eye does double duty, and it could be seen that the routine was as per the Discipline. Enthusiasm swept over the room in response to some unknown stimulus as a calm sea responds to an unseen breeze. They took part joyously in demonstrations. It was a fine looking group of men, with good, earnest faces. Only one Brazilian woman was present as a lay member, and she made a small speech. The president of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, Dona Etelvina Becker, reported for that organization, and did so with grace, fluency, and dignity. The visitors from "the Mother Church" gave their message from the States.

Our old Collegio Americano in Petropolis sits on its hilltop just like its picture. It is now rented as a school for boys. By the way, did you know that, because it was once a part of the Imperial domain of Brazil, we still pay a small yearly tax on that land which goes to help make the income of the descendants of the deposed and exiled Don Pedro?

Sao Paulo, Aug. 28, 1924.

Going from Rio to Sao Paulo is a twelve-hour journey by rail. The train climbed up and up, topped a wonderful mountain range and met a bubbling, sparkling river, with which it frolicked along for five or six hours through a succession of quiet valleys folded in green hills. We passed through well-built towns, bamboo-hut villages, orange groves, coffee plantations, tropical waste lands, rice fields, and wood huts. Plenty of local color. Women were washing clothes in the river, sitting on the clay floor of their huts weaving baskets, carrying bundles of wood on their heads, peeling bamboo poles, working about their one and two-room houses, or leaning from the window to see the train go by. It is nearly spring and the fields are being prepared for crops. Plowing is done by oxen. Not a bit of modern farm machinery was observed along the way, but there were Ford cars at every station. Most of the cattle are long-horned beasts, with buffalo characteristics. Here and there was a pasture of Holsteins of the familiar black and white pattern. Each farmyard had a goat's head mounted on a pole. It brings good luck and keeps evil spirits away from the animals.

There is a crowded schedule for the next three weeks. After Sao Paulo come Campinas, Piracicaba, Rebeirao Preto, Belio Horizonte, and Juiz de Fora. And we have already found ten thousand things of interest besides those we have written up.

Epworth League

MEETING OF LEAGUE PRESIDENTS.

The annual meeting of the Epworth League Presidents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in Dallas, Dec. 30 to Jan. 2, it is announced by Ralph E. Nollner, assistant secretary of the Epworth League organization of the denomination.

Dr. F. S. Parker, general secretary of the Epworth League Board, will preside. The sessions will be held in the Adolphus Hotel with the exception of the evening meeting on Dec. 31, which will be held at the new Kirby Hall, Southern Methodist University. This will be a watch night service. The Rev. J. Abner Sage, director of music in Southern Methodist University, will lead the song service, and short addresses will be made by Bishop John M. Moore, Dr. C. C. Selecman, Dr. Paul Kern, and Dr. F. S. Parker.

More than one hundred Epworth League leaders are expected to attend the meeting. The membership includes the presidents of Epworth Leagues of thirty-eight Annual Conferences, Annual Conference board presidents, Conference junior superintendents, Conference intermediate superintendents, and presidents of city, county, and district League unions.

The program for the meeting will be announced later. The business of the session, however, will include discussion of the policy and plan of the new regional secretary and his work, and the advance world program of missions. Early in the session the committee recently appointed on young people's conventions will meet. This committee is composed of Dr. Paul Kern, Dallas; Dr. L. H. Estes, Memphis, Tenn.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, Shreveport, La.; Dr. W. G. Henry, Emory University, Ga., and the Rev. Ralph E. Nollner, Nashville.

THE MELTING POT OF FRIENDSHIP AND HAPPINESS.

Sunday morning your neighbor is off bright and earl for church. Have you ever wondered why he has formed this habit? What he gains by it? Why the little church around the corner holds such an attraction? The little church around the corner is a melting pot of friendship and happiness. Here old friends greet each other and new acquaintances are made. The inspiration of an enlightened sermon, the fascination of impressive music, the restfulness of a quiet moment of meditation—these are the reasons your neighbor goes to church.

Perhaps you have planned to go, but just decided to "wait until next Sunday," or probably it rained, a friend dropped in—there are any number of excuses. But—

When the church bells peal out Sunday morning, select your church and attend it. Tell your neighbor your intention. He'll be glad to take you. Don't consider yourself a stranger; you're not. You will find a genuine welcome awaiting you, and an interesting, impressive service. The church owes you spiritual enlightenment and instruction. It's your duty to receive it. Meet with your friends and neighbors, and in the discussion of timely religious topics, you'll feel a little bigger and better.—Selected.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE NEGRO QUESTION IN UNIFICATION.

The place of the Negro in the pending plan of unification has been given so much attention, and so many erroneous, as we believe, views concerning it have been advanced by those who oppose the plan on this very point, that we give herewith an editorial statement that appeared in the Western Christian Advocate of Dec. 4. The Western Christian Advocate is an official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, published in Cincinnati, Ohio, edited by Dr. Ernest C. Wareing. its general attitude is one of extreme friendliness to the Negro. Its statement, therefore, concerning the place of the Negro in the Methodist Episcopal Church is entitled to the most serious consideration. The editorial statement is as follows:

"We wish that it were possible for us to give positive information to our friends throughout the South on a certain subject. For instance, in the discussion there has come to the surface that which has been deep in the hearts or far in the background of the thoughts of many of the rank and file of Southern Methodists.

"The relation of the Negro to the Methodist Episcopal Church is the bone of contention in the last analysis. To some of us this is not new information. This should be cleared up at the earliest possible moment. A misapprehension or an illusion may defeat even God's good cause. We have had in our office a number of inquiries in the following language: 'Do the Negroes of the Methodist Episcopal Church worship in white congregations?' Then we learn that it is being circulated through the South that they do; that they mingle and worship and take communion with the white folks. This is absolutely misleading. The Negroes have their own churches, their own pastors, their own bishop, and their own Conferences. They are seldom seen in white congregations, save as casual visitors or caretakers of the house of God.

"They are working out their own problems as a race, and are doing it very successfully. We are giving them all the assistance possible by advice and benevolence. They are given recognition as Methodist Episcopalians. They are fellowshiped as worthy Christians. We wish that this understanding might be broadcasted throughout the South, so that men everywhere would come to understand it in the proper light. The Negro is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and should be considered no more of a problem than the German or Scandinavian sections, which have their pastors and churches and Conferences."

The pending plan of unification may have its weaknesses; but we do not believe there is in it the slightest justification for the view that its adoption will result in a mingling of the races in the South. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a white man's church; in the united church, Jurisdiction No. 2 will be a white man's jurisdiction.

REMEMBER THE SUPERANNUATES.

For several months there will not be as much in the church press concerning the Superannuate Endowment Fund as formerly; but that is no reason why the church should forget or neglect its obligation to these godly and faithful men who have borne the heat and burden of the day and now are serving simply as those who stand and wait. The determination to raise a fund of $10,000,000 as a perpetual endowment for the benefit of these worn-out servants of the church is worthy of all praise; the success of the movement thus far is an honor to all who have had any part in it; its completion within the designated period of five years must not fail for lack of continued interest. Most of our churches paid the first year's quota this year; not one of them should forget that this sacred cause will make its appeal to us next year—and year after year until the whole amount has been raised.

UNCHRISTIAN CHRISTMAS GIVING.

The sentiment that inspires the giving of gifts at Chirstmas time is one of the most beautiful in the world. It grows out of the supreme gift of God to man—the gift of Christ himself. All our giving, therefore, should in some way be a recognition of the divine interest in humanity. Is it always so?

With too many people, Christmas is not a time of joy and happiness, but a season of worry and anxiety, made so by the almost universal custom of giving gifts simply as gifts. It is often the case that financial burdens imposed by this custom are so great as to destroy altogether the beautiful and holy sentiment that ought to be connected with it. Some people burden themselves for a whole year with a program of weekly saving that they may be able to meet the demands upon them when the Christmas season comes; and as soon as one Christmas is over, they begin the process of saving for the next.

It may be impossible to bring it about—but the world would be happier and Christmas would come nearer being what it ought to be if the custom of unchristian Christmas giving were abandoned. Christ drove out of the Temple those who had profaned it with their money changing; what shall we say of those who have commercialized Christmas?

SENSIBLE SAYING OF BISHOP HAY.

At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, we caught the following epigrammatic statements made by Bishop Hay on various occasions:

"Don't preach all day—another day is coming."

"The world to-day wants a live, strong, aggressive ministry."

"The primary point in preaching is not in what the preacher knows, but in what he has experienced."

"What the world needs to-day is a cultured man preaching the gospel."

"I rejoice in the fact that our colleges and universities to-day are putting first things first."

"A fruitless ministry will cause more skepticism than anything else."

"The gospel moves in the realm of the miraculous—and only there."

"The most infectious thing in China is Christianity"—quoted from a great doctor in China.

"Have religion and know it; have religion and tell it; have religion and use it."

"Be a plunger in the gospel."

"The men in the church to-day who are getting anywhere are dogmatic preachers."

"No preacher has any right to use more than a minute and a half in making announcements."

"No public prayer ought to be more than three or four minutes long."

"My sermons are very much like freight trains—they can be cut in two at almost any place, the caboose hitched on, and they are complete."

"My observation is that the people are paying pretty well for the preaching they are getting."

TACKLING BIG THINGS.

We read this the other day: "Don't be afraid of big things—a Packard steers easier than a Ford." We do not understand the writer of this injunction to mean that it is easier to do a big thing than it is to do a little thing; the point he probably had in mind was that the big job can probably be done by the man who is not afraid to tackle it—and that the big job is not so hard after all. Some men spend more time lamenting their inability to do something worth while than it would take to accomplish a real task.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE ON PEACE.

"America is ready to-day, as always, to do its full share. It wants the peace of good will and of the Golden Rule, not the peace of force imposed by those who have power. It does not want peace as an interlude of brightness here and there in a world still addicted to war; it wants peace as the normal, the right, the assured estate in a world from which a wiser generation shall have forever outlawed aggressive war."

A GOOD SIGN IN GERMANY.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

A cablegram from Blankenburg, which appeared recently in the leading daily newspapers in the United States, contains the wisest suggestion yet made for the relief of the unhappy conditions prevalent in Germany. Indeed, this suggestion points to the only real hope before that distressed nation.

The cablegram was as follows:

"Three thousand evangelical Christians, Baptists, Methodists, Lutherans and members of various other denominations, attended the annual Bible conference held recently in Blankenburg.

"The delegates to this conference are moved by the desire to get at the basic truths of Christianity and apply them to the present upset condition of the world. There was no talk of the Versailles treaty or the responsibility of governments.

"The conference went on record as being of the opinion that Germany can expect no relief from mankind in its present distress, but must turn to God, if it desires to be freed from trouble. Sincere penitence and return to God were pointed out as the sure remedies for the unhappy state into which the German people have fallen. One speaker said God might lead Germany to a spiritual awakening through hard trials, and thus permit the country to render service to the entire world.

"The resolutions adopted set forth much the same views that have been voiced by Count Keyserling, the philosophical leader, who is constantly telling the German public that spiritual regeneration would do far more to cure Europe's present ills than all sorts of proposed economic and financial remedies."

Of course, to many men these resolutions adopted by the conference of evangelical Christians at Blankenburg will seem to be quite visionary, if not fanatical. But such men of the world are either ignorant of history or blind to its lessons.

Nothing is more clearly taught by every chapter in the history of the human race than that the destiny of nations is determined by moral and religious forces rather than by economic schemes and political arrangements.

This principle is approved by the highest authorities among philosophers and statesmen.

Max Muller says: "The real history of man is the history of religion."

Rousseau declared: "Never was a State founded that did not have religion as its basis."

Guizot affirmed that "all political and social questions refer for their ultimate solution to the religious principles."

Edmund Burke asserted: "We know that religion is the basis of civil society and the fruitful source of all blessing and comfort in human intercourse."

Wendell Phillips expressed the same general principle more vividly on this wise: "The answer to the Shastas is India; the answer to Confucianism is China; the answer to the Koran is Turkey; the answer to the Bible is the Christian civilization of Protestant Europe and America."

There can be no revival of the religions of the heathen world. Their gods are dying beyond the hope of any resurrection. The only hope of those populous nations is in their conversion to Christianity.

But the case of the Christian nations is quite different. If the Christian religion languishes or perishes among them, there is nothing they can turn to as a substitute for it. Revival of Christian life among them must be their hope, and such revivals are frequently necessary.

Christianity is the only religion in the world under which backsliding is possible. There can be no backslidings among the Brahmins, the Buddhists, or the Mohammedans, for they all are at the bottom already. Their religions put no strain on their moral powers, and do not propose to lift them to any level higher than that of fallen human nature.

But it is far otherwise with Christianity. The religion of the Christ meets man in the attitudes of his being and calls him to the loftiest heights of heavenly life. Many, failing to reach this high level of life, fall back, and become, first lukewarm and then disorderly in their conduct.

Only a true religion can produce a backslider. Ancient Israel was often a backslider, but there were no backsliders among the votaries of Baal or Moloch. The book of Judges, in the Old Testament, is a record of backsliding and bondage, and of revivals and restored power and prosperity. In like manner Christian nations decline or advance according as the Christian religion among them languishes or flourishes. Their eras of greatest prosperity are marked by the revivals of vital piety among them.

Hence, it has been said by a great American essayist and theologian, "Scarcely can a more memorable exhibition of God be found than that presented by a revival of religion. Historians seldom take note of so obscure an event; yet if the secret connection of revivals with the destiny of nations could be disclosed, they would appear to be more critical evolutions of history than Gothic invasions. A volume has been compiled narrating the decisive battles of the world. But more significant than this, and probing deeper the divine government of the world would be the history of revivals."

He does not overstate the facts of the history of revivals. They have saved nations from ruin and revolution and changed the life of continents.

The revival under Luther changed the face of continental Europe. The revival under John Knox made Scotland what it has been from his time until the present day.

To the vast importance of the Wesleyan Revival, the skeptical historian, Leckey, bears this strong testimony in his great work entitled "England in the Eighteenth Century": "Although the career of the elder Pitt, and the splendid victories by land and sea that were won during his ministry, form unquestionably the most dazzling episodes in the reign of George II, they must yield, I think, in real importance to that religious revolution which shortly before had been begun in England by the preaching of the Wesleys and Whitfield. The creation of a large, powerful and active sect, extending over both hemispheres and numbering many millions of souls, was but one of its consequences. It also exercised a profound and lasting influence on the spirit of the Established Church, upon the amount and distribution of the moral forces of the nation, and even upon the course of its political history." To the same purpose testified John Richard Green in his "History of the English People." He says the Wesleyan Revival "changed the whole tone of English society. The church was restored to life and activity. Religion carried to the hearts of the people a fresh spirit of moral zeal, while it purified our literature and manners."

Kindred and consequent revivals in America mightily affected the birth and progress of the United States.

From the period of "The Great Awakening," which began under the ministry of Jonathan Edwards at Northampton in 1734, until the present time our country has been refreshed and revivigorated by great revivals, such as the "Great Revival of 1800" and "The Revival of 1858." Without these blessed visitations of grace it could not have attained its great power and prosperity. The facts are set forth in detail in a book entitled "Great Revivals and the Great Republic," and published by Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn., to which the reader is referred for fuller information upon the subject.

It must not be overlooked that revivals in Great Britain during the last hundred years have been quickly communicated to America, and revivals in our country have run rapidly to Great Britain, so that these great nations have become distinctly evangelical in the prevailing type of Christianity among their peoples.

But Germany has not had in the last four hundred years a revival of regenerating power and national extent.

Hence, Christianity in Germany has become paralytic through a widespread rationalism, together with an enfeebling ritualism.

For the want of a vital and vitalizing Christianity the moral life of the nation as a whole has steadily declined, until in 1914 it was totally obscured by the ethical midnight darkness in which all moral distinctions become invisible, and benighted souls cried out "Might Makes Right." Here and there among the German people have been groups of holy men, like Tholuck and Stier and Lisbardt, and others, who have lamented the spiritual dearth in their fatherland without being able to relieve the situation. But they have borne their testimony, and their faithful witness has not been fruitless.

Now it appears that a company of devout souls is calling for a revival of religion in Germany. It is a good sign. It will be a godsend to Germany, if their call is heeded.

A great revival in Germany would do more than anything else possible to heal the wounds of the nations of Continental Europe and restore to them peace and prosperity.

Germany has tried the poison of rationalism, and the results are known and read of all mankind.

Let Germany now return to God in godly repentance and simple faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.

UNIFICATION.

By Hon. Baxter McFarland.

(Concluded from Last Issue)

In their advocacy of the pending and other plans, Southern advocates have constantly admonished their Southern brethren to let "bygones be bygones." Southern Methodists long ago did that, as to ancient feuds and feelings. "Overlapping," however, is not a "bygone" fact. True, it had its origin a good while ago in a great wrong, but a wrong and injury which is being continued in the same spirit of wrongdoing with which it began, renewed daily by its continuance down to this good hour, and which as shown they refuse to discontinue or rectify in the pending plan. They uphold the wrong and its continuance by their refusal their general attitude, by their cool statement that "times have changed since 1844," and in many other ways. They are as indifferent and unconcerned about their bad faith and wrongdoing as if "overlapping" had sprung indigenous from a condition, quite apart from any acts or agency of theirs. "Overlapping" is an existing fact, kept alive by daily renewals, the continuation of which bears with direct and tremendous force upon the question of adopting or rejecting a plan of unification with a church body who brought about and persist in a wrong like that; a plan expressing neither regret for the past, nor promise for the future, the purpose of which is to establish a much closer relation with that church body, and in which the same wrong will go on at their pleasure, but fully justified by its adoption. That is no "bygone" to be forgotten in the consideration of this plan of unification. It shows the spirit that will prevail in the relationship, if established.

The present plan not only contains no express or implied obligation or agreement to discontinue or rectify "overlapping," but, if adopted, will have the effect of rectifying past, and legalizing future overlapping by the Northern Methodist Church.. Its provisions taken together and read in the light of surrounding facts and circumstances bear that construction, and that in all probability would be the view of the courts when the plan is submitted to them. The probability is too strong for its adoption to be risked.

If caught in that trap we would be in the power of the stronger church, and the end of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would not be far away; its absorption by the Northern Church would be only a question of time. This can easily be avoided by having all the rights of each fully and clearly stated. No plan should be adopted that does not contain fully and clearly all that each is entitled to in the new relation. Hurry and impatience are out of place in this movement. There must be no impetuous rush to conclude it.

Many articles by Southern unificationists manifest great deference and admiration for the Northern Church, accompanied by an undertone of implied disparagement of the Southern Church wholly unwarranted by their respective spiritual and gospel values, that should warn us not to trust too much in the wisdom of their views.

Their enthusiastic admiration for the Northern Church, with its vast financial resources, its great numbers, its dominating power and prestige, and the splendors of its churches, institutions and belongings, in striking contrast with their reserve toward their own church, becomes increasingly apparent.

Statistics, however, show that in all things pertaining to the true mission of the church, the Southern is far in advance of the Northern Church, and hence that preferences for the latter, as between the two, are founded upon considerations other than its superior excellence in matters that really count. The record shows that in the saving of souls the percentage in the Southern Church greatly exceeds that in the Northern, and therefore there is no reason to adopt the plan on that score; and as unification under it would permit the indefinite continuance of "overlapping," the discontinuance of which is the only really practical reason for the adoption of a plan of alliance so uncongenial, subordinate, and dangerous to our independent existence, as well as fraught with discord amongst ourselves and between us and the Northern Church, nothing remains but to defeat the plan.

The only real prospect before us, if it is adopted, is subjection to alien influences that in time, in the changed conditions, might result in a new type more acceptable to Northern church members, continuous absorption, and the eventual disappearance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, largely owing to "overlapping" processes in the new handicapped situation—a fate abhorrent to the great body of the Southern Church.

Unification under this plan, so far from augmented usefulness by each and increased usefulness of both, will result in precipitating confusion, differences, strife, to end in another separation, or more likely in the untimate absorption of the handicapped weaker by the unhampered stronger body. Should we again separate we probably would lose all church property—inevitably, under the present plan.

These are some of the questions presented by the pending plan, so far as concerns "overlapping." There are others, many others of gravest import to be considered, not included in this article.

The establishment of a quasi "kingdom within a kingdom" in our midst under foreign control and jurisdiction, owing exclusive allegiance to, and swayed by the powerful authority, influences and literature sweeping down from the North inevitably would retard the incorporation of its subjects into the body politic and civil society of the Southern country, as well as wholly prevent the blending of the invaders with the Methodist Church, South. The ethical, political and racial sentiments and ideas upon vital questions in the regions whence they come, so irreconcilable with our own, would be fostered and maintained in the covert afforded by their foreign church relationship, and sent out the ideas and convictions upon those questions of the people amongst whom the newcomers live, but of whom they are not a part. As a result of these conditions the racial peril, in the presence of which we live always, unavoidably must be increased, and the just safeguards we have been compelled, at such cost of patience, suffering and danger, to throw around ourselves for the protection of our families and institutions and for the preservation amongst us of white civilization—the constitutionality of which the United States Supreme Court has upheld—will again be brought into jeopardy. With the adoption of the pending plan we would admit a "Trojan horse" from the rear, our most vulnerable point.

Coming here to blend with and become incorporated with us in church and State, and coming to remain in allegiance to a foreign church, with all that that means, leads to very different results, as relates to the racial peril.

Left free to observe and consider the racial condition here, the same people in a short time would reach very different conclusions from those held in the section whence they came, where long distance theories are safely entertained.

Secluded and aloof in their exclusive surroundings, wholly under the teachings and influence of their far-away friends and co-adjutors, their views undergo little or no change.

The ever-threatening racial danger would surely become involved with that of "overlapping"

In the present plan is a sinister provision, which, if the plan is adopted, repeals the plan of separation of 1844, the "chart" of our existing territorial and jurisdictional rights and future expansive opportunities, substituting therefor another provided in the plan in which the measure of these rights and powers, as well as much else of vital importance, is radically changed, always to the advantage of the Northern Methodist Church, and to the disadvantage of the Southern Methodist Church.

The territory and jurisdiction of the Southern Church would thereby be limited to the South and what part of the West is now occupied by it, but the territory and jurisdiction of the Northern Church would become co-extensive with the United States, fully covering that assigned in the pending plan to the Southern Church; and if the pending plan is adopted it will have the effect of condoning past and permitting unlimited future "overlapping" by the Northern in the Southern Church jurisdiction,. whilst denying similar rights to the Southern Methodists in respect to Northern Church territory. The process of invasion and absorption would then proceed unhindered and with accelerated activity throughout the Southern jurisdiction and borders, our strongholds- the cities—being first entered, next the adjacent outlying territory, until in time the Southern Church would become so much weakened by these encroachments upon its territory and its resources, diverted to the Northern Church, that it would be unable to maintain an independent existence and would be swallowed up by the Northern Church.

The thoughtless, superficial assertions that the racial menace has been finally removed and the race question fully settled so that there will be no more trouble from it, are dangerous delusions. The antagonism giving rise to race hostility is inherent and enduring, and proximity always arouses it where close and equal relations are sought by the inferior. To ignore this fact in planning human associations of any kind whatsoever is blind folly.

Remove the safeguards and the old menace will immediately and automatically reappear, greatly increased. We had to make a long and fearful struggle to establish adequate legal protection, as we of the South well know, and this must be maintained for the peace and safety of both races here.

Many who indulge this delusion know little or nothing of what was endured to gain safety: "They jest at scars who never felt a wound." We who have had experience know better what war is—that kind of warfare. We must run no risks at the instance of those who are free from this danger, of which they have no fears, but must preserve our defences intact in every relation, new or old.

We cannot adopt the pending plan because, amongst many other reasons, it will condone past and legalize future "overlapping" in our jurisdiction by the Northern Church whilst denying us like rights in Northern Methodist territory and therefore "overlapping" by Northern Methodists in Southern Methodist territory would continue and become a powerful agency in the process of absorption with which we are threatened by the present plan. Given the right to take and hold our territory for the Northern Church, without let or hindrance, and we with fettered hands and powerless to interpose, it surely should require no great while to legally acquire all of the best of our territory, when the residue would necessarily yield, or soon be acquired, if thought worth the trouble of acquiring. We may easily foresee whether or not such a future would be a happy and self-respecting one for Southern Methodists.

We must reject the pending plan and await such changes in the minds and hearts of Northern Methodists as will make possible an association of the two churches consistently with our self-respect and the enjoyment of our just rights, free from all interference with our racial safeguards, and of encroachment upon our jurisdictional and territorial rights.

Meantime, we have in the eighty years of separate existence carried on with much success the work of the church, preaching the gospel of Christ to lost sinners, have extended our fields, have vastly increased our membership and influence, have built countless churches, parsonages, schools, and other institutions, have attained a broad and high plane of usefulness, and with hearts of grace can move on alone to higher and greater and better work, until such time as the brethren of the Northern Church may manifest a spirit of Christian good will and fairness that will insure a lasting and useful association upon a just basis, all the terms of which they then will willingly allow embodied in a plan. Should this time never arise, we can move on in our course as we have done all our lives, without them, bearing them none but good will, unless they do become willing to join in such a plan, unification between the two churches could result only in injury to Southern Methodists.

Few Methodists now living have any personal memory of the old association, and the membership of each has grown away from the other during the eighty years since they felt compelled to part company. In that period many events have driven them further and further asunder, and a restoration of old relations can be effected with advantage to each only by a plan that is satisfactory to both—not merely to an indicated percentage, but practically to all. The pending plan is not such an one so far as many Southern members are concerned, as they already have abundantly shown. That practically all Northern Methodists are satisfied with a plan that gives them all they could ask for, while refusing Southern Methodists so much many of them believe just, fair and essential to their well being in the contemplated relation, is not surprising. It would be astounding if they were not satisfied with it.

In this matter, the first and highest duty of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to its own vast membership, individually, and collectively; and to see that a plan of unification is prepared in accordance with "common sense" and practical wisdom, which fully and expressly provides for the protection and preservation of our ancient territorial and jurisdictional rights, power and authority and our local system of racial protection, free from encroachment, invasion and meddling, and for the adjustment of past and prevention of future "overlapping," placing us, not in a subordinate, but upon an altogether equal footing with the Northern Church in respect to all matters whatsoever. A plan that arrogates superiority in any degree to the Northern Church, or yields any of our rights in any matters in favor of the Northern Church is unworthy the consideration of the great Southern Church. If the Northern Church refuses unification on these terms, it is premature to have it. No such self-abasement is called for by duty or expediency, especially as both churches are working, and waiting places no check upon their work.

Since writing the foregoing, in an editorial of the Methodist Review of October, it is practically admitted that the pending plan, if adopted, will result in the absorption by the Northern of the Southern Methodist Church, insisting, however, that ultimately this will be best for all. It does not claim that the plan will end overlapping, generally urged by unificationists as a reason for its adoption.

The Northern Church, it asserts, cannot force intruders into the Southern Church, therefore, the Southern Church as a whole must join in the plan that it more easily may be absorbed by the Northern Church, after enjoying a brief reprieve in the chrysalis state, greatly to the benedt, it is asserted, of the compounded church in the more or less distant future.

If this is a frank revelation of the real purposes from the start of unificationists in favoring the present plan, whilst urging its adoption on the ground that it would put an end to overlapping, as was supposed, their aims have not generally been understood. They have not urged that overlapping would continue until the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should be entirely absorbed, then end, just as does fire when the fuel is exhausted, according to the understanding of many of us.

According to this article unification is just "the beginning of the end" of the Southern Church. It does not contemplate the termination of overlapping, but the subjection of the Southern to the Northern Church in order that it shall be absorbed, thus passing out of existence, after a short subordinate show of life, and Northern overlapping is made the cause and occasion of it, according to this article. Do Southern Methodists favor this ending of their church? If not, they must arouse themselves, fail in line and fight for its life and for the preservation of the memories of its sainted Christian heroes.

MEETING OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL IN ATLANTA.

By Mrs. Maud M. Turpin.

Closing a six-day meeting, the final word of the Federal Council of Churches was expressed in the plea that the body go back to their respective churches to urge anew the old, old message; and that as they went to their common tasks they might realize that they would go as conquerors only as they walked and talked with Him, and worked from the vantage ground of intimate and continued fellowship with the Lord. This was the dominant note of the meeting throughout.

The fifth quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, in session at Atlanta, Dec. 3-9, revealed progress in all lines of co-operative work and set a higher standard for united effort in settling problems involved in a great international brotherhood. The decisions of the body will influence practically every question in which the Christian forces of the world are concerned. And from the earnest discussion of such world topics as evangelism, world peace, international friendship, the application of the principles of Christianity to the industrial and social life of the country, relief for suffering churches of central Europe and other lines of co-operative effort, it is evident that the churches composing the Federal Council do not intend to leave to outside agencies the solution of these matters.

Dr. Parkes S. Cadman was elected president; the Rev. Rivington D. Lord continues as recording secretary, and Dr. Frank M. Mann succeeded Dr. Alfred R. Kimball, who had served as treasurer since 1905. Additional Southern Methodists elected to posts on interdenominational groups were: Vice president, Bishop John M. Moore; executive committee, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Bishop John M. Moore, E. Frank Story, L. C. Branscomb, J. S. French, Mrs. Luke Johnson, Mrs. H. R. Steele; alternates, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, G. B. Winton, M. L. Burton, Plato Durham, Thomas Mellows, F. N. Parker, Mrs. J. H. Dickey. Bishop Cannon was elected a member of the administrative committee.

As the members sat together and faced their common tasks day after day, there grew out of the fellowship and discussion a constructive message to the churches of America. The message addressed the mind of the churches of the nation to fellowship in the churches; fellowship with God; fellowship in human relations; fellowship among nations; fellowship among races; and fellowship in kingdom tasks. Among the tasks which Christian bodies have in common, special attention was directed to religious education and missions, both home and foreign.

In its message to churches of other lands sympathy was expressed for fellow-believers across the seas in the trials through which they were passing and assurances of practical aid. "The growing sense of Protestant solidarity developed by the common need and the common summons to more sacrificial service, qualifies all alike for an advance in the name of Christ, of greater momentum and power," the message declared.

The quadrennial report of the retiring president, Dr. Robert E. Speer, showed steady advance along all lines of co-operative efforts in which the churches could best do effective work as a united body. The adoption of the lines of policy to be pursued during the next four years include: Enlarged emphasis on the duty of evangelism; better provision for meeting human emergencies through the churches; undiminished effort to set forth the Christian view of questions of social, racial, economic, and international relationships; restudy of rural problems of the churches; expansion of the research department of the Federal Council; broader relations of American evangelical churches to churches of Asia, Latin America and Europe; conferences with churches of Canada regarding helpful relations; a larger number of women representatives and appointment of larger number of women on executive and administrative committees and on the various commissions of the Council; closer relation with local federations; continued study of interboard agencies; cultivation of helpful relations with voluntary bodies engaged in similar tasks; an effort to strengthen its hold on the constituent groups as medium of communication with their respective constituencies.

Outstanding in the discussions were questions touching evangelism, outlawry of war, and the Christianizing of racial relations.

In addition to ranking church leaders from all the denominations composing the Council, internationally known men and women made addresses and led the discussions. Among them were Sir Willoughby Dickinson, of London; Prof. Julius H. Richter, Berlin; Justice Florence E. Allen, of the Supreme Court of Ohio; Adolph Keller, of Zurich, Switzerland; William Jennings Bryan; Carl Milliken, former governor of Maine; Samuel Zwemer, of Cairo, Egypt; K. Tsunashima, of Japan; former ambassador to Japan, Cyrus E. Woods, and others.

The general theme was "The Church in the World." Noonday addresses on the "Call to Personal Religion," and evening speeches on "The Common Tasks of the Churches," were daily features of the session. A series of evangelistic services in the Forsyth Theatre each noon, conducted by Dr. Charles L. Goodell, attracted large crowds.

The Federal Council of Churches is the largest federation of churches in the world. Its twenty-eight Protestant communions represent a constituency of 20,000,000 members. From four to five hundred delegates and official visitors were present at the recent meeting. The next session will be held Dec. 3, 1928.

MY FIRST EXPERIENCE AS FIRST KOREAN PRESIDING ELDER.

By J. S. Ryang.

Bishop H. A. Boaz has conferred upon me the highest honor in the gift of his authority by making me the first Korean presiding elder in the Korea Conference. By this appointment I was more than surprised not only because a great honor was given to an unworthy one like myself, but also because of the fact that the good Bishop seems to expect too much from a little fellow like myself. Besides the presiding eldership, he has already given me two responsible positions, namely, superintendency of the Korean Department of Siberia Mission, which calls me to supervise four small districts and Missionary Secretary of Korea Conference, which requires me to look after the matter of self-support in the whole Conference. When I was receiving the appointment to a presiding eldership, I felt as if a big mountain was falling upon my already loaded shoulders, but I bowed my head to the appointing power and decided to do my very best for all the appointments, God being my helper. I am now hoping and praying that I may be worthy of this honor and compliment which I enjoy.

The First Experience.

As a presiding elder of a district I called a meeting of the preachers of the district at once, and we had a good time together for two days and two nights. In accordance with the resolution we passed at the last Annual Conference, we have tried to start a great revival—the object of the year—from our preachers' meeting. We have reconsecrated ourselves to the Lord for his service. Miss Cordelia Erwin, the only resident missionary for Chulwon District this year, and one of the bravest and most consecrated women I know, called her Bible women, too, so that we had a joint meeting, and we were doubly blessed. Ten Bible women and eleven preachers attended the meeting. It was a good thing for us to have this meeting at the beginning of our new Conference year. Then I started out for the first quarterly conferences on Oct. 9, and finished on the third. During the first round as a presiding elder, I have traveled 410 li on railroad (3 li make a mile); 240 li by automobile; 360 li on foot (it took about 50 actual walking hours), a total of 1,110 li; visited 15 churches, held 9 quarterly conferences, preached 13 sermons, baptized 9 adults, and dedicated 1 church, besides having had a good chance to hear the many problems and to learn the actual condition of the district. The people, wherever I went, welcomed me like a prince and treated me like a friend and brother. I have praised God once more for Christian fellowship! Our preachers are doing well, and they have all consecrated themselves to the work.

Condition of the District.

The territory of Chulwon District, which consists of four whole counties and parts of four others, is about two thousand square miles, with a population of about 300,000 Koreans. They are mostly farmers, who are usually poor, but good people. This district includes one of the hardest sections of Korea; in territory it is made up of high mountains and in population of poor and ignorant people. It is indeed a very hard place even for travel only. I have been told that Brother Moose, after he climbed to the top of the highest and hardest mountain pass last year, said to his circuit preacher who was accompanying him somewhat like this: "Wouldst thou kill me by leading me to a pass like this?" No wonder Brother Moose has broken down before the age of sixty! But we had the best quarterly conference in this section of the most difficult part of the district. It was very gratifying to find that the district is in good shape—much better than I had ever thought—and I have appreciated the labors of my predecessors, such as Brother Gamble, Brother Moose, Brother Gerdine, and Dr. E. W. Anderson, who have poured their life blood upon this section of the country all these years, in order to plant the Methodist Church—Christian Church—in Korea. I am sure that they have sung many a time when traveling over this section, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord, o'er mountains, or plain or sea; I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord, I'll be what you want me to be." May God bless them and reward them with the crown of life which has been promised. In this district we have at present 69 groups or churches, 46 church buildings, with 1,040 full members, 280 probationers, 360 baptized children and 575 seekers, making total adherents, 2,255, in our church. We have about 500 boys and girls in our country primary schools, who are receiving Christian instruction. I will say again that the district is in a good shape and Christianity has taken strong root in the hearts of the people in this difficult section of the country. God be praised!

The Needs of the District.

Since this district is made up of mountainous sections of the country, the people are usually poor, and probably more things are needed here than anywhere else. But the urgent need is more workers; the people are ready to accept the Gospel, and we have to preach and teach, emphasizing the latter. When we have as much work in this district as we should, we should have 250 churches, 59 preachers, 30 Bible women, in addition to 8 resident missionaries. But we have at present less than one-fifth of what we should have. The harvest is indeed plenteous, but the laborers are few! The most urgent needs of the district at present are 12 permanent church buildings, 15 temporary ones, and 6 parsonages of permanent type, besides 3 men and 3 women missionaries. Will there be some friends in the mother church to build some churches or parsonages for us in Chulwon District?

A Special Need of the District.

While I was visiting the churches, I found five church buildings—good ones—which need repairing immediately. All of them are good for some years to come, so far as their main structures are concerned, but every one of the roofs has been leaking for the last few years, and if they are not repaired at once, before the heavy snow season, all of them may be ruined entirely. The cause of leaking is the poor quality of the Korean tile, and there is no other way to save these houses of worship than to reroof them with galvanized iron, which will cost us about one thousand yen, or five hundred dollars United States gold. But we have no fund for the district to do this, and it is too great a burden for the people to bear upon the heavy expenses of the circuit. Our people are trying their best in the effort to make the entire Conference self-supporting. So we must have some "Independent Specials" from our good friends immediately. Will there be some friend or friends of Korea Mission to cable us five hundred dollars to save these five houses of God in Chulwon District? When the need of churches is so great that we are asking for new churches, shall we let these that we have already be ruined? I am praying and waiting for an answer to this urgent appeal.

Seoul, Korea.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

It seems to me after noting some of the filngs at religion and the Bible, current in the periodicals and newspapers, that there is need of this class of writers of a real understanding of the subject. Religion, the real thing, its life, its force, its beauty and fitness to man's need, is not a subject of idle jest or superficial criticism. It lies far deeper than this. Its real essence and meaning, its assurance and confirmation are apart from these objections. To one who has a vital experience, has the touch of divine life upon the soul and walks in fellowship with Christ, such vaporings lie so far outside his experience as at times to provoke a smile of pity. These animadversions no more constitute what our fathers called the "reality" of religion than chemical reaction constitutes life, love, or emotion. Is it not high time some of us should learn this and quit fooling away time fighting things that lie outside the real message of saving grace and assured power? If the faithful soldiers storm the citadel of the human heart and possess this for their Leader, all the outlying territory becomes his own. Satan is doing some rare skirmishing nowadays in trying to deflect the mind of the church from the main issue, by throwing shadow giants on the screen. This is simply another phase of the age-long strife. Let none be deceived thereby. As an angel of assumed wisdom the old enemy is just about as dangerous as under the garb of a messenger of light. Whether personal or impersonal, by direct or indirect means, in himself or through his emissaries, he is still at work, and will demand watching ever.

"Thou shalt not kill." God wrote this command amid the awful glory and rolling thunder of Sinai. St. John, keen analyst of spiritual truths, says, "no murderer hath eternal life," and that the dread harvest of hate is murder. Physical life, the animating, puising force that has its present habitat within us, is the wonder and study of ages. That we live is patent to all; how we live, no man knows. God holds life sacred. He has thrown about it fullest, clearest commands for its safety or preservation and attached sternest penalties to its forfeiture. There is nothing under heaven men esteem more; and yet in this time in which we are living, nothing is more lightly esteemed. This paradox seems a contradiction, yet the value of life depends on the right or wrong estimate of life. If one believes the earthly life is a promise and in a sense an assurance of life beyond the grave, then it becomes a thing sacred and precious. If one lacks this faith of life, then this accounts for the fact that is so often flung away as a mere bauble.

When Christ came he placed an infinite value on life, and his teaching should forever blot from the book of human experience the old stoic's dictum, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we shall die." "Because I live ye shall live also," is the sum and substance of human hope and faith. No other creed bridges the chasm between two worlds and affords a secure passing into the bourne beyond.

CRIME DECREASE UNDER PROHIBITION.

The United States is becoming not more lawless but less so. This statement is based on reports from police departments of 300 leading cities and the District of Columbia, covering all States except North Carolina and Oklahoma. The survey, the most extensive ever made, was compiled by Robert E. Corradini, of the World League Against Alcoholism, in connection with police departments throughout the country. It is submitted to the press by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary of the League.

The survey covers the total number of arrests in the last four years prior to prohibition and the first four years under prohibition. It is true that the number of arrests of the dry period is greater than the number for the wet period, but when analyzed in connection with the increased population, which is 5,000,000, the findings are contrary to the much too prevalent belief that America is growing more criminal.

There has actually been a decrease in arrests for drunkenness since the Volstead Act went into effect, and that decrease is 42.3 per cent for the 300 cities, or a million fewer cases of drunkenness than there were in the wet period, for the whole nation. Where formerly drunkenness cases made up 32.5 per cent of the total arrests in the country, they have now been cut to 18.8 per cent.

From 1913 to 1916 there was a yearly average of 58,946 persons arrested for all causes out of each million population. The total for 300 cities was 1,758,078. During the first four years of prohibition, arrests for all causes were 2,040,700. The population of these cities had increased 5,000,000 during the period. Applying this ratio of increase to the entire population, there is a yearly total of nearly 10,000 fewer arrests during the dry period than during the wet. Failure to take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances is largely responsible for much talk about increase of crime throughout the country.

Police records show that the greatest single factor in arrests to-day is the automobile. The largest number of arrests is generally for violation of traffic laws and ordinances.

The yearly number of arrests in the 300 cities for intoxication only, during the wet period, was 572,106, or 19,193 out of every million of population. This was reduced in the four prohibition years to 393,711, or 11,067 per million population. Again, taking this as a ratio for the entire country, there would be a decrease of 1,021,416 arrests for drunkenness, or 42.3 per cent.

The saving to the States that can be pointed to directly in connection with the crime situation is bigger to-day than before prohibition. The million fewer drunks, the arresting of each of which costs the police department alone $94, has resulted in saving from $95,000,000 to $100,000,000 yearly. Adding to this the cost of trial and detention, which sometimes goes over a period of months, this amount could be doubled and yet be a conservative estimate.—World League Against Alcoholism.

"THE EMOTIONAL ALUMNUS."

President Ernest M. Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, in a message to the Cornell Alumni Association, struck out a notable phrase the other day when he referred to the "emotional alumnus." He said: "The emotional alumnus, whose knowledge of his university is solely a sentimental harking back to his undergraduate days, is an incompetent alumnus of minimum value to his alma mater at his best and a positive detriment at his worst."

These words are well worth pondering by the church, as well as by the college. At first sight it might be objected that it could not apply to the church, as the church has no alumni. Yet, when we think a little deeper, is not one of the greatest obstacles to the church just that it has so many "alumni?" That is, so many on its roll are in reality alumni. They have "graduated" from the active ranks. The present tasks and activities of the church do not lay any cross of sacrifice upon their shoulders. Their knowledge of what the church is, is about like the knowledge of the alumnus described—to whom fond memory brings the light of other days and who has small knowledge or interest in the present tasks laid upon the institution by the changing conditions of to-day. There are others who resemble the emotional alumnus not so much because their active days have ceased, as because they look at the church through a sentimental haze and devote their efforts toward keeping the institution in the exact state in which they found it forty or fifty years ago.

President James R. Angell, of Yale University, thus describes such college alumni: "Unless they are intelligently informed their judgment is apt to be sentimental and erratic—harking back to the conditions of their own college days, which may be quite irrelevant to current conditions." The church needs not more "emotional alumni," but more members with a tremendously active relation, who look at it both with affection and a clear understanding of its needs and functioning in the present day.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

CLIMBING.

There is in a little churchyard in Switzerland a simple inscription on the tomb of one who perished in an Alpine accident, which has always appealed to me with singular force: "He died climbing." He had heard the call of the mountains and had lost his life in endeavoring to respond. We have heard the call of the risen Christ, but unlike the climber we gain our lives in our sustained attempt to respond worthily. "Seek those things that are above," is a call to enjoy the highest possible life, for the very struggle develops latent possibilities and capacities, and each step upward is into fuller liberty and more perfect manhood.—Selected.

PROHIBITION AND AMERICAN MORAL LEADERSHIP.

The following statement by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was published recently in the London Daily Times as a reply to the severe and sweeping criticisms of American prohibition workers made by the Lord Bishop of Durham in the debate on the local option bill in the British House of Lords:

In the debate in the House of Lords on the Bishop of Oxford's bill the Bishop of Durham made some remarks concerning American prohibition and the church to which the undersigned, as chairman of the Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, presents brief reply.

The Bishop frankly admits as a basal fact, "having at every turn America in our minds." Although the American Prohibition Amendment was deliberately adopted by a great nation after an educative process extending over fifty years, although after five years' experience nothing indicates its repeal, yet the Bishop unhesitatingly, dogmatically denounces that law as productive of "disastrous consequences." Furthermore he anathematizes the moral Christian leadership of America as "bigoted," "fanatical," "unwise," "forcing coercive legislation upon the people," "offending the conscience," "manufacturing sins," emphasizing "sham sins," and "winning a Pyrrhic victory," as a result of "extreme unwisdom and folly."

Replying to this amazing indictment of a great nation and its moral leadership it is gladly admitted: First, the Christian leadership of America strongly advocated prohibition; second, after five years' experience, notwithstanding all reports (?) of "disastrous consequences," it strongly advocates (note carefully) not its repeal, but its continuance.

But the charge of "bigotry," of "manufacturing sins," etc., indicates either an amazing lack of information, or a strange misinterpretation of the facts.

America's moral Christian leadership brushes aside without hesitation any claim of any individual to enjoy any privilege, or to perform any action as a personal, private right, if experience has demonstrated that such actions frequently become hurtful to the social order of which he is a part. The United States Supreme Court has officially declared that the liquor traffic is "the most prolific source of misery, poverty, insanity, vice and crime." The moral leadership of America, agreeing fully with that thoroughly considered judgment, has declared that it is not only the right but the duty of the people to protect their physical, economic, intellectual, social and home life from the terrible results, which experience has demonstrated follow so frequently the indulgence of the appetite for intoxicants. The issue is not "America free or America compulsorily sober," but the issue is "Selfish Individualism versus the General Welfare." The adoption of the prohibition law was not "forcing coercive legislation upon the people." On the contrary, it was the act of the great majority of the people themselves deliberately by law abating the legalized liquor traffic because it had become a "public nuisance," a menace to the public welfare. This is not "bigoted fanaticism," or "manufacturing sins," or emphasizing "sham sins." It is a splendid outstanding example of good common sense, indeed of the application to the social life of a great nation of St. Paul's teaching, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak." And those who selfishly refuse to meet their obligations to assist in protecting the social order, America brands by law as selfish enemies of society, and this writer predicts that other nations will inevitably follow their lead.

Furthermore, this great aim of prohibition—"to promote the general welfare"—has been accomplished to a remarkable extent, fully justifying its continued advocacy by the churches. Take only one example. The United Charities of Chicago (population three million) has just published a report, covering the last six years. The report states "the passage of the Volstead Act accounts for the phenomenal drop in intemperance. The decrease in the rate in intemperance was accompanied by the lowest count of general and industrial accidents, epilepsy, insanity, feeble-mindedness, illegitimacy, imprisonment, intemperance, immorality, desertion and unemployment." Number of families receiving major services the year before prohibition was 7,847; in 1924, 4,450, a decrease of 45 per cent. Crime Statistics: Murders, 1918, 300; in 1923, 371, decrease of 15 per cent; burglaries (1919), 6,165, (1923) 3,819; robberies (1919) 5,918, (1923) 1,402, fifty per cent decrease in both items; bank deposits (1919) $1,715,000,000, (1923) $5,212,000,000, increase nearly 35 per cent; savings deposits largely of working people, increase from $339,000,000 in 1916 to $810,000,000 in 1923—35 per cent. There were built in Chicago in 1920 1,906 single family houses, and 592 apartment houses, accommodating 1,091 families; in 1923, 7,351 single family houses, and 9,852 apartment houses, accommodating 35,515 families, four times as many single family houses, 33 times as many apartments and 33 times as many families housed in 1923 as in 1920. Church collections increased eleven per cent in 1921, 23 per cent in 1922, and 24 per cent in 1923.

Such results in Chicago must indicate to unprejudiced minds, despite all the exaggerated reports of smuggling, home-brewing and bootlegging, what has happened throughout the United States. Such results fully vindicate the sanity of the moral leadership of America against the aspersions of the Bishop of Durham. Surely the moral leadership of Great Britain must recognize that American Protestantism would not continue to advocate prohibition if prohibition were such a stupendous failure.

JAMES CANNON, Jr.,
Chairman Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.
Steamer Berengaria, Oct. 6, 1924.

ENDORSEMENT BY THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF NEAR EAST RELIEF.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America rejoices in the providence that enables America to do a worthy work of relief and reconstruction in the Bible Lands.

Saving and training the orphans for self-support, under agency of Near East Relief, is a notable Christian service, and it has also been instrumental in opening new missionary opportunity, in developing new co-operation between Eastern and Western Christianity, and in assisting interdenominational co-operation in this country.

Our study convinces us that it will likely be necessary for the work to proceed through the coming quadrennium on approximately the plans of the Executive Committee of Near East Relief, and we therefore approve continued support by the churches in its provisional plans.

We heartily endorse the idea of International Golden Rule Observance in behalf of Near East Relief, not only because of the beneficial results to Near East wards of America, but also because of its larger results in interpreting and developing international good will and world peace, and we urge churches throughout the world to join in the International Observance of the Golden Rule.

POPULARITY IN THE PULPIT.

Is your pastor a "popular" preacher? If so, how does he manage it?

Does he help you to rearrange your prejudices, and how eminently right you are in all your views and in all your conduct?

Does he help you to arrange your prejudices, but not to lose them, by showing up only the sins of those people who are never likely to be present in the congregation?

Does he give you large doses of sympathy because of your hard lot and blame everybody but yourselves for the limitations and miseries of your lives?

Does he speak with easy and soothing silliness rich in those well-worn expressions which sound so pious that they are easily passed off as substitutes for religious ideas?

Does he keep you constantly stirred by one sensational device after another so that your thought of church is mainly a wonder over what he will do next?

Does he seem to play the part of the ancient prophets, but even when he denounces you merely flatters your egotism and arouses attention by a pulpit violence which sinks to a deaf calm immediately after the benediction?

Certainly any one of these six methods will work—for a time. But all of them together are useless in the long run, because they are studied efforts to gain an unworthy end.

A temporary popularity is not an infallible sign of power. Neither is public indifference.

If your pastor is the man we think he is, he doesn't try to be popular at all. He tries to be faithful.

And so he has times when he is liked by everybody, and other times when he is liked by scarcely anybody. Since he speaks the truth as he sees it, he can't help offending somebody now and then.

Judge him therefore, not by his popularity, but by the lasting outcomes of his work. Give him particular credit if without any beating of drums he helps people to find God in Christ and shows them how to illustrate that discovery in their lives.

He is a preacher of the gospel for just that, and popularity based on anything else is not worth writing to the papers about.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A NOTABLE OFFER TO MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Dr. J. W. Cooper has just proposed to give Millsaps College a paid-up life insurance policy for $2,000, provided $2,000 can be obtained from other sources, for the establishment of an endowed lectureship on some phase of the Christian ministry, or other topic to be selected by the faculty and officers of the college. The income of this fund of $4,000 will provide a sufficient amount to enable the college once every four years to engage an outstanding leader in Christian thought to deliver a series of lectures at Millsaps College; thus, once in each college generation the student body will be brought in touch with a man who is an intellectual and spiritual power in the Christian world.

The manuscript of the lectures will be the property of the college, and thus enable the institution by the publishing of these lectures, to contribute to leadership in Christian thought, as well as to provide trained Christian workers.

The college, through the recently founded department of Religious Education, is already taking a position of leadership in the task of training for specific Christian service. Such a lectureship crowns this great task. Who will help us to meet the opportunity offered by Dr. Cooper whereby he rounds out a life-time of service to Mississippi Methodism by continuing his good work when he shall have passed to his reward? It might be added that this sum will be added to our productive endowment and enable the college to collect 40% of the total amount in addition from the General Education Board.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

As Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League, I am asking all treasurers of local Chapters, and all other correspondents, to note my change of address, from Pascagoula to Meridian, Miss., Poplar Springs Drive.

My health has improved somewhat, and I hope to render the best service possible to the young people of our Conference. I ask an interest in your prayers.

Yours in the work.

AN OLD DECLAMATION.

"You'd scarce expect one of my age
To speak in public on the stage;
And if I chance to fall below
Demosthenes or Cicero,
Don't view me with a critic's eye,
But pass my imperfections by.
Large streams from little fountains flow,
Tall oaks from little acorns grow,
And though I now am small and young,
Of judgment weak, and feeble tongue,
Yet all great learned men, like me,
Once learned to read their A, B, C.
But why may not Columbia's soil
Rear men as great as Britain's isle,
Exceed what Greece and Rome have done,
Or any land beneath the sun?
May not our own State boast as great
As any other sister State?
Or where's the town, go far and near,
That does not find a rival here?
Or where's the boy, but three feet high,
Who's made improvements more than I?
These thoughts inspire my youthful mind
To be the greatest of mankind,
Great—not like Caesar, stained with blood,
But only great as I am good."

A GAME TO TEACH ORDILINESS.

Thomas hurriedly turned out the contents of my sewing basket.

"Son, please don't muss my basket," I said.

"I had to, mother, because my fishing tackle was in it. Button Brown and I are going down the railroad to fish in the hole."

"But," I said, "why don't you keep your fishing tackle in the box I gave you for it?"

"Oh," in an injured tone, "Sue took that for her doll trunk."

I sat down weakly. Crash! went a toy horse under my rocker.

"You've broken my horse, mother. Never mind, I don't care so much anyway."

"He shouldn't have been on the floor, Tom."

"I forgot to put him up. Well, so long, mother," and he went cheerfully off to the fishing hole.

I looked around the disordered room, the dear old room where we spend so many happy hours of sweet companionship—my boy and girl and I. "I must find some way to teach them to be orderly," I told myself. "I spend so much time putting away their toys and clothes that I could devote to helping them in more important ways. Yet, if just will not nag them about anything. I'd rather pick up after them, and even let them be untidy, than to spoil their joy in our home and their feeling of comradeship with me." I felt sure there was some way, and I found it; this story tells the tale.

When we were settled after our evening meal, we held a "Family Council," as we call it. "My dear audience," I began, in the make-believe way that we play so often, "I notice that this family, including myself, has fallen into bad habits."

"I am not smoking," began Tom.

"I haven't missed my spelling but twice this week," volunteered Sue.

"No, and I have not stolen a pig, nor dyed my hair green," I replied. "Still I insist that we as a family have a bad habit—one that wastes our time and makes our home look untidy."

"Oh, come, mother, I can't think what it is," and Sue looked puzzled.

"I know!" Tom suddenly cried. "Mother means that we don't put our things in the right places after we use them. Sue, you go right straight and empty your doll rags out of my box."

"I guess I won't, Mister, till you give up my doll grip. Mother, he carried worms in it."

"I—"

"Listen, children," I broke in. "Let's make a game of it. First, we will each put things in their proper places. Let's play that everything has a home and make it stay there, except when it is in use. After everything is home, the game will begin. If either of us leaves anything out, away from its proper place, the one who first sees it may claim a pin as a forfeit, and the one who forgot must immediately put the article in its home."

How everybody flew around putting things away! In no time the room looked as neat as a pin. At first, no one got a forfeit, but the next morning, as Tom became very much interested in a book, Sue announced joyfully, "I claim a forfeit; your shoes are under the edge of the bed."

"I'll get you, Miss," grumbled Tom, as he gave her a pin—and he did.

"Pay me a forfeit for not emptying the bowl!" I heard him roar, a little later.

So it went on. I paid as many forfeits as the others, but I no longer spent half my time putting things away or looking for lost articles.—Mrs. A. R. Hammon, in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

TOM'S LESSON.

Uncle Jack had taken Tom for a walk in the woods, and as they came through the grove Tom idly brought his stick down upon a family of ants that were busy carrying into their home some crumbs of bread that had been left by a picnic party.

"I am sorry that the woodland newspaper will have to report a tragedy," said Uncle Jack, soberly. "They will have to say: 'While busy storing provisions in their home near Long Pond, the ant family was struck by a terrible tornado, and nearly every one perished. This was an excellent family and was doing no harm. In the home were several little ones, who waited throughout the night for something to eat; but finding the house overturned and their parents missing, they strayed off into the woods and were lost. The cause of the tornado is unknown.'"

"Why, Is it like that?" asked Tom, in surprise.

"Certainly. They have been at some pains to build that little house; see how ingenious they were in fashioning it! Now it is laid to waste, and they must find a new spot. Some of the little ones are dead, too."

Tom looked down rnefully at the havoc he had made. "I know what will make them happy," he said. "I will leave this piece of nut cake from my lunch box, and they will eat that."

He laid the cake down carefully, and was rewarded by seeing other ants swarm over it and carry bits to another place, where he thought they meant to build a new home. "I think they will soon forget," he said, "don't you?"

"Probably; but if they forget, I am sure you will not," said Uncle Jack. And Tom found that he never did.—Youth's Companion.

THE WHEELBARROW AND THE HONEY BEE.

By "Uncle Dan."

A wheelbarrow is all right in its way. It has its uses, but who would want to be a wheelbarrow? Not I, and in this I voice the sentiment of every boy and girl.

I wouldn't be a wheelbarrow because it has to be pushed along. It always waits for a master. The boy or girl who waits to be pushed, like an old wheelbarrow, will never accomplish much. A duty is to be performed, and it needs to be done now, but old Wheelbarrow sits down and waits for some one to push him to it.

How different the one who jumps to his feet, gives a whoop of joy because he has a job, and while the other is waiting by the roadside he finishes his task. With a smile on his face and happiness bubbling in his heart, he is ready for the next thing.

A wheelbarrow has no power in itself, and it never starts anything. If the old thing could speak it would probably say, with a whine, "I can't!" as its duty is pointed out.

Have you ever seen a boy or girl like that? No power to do big things. Holding back, while an ugly frown covers the face and they murmur, "I can't!" Important things to do, a great opportunity for service, but they are playing wheelbarrow.

I had rather be a honey bee. He does not wait to be pushed out, but with the rising of the sun he goes forth in quest of honey. He is always on the job, hard at work all through the day, making honey. As the product of his toil, others are helped and he is adding his mite to feed the hungry.

What privilege to help in making other lives sweeter and lifting their burdens as we go along the way!

Let us all learn a lesson from the wheelbarrow and the bee.—Florida Christian Advocate.

He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.—Isa. 11:1.

"A NOTABLE OFFER TO MILLSAPS COLLEGE."

After the section of the Advocate containing the article, "A Notable Offer to Millsaps College," on page six, had been printed, a telegram from Dr. D. M. Key, president of the college, requested that the figures be changed so that the first paragraph will read: "Dr. I. W. Cooper has just proposed to give to Millsaps College a paid-up life insurance policy for $2000, provided $3000 can be obtained from other sources, for the establishment of an endowed lectureship on some phase of the Christian ministry, or other topic to be selected by the faculty and officers of the college. The income from this fund of $5,000 will provide a sufficient amount to enable the college once every four years to engage an outstanding leader in Christian thought to deliver a series of lectures at Millsaps College; thus, once in each college generation the student body will be brought in touch with a man who is an intellectual and spiritual power in the Christian world."

This is indeed a notable offer to our great educational institution in Mississippi, and there ought to be no difficulty in finding the man or men who will provide the additional amount to make a fund of $5,000 to give Millsaps College a permanent endowed lectureship.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"The work has never been so encouraging here as it is now," writes Rev. Carroll Varner, of Winona, Miss.

Rev. F. P. Moss has been the recipient of a generous "pounding" at the hands of the good people of Bienville, La.

Dr. R. S. Isbell, of Columbia, La., an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, though advanced in years, is still deeply interested in the work of the church.

Rev. H. W. Jordan has been cordially received by the good people of Dubach, La., and he enters upon the year's work with the most encouraging prospects.

Rev. E. B. Sharp, of Hernando, Miss., writes: "We are comfortably situated here, and find these to be very excellent people. All denominations united in giving us a very cordial welcome. We are looking forward to a very pleasant year."

Representatives of twenty-five religious organizations will gather in Washington, D. C., Jan. 14-16, to discuss the problems connected with motion pictures. Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, of our church, is one of the speakers.

Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux requests us to state that his address has been changed from Lydia, La., to Houma, La. Brother Thibodeaux is one of the effective workers in the great French mission field of Louisiana.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell is beginning his fifth year at the Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., his return having been unanimously requested by the board of stewards. This promises to be the best year of his pastorate thus far.

Rev. A. W. Waddill, recently transferred from the Louisiana to the Little Rock Conference, has been appointed pastor at Malvern, Ark. We cordially commend Brother Waddill to the Arkansas brethren—he is a faithful and effective minister of the gospel.

Rev. W. E. Dickens, Daleville, Miss., writes: "Our people gladly received us back for the fourth year. We are expecting a good year. A great crowd gathered at the parsonage and gave us a great pounding—the kind that doesn't hurt a Methodist preacher."

The work on the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, under the leadership of the new presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, has started well. All the preachers are at their posts, determined to do the best year's work of their ministry.

Rev. A. F. Stem, one of the general evangelists, requests the Advocate to state that he is making Memphis, Tenn., his headquarters, and that he will be happy to respond to the call of any pastor for his services. He does not object to a difficult field, for he wants to work. His address is 681 Lucy Avenue, Memphis.

The budget of the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., embracing twenty-nine items, amounts to $24,145. Among these items, we note provision for a financial secretary, an assistant financial secretary, and an office secretary. The salary of the pastor is $5,000. Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks serves this great church.

Brother J. W. Dean, of Los Angeles, Calif., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, writes: "I love the brethren of both the Louisiana and the Mississippi Conferences, and want to know where each and every one of them was sent. We belong to Bob Shuler's church out here, and we love him very much. We consider him a 'wheel horse.'"

Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, authorizes the Advocate to announce that Rev. Tom O. Prewitt has been appointed to the Barlow charge to take the place of Rev. C. C. Griffin, who has been given the superannuate relation. Brother Griffin has been filling the appointments on the charge since Conference until some one could be found to take his place.

Under date of Dec. 11, Rev. W. J. Wood, of Dublin, Miss., writes: "I have just had a long distance call to go to Holly Springs, Miss., to hold the funeral service of dear old Aunt Betsy Jones, a life-long Methodist and a devoted member of Pisgah Church. I was her pastor, 1911-12. She was indeed a mother in Israel. God bless her loved ones and comfort them." On account of the illness of his wife, Brother Wood was not able to heed this call.

Rev. W. J. Wood, writing from Dublin, Miss., says: "Just after our arrival here, these good people gave us one of the greatest 'poundings' we ever received. When they left, there were enough groceries in the pantry to last us at least three months, and still the good things continue to come in—they do not seem to know when they have done enough for the preacher." Brother and Sister Wood both have suffered with attacks of the "flu"—in which the editor most deeply sympathizes with them.

The readers of the Advocate will sympathize deeply with Brother Chas. O. Chalmers, Business Manager of the Advocate, in the death of his mother, Mrs. Chas. L. Chalmers, which occurred at his home in this city last Sunday night. She was advanced in years and had not been in good health for a long time. The funeral service was conducted at the home on Monday by Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., assisted by Dr. W. Winans Drake and the editor of the Advocate. The body was taken to Tangipahoa, La., where it was interred on Tuesday by the side of her husband, who preceded her by several years to the Better Land.

We take the following from the Daily Leader, of Ruston, La.: "It is with general regret that our town yields up Rev. and Mrs. K. W. Dodson and family to Minden, where they will make their home. Rev. Mr. Dodson having been appointed presiding elder of the new Minden District. The Dodsons have been among us just long enough for them to become greatly endeared to the city. They have been a wonderful part of its religious and social life, and our town feels keenly its loss to Minden, which city was the former home of Dr. and Mrs. Dodson and where they have innumerable friends who are as eager to welcome them back again as we are saddened to say goodbye."

A REMARKABLE GATHERING.

Through the kindness of my church, it was my great privilege to attend the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches, which was just recently held in Atlanta, Ga., this being the first time it has been held in the South. I shall always regard it as one of the high privileges of my life, though I had my baggage stolen on the way and had a badly infected arm by the time I got there. It was rather surprising to me that more of my brethren did not avail themselves of this opportunity to hear some of the outstanding religious leaders of our land.

One cannot attend one of these meetings without coming away with a very high regard for this great organization and the intense earnestness with which it is setting itself to the stupendous tasks before it. It came into being in 1908, and our church furnished the first president, Bishop Hendrix. It has as its aim the bringing of the Protestant churches of the United States into closer bonds of unity for evangelization, and the Christianizing of the social, moral, and economic problems of the whole land, and the consideration of steps looking to the abolition of war. It recognizes Christ as the Lord of all the relationships of life, and that anything which might be done to improve these relationships is the legitimate task of the church. It is an ambitious and daring program; but why shouldn't the church of the living Christ set itself to such a task? All the evangelical churches of the United States are represented in it except the Southern Baptist. These churches have a common task, they are in existence for one great end, and there is no reason why they should not put forward a united effort toward the performing of that task; hence this organization.

It is not necessary, or desirable, to make mention of all the noted speakers and their addresses, but I must call attention to some of the more outstanding personalities and deliverances. The first two days of the meeting, Dr. Robert E. Speer, the retiring president, presided, after which Dr. S. Parks Cadman, of Brooklyn, the newly elected president, took the chair. Both of these men gave evidence that they could do something more than make speeches, for better presiding officers could hardly be found, dispatching the business with ease and rapidity. Particularly was this true of Dr. Speer; with clear, strong voice and the utmost courtesy and fairness, he put the question and introduced the speakers, never taking advantage of his position to comment on the different questions or using many and superfluous words in introducing the speakers. How much time we would save in our Annual Conferences if the presiding officers would follow this same rule, and the Conference limit the time of the speakers—as was done here. Even Mr. Bryan was given a limited time in which to make his great address, and he observed it! On the first night Dr. Sweets, of the Southern Presbyterian, and Bishop McDowell, of the Northern Methodist Church, gave two most earnest and impressive addresses.

I heard only part of the address on "The Church Universal the Hope for World Peace," by Sir Willoughby Dickinson, of London, but it was evidently a great deliverance. Bishop Francis J. McConnell stirred, and I think somewhat startled, the Council by his speech on "The Social Task of the Church in America;" one could not but admire his bold and daring stand, though I expect many would accuse him of being a Socialist. Rather startling also was the address by Dr. Warren Wilson, of the Northern Presbyterian Church, on the church and the rural community. Dr. Sam M. Zwemer brought a ringing appeal to Christendom to present a solid front against a new Moslem world. He has spent the best part of his life as a missionary to Islam, and is perhaps the greatest living authority on this religion. It was worth much to have heard Dr. E. Y. Mullins on "Prayer," and Dr. Charles L. Goodell's noonday evangelistic addresses at the Forsyth Theatre.

Sunday was a great day during the Council meeting, with Dr. Cadman's sermon at the morning hour, Dr. Speer's masterful message on "Christ the One Hope of the World" at the afternoon hour in the city auditorium, and Dr. Zwemer again that night. What a marvelous preacher Cadman is! it is not surprising that he is regarded by many as America's greatest preacher. Listening to the average preacher and then listening to Cadman is like looking upon an ordinary mountain waterfall and then gazing upon the wonders of Niagara. Of course Speer's address was grand—no one who had ever heard him could expect anything else from him; he impresses you always as a man in a class entirely by himself. He seems to live constantly in the presence of Christ. The Southern speakers did not suffer by comparison with their Northern brethren. And it made a Southern Methodist feel very proud as he heard Bishop Candler the second day of the meeting deliver a most interesting and at the same time witty address on "Great Revivals of Religion That Have Helped to Make the United States." He held the interest of that audience from beginning to end; I feel sure they were loath to see him sit down. Our Senior Bishop is hale and hearty, as interesting and witty as ever, but he is burdened by his wife's illness.

I can hardly refrain from speaking of some of the other stirring addresses, but I must, after making one more reference. It was a genuine delight to hear William Jennings Bryan again. He was one of the last speakers on the program, a sort of climax to all the good things which had gone before. Of course he received an ovation when he was presented, but without any flourish he proceeded at once to his task with great earnestness, "The Church and World Peace," pausing long enough at the outset, however, to make a telling blow for prohibition. Has the United States in all its history ever had another statesman who through so long a period of public life never had his integrity or sincerity called in question? He is the Gladstone of America.

Such is a sort of bird's-eye view of the meeting of the Federal Council in Atlanta, Dec. 3-9. It is taking a serious view of the tasks of Christ's church, not with regard to our own land alone, but with regard to the whole world. It is certainly something more than a nominal organization. With intense earnestness it is bringing to bear great brains and great hearts to the tasks before it, and under the leadership of Dr. Cadman it is to be expected that much will be accomplished during the coming quadrennium. It deserves the hearty support and earnest prayers of all God's people everywhere.

A GOOD BOARD OF STEWARDS.

I have just read with interest an editorial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The editor starts out by saying: "There is no more important group of men in the economy of Methodism than the board of stewards. The success of the local church, both materially and spiritually, depends largely upon the character of the stewards, their interest in the work of the church, and the faithful performance of their duties as laid down in the Discipline. A good board of stewards can make a good church in spite of a poor preacher; and a poor board of stewards can make a failure of the pastorate of the most gifted preacher."

I wish every board of stewards would cut this editorial out and paste it in their steward's book and read it at every meeting as a part of the order of business. As I read this article, my mind went back to twenty-five years ago—when I moved several hundred miles, into a new church, new Conference, new surroundings. I was so anxious to fit in and to do the work, there was a fear at almost every turn. One evening the board of stewards met. I went to the meeting with trepidation. The chairman called on me to pray. After the regular order of business, the chairman turned to me and said: "I believe the Conference knows better than we do—a kind of divine guidance, in the cabinet. We did not ask for you—we had never heard of you—but we like you and are going to pray for you." Then, after a pause, he said: "You take care of the church and we will take care of you." I went back to my room with a new joy—that kind that Nehemiah speaks of when he said: "The joy of the Lord is our strength." They did take care of me, and what a great year we had! Yes, we had four great years.

Such a board of stewards can help any preacher. Every preacher goes to his new work feeling somewhat as I felt on that occasion, many of them with wife and little children, that increase their anxiety. These heroic men have put themselves into the hands of the church, to go where they are sent; the churches, in turn say, "We will receive whoever is sent." Mutual prayer and mutual effort will bring success to the church we love. "God is in the midst of her and will bless us, and that right early."

May God's blessings rest upon every pastor and his family, as they go to their new church, and upon every church, as they receive their new pastor.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR PASTORS.

Dear Mr. Editor: Please say to the pastors of the Louisiana and the Mississippi Conferences that last October I had with me in a revival at Crystal Springs, Miss Mollie Stockard, of Meridian, Tex. She conducted services for the children each evening at 3 o'clock, and for the young people at night, just before the general service. She also directed the singing for all services, and sang solos when requested. I was so delighted with her work that I asked of her permission to make arrangements for her next year in this territory. A letter just received grants this permission. She prefers to assist pastors who hold their own meetings, or who invite other pastors to conduct their meetings, rather than to work with evangelists. Her only financial stipulation is her expenses and an offering.

She came to Crystal Springs a stranger, and left after two weeks' work with the love and admiration of the town's citizeship. She possesses rare gifts of head and heart, and is one of the finest singers of solos that I know. Recently she filled an engagement with the General Electric Company to sing for their radio broadcasting station at Schenectady, N. Y., when her singing was heard in Rugby, England. She is now in her second revival in the State of New York since she was with us in October.

I would like to correspond with interested pastors for meetings for Miss Stockard during April and May.

KNOWING WHEN TO KEEP QUIET

Knowing what to say and when to say it, is no doubt a great and difficult achievement at times, but it is seldom either as difficult or as fine a thing as to know when and how to keep quiet. Many good enterprises have been halted and hindered because men have not spoken out when they should have; but who can estimate the harm that has been done because men have insisted on talking when they ought to have kept quiet? It would seem as if we could very often make up on a failure to say the thing we ought to have said, but it is just about impossible to get ahead of the foolish and futile thing we ought never to have said when once we have uttered it. These thoughts have come to us as we have been listening to and reading some of the things that have been said and written on the subject of church union. Surely in a time like this, when a somewhat perplexing issue was troubling the thoughts of many, an issue over which it would be easily possible to stir up feeling and prejudice and ill will, it would have been the part of wisdom for us all to have given much time to quiet thinking and a minimum to heated discussion and debate. If we had said little but our prayers and had been sure to have been faithful with them, it would have been an excellent thing. But what a tornado of talk we have been treated to! And how little of thought and kindly Christian feeling there have been mingled with it! Yes, we believe that knowing when to be quiet is supremely difficult and a supremely fine thing.—Christian Guardian.

OBITUARY.

On the 8th of November, 1924, the Death Angel came into the home of W. A. Sherman, and called for the husband and father, W. A. SHERMAN. Brother Sherman was a member of old Bay Springs church, on Taylorsville charge, of the Hattiesburg District. Brother Sherman was what I call a Methodist, a church man, and a Christian. He was a man that put his church first—his business was not in the way when it came time to attend to the business of the church. Old Bay Springs church got burned some years ago, and we have been holding service in the school house until, about the first of this year, it burned. So Brother Sherman proceeded to build a church. And we think we will build the church, but we are missing a great man. I was at Canton attending the Conference when I got a call to come home on Saturday night, but he had passed away when I got there. He leaves a wife, and a number of children and grandchildren, and a host of friends, who feel assured that when this great man ceased to live in this world he began to live with the redeemed of heaven. So I say to one and all, let us lift our eyes above the lifeless form and behold him in glory, not suffering, but reposing in heaven. We want to say to the mother and children and friends, let us all walk daily and live daily so when the end comes with each of us we may be able to repose with him in that home where parting comes no more.

His pastor,
A. J. LEGGETT.

IN MEMORY OF OUR BELOVED EX-PASTOR, REV. A. J. BONNETT.

Brother Bonnett was pastor of Bethel Church during the years 1921 and 1922. During his service here he had the complete confidence of the people, and now that he has gone home, when we think of him it seems that we have a strange uplifting personal feeling as though he were one of our own. It seems that the work of his spirit was to fill the soul with a burning zeal for the salvation of others.

The perfect, easy tenor with which he performed his duties was one noble trait of character that few possess. He came to our church in its infancy, and gave us just the right kind of courage and help to make it what it is to-day. He was ever willing to let Christ's spirit work through him.

He has gone to his rest
In the land of the blest,
Beyond the shining stars,
In that bright land of peace
Where joys never cease.
There he will wait for us,
Noble, devout and kind,
With none a fault to find—
A heart full of true love.

MRS. JOHN HUDSON MITCHELL.

VIOLA CAWTHORN was born at Holly Springs, Miss., July 28, 1862. Her parents were Nathan W. and Martha J. Cawthorn. Reared in the atmosphere of that cultured town, she was a recognized leader in the social, intellectual and moral forces of the young life of the community. When a mere girl she joined the Methodist church, of which her parents were devoted members. On Nov. 25, 1881, she was married to the Rev. John H. Mitchell, than whom Mississippi Methodism never knew a more faithful minister. Together they went to the hard places of the Conference, uncomplainingly, and served their day with admirable devotion, oftentimes with heroic sacrifice. To the husband's rugged integrity and indomitable energy, the wife added a gracious refinement. The combination was dynamic. Neither could have done the work that was done without the other. The story of their lives is a part of the history of the growth of the North Mississippi Conference for more than forty years. It is a sermon of radiant and salutary meaning. When Brother Mitchell, because of failing health, was superannuated in 1917, he made his home in Greenwood. It was natural that he should. Here he had been pastor, at different times, and also presiding elder. The people knew him and loved him. They wanted him here, when he retired. A generous friend gave them a home. Their presence was a benediction, for what they had been, and were still, to this community. It was after Brother Mitchell's death, however, in 1919, that Sister Mitchell did—if not her greatest, certainly her most conspicuous work. "The Business Men's Class," the largest in the State, called her to be their teacher. The class is of the Methodist Sunday school, but its roster contains the names of many of other churches, and others, still, who are not members of any church. For lack of room, they moved into a larger hall and, finally, into the largest theatre in the town. Here, from Sunday to Sunday, the teacher stood before her "boys," from every walk of life—many of them older than she was—"Rightly dividing the Word of Truth." The "highest" were strengthened and edified; the "lowest" were encouraged and comforted. A prominent citizen, not a Methodist, said, on the day of the funeral: "Mrs. Mitchell was more than a striking and useful personality; she was an institution—one of the best the town afforded." The life she lived was worth the price she paid for it, in study, and self-denial and suffering. After a lingering and painful illness, her spirit went home on July 29, 1924. The next day we laid her body to rest beneath the flowers, beside that of her sainted husband, in the Greenwood cemetery. Upon her request, the writer conducted the services and contributes these lines, having known the family for many years. We miss her, in the home and in the church and in the town, but we will see her again, glorified in the likeness of the ascended Jesus, if we are faithful. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!" The doctrine stands—"Not in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." The children left are Mrs. Dr. Trigg Thomas and Mrs. Ralph Applewhite, of Winona, Miss.; Mrs. G. F. Boyd, of Missouri, and Mr. J. Hendrix Mitchell, of Greenwood, Miss. Of their grief and loss I may not speak: but of the peace and hope that must be theirs because of the peace and hope that were mother's inspiration in life, and her strong support in death—to this I would point, that they might emulate her virtues and follow her example. God's best gift is Jesus Christ. His next best gift is a Christian mother. In spite of all our disappointments and heartaches and aspirations, our Father's goodness still abides. He knows all; and he loves and cares for his own. Amen.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM.

A WORD FROM SOUTH SIDE, CORINTH, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: On the evening of Nov. 2, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth told us that we might work with South Side people another year, and for this we thank God. We have received a most cordial welcome. The first night that we spent in the parsonage, about 7 o'clock, there was an alarm at the door, and upon opening the door we found ourselves face to face with several strong men, who began at once to unload a truck, and when they had gone we found that we had in our pantry a bounteous supply of good things for some months.

Our congregations are growing, and our Sunday school has doubled in attendance, and is still growing. We have received fifteen new members into our church since Conference. We are asking God for one hundred conversions at South Side this year, and we believe that we will have them.

Last Sunday (Dec. 7) was a great day with us. South Side raised her quota for the endowment fund of Grenada College, and a check for same has gone forward to the president, Rev. J. R. Countiss.

A preacher asked us at the district steward's meeting if South Side was still on the map. Yes, my brother, and she is growing every day. And it is not far out in the distance till you will wish that you could be with this good people—a finer, more loyal and sympathetic people cannot be found. We thank the Lord that it is our happy lot to be with them.

Your brother in Christ,
A. L. DAVENPORT, P. C.

MAKE YOUR LIFE PAY—MAKE THE CHURCH WIN.

Money is the least satisfying of man's investments. Yet in its disposition he uses all his acumen and judgment.

Mr. Rockefeller said recently: "Christian education is the most productive and permanent form of investment." The real investor sees undeveloped resources, permanent investment, possible dividends, and the joy of making his investments a contribution to human welfare, and of being a part of a program which is cumulative through the years and can never be called a burden or a selfish exploitation.

The church of Christ is the greatest and strongest institution in the world to-day. Her representatives can "sell" investments—the greatest in present values (both in man power and equipment), in permanency (she will outlast time), and in productiveness (she increases all values beyond calculation). The church builds characters which will never die, but will live on in others, perpetuated to eternity.

A man's only justification for existence is his contribution to the great objectives of human life as stated by the Christ—the alleviation of distress, the destruction of injustice and evil, and the establishment of faith and peace and joy.

Be an active supporter of the church. You can't excuse yourself.—Selected.

THE "ACCESSION" STILL AT WORK.

Not so very long after eoming to Pearl River Avenue, the Lord really eonverted a tough railroad man, of sixteen years' standing, from a life of awful sin, and he joined our church amid tears of joy and the blessed conseiousness of the Lord's presence, and I wrote an article to the Advoeate entitled, "A Real Aecession."

On Sunday night, Nov. 23, this man came to the parsonage with another fine ehap of 31 to inform me of the latter's conversion—converted after the church service, and they awoke the pastor from sound sleep to tell it! The converted man said: "I've eome to tell you that I have to-night accepted Christ as my personal Savlour." On the following Wednesday night he united with the church, with his wife, who was a member of another church, following the following Sunday. He erected a family altar three nights after his conversion and is pressing right on up the highway! He was led to Christ by this first mentioned man, who has lived such a life since his conversion that no one who knows him doubts its reality. Since eoming to this church there are fourteen strong men who have been converted and joined the church who were outstanding sinners among their associates in McComb. Not one has gone back to the "fleshpots of Egypt," but are walking and living monuments to the supernatural saving power of God, and are one of the chief factors in the growth of our church attendance at Sunday school and preaching services, in the church making a positive spiritual impresslon on McComb, in the growth of finances, in a live and growing prayer meeting, and they have actually caused many others already in the church to get a good ease of religion! Glory to God!

We have been graciously and kindly received back the fourth year. How our hearts long for more sanctified common sense and the dynamics of heaven that we may lead a life so saturated with the Divine Presence and so in line with God's purpose that our fourth year may be crowned with heavenly success, and that many precious souls may be blessedly eonverted and sanetified wholly! Who'll pray for us?

Yes, and we, too, had a glad surprise at our last prayer meeting night, when my boy and I were asked to leave the church for awhile. Later, coming back into the church, I was informed that those at prayer meeting had decided to make me a present of a $40 overcoat. The leader of the meeting said it was unanimous. Well, I acted a little "cranky" and thanked them, and the meeting wound up gloriously! "Oh, happy day that fixed my choice on thee, my Saviour and my God!"

On the wing.

J. A. WELLS.

FROM NEWTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We were given a warm reception upon our arrival in Newton. The folks have been very thoughtful, and we are persuaded that "the lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places.

We found a great church here, and the congregations have been inspiring. The first Sunday we were here we received ten into the church through the Gipsy Smith meeting. I baptized and received into the church that day three men, each over 80 years of age. I wonder if there is another preacher who can equal that record. Every department of the church is moving along. The stewards have met and organized and begun work for the year.

Brother Alford Is in high favor throughout the district, and is doing a great work in these parts. The district stewards met here on Dec. 2 and accomplished quite a bit. Both preachers and laymen resolved to do their best to bring many souls into the church this year, and "level columns" to Conferenee.

WHY ATTEND AND SUPPORT THE CHURCH.

Because it is the only institution on earth that has the assuranee of permanence. Jesus said: "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." All men, everywhere are seeking stable institutions that can and will guarantee safety of their treasures. Christ Jesus pledges the safety and increase of all you commit to him.

Beeause of sueh men as William MeKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, the vast majority of university and eollege presidents, heads of great business firms, officers of nations, States and cities are church members, or were in their day and generation.

Beeause the church ean really minister to every need that may arise in the life of the individual—in the home, during childhood, in sickness, in prosperity or misfortune—and in the time of death it comes with sympathy, comfort and assurance. You will attend and support something. Why not the best.—Selected.

A CONQUERING FAITH.

Christianity Is not content to be merely one of the great religions of the world, it aspires to be the world-religion. There was a time when this was interpreted as branding all other religions as false, and Christian missionaries did not hesitate to say so very bluntly; but now we find a different attitude. There is no lessening of the claims of Christianity but there is a very distinct recognition of the truths which are embodied in all other religions, and we aim to win men by "sweet reasonableness" rather than by unsparing condemnation. Yet while this change has come over us, there is no thought of claiming for Christianity anything less than the right to be considered the world religion, adapted for all races and climes, and all ages and all eonditions of men.

"Go ye and preaeh," is still the message which stirs the church and sends forth the messengers of Jesus Christ into every land under the sun. It is true that we interpret "preaehing the Gospel" to include healing the body, educating the mind, and helping in every way to uplift men, as well as merely "preaching;" and our hospitals, our colleges, our schools, our agricultural plants, are all side by side with our churches trying to teach men that Jesus Christ came that men might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

We read the other day of a church which had no creed, and whleh seemed to hold even the helief in God in tentative manner; a church so broad it could embrace Mohammedan, Buddhist, Pagan, Athelst, and Christian. To us such a church seems a strange and unnatural thing, and its teachings would surely he both hesitant and nebulous. We believe in charity, a charity which is not restricted to any special creed, but this is distinctively Christian charity, and we confess that the teaching of Jesus is neither hesitant nor nebulous. We believe in God, we believe in Jesus Christ, we believe in man, and we believe in man regenerated by the Holy Spirit of God; and this salvation is for all men in all nations. We have proved the efficacy of this Gospel in doing exactly what it claims to do, and we believe that it is destined to conquer the world.—Christian Guardian.

FROM KENTWOOD, LA.

Dear Advocate: The Annual Conference always reminds us of a capricious Kansas cyclone, which descends seemingly from the blue sky, often with but a few moments' warning. It rushes through our streets wholly missing one house, the one immediately adjoining completely demolished, occupants killed or maimed, contents scattered to the "four winds." In a few moments the twister is gone and nothing in sight to show what caused the necessity of gathering up what is left and starting all over again.

The Methodist Annual Conference comes along every twelve months. Special-request basements, future-plan cyclone cellars, are of little avail. "Whither shall we flee from its presence?" It descends and beats vehemently for five days, then when the "winds and waves" recede we preacher folks find ourselves crawling out from the "appointments read" perhaps hundreds of miles from our new field of labor. We pack up what we must have (leave the rest for the parsonage to avoid moving expense), after a few fond farewells we "steadfastly set our faces toward" our new home and co-workers for another year.

Fortunately for us (perhaps others), our little parsonage was missed by the annual ecclesiastic cyclone and we found ourselves unmolested for another year. We were pleased to be returned to Kentwood for the fourth year. Some of the best reside here, some could be improved upon, including the "dwellers" in the parsonage.

Not having to rearrange our home furnishings, we have more time to plan the rearranging and reinstalling our church machinery, with a prayer on our lips and purpose in our hearts to make this the best year thus far.

The ladies of our church gave their "new pastor" a welcome reception. After many expressions of love and appreciation, religious songs and readings, and delicious refreshments, an "old-time quilting" was introduced, which resulted in a beautiful and serviceable friendship quilt being handed to the "Mistress of the Manse," accompanied by a cash donation of $35, with instructions, "buy what you need."

Dear Advocate, pray for us that we may be more worthy of the blessings of God, and that many souls may be brought within the fold this year in Kentwood.

We are planning a vigorous canvass for the Advocate this year.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. A. J. COBURN.

PARENTS.

By Margaret Slattery.

For many years I have been dismayed by the difference between dictionary definition of "parent" and the definition as accepted by the average group of men and women in the community. Parents, for all purposes of child-study, for consideration of child-welfare, child hygiene, recreation and amusements, school curricula, moral, ethical and religious training, even when meetings are held in the evening at the place and hour supposed to be most convenient to men, parents still seem to be mothers. Yet despite this rather discouraging fact, I insist upon following the definition of the dictionary and believing that fathers as well as mothers are parents, sharing equally the responsibility for the creation and preservation of the sons and daughters of earth.

I often look at various types of men and their young sons with deep interest and with earnest effort to understand. The boy perhaps has done something that at the moment displeases his father, and by angry, impatient word and gesture is sent hurrying from his presence; or the young son is asking the man who brought him into the world some question about this old planet upon which he finds himself.

I want to call out to the young father shouting at his son, "Now, I won't, ask your mother. Go to bed. You ought to be in bed now. No, not another word!"—I want to say to him, "Young man, just a few years and your son will ask you no more questions. You will give him a lot of information about life in general, about common sense and behavior, his behavior in particular. Information and knowledge will drop generously from your lips, but your son will not pay the slightest attention. Now is your great chance to answer questions. You would better take it."

But the average father does not take it, and the son goes to bed unsatisfied and rebellious, leaving me to ponder on the ways of parents with children.

In the first place, I can never, struggle as I may, blind myself to the fact that this man and this woman brought these questioning, wriggling, never-still-a-moment human specimens into existence. Somewhere along the way, they became thinking minds, human spirits, living souls. They did not ask to come. Only on the stage in the appealing and poetic play do little souls clamor to be born. No, you who are parents, you dared to launch these spirits upon the sea of human experience. They had nothing to say about it, they could not choose their parents, their race, their color, their social status. They had nothing to say about the time or place of the launching, not a word to say about the language they should speak, they could not choose either poverty or riches. If the sea of life should buffet them and the storms beat upon them with such fury that in despair one day they should cry, "I wish I had never been born," it will be a futile cry. You have made them live. You have forced upon them without their asking for it this thing called Life. Here they are—your sons and your daughters.—Christian Herald.

BORROWING FROM THE PREACHER.

We are prompted to tell a tale that carries its own moral.

It was at a board meeting at a certain church, located in a well-to-do community. Times had not been the best, the Sabbath offerings had been small, and quite a number of contributors were far behind on their pledges. As a consequence little had been paid on the pastor's salary for two months. And now the board was discussing what should be done.

Some young and energetic business men on the board wanted to go to the bank and borrow the $150 which would enable the church to square up all accounts and put it in the clear again. But a good old deacon, whose conscience on the question of churches being in debt to their pastors had been hardened by long years of familiarity with just this situation, stoutly protested: "Why, this church has never borrowed a cent in all the years that I have been on this board, and I object to its doing so now!"

But the young pastor spoke up quickly and said: "Beg pardon, my brother, but this church has borrowed money continually. It has borrowed it of its pastors! It has over a hundred dollars borrowed of me right now—and that without interest! And because of this fact, I have had to borrow $100 at the bank, for which I am paying interest!"

It was a pointed truth, and it went home to the hearts of the men on the board. They immediately voted that hereafter the finance committee should see to it that the pastor had a check for his salary every month; that every bill should be paid spot cash, and that arrangements with the bank with which the church did its business should be made to secure from time to time such short time loans as might be necessary to tide over the scanty periods, in order to make this "cash" basis possible.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

HIS MASTER PASSION.

"He was not only the great president of the British Y. M. C. A., but he was almost the president of British football." Thus writes Harry N. Holmes, general secretary of the National Council of the British Association, concerning the late Lord Kinnaird, who succeeded Sir George Williams, founder of the Association Movement, as president of the British National Council of the Y. M. C. A. He added that the town football club at Ipswich, England, had contributed $100 to the Y. M. C. A. "as a tribute to the memory of Lord Kinnaird and in appreciation of the good work being done by the Association."

Lord Kinnaird had two great enthusiasms which his active business life never dulled. These were Christian service and football. He was declared to be the best football player of his day. He was an all-round athlete. At Oxford he won the tennis singles two years running, won several swimming championships, carried off the international canoe race at Paris one year, and was a good sprinter. From 1890 to the time of his death he was president of the Football Association. But men who knew him declare that the "master passion of his life was the winning of boys and young men for Christ."

KEEP MARCHING ON.

By Ida L. Reed, in the Christian Herald.

What though the storm-clouds oft may rise
Above thy way?
Keep marching on; before thine eyes
The skies so gray,
Will brighten soon to rainbow hues
And thou shlat see,
Through rifted clouds, love's wider views,
And vistas free.

Art worn with burdens hard to bear,
Hope's light grown dim?
Keep marching on, God knows thy care,
Share it with Him;
Eyes forward move, though hard and slow
The march may be,
Thou'rt not alone, for He will go
Each step with thee.

Keep marching on through cloud and sun,
Each day will bring
Some hard task to its close, well done
And hope will spring
With each care vanquished, stronger, aye,
Till all are gone,
Lost in the light of perfect day—
Keep marching on.

THE FRAGRANCE OF THE HEIGHTS.

No fragrances, we are told, surpass those of many mountain heights. The flowers that grow there often seem predisposed to sweetness. Small in stature, they have not sacrificed perfume to size. They choose to be exquisite rather than simple. Hugh MacMillan tells of the Alpine forget-me-not, blooming so fragrantly amid the mists and clouds of Scotch mountains, of a Peruvian heliotrope on the Andes, whose purple eyes turn ever toward the sun and give out an odor so sweet and ravishing that the Indians regard it as a mystic spell that opens to them the gates of the spirit world.

In the highest zone of the peak of Teneriffe, far above the clouds, amid the fierce glare and drought of that region, there grows a wonderful bush, a species of broom, which in spring bursts out into luxuriant white blossoms that fill the air with delicious odors. The peasants, he says, bring up their bee hives from the valleys, and there for some weeks the bees revel among the fragrance and the nectar. Not the least remarkable thing is that these flowers of the heights seem to deteriorate when brought down into the valleys. For finest fragrance they need the heights, the open heaven of nature's high places.

It is a rare secret, this of the flowers, which a few rare souls seem to share—souls that dwell in the heights. Thanks should be given for all fragrant blooms and all fragrant lives which with never an effort to make an impression, by just living and growing, exhale the sweetness and radiate the life of light.—F. C. Hogarth, in the Christian Advocate (New York.)

ON HAVING SOMETHING TO SAY.

Carlyle once said: "The candid judge will in general require that a speaker, in so extremely serious a universe as this of ours, have something to speak about."

The editor was reminded of this saying of Carlyle upon reading the following from the Epworth Herald:

"A radiophan tuned in the other evening, and this is what he heard: 'It seems to me that the time has come, as I see it, when we must make a more careful survey of the conditions which surround us so that we may be able at the earliest possible moment to discover a satisfactory solution of the many complex and disturbing problems which confront us.'

"And the radiophan said, as he tuned the orator out and caught the whine of a saxaphone in Elgin, 'These highbrows give me a pain. Me for jazz; that's got a kick in it, anyway.'

"The unknown speaker probably felt that intoxicating thrill of the amateur broadcaster—the thought that thousands were listening to his voice. If so, he flattered himself. Most of them listened just long enough to discover he had nothing to say, and then by a twist of the dial they silenced him forever.

"They do it in church, too; and in League meetings, and in committees, conferences, conventions. The mind of man did not wait until the coming of radio to master the trick of tuning out on the speaker who has nothing but words.

"An audience will always listen to any speaker who has something to say and knows what it is. For all others the stony stare, the heedless mind, or the turning of a dial. By this or that, they're tuned out."—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

THE DARING ONE.

I would my soul were like the bird
That dares the vastness undeterred.
Look where the bluebird on the bough
Breaks into rapture even now!
He sings, tiptop, the tossing elm
As though he would a world o'erwhelm.
Indifferent to the void, he rides
Upon the wind's eternal tides.

He tosses gladly on the gale,
For well he knows he cannot fail—
Knows if the hough breaks, still his wings
Will bear him upward while he sings!

—Edward Markham.

VULGARIZING RELIGION.

I plead for spirituality, the return of awe, the sense of contact with God and the invisible world we worship. I do not mean by this the pomp of Catholic worship or the silence of the Quaker meeting house—these are extremes. But I ask is there no midway point between these opposite poles? Cannot we make a fuller use of beauty in our forms of worship? Cannot we make more of silent communion with God and less of public exhortation? Cannot we do much more than we do to cultivate the spirit of reverence in worship? There are many immediate directions in which this reform might begin. We can organize ourselves as channels of divine grace rather than spend all our time and urgency in organizing our churches into superb machines for the getting and dispensing of money. We can dethrone the forum and rebuild the altar. We set ourselves against all those cheap and vulgar methods of success which do little more than bring together a casual and capricious audience who in their hearts despise the very methods by which they are attracted. Let us rely on spiritual dynamics, and let us once more write over our churches the ancient words, which are the invocation of all true worship! "God is in this place. This is none other than the house of God and the gate of heaven."—W. J. Dawson, in the Century.

The First Gift for Houma from Many, La.

Mrs. J. H. McNelly, Corresponding Secretary, writes: "At the big meeting of the Missionary Society, Dec. 3, we gave five dollars to help on the Christmas fund to purchase an electric washer, and ironer for the MacDonell Wesley House, Houma, La. We only wish we had been finacially able to make the check larger."

* * *

At the regular monthly meeting of the Epworth Auxiliary (New Orleans) it was voted to send three dollars as their White Gift for the Wesley House in Houma. While this amount is small, it is sent with love and devotion. Other gifts may have been made of which we have no knowledge. Remember, no gift is too small—send as small a gift as one dollar if that is all you have. Every dollar received will mean more time for study and the real necessary things of life. Please send all checks payable to Mrs. H. L. Baker, Plattenville, La.

First Church, Baton Rouge.

The final meeting of 1924 of the Auxiliary of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge was held in the church parlors Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1924, the president, Mrs. S. Fairchild, in the chair. A short business session was followed by an election of officers, which resulted in the following:

President, Mrs. Sidney Fairchild.

Vice President, Mrs. S. T. Sanders.

Recording Secretary, Mrs. A. E. Fridge.

Auxiliary Treasurer, Mrs. W. B. Mercier.

Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. C. A. Battle.

Local Treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Chambers.

Superintendent Mission Study, Mrs. J. P. Shoefield.

Superintendent Social Serviee, Mrs C. W. Crisler.

Superintendent Supplies, Mrs. Frank Kean.

Superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. Irvine A. Robins.

Superintendent Local Work. Mrs. Frank Fleming.

At the close of the year we look back with a great deal of pride and pleasure to the splendid work that has been done. The Circles were in a great measure 100%. The offerings are larger, and more women are studying the Bible than ever before in the history of the church. The great advance during the past year has been made possible through the untiring efforts of our faithful president. She has served devotedly for three years, and has accepted the office for the fourth. She has been an inspiration and a blessing to those with whom she has been associated, and God has wonderfully blessed the work and her co-workers. One of the most delightful parts of the year's experience has been the loving co-operation of the officers, Circle leaders and each and every member, in every plan and suggestion made for the advancement of the cause. Figures feebly represent the great volume of love, faith and prayers that has been poured out by these officers. Their earnest devotions and efficient labors have made this year's report possible.

Let us begin the new year with renewed courage, strength and faith; may the plans, hopes and ambitions that have failed to materialize in this reach a glorious fruition in the next.

MRS. IRVINE A. ROBINS,
Publicity Superintendent, First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La.

THE WORK OF THE MISSIONARY AND BIBLE WOMEN IN THE WONSAN DISTRICT, KOREA.

Since seeing by radio has not yet become the style of making reports in Korea, I am quite happy, for I would not like to have to show you all the places to which the Bible women and I have been nor all the people with whom we have come in contact during the year. There is certainly variety in an evangelistic worker's life, and she never finds a place to stop, for there are always more sheep outside the fold, and those inside are always needing more help and teaching.

We started the fall's work with a Bible Woman's Retreat and Conference, which was a fitting preparation for another year of service. At this time we planned so that the Bible women might go to each church group of women and teach them for several days. The work began at the end of the fall harvesting and lasted until the Christmas season. The course of study used was the Home Bible Course.

In the Wonsan District we have twenty-four Bible women, fourteen of whom are graduates of our Bible Institute and are in charge of the woman's work in churches and circuits, while one is our district missionary Bible woman. Six of the women are undergraduates, and still three other undergraduates are younger women appointed as trial Bible women to travel with older and more experienced Bible women. These women and I take care of the work for women and girls in 113 Christian groups. Their reports for the past year show the following:

3,727 visits made to villages where there are believers.

9,936 visits made to Christian homes.

7,091 visits made to non-Christian homes.

1,168 visits made to homes of the sick.

2,631 Bible lessons taught.

617 new believers.

The above statistics show only what was recorded. There were numberless visits and deeds which the Bible women failed to keep any record of.

In my itinerating I visited 107 churches and groups of Christians in company with the Bible women, and instructed the women and girls in the Bible and hygiene. Sixty-seven of these groups I visited twice or even more times than that, traveling by auto and train, and where these could not go we made it by foot. In twelve I held Bible classes with the help of the Bible women, and only the fact that I was but one missionary instead of three and the hours of the day prevented me from staying at every church and teaching the women until their hearts' desires to know the Word were in some measure satisfied, because in the spring and fall there are only twenty-four hours of the day instead of one hundred. Everywhere we went there were women and girls begging for a chance to study. By hard sacrifice, selling their ornaments or household effects, a number of fine promising young women managed to come to the Bible school.

During the winter we had Bible Institute three months, with an attendance of sixty-eight. Having seven classes, including the preparatory and the special class for graduate Bible women, kept me teaching every hour of the day, from the close of our morning prayers until 4 in the afternoon, except on the days when the women have chorus work under Mrs. Turner.

Immediately at the close of our Bible school, we held our district missionary meeting, at which time the Sangni Society members raised funds for the entertainment of the delegates from the country churches. Following the district missionary meeting was our district Bible class, at which we had an attendance of 108 women. The early morning prayer meetings and the night services were the means of many hearts being made right with God and lives being consecrated for service.

Some of the younger women whom the Bible women had led to study, consecrated their lives for Christian work and needed further training in such a way that I felt we just had to begin to do something for them or we would lose them entirely from the work. Consequently I chose three young widows whom I term my "Sunchi Muri" ("Sons of the Prophets," but which I interpret not to be sons of the prophets but "Daughters of the Prophets"), and gave them the opportunity of special study, allowing them to work to make their board. My woman helper, who is the daughter of my oldest and most faithful Bible woman, taught them during the morning without any extra expense, and they attended night school at night.

Our Bible women have been the means of the progress and development in our Women's Missionary Societies, which grow in interest and numbers every year. It is through these that the country women get all their training for leadership in their local churches. We have now in our Wonsan District: 52 Adult Auxiliaries with a membership of about 700; 1 Young People's Society with a membership of 32; 25 Junior Societies with a membership of about 480.

To sum up the work of the Bible women and missionary, I may say our labors have been in the city, in the country, on the road, over the mountain pass, at the well, by the stream, in the church, in the home, in the field, in the pulpit when needs be; for one individual, for the few, for the many, for the Christian, for the heathen; in the morning, in the evening, before daybreak, at night; teaching the Word, preaching the Gospel, visiting the sick and discouraged, pleading with souls, seeking the lost, becoming all things to all women that we may by all means save some, remembering always the injunction of the Preacher in Ecclesiastes when he said: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the eveuing withhold not thy hand; for thou knowest not which shall prosper, whether this or that, or whether they both alike shall be good."

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted.—adv.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Snake Oil

Stops Chest Colds and Flu Quick.

Contains Coal Oil, Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus and other valuable ingredients. Will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes, goes to affected parts. Quick relief assured. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago said to be without equal. All druggists, 35c, 70c and $1.00.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out, and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Relief from COUGHS

Relief from coughs brings rest in the daytime and sleep at night. Since 1872, people everywhere have relied on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for bronchial, "flu" and whooping coughs; for tickling throat nervous hacking and sleep-denying night coughs; and for alarming croup coughs. More bottles used each year than any other cough medicines. Good for every member of the family.

Benefits both children and grown-ups.

THE CHILD MIND.

By Margaret E. Sangster, in the Christian Herald.

The mind of a child is a garden place,
Where the sweetest of flowers grow;
Where sometimes they live, in silent grace,
As a rose lives under the snow—
Where sometimes they bloom, these blossoms rare,
More wonderfully every day;
Oh, we who are grown-ups must take care
That they do not fade away!

We must tend the gardens with loving hands,
And gather the blooms with pride;
We must show that the kind heart understands,
With a sympathy deep and wide.
For a garden, to grow with a healthy zest,
Must know patience and faith supreme. . . .
Oh, a garden that's helped will do its best
To sparkle and glow and gleam!
Violets and bluebells and mignonette,
Thoughts that are fine as lace;
Pansies for dreams that one can't forget,
When glimpsed on a small child's face.
Lilacs and tulips and maiden-hair,
And lilies as pure as snow—
Oh, we who are grown-ups must take care
That the garden is helped to grow!

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE SIGNIFICANCE AND BEST USE OF CHRISTMAS.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Jesus alone of all born of women chose to be brought forth into our world. His birth was voluntary. The eternal Son of God became the Son of man of his own free will of love. He came not by constraint of necessity, but by the impulsion of divine care for men.

The purpose of his coming he declared when he said: "The Son of man is come to seek and save that which is lost." (Luke xix:10.) This he said with reference to both the salvation of children and the redemption of such sinners as the class to which hardened publicans belonged. (Matthew xviii:11, and Luke xix:10.)

The incarnation of the Son of God is heaven's proclamation of the lost estate of all mankind. No such stupendous manifestation of divine mercy would have been necessary to cure a slight disorder in the human race. As the highest mountains confront the deepest seas, the incarnation confronts the immeasurable, abysmal depths of sin. God would not have sent his Son into the world to be entirely and eternally identified with humanity, if any less person or power would have been sufficient to accomplish the salvation of men. On this high mission came he who was born at Bethlehem, and laid in a manger. To save the lost he came and lived and labored and suffered and died and rose again. Nothing less engaged his divine purpose.

Rescuing the perishing is the joy of Jesus. This is the teaching of the three beautiful parables of the Lost Sheep, the Lost Coin, and the Lost Son (Luke xv.1-24). The joyous refrain which belongs to them all is, "I say unto you there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." (Luke xv, 7 and 10.) It is not the gladness of angels which is thus declared, but the joy of the Redeemer in their "presence."

But the angels respond rapturously to the gladness of their Lord and, as he, they rejoice doubtless, in the salvation of men. It is no wonder, therefore, that at the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem "a multitude of the heavenly host" exultantly sang, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men!" (Luke ii:14.)

The incarnation stirred the spirits of angels as well as provided salvation for the sons of men. Wherefore angels and archangels desire to look into the things that appertain to human redemption. (I Peter 1:12.)

The spiritual interests of heaven and earth - the welfare of all worlds - are involved in the incarnation. In Christ are "gathered together in one all things which are in heaven and in earth" (Ephesians 1:10), and "of him the whole family in heaven and earth is named" (Ephesians iii:15.) The redemption of man is no provincial and planetary event; the incarnation is cosmic in its nature, and concerns the universe. Hence, "when he bringeth in the first begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him." (Hebrews i:6.)

It was no unnatural and disproportioned manifestation of celestial concern that angelic anthems broke forth above Judean hills when he was born.

The blinded world knew not what was taking place in the little town of Bethlehem; for it never knows the greatest things which God does until years have passed. But the angels of heaven who excel in strength and knowledge, apprehended the magnitude of the event there wrought, and they rejoiced with exceeding joy.

And the devout and worshipful Shepherds caught glimpses of his glory and answered back antiphonally to the angelic praises. "And it came to pass as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us." (Luke ii:15.)

CHRISTMAS HYMN.

Sing, Christmas bells!
Say to the earth this is the morn
Whereon our Saviour-King is born;
Sing to all men -the bond, the free,
The rich, the poor, the high, the low,
The little child that sports in glee,
The aged folk that tottering go--
Proclaim the morn
That Christ is born,
That saveth them and saveth me!

Sing, angel host!
Sing of the star that God hath placed
Above the manger in the East;
Sing of the glories of the night,
The Virgin's sweet humility,
The Babe with kingly robes bedight--
Sing to all men where'er they be
This Christmas morn;
For Christ is born,
That saveth them and saveth me!

Sing, sons of Earth!
O ransomed seed of Adam, sing!
God liveth, and we have a king!
The curse is gone, the bond are free—
By Bethlehem's star that brightly beamed,
By all the heavenly signs that be,
We know that Israel is redeemed.
That on this morn
The Christ is born,
That saveth them and saveth me!

Sing, O my heart!
Sing thou in rapture this dear morn
Whereon the blessed Prince is born!
And as thy songs shall be of love,
So let thy deeds be charity —
By the dear Lord that reigns above,
By him that died upon the tree,
By this fair morn
Whereon is born
The Christ that saveth all and me!

--Eugene Field.

Nor did the disguise of his lowly birth in a manger shake their faith or diminish their joy. "And the Shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things they had heard and seen." (Luke ii:20.)

In like spirit let us all go again to Bethlehem at this time when we celebrate the birth of the Savior, and return with heavenly joy in our hearts and fervent praises on our lips.

The season of the Nativity excludes by its holy nature and divine significance all wanton revelry and riotous living. It is a time for worshiping the Redeemer and pouring out at his feet the most precious treasures of adoring love. Nothing else comports with the proper celebration of his coming to earth on his saving mission.

Moreover, it is a time for telling to others the story of Jesus and his love. So did the shepherds on the first Christmas morning. "They made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child." (Luke ii:18.) The wonderful love revealed in the incarnation is not a thing to be appropriated privately and withheld from others who know it not; and they to whom it has come may tell it, be they men so plain and untutored even as the shepherds, the first preachers of the glad tidings of the Gospel.

"What we have felt and seen
With confidence we tell."

In all the year there is no season more suitable than Christmas for evangelistic services. What other time makes such an appeal to sinners to turn their feet toward the Savior who waits to receive them?

The only obstacle in the way of such use of the sacred season is the perversion of it which has been widely prevalent so long. It has been filled with profane festivities in which no slightest suggestion of its significance was called to mind.

Christmas itself should be redeemed from such unholy and common purposes.

Rightly appreciated, the Nativity calls every human soul to take the Christ out of the manger and enthrone him with royal honors in the heart.

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee, thy soul is still forlorn."

Indeed, it has been said most truly: "Bethlehem is now no longer his special birthplace. Wherever hearts are willing, there he is born; wherever he is cherished, there is his cradle; wherever he is reverenced, there is he wrapped tenderly in swaddling clothes and held to the hearts of men."

"O little town of Bethlehem
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by,
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

"How silently, how silently,
the wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of his heaven.
No ear may hear his coming
But in this world of sin
Where meek souls will receive him still,
The dear Christ enters in

"O holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
Oh come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel!"

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands.
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung hy the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born;
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations;
The dark night is ending, and dawn has hegun;
Rise, Hope of the ages, arise like the sun!
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
East, west, north and south let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of "Glory to God," and of "Good will to man!"
Hark! Joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us;
The dark night is ending, and dawn has hegun;
Rise, Hope of the ages, arise like the sun!
All speech flow to music, all hearts heat as one!

—John Greenleaf Whittler.

THE ROAD TO CHRISTMAS.

We have heen thinking annually in our hearts of all our friends and of the approach of Christmas. It is high time for us to consider the approach to Christmas.

The little hubhle of an earth on which we live has swung around its annual journey of nearly a quarter of a billion miles, held like a censer ball by an invisible tether to its center in the sun.

Set in the clock of the universe, it will not fail to hring round upon us all the royal birthday of God's dear Son again precisely on the hour, as in Bethlehem of old. It is all very, very wonderful.

Sitting in our homes, or singing in our churches, or walking in our little streets, with most of the practical forces and interests of our lives within a hall's throw, it would seem that we, too, could find the path to that appointment; and in the exact hour and joyous spirit of it all meet our heart's engagement in the royal drama re-enacted, as simply and nohly as those hlessed men and women of the first enactment—the shepherds, the journey-worn Wise Men, the old priest, the exultant women, or the stalwart Simeon in the temple. But some have heen disappointed, others bereaved; not a few say or feel that they have been disillusioned; and because wrong has abounded the love of many has grown cold. Alas, for us the arrival is not so easy. There are those for whom it grows less easy and less worth attempting with every annual return.

Where, then, is the vision, the approach, and the road to Christmas?

In boyhood when the ball was lost you turned hack from the futile search for a fresh look from the place where the thing happened. It is a good strategy yet. Stand vividly, then, once more hack in the temple in Jerusalem on those first Christmas days. No heaming star nor whir of angels' wings; no jingling caravan of the desert nor choiring host of the skies.

Only a man—a plain, good man, whose name was Simeon. And he had his sacred place, and he something more than happened to be there on that day. And out of his quiet life he saw and said things as original and far-reaching as any sage or angel ever spoke.

He begged to take in his arms the little Boy he found there; and, holding him up between the earth and heaven, he read through his pink flesh, as through a living prism, the higher and diviner meanings of our human life even from our mothers' arms.

That was a day for Simeon. We may not know whether there was evergreen on his cottage door and the Christmas riot of children at his hearth. But there was evergreen in his mind and the joy of the Lord in his soul over what he saw iu that precious Boy of the temple; and he told God and the world that day that he was so happy he could die.

Now, why? Where did Simeon get it? What was the approach of this plain man to such an extraordinary Christmas? In the quaint, almost monosyllabic account the lost secret lies revealed: The same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel. That is the record brief and clear.

It is astonishing in what innumerable ways we have missed the plain duty and priceless art of being just. We have sought friendship and prosperity in the market place and have sown injustice and heartache and disaster at our own firesides. We have mastered the use of ahout one-fortieth of the whole flexibility and effect of our bodies and our minds, and have tried to fancy that we are grown men. We have slighted the fellowship of God, cut the call of our neighborhood, lost the lure of nature, and scorned the heartstrings of our kin. Ah, here was one whole-hearted, clean-handed, affectionate, God-fearing, good man.

But, more than this, Simeon was devout; that is, devoted; vowed down to something. The man had not permitted himself to drift on without objective; and it was one which was big enough to make him at home in his Father's house. He woud not suffer the fraternal orders, good as they may he, or the infernal disorders, bad as they may appear, to dissipate his mind and spill his spirit till he knew not where his next engagement was, even with the church bells ringing in his ears. Here was a man who had got himself in hand, who kept the best and the most of himself for something that was Something.

Nor is that all. He was waiting for the welfare of his nation. The river of God's compassion for all sorts of people flowed by his open door. And, keeping his own life square, and his simple reverence clear, he yet bathed in this stream of sympathy also. His life, practical enough in its face-up of affairs, had been transposed from a beastly grab to a sublime give. The widowed seamstress in the alley knew and blessed his name. The rich young men in their passion and pride went out of their way to meet him in the street; tradesmen sought his judgment, hewildered men and bedeviled women his counsel, hoth childhood and age his company; his countrymen looked to him for quiet light in the troubled hour, and the jaded society woman pointed her son to him as an example of a considerate and genuine gentleman. There was no end to the growing use and welcome of him among his people, for whose happiness and progress, though they knew it only in part, he waited and lived and prayed continually.

And these for him—his justice, his devotion and his compassiou—were the road to Christmas.—Clough A. Waterfield, in "The Road to Christmas" (Abingdon Press).

KEEPING CHRISTMAS.

It is a good thing to observe Christmas day. The mere marking of times and seasons when men agree to stop work and make merry together is a wise and wholesome custom. It helps us to feel the supremacy of the common life over the individual life. It reminds a man to set his own little watch, now and then, by humanity's great clock.

But there is a bettter thing than the observance of Christmas day; and that is, keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for others, and remember what others have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you, and think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background, your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellow-men are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts, hungry for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is, not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book of complaints as to the management of the universe, and look around you for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and the desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front, so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, and a garden for your kindly feelings, and keep the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to helieve that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and hrightness of the eternal love? Then you can keep Christmas.

If you can keep it for a day, why not always? But you can never keep it alone.—Henry Van Dyke.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Yes, we like our new preacher. He can preach. He puts life, meaning, power and convincement in his messages. He is in dead earnest about it. The whole church is waking up. The Sunday school teachers have a new note in their teaching. The young folks, in the League, are sitting up and taking notice. Oh, church of the Living God, with all your modern business, your activities in fields too numerous to mention, your benefactions and your charities, give us preachers—men who can and will declare the truth through personality; men from whose hearts and tongues flow messages, warm, earnest, strong, like the sweep of some vast river; men who warm, encourage and help in the great, never-ceasing struggle of life, and men whose faith in His Word and in God the Almighty is so strong as to hold in deathless grip the all-sufficiency of the gospel in any and all the issues of living and dying. Teaching is great, but preaching is greater. The one informs, the other, under God, transforms; the one may hold men on to Christ, the other can bring them penitent sinners, weeping, to the feet of God; the one gives knowledge of divine things, the other is the power of God unto salvation. Both are factors in the kingdom, but never let one supersede the other. I covet for our church great preachers, men with gifts and graces who not only crystallize in character and personality these principles, but who can express them in thoughts and words that hreathe and burn. I was struck the other day, while reading the Book of Acts, how God sent angels to do things, hut left the preaching to such men as Peter, Paul, and their companions in the ministry. Nothing else can take its place.

This leads to more thought. The preacher is an ambassador for Christ. He sits in the council chamber of the King. His credetials are divine, authenticated by the seal of the Holy One. He should be humble before God, yet speak with authority to men. The pulpit is a throne and not a mere stand for a dialectician or a market place to peddle vagrant thought. You can't apply mechanical rules to preaching. Length of time has precious little to do with it. The length of a sermon depends on its depth, its breath, its life, its vigor. Why try to crib a preacher with an hour's measurement? He is talking about eternity and eternal things. This little span of earthly life, this measure of hours, days and years we call time, cannot be better spent than in listening to a real, live, earnest gospel message. Martha was not so much concerned about her housework when Jesus made that last eventful visit to the home in Bethany, but she was wonderfully concerned about the presence of her Lord. "If thou hadst been here he would not have died." The fathers and founders of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana were preachers—great preachers. With the mighty swing and sweep of living, moving, trenchant thought, they lifted their hearers from the realm of common life and bore them to heights where saints rejoice and break into glad hallelujahs of praise. Let me close with an exhortation: Preach the gospel, declare its mighty power with all authority, with all the blessed unction gathered from the place of prayer. It will win souls for Christ. It is God's way, and that surely is best.

WHO WAS TO BLAME?

On Friday, Dec. 12, 1924, the daily papers of Jackson, Miss., carried an account of a very sad tragedy, occurring at 7 p. m. on the previous day. Assuming that these reports gave the substantial facts in the case, the question, who was to blame, becomes a very pertinent one. I am discussing just one feature of this sad affair. I do not incriminate or exonerate either one of the principals. They were both my friends. The matter of investigating and passing upon this case belongs to the courts. My purpose is to draw a lesson which may in some way benefit the living. The facts entering into the case constitute it a very complicated one. The slain and the slayer were the best of friends, brothers-in-law and equal partners in a prosperous grocery business. Both were highly respected citizens, and very pleasant to deal with. So far as known, their relations—commercial, social and domestic—were pleasant. Neither one mistrusted the other.

On the fateful day, a traveling salesman visited their store. After the compliments of the evening, he drew from his packet a quart of grain alcohol, and offered a drink to the proprietors of the store. Each accepted. A crap game ensued. A dispute arose over a dollar. A fist fight followed. After some threatening remarks by the man afterwards slain, he left the store. The other remained, locked the front door, and went to the rear of the store to check up the day's business. After a brief time, the one who left returned, and while trying to unlock the front door, was attacked by the one from within, who had come from a side door to the front, was shot twice, dying without a groan or a struggle.

The slayer was then incarcerated and awaits trial on a charge of murder. The slain man was interred in Cedar Lawn Cemetery, Jackson. The heart stricken mother sits in deep sorrow and mourns the untimely death of her boy. The wife of the slayer, a sister of the slain, is overwhelmed with poignant grief, as it were with Scylla on the one side and Charybdis on the other, closely related and deeply interested in both parties. The third party in the case furnished the liquor. It is not difficult to see that the liquor caused the death. The law should leave no stone unturned to apprehend and punish the guilty person to the extreme limit of the law. The salesman furnished the alcohol, drinking and gambling ensued, the tragic death resulted, the mother, wife and other relatives and friends are in deep distress, the bootlegger free. Who is the greatest criminal?

Can good citizens wink at bootlegging, smuggling and using the outlawed stuff on the sly, seeing with their own eyes, in their own midst, the havoc and distress that follow in its slimy trail? Nay more, will our citizens be contented to be indifferent and inactive in the matter of the strictest enforcement of our anti-liquor laws, both State and national? Sympathy with lawlessness makes citizens morally particeps criminis.

THE LOSSES OF LIFE.

Life would be quite delightful in the living of it were it not for the detriments! The catabolic forces that pull down, early get in their work with the struggling infant, and continue through life, with fortunately some opposition from the anabolic, which build up. The human organism is all the while losing energy and would not survive at all were it not for the forces that recruit strength. As it is, many regrettable lapses and losses are all the while occurring. Many persons lose property—and even the loss of forty cents will throw some natures into an agitation far out of seeming proportion to the deficit. Others miss out on their health, and lose their tempers over a sliver, or a toothache. Others still find their friends dropping away from them, and are correspondingly depressed. Some persons take these losses philosophically—too philosophically, that is, contentedly, when the harm comes to others rather than themselves. But at best it is a pathetic reflection, which turns certain minds to cynical pessimism, that so many men fail to extract any real value out of life, and find that the values they do happen temporarily to secure soon fade or flit away. "Easy come, easy go," is too commonly characteristic of human affairs. Of late in England and America "stability" is supposed to have won in the elections which broadly means the stabilizing of favored classes in their copious holdings. Meanwhile multitudes of less fortunate people are in a state of unstable equilibrium economically, and even the rich are frequently plagued by the loss of health, friends, and fame.

There is another loss still more serious—and that is, of life itself. A pathetic instance is that of Captain Commander C. H. Graeme, R. N. R., who commanded the White Star steamer "Bardic," and lost his vessel off the Cornish coast last August. He was killed in the recent wreck of the Liverpool-Blackpool express, on a curve outside of Lytham. It seems hard that one loss should follow so soon on another, but sometimes a fatality has taken the righteous beyond the further reach of remorse, or touch of sorrow. There are so many factors with which to deal in life, multiplying all the while in this much motored age, that the human brain seems to reel in its contemplation of both the possibilities and the risks of living.

But of all detriments and misfortunes there is one that is worst of all, and fairly damning—that is, the loss of a believing heart. Death cannot kill a man, but doubt does. The shuffling off of the mortal coil that a man may put on his royal ascension robe is one thing, and not so bad; but to wander out of this world like a disembodied ghost let loose in a rayless, eternal fog is all the hell of which one might conceive. A Paul, on the other hand, could even contemplate the loss of all things so that he might win Christ. The choice finally comes to that—either Christ or despair. We are sorry for those who lose money, health, friends, or social position, but we could fairly groan over the state of such as, having lost all faith that this world can be better, and having no conscious interest in God or anything which God may be doing, look into the far future as into a mountain of mist, or a limitless desert where thirst-tortured and self-urged vagrants shall wander forever. If we have any faith in us, let us keep it, that it may keep us, and, whatever comes or goes, let us believe that life is worth living because God is and Jesus saves.—Zion's Herald.

THE PREACHER'S PREDICAMENT AND THE WAY OUT.

By Professor John Wright Buckham

The preacher of today is hard beset with competitions. On the right hand are lectures, forums, classes, concerts; on the left are plays, dances, motion pictures, automobiles—to say nothing of Sunday newspapers, cheap magazines, and third-rate fiction. Consequently, there is an increasing demand upon the preacher from a pleasure-loving people to furnish entertainment instead of nourishment, to give not bread, nor yet a stone, but confectionery. What is his recourse? There is but one. It is to continue to minister to what has always been and will always be one of the primary longings of humanity—the hunger of the soul. Through all changes and diversions this hunger persists. He who can satisfy it will be heard gladly.

Yet the minister of today may no longer give his message in dull, conventional, exhausted form and expect a hearing. It is his duty, his necessity as never before, to clothe his message in fitting, vital, expressive form. The age requires this. It will take no substitutes. It is tired of "glimpses into the obvious," platitudes, conventionalities, repetitions, refurbishings of other men's ideas and emotions. One need not be a pulpit genius to think and feel and speak out of his own soul, with a note of reality. But it requires hard work. No less than the most earnest attention to both subject and treatment will suffice. Care must be taken in regard to every separate detail. In the announcement of sermon topics it is essential to avoid commonplace on the one hand and sensationalism on the other. It takes but little study of sermon announcements to observe how rarely this is done. One finds plenty of colorless, inept, saltless topics and a sorry number of superficial, irritating, sensational ones, but few that are genuinely arresting, suggestive, and compelling.

The sermon itself should be no hasty, ill-constructed product of a few hours snatched from a life of distracting pursuits and plans, in which it occupies but a minor place. One should honor his pulpit with a deep and serious reverence. The preacher should ask himself: What is the truth that my people need, which will enlighten and enhearten them? When he has found such a truth, then let him ask: How may I present it—every sentence and word of it—in the very best way possible for me to do it? Upon that principle every man will bring the best he has out of his treasury and in a style of his own that will be an expression of himself. Less than his best no minister of today has a right to present. Competitions are too strong, the voices of our time are too clamant for the preacher either to miss his message or to fail to set it forth with all the grace and art that in him lies.—Zion's Herald.

PAYING THE PRICE.

Attending Brown University is a young man of fine health who has been selling his blood to help the doctors in cases of needed transfusion. He is a poor boy, and is driven to the necessity of doing something extraordinary to meet his expenses while in college. He gets $50 a pint for his blood. Last year he sold three quarts of blood. The athletic coaches found it out this year, and have persuaded him to desist in order that he might remain on the football team.

Here is undiluted pluck. This young man surely was in earnest about wanting an education. There are many fellows who have health and strength, but who will not give anything to get an education. Instead, they side-step the education, and hurry into business. The story of the Brown student should put to shame such sluggards in learning. Mental training for life's tasks calls for the strenuous in self-denial. We would not advocate selling one's blood, but we must admire the spunk of the fellow who thinks that he can afford it and is willing to do it.

Funds to help ambitious young men get an education are well worth general support and sympathy.—Methodist Advocate.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL SERMON.

(Preached by Rev. D. W. Babb at the Recent Session of the North Mississippi Conference.)

"For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."—James 4:14.

This text was provoked by persons saying they would go to a certain city, and continue a year, and buy and sell and get gain—"whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow—for that ye ought to say, if the Lord will we will live and do this or that."

The reproof was used both to remind them of the uncertainty of life, and that promises should have conditions in them, "if the Lord will." I fear that we are as neglectful in having conditions in our promises as those of that day.

Pardon a reference to myself. For many years I have tried to have a condition in my promises, saying, "If the Lord will;" or, in writing, following with "D. V."

The first impression from the text is shortness, or the uncertainty of life. But it suggests other subjects for investigation—origin of life; its purpose, and how is it being used.

As to its origin: We believe the Mosaic account as to how we were made; that God made us of the dust of the ground, as he made all other creatures of the earth; that he made man with every muscle, bone, sinew, and vein that belongs to man before he gave life; that he breathed into him the breath of life and he became a living soul; that by that act, he became a living soul, an immortal being, partaking of an eternal spirit, which shall never die or become extinct; that he made him in his image, and after his likeness. All of this suggests a noble purpose in our creation, which was to "glorify God in our souls and bodies which are his."

Hence the object of our being was for no mean purpose. Our life is from an exalted view of living. Our relationship to God ought to give us an ambition for a sacred life we could not have otherwise. When we remember that we are the children of God, that he is our Father, and that we are represented as the sons and daughters of his, that of itself ought to beget within us a desire to be as nearly like our Savior as possible.

Back in early life it came to me that if I failed to live the life my parents taught me, and to follow their example, I would reflect discredit on them, and bring sorrow because I was their child. In a much more important sense am I related to my Father in heaven by creation, love and inheritance.

How is life being appropriated? Many young people are going into the haunts of sin for pleasure. They conceive that young life is to be spent in worldly pleasure; and, sad to know, many parents encourage this kind of living and prepare them for it, encouraging them to attend worldly entertainments which do not savor in the least of Christianity and are hardening to their young hearts all the while against godliness, with the idea that they have plenty of time to give their hearts to God, and serve him. Oh, what a delusion!

I heard one of our evangelists say that he was holding a meeting in Arkansas, and that in his pleas for becoming religious now, he said, "You may die before morning." At that a young lady jumped up and whipped out, saying she had heard that all her life; before 2 o'clock that night she had died of sudden illness. He said he was at her burial, and of all the lamentations he ever heard her mother made them, saying she was the cause of her daughter's not being religious, thinking she had time enough. Mothers, take warning!

Others are spending life seeking wealth, having no object beyond this world, seeking it by all manner of means. Many are using the Sabbath as any other day, forgetting our Savior's question, "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Also forgetting, as the rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day, forgot his doom.

Others are seeking fame, advertising themselves, parading their ability, wanting men's praises instead of God's.

Man should never seek fame, but let fame seek and declare him. One of the most noted, if not the most noted, preachers the Southern church ever had in it was, to my mind, one of the most humble men I ever saw. That was Bishop Wilson. I have read his history, in which it is said he never received an appointment but he said it was too good for him, and many times he said he could not fill it. I shall never forget the first time I heard him preach. His subject was the Syrophenician woman's appeal to the Savior for her daughter, who was grievously vexed with a devil. He answered her not a word; and the disciples came and said, "Send her away, for she crieth after us." But Jesus answered, and said he was not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And then came she and worshiped him, saying, "Lord help me." But he said it is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs. She said, "Truth, Lord; but the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from the master's table." Then Dr. Wilson said (for he was not a bishop then) the woman's faith knocked through the outward crust of his sympathy and went to his heart, and he said, "Great is thy faith, O woman; be it unto thee as thou wilt." His unpretentiousness, his humility and depth of Bible thought marked him as a man of pulpit fame, which came to him, not as an objective, but unsought.

We conclude with the declaration of the text, "Life is a vapor," which is to indicate its swiftness, uncertainty, and a caution to use it right. One has graphically described it as a voyage to eternity; as a momentous probation; as a thrilling drama; a brief existence.

My desire is to spend life so that I can apply the words of the poet, and say at the end, "Come, angel bands, and bear me away on your snowy wings, to my immortal home;" or that the experience may be so thrilling that I may say with Bishop McKeudree:

"What is this that steals, that steals, upon my frame?
Is it death, is it death?
If this is death, I soon shall be,
From every pain and sorrow free.
All is well. All is well.
Adieu, adieu, my friends, adieu;
I can no longer stay with you.
My glittering crown appears in view.
All is well. All is well.
Bright angels are from glory come,
They are round my bed, they are in my room.
They wait to waft my spirit home.
All is well. All is well.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES.

To the Churches of America—Greetings:

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, assembled in its fifth quadrennial meeting, sends to the churches a message of fellowship.

Fellowship in the Church.

Sitting together for six days face to face with the great tasks of the church, the sense of our present oneness in Christ has become very real. We believe in the same God, are redeemed by the same Christ, are comforted by the same Spirit, study the same Book, offer the same prayers, sing the same hymns, strive for the same character, and long for the same Kingdom.

We rejoice in the same growing manifestation of unity in essentials shown in city and State councils of churches, in great federal missionary movements at home and abroad, in the earnest effort to find ways of giving organized expression to unity in village and open country, and in the great ecumenical gatherings soon to assemble.

The world is in desperate need of fellowship—conscious fellowship of men with God and with one another.

A world in quest of such fellowship must look to the church, for the church has found in Christ the true secret of fellowship. Through him we are brought near to God, and through him all cleavages of nation, class and race can be bridged.

Fellowship With God.

We call upon our churches to proclaim with fresh faith the unshakable conviction that only in a Divine fellowship can the need for human fellowship be met. "Our fellowship is with God and with his Son, Jesus Christ." Apart from this we shall seek in vain for real solutions to any problem. The fullest fellowship between man and man requires fellowship with God in Christ. This is our basic need. And this brings us to the fundamental work of the church—evangelism. We note with gratification the co-operation of the churches in this service, the concerted appeal to men to follow Christ and ally themselves with his church, the joining of the denominations in the Federal Council in simultaneous and united endeavors. We commend yet closer co-operation in order that the voices of all the churches may be lifted up in one common summons to men to turn to God.

Fellowship in Human Relations.

The issue of true fellowship with God our Father is fellowship with all his children. There is no more searching test of the extent to which our civilization is truly Christian than the measure to which fellowship has come to prevail in all the relations of men with one another. The fellowship to which Christ calls us is not for parts of life, but for all of it. It is not to stop at home or church—it is to reach beyond the factory gate, the national boundary and the color line. All the gulfs that separate men into self-seeking, suspicious or unfriendly groups are to be bridged by the spirit of fellowship that Jesus Christ releases in humanity.

Our industrial and economic life we must seek to build upon a basis of deeper fellowship. Unless brotherhood be a reality in the shop, the mine, the market-place—where most men spend the greater part of their waking hours—it is not likely to be a reality elsewhere. In this sphere it is the primary function of the church to infuse the lives of men with the spirit of God, thus breeding a race of men of good will, disposed, even eager, to incorporate the principles of Christ's kingdom into the entire social order.

Vicarious sympathy for all classes of men is a prerequisite for preaching the social gospel. Given that sympathy, let all ministers of the gospel call men to follow Christ in all social relations and in the practice of the stewardship of all that they are and have.

We gladly emphasize the fact of a steadily developing social conscience in our country, which actually, if not consciously, has as its underlying principle Christ's law of neighborly love. Our national prohibition law is a striking illustration of this new social conscience, which brushes aside without hesitation any claim of any individual to indulge any appetite or to perform any act which is a menace to the social order. The effect upon the physical, economic, social and moral life of the nation of this extraordinary effort of society to protect itself from the liquor traffic, has been so beneficial that it is now generally agreed that the law will stand, based as it is upon the unassailable purpose "to promote the general welfare." The present-day duty of the moral citizenship of the nation we believe to be:

1. To magnify the value of the principles of total abstinence, and the obligation upon law-abiding citizens to practice the same.

2. To make unmistakably clear to both the lawless sellers and the lawless buyers of intoxicants that the liquor traffic has been permanently outlawed in the United States as the enemy of society; and,

3. To urge local, State and Federal Governments to co-operate with increased vigor against the present organized resistance to the prohibition law, until as adequate enforcement of that law has been secured as of any other social legislation.

The modern world, now a single neighborhood, demands for its very life the acceptance of the principle of fellowship among the nations. In our world to-day what happens anywhere happens everywhere; what affects one affects all. We are all members one of another. Against war, as the denial of the Christian ideal of fellowship, we must hear clear and united witness. The voice of the churches is unequivocally for the pacific settlement of all international disputes, for justice and security to all nations on the basis of codified international law, for the outlawry of war through the development of international agencies for bringing aggressor nations under the collective moral condemnation of the world. Realizing that the present burden of armament not only means a terrific economic strain, but also fosters the militaristic mind and leads to an atmosphere of fear in other nations, we voice the clear call of the churches for a program of drastic reduction of armaments by all nations, in which our Government should participate, and if occasion calls should lead the way.

The fellowship which the Christian Gospel seeks includes all races. "Has not one God created us? Have we not all one Father? "Whatever superficial differences there may be, the body of humanity is one. For "if one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, and if one member be honored, all members rejoice with it."

Upon every Christian falls the personal responsibility to seek justice for all, to cultivate mutual appreciation and co-operation, and to dispel false racial pride or desire to dominate others.

Upon every minister of the Gospel falls the inescapable duty of leadership in promoting a common fellowship in Christ as the ideal in race relations. The Christian church cannot lower the standards of Christ. It is, therefore, uncompromisingly opposed to any effort, organized or unorganized, which creates or fosters racial prejudice and suspicion and destroys that fellowship which should characterize the family of God.

Religious Education.

From among the remaining tasks of the church we single out two which especially challenge co-operative endeavors, religious education and missions, both at home and abroad.

The urgent need for constructive attention to religious education calls for no argument. Upon this depends the moral and spiritual fiber of our nation. Here the sorry results of the divisions of Christendom are conspicuously manifest; because of them religious education has been all but completely banished from our public schools, to the grave peril of the nation's future. This is a sin for which the churches and the States should be called to repentance and to a conversion that should find some process in, or in connection with, the public schools, for matching intellectual training with that of the moral and religious nature.

More directly are the churches responsible for religious education in the home and in the church. That the competition for the interest of the child with growing multitudes of other concerns becomes more and more intense, and that the discipline of the home becomes more lax, only magnifies the importance of redoubled effort to stimulate in the home and provide in the church those effective processes of education which shall secure the spiritual foundations of to-morrow.

Missions.

Both at home and abroad the work of Christian missions is increasingly a co-operative task. In the interest of the strength of the denominations themselves, although yet more for the sake of the victories of the Kingdom, we urge the churches everywhere to co-operate with the mission boards in their purpose to avoid competitive overlapping on the one hand and consequent overlooking of less attractive fields on the other, and to arrive at effective comity. We would also summon the entire membership to the adequate financial support of the magnificent enterprise of the churches which seeks to carry out the commission of the Master to witness for him, beginning in our own community and reaching through State and nation to the very ends of the earth. The challenge is not alone that of a world in need, but of a world that is ready.

Finally, it is the call to fellowship with the Master which inheres in these differentiated calls. To this crowning fellowship you, the churches, are summoning yourselves in this fraternal greeting from your representatives.

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES IN AMERICA.

ARE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES ANTIQUATED?

The theological seminaries are deficient in instructing the future minister how to cope with the present-day problems of religion, though many have lately started to modernize their curriculums, according to a poll of one hundred deans and presidents of church colleges just completed by the Homiletic Review, a magazine for ministers published by Funk & Wagnalls.

A general complaint from the seminary officials is that the ministers to-day, due to a centralization in large churches, must be business managers as well as spiritual advisers, and that the theological seminaries have no equipment for teaching business administration. But a number of seminaries, the poll discloses, are now establishing courses in business management, including office organization and financial efficiency.

The Rev. Dr. W. Y. Chapman, President of Bloomfield Theological Seminary, in an interview quoted in the Homiletic Review, offers a graphic picture of why the modern minister may be deficient in his calling.

"I graduated from the seminary thirty-five years ago," states Dr. Chapman. "I was duly drilled in all the heresies and controversies of the church and the history of all creeds.

"I came out with a fairly good acquaintance with Arius, Pelagius, Arminius, and all the early fathers of the church. I was able to read the Old Testament moderately well in Hebrew, and the New Testament in Greek.

"My association was all the time with men, my preceptors were mostly old men, and after graduation I was ordained and installed over an organization, three-fourths of which were women and children. I had no idea that women had anything to do with the church except to sit quietly and hear me preach and serve an occasional supper of cold ham, creamed potatoes, and pie.

"In a word, I had no education whatever to fit me for the conduct of such an organization as a modern city church. There has been great improvement in recent years, and men have come to realize something of the needs of the present social body.

"The greatest defect of our theological seminaries lies in the failure to recognize the claims of present-day concerns and the adaptation of the Christian religion to the needs of our time."

Among other replies to the poll, Dean S. L. Soper, of the Kansas City University, is quoted to the effect that "The time has come when a new type of preparation for the ministry is needed."

Willard H. Sperry, Dean of the Harvard Theological Seminary, urges a closer bond between the spiritual and the worldly.

"All of our present confusion," Dean Sperry states, "as to the ideal theological curriculum arises from our impatience with a two-compartment world, where secular and sacred are kept apart. There should be a closer union."

OTHERS.

By W. L. Underwood.

Are you thankful, Oh, my brother,
For your blessings, so complete;
For a fond and loving mother,
Or her memory, Oh, so sweet?

Are you thankful for your loved ones,
So good and true whate'er betide,
For the Spirit of God above one's
Head, and ever at one's side?

Then make a feast, both bright and cheery,
For the poor and sick to-day;
Call in the needy, and make merry,
And let the spirit of Christ hold sway.

Invite not in your friends and neighbors
Who would no doubt return the favor;
Go, find the lonely one who labors,
And bring to her cheer from off the board.

"As ye would," the Master tells us,
Unto others" ye must do,
And our conscience oft compels us
To carry this blessed injunction through.

Then, others Lord, you others
Teach us their needs to see;
And by making them, "our brothers,"
We can be the serving "Three"

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Presiding Elders, Pastors and Boards of Missions, Presidents of Conferences, and Conference Lay Leaders of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences are called to meet in Jackson, Miss., at 9 a. m., on Thursday, Jan. 15, 1925.

W. N. AINSWORTH

SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

We, the members of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in semi-annual meeting assembled, send fraternal and affectionate greetings, and this special message to all our people.

That touching the matter of the pending plan of the unification of American Methodism while as individual members of the Church we reserve to ourselves the right to hold and maintain our particular conscientious convictions regarding the issues involved in the said plan of unification, we exhort our people everywhere, and especially those who, as members of the Annual Conferences, shall be called upon to vote on this plan, earnestly and prayerfully to consider its issues, and especially to ask for the mind and guidance of the Great Head of the Church, Jesus Christ our Lord, that a decision may be reached which will be to His glory and the abiding good of our beloved church.

THE LARGER CONSECRATION.

By Rev. Benjamin Copeland, S.T.D.

In faith and love and service,
Through Christ our Saviour, Thy dear Son,
With joy we own our wills as Thine,
O God our Father, Love Divine!

May we do we glorify Thee, Lord
Who faithfully in deed and word
Enthroning Thee in heart and mind
We show Thy love to all mankind

In lowly duties every day,
May we Thy blessed will obey,
Remembering Him who, for our sake
The whole world's heavy cross did take

In loving service manifold,
May we construe that song of old
Which heavenly armies shall never cease—
"Peace and good will, goodwill and peace"

May Christ's compassion kindness, grace
In every land find larger place,
Till all the world Thy goodness own,
And every life Thy love enthrone.

THE TEST.

A new religion came to me
With buoyant and radiant smile,
And at my door asked joyously
Just to come in and talk awhile.
The jeweled hands were fair to see.
Her white robe glistened in the sun;
'Twas quite agreeable to me
To listen to her silver tongue.

She spoke of wealth and health and peace,
Of pleasure and prosperity,
Of Love Divine which fills all space—
The only great Reality.
Despite her look, her smile, her speech,
My spirit shrank—strange to remark—
As one whose fingers reach
Some cold, dead thing amid the dark.

"Give me," I cried, "O stranger guest,
Before I entertain the plea,
An answer to this one request;
Dost come by way of Calvary?"
Swift changed her eyes from day to night.
Her smile to cold superior scorn;
She vanished from my wondering sight,
But left me neither sad nor lorn.

A shining presence filled the space,
A voice beloved spoke peace to me—
A Person rare of truth and grace,
Who came by way of Calvary!

COMING TO ONESELF.

In the oft-quoted parable the prodigal is represented as finally coming to himself—when certain things happened. Before that he had, as it were, misled himself. In the Far Country of sin he was not living up to his true inheritance, but was decidedly below par, mentally and emotionally. Yet all the while, though he competed with the swine for the scant carob pods, he was learning something. Experience is a dear teacher—yet there are few who love her! By the experience of poverty the prodigal came back ultimately to opulence. When he was in want his mind began to act to better purpose; out of a felt problematic situation arose the motivation to a higher life. Waste leads to want—and want may, by no means always, lead back to wealth.

"When he came to himself." There is in every man a better self, which must not be allowed to go on a vacation. Yet many men do in fact take a holiday now and then from decency and self-sacrifice. There are times when they are not at home to the appeals of charity, evangelism, education, or missionary enterprise. Perhaps they come back to such things after a time, but meanwhile they are on the absent list. Every pastor knows such dead-wood, or membership fiber which is not quite lifeless, but, like certain bulbs, is quiescent during parts of the year. There are, however, times of awakening, when the backsliders climb upward again. Revival seasons are needed, if there has been an individual or a community lapse from vital piety, but best is a condition of things where for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year a one hundred per cent efficiency is maintained.

The prodigal came to himself because he had a self to come to. If he had reflected, "I am a behaviorist, without a mind to behave," he would have perished with the swine, among which in that case he would have belonged. But he had an original, also ultimate, self to hark back to. Unless men have this original capacity for religion, and are capable of further development from their present stage of exuberance, our faith is vain, and our church endeavor a farce. Man is potentially religious; his nature is at base trustful, dependent, aspiring, loving; it is only when evil poisons the life that this fact of primal kinship with God is overlooked and overridden.

Best of all is it that there should be no prodigals—that no man's true self should escape him, or take a vacation from him. Prevention is preferable to rescue. To build stancher ships and man them with more skillful officers and crew is wiser than to erect life-saving stations to save people from wrecks that never need have occurred. To enforce prohibition is better than to have to send dissipated derelicts to prison. The recent Education Week was all but lost unless the occasion was improved to urge that the boys and girls be looked up and steered straight along the roads of advancing knowledge and widening duty. The world does not need prodigals, it needs men of power. Let us keep the original self pure and sweet and loving and superserviceable, both in ourselves and in others. We have nothing to do with the Far Country, unless it be to do missionary work therein. And whenever we do stray for a time from the right path, let us make haste to return and catch up with our ideal self that has meanwhile gone ahead!—Zion's Herald.

THE TASK OF THE CHURCH.

The prophets of old prophesied of the days of peace through the conversion of the implements of war into the implements of husbandry. No energy of man is to be destroyed; it is all to be transformed and sanctified. This is the process of God. He does not cut man off in his sin, but converts him. Man is made over "after the image of him that created him." God makes "the wilderness and the solitary place to be glad for them; and the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose." He did not smite Saul, the persecutor, but converted and made him preacher of his gospel. The enthusiasms of youth that often run wrong through self-will are just so much misdirected energy. The pleasure-loving spirit we condemn might be made a joy in the Lord, if properly directed. The church has no compromise with the world, neither has it any antagonism. The war spirit, the spirit of sport and of pleasure and all other expressions of human thought and energy so seriously in conflict with the church are in embryo the normal state of man. Their proper direction is the task of the church. The raging Niagara has been harnessed as power for man's service. The torrential mountain streams have been held in check for use at man's will to irrigate the arid plains. There are psychic as well as physical forces that may not be taken out of man or God's universe, but they may be converted. The task of the church is more than a technical conversion of man; it is the conversion of God's universe for the safe habitat of man. This process is the building of the Kingdom and the presage of Christ's reign among men.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

GRENADA DISTRICT NOTES.

The work in the Grenada District opens well for the new year. All the preachers are in their places and are down at the job. The contract for the new church at Goodman is being let at this time, the old church is down, and it will be just a few months till a new house will stand where the old one stood so long. Pickens and Goodman constitute a delightful charge.

* * *

A magnificent congregation greeted the new elder at Winona the other Sunday. He was happy to renew the friendship of other days and to look upon so fine a congregation.

* * *

The Sunday at Oxford was a delight. Rev. T. H. Dorsey has a strong hold upon the situation there. His three Epworth Leagues are unexcelled in these parts. His conference was largely attended and splendid reports were submitted.

* * *

Rev. W. O. Hunt is in high favor with the Abbeville people. The Winona circuit starts off well under the leadership of Rev. W. L. Atkins. He is living at Jackson for the present, taking a course at Millsaps College.

Out at Paris Rev. J. W. Raper, who had been kind enough to accompany the elder, added very materially to the pleasant occasion. We found Brother Brody greatly beloved by the people there.

Some of the finest people in this section live within the bounds of the Red Banks charge. The writer's first visit to this charge was most delightful. Brother C. M. Ray, the vigorous pastor, is entering upon his second year with high hopes.

* * *

Brother W. W. Woollard has captured Holly Springs. A most splendid audience heard the new elder last Sunday morning and gave him such a welcome that one turns back ever and anon along life's way to enjoy the fragrance thereof. Brother Woollard was away attending a meeting of the Committee on Appeals, but the congregation was at home all right.

* * *

The two churches at Water Valley, under the guidance of Revs. L. M. Lipscomb and J. W. Raper, are doing well. More about them and the other charges of the district at a later day.

* * *

The Grenada church is making fine headway. How could it be otherwise with such a combination as they have here? Rev. J. E. Stephens is chairman of the board of stewards and Dr. J. R. Countiss is a member of that body. The Missionary Society has just completed the raising of $1,000 for the endowment of Grenada College. The money was turned over to the school authorities this week. This fine piece of work was done in two months. Hats off to the Grenada women!

At the quarterly conference held here a night or two ago Dr. Countiss announced that of the 175 young women at the college, 173 of them were members of the church, and that so far this session not a single demerit has been given to any girl. The student body is a choice lot of youngsters.

Rev. Mellville Johnson is well thought of here, and is ministering to a most delightful people.

The meeting of the pastors here a few days ago was an occasion of pleasure and profit. Too many of the pastors were absent for it to have been entirely satisfactory, but it was more than worth while.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, was present, and gave us two most edifying sermons. Many years ago he was pastor of this congregation, and his coming at this time greatly delighted his friends of other days.

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference is called to meet in Jackson, Miss., Jan. 8, at 2:30 o'clock p. m., at the Capitol Street Methodist Church. I trust that each member can be present.

If any of the presiding elders have any changes which they would like to make in their missionary appropriations in the bounds of their several districts, or any other suggestions to the committee, we shall be glad to hear from them.

C. C. EVANS, President.

ONLY A DAD.

Only a dad with a tired face,
Coming home from the daily race,
Bringing little of gold or fame
To show how well he has played the game;
But glad in his heart that his own rejoice
To see him come and to hear his volce.

Only a dad with a brood of four,
One of ten million men or more
Plodding along in the daily strife,
Bearing the whips and the scorns of life,
With never a whimper of pain or hate,
For the sake of those who at home await.

Only a dad, neither rich nor proud,
Merely one of the surging crowd,
Toiling, striving from day to day,
Facing whatever may come his way,
Silent whenever the harsh condemn,
And bearing it all for the love of them.

Only a dad, but he gives his all
To smooth the way for his children small.
Doing with courage stern and grim
The deeds that his father did for him,
This is the line for him I pen,
Only a dad, but the best of men.

THE ROUND WORLD.

By Mary Whiting Adams.

"But why can't I have a wrist watch, mother?" asked Clara.

Clara was a girl who wanted everything she saw. Eleanor Irving, the girl who sat next to her in school, had a wrist watch on a ribbon. Clara had been looknig at it all morning. When she went home, she told her mother about it.

"You have Aunt Ruth's watch, dear, and it keeps good time," said her mother.

But after seeing Eleanor's watch, Clara didn't care for Aunt Ruth's watch. When her father came home she asked him the same question.

"Why can't you have a wrist watch?" Mr. Swayne repeated the question slowly. "Well, there are a great many reasons just now, I'm afraid."

"But I do want a wrist watch!" said Clara, her eyes bright with eagerness.

Mr. Swayne looked at his daughter quizzically. "The world is twenty-five thousand miles round, Clara," he remarked as he opened his evening paper.

Clara was surprised that her father should start to talk about geography, when she was talking about watches. But perhaps he would find a way to give her the watch, and was only teasing her. She would wait, she decided, and ask him again.

The next week Alice Earle had a new silver pencil. Clara asked her father to buy her that instead of the watch.

"It doesn't cost half as much, father, and it would be very useful in school."

Her father's eyes twinkled. "The world is twenty-five thousand miles round," he said again.

"But—but what has that to do with a silver pencil?"

"If you are as clever as I think you are," said her father, "you'll puzzle it out before long."

Clara wondered what he could mean. On the following Saturday she wanted a string of beads like Mary Keene's, but she did not say anything about it, for she knew that the only answer she would receive would be that strange answer about the world. Then Clara started to think about the size of the world—so many, many thousand miles round.

"No matter how big it is, though, it hasn't anything to do with a wrist watch or a pencil or a girl, either. It's too big. There are—why, there must be millions and millions of girls all over the world. One girl wanting a wrist watch—that's nothing.

Then Clara suddenly began to laugh. "That's what father means! If I can't have the things that I want, in a great big world like this, they are too small to worry about!"

"It is twenty-five thousand miles round, father," she said, as she sat on the arm of his chair after dinner. "I'm not going to fret any more about not having things."

"When I was a boy it helped me at times to think of the size of the world," said Mr. Swayne, "and that's why I am passing it on to you."

Fathers have had things to work out, too.—Queens' Gardens.

ISABEL'S BOX.

"I have come to hold you up. Stand and deliver!"

Isabel, at her desk, gave an exclamation of pleasure.

"Who but you would drop in on such a dismal afternoon! Pull off that raincoat and sit down this minute. I'll have Annie make us some chocolate for old times' sake, and maybe she has some little cakes."

"How do you know I didn't come for chocolate and little cakes?" Barbara demanded.

"Because you've just told me that you've come for half my wardrobe."

Barbara laughed, but the laugh changed to a pretty earnestness as she clasped her hands about her knees in her old, little-girl way.

"I want heaps of things—any warm clothes you have," she said. "Give me your old sweater—shoes—anything."

"Barbara, I don't see how you do it," Isabel said, slowly.

"Do what?" Barbara asked.

"Keep yourself—down in those grimy places all the time."

Barbara fairly rocked the hands about her knees now. "O, but you don't understand! If you only, only did understand, Isabel! They're exactly like other people. The girls down there love the same things, want the same things, dream the same things that people do on Van Vleet Avenue. They do, I tell you!"

"Books? Music!" Isabel suggested, lightly.

Barbara's eyes flashed. "You haven't any idea how they love them. You can't love them up here, where they're commonplace. You should hear Mary Silver tell about the one good concert she ever heard—see her grow red and pale with excitement over the memory of it! And Rebecca Lovinsky! I never knew what starving for books meant till I knew her. She looks at a magazine stand the way some people look at jewels."

"We throw ours away. You could have them every month."

Barbara held out her arms with a swift gesture. "You don't know how I need them. O Isabel, if you'd only give them all to me—all! O, can't you put them aside for me, dear?"

"Of course I will!" Isabel agreed. "What are you begging so hard for? I'll get you some this minute, you grasping soul!" She ran out of the room, and returned with an armful of magazines. "And I'll send you a box of clothes and stuff in a few days," she promised. "Now are you satisfied?"

"O, if you would?" Barbara cried again. Isabel did not notice the wistfulness of it.

She really meant to send the box. She answered Barbara's telephone messages with repentant promises. But by and by Barbara gave up telephoning. And then the winter set in, and Isabel was busy with a whirl of activities, and Barbara with a very different whirl. It was spring when they met by chance.

"You look tired," Isabel declared.

"It was a hard winter with my people," Barbara answered, soberly.

"By the way—don't you want some of my old things? Or some magazines?" Isabel asked. "I'll send you a box next week."

Barbara sighed.—Selected

A FULL LOOK.

As an aged Scotchman was dying, a friend asked asked him, "Have you a glimpse of Christ now that you are dying?" The man raised himself a little, and emphatically replied: "I'll hae nane o' your glimpses now that I am dying, seein' that I have a full look at Christ these forty years gane." If there were more men and women who were getting this full look at Christ, there would be more conquerors joining the ranks of our blessed Commander.—Record of Christian Work.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

The Advocate extends sincere and hearty Christmas greetings to all its readers. May the season be filled with happiness and joy, and may all the blessings that Christ has brought abound throughout the year.

CHRISTMAS AGAIN!

Of all the celebrations known among men, Chrstmas alone comes each year with undiminished freshness and the spirit of exhilirating joy. This is true because it is the celebration of an event that is without parallel in the history of mankind. Men had known of God, and to a few men God himself had appeared; but when Christ was born, "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth."

The simple significance of Christmas Is in the fact that God came to dwell for a season among men—to dwell among them in the flesh, to live among them as a man, to show them in terms of human understanding what God is, how he lives, how he thinks, how he works. Christ was not simply a man with a better understanding of God than other men—he was God himself, making himself of no reputation, taking upon himself the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men, that men might see and know God as he is.

The world to-day could not be the world it is if Christ had not come. Men would still be feeling after God, if haply they might find him—for the quest of no human heart is ever satisfied until it has found God. And the world can never be what it ought to be until all men everywhere have come to know Christ. What a world this would be without God in it! What a world this will be when God is in every heart!

Christmas commemorates an epochal event in human history. How strange that we should celebrate it by shooting firecrackers and blowing horns and by giving ourselves up to fun-making and frivolity! The deepest emotions of our hearts should be stirred by the profound significance of this season, and the incense of worship should ascend from the altar of every home, lest we come under the condemnation of those of whom it was said: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." The real Christmas will be celebrated by those into whose hearts and homes Christ has come.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, our pastor at Louise, Miss., is entering upon another year's work with encouraging prospects.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, for many years a prominent member of the Kentucky Conference, died recently at Morehead, Ky.

Union Theological Seminary, New York, has passed the $3,000,000 mark in its campaign to raise $4,000,000.

"We have been graciously received and the work is moving along nicely," writes Rev. H. B. Hines, from Springhill, La.

Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., has received forty-one members into the church since Conference.

Three members of the Mississippi Conference have appointments as general evangelists—Rev. D. E. Kelley, Rev. James M. Smith, and Rev. Earl B. Moll.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Vaiden, Miss., writes: "Everything is moving off very well with us at Vaiden, and we are praying for and looking forward to a great year."

Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, preached recently at Greenville, Miss., where he served once as pastor. The "Big Brother" says he preached a great sermon—which we can well believe.

Rev. Ralph E. Nollner is the president of the Interdenominational Young People's Commission, an organization recently formed to promote all the interests of the young people's work of the various evangelical denominations of America.

The Nashville Christian Advocate announces the marriage of Dr. T. D. Ellis, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, to Miss Dorothy Saunders, at Winnipeg, Canada, on Dec. 10.

In a note a week or two ago about the work of the D. A. R. in preserving historical spots in Mississippi, we mentioned Mrs. Somerville, "Jr.," as Regent of the Mississippi Division; we are informed that the "Jr." was an error, the proper name being, "Mrs. Keith Frazier Somerville."

Rev. C. C. Evans is beginning his fourth year as pastor of the historic Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss. He was cordially received by the people, and all concerned are planning for the greatest year in the history of the church.

The corner stone of a new $30,000 church at Bastrop, La., was laid on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 7, by Rev. N. E. Joyner, presiding elder of the Monroe District. It is expected that the building will be completed by Easter. Rev. G. A. Morgan is the pastor.

Rev. Felix R. Hill, who formerly served important pastorates in both the Mississippi and the Louisiana Conferences, has been transferred from the Florida Conference to the Memphis, and appointed pastor of St. John's, Memphis. Dr. Hill is one of the most effective ministers of the Methodist church.

Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, authorizes the Advocate to announce that Rev. N. M. Powell has been appointed pastor of the Plaquemine and Donaldsonville charge in place of Rev. R. L. Armstrong, who remains as a student in Southern Methodist University.

Rev. F. R. Power, appointed pastor of the Sulphur and Vinton charge at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, writes: "We received a cordial welcome on the Sulphur charge and things are moving off well, despite the fact that the mines have been closed down, which, of course, greatly cripples our work in the Sulphur church."

Rev. W. E. Thomas, of the Louisville Conference, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, was appointed a general evangelist at the evangelistic conference held recently in Memphis, Tenn. Brother Thomas is available for meetings in this section of the church, and those interested may address him at Nashville, Tenn., Westminster Apartments, Hillsboro Road.

We received a copy of the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference on Monday of this week—the first of any of our patronizing Conferences to reach us. It is fully up to the high standard long ago set by the efficient Secretary of the Conference, Dr. John R. Countiss, being well arranged and nicely printed. It is an indispensable part of the working tools on the editor's desk.

One of the most attractive Christmas greetings we have seen is that issued by the Great Southern Lumber Company, the Bogalusa Paper Company, Inc., and the Bogalusa Turpentine Company, Inc., of Bogalusa, La. It is printed on paper made in Bogalusa, and presents a beautiful picture of the nursery in which are growing five million little Southern pine trees, to be used in the reforestation program of the Great Southern Lumber Company.

We are indebted to Mr. John R. Pepper, the distinguished superintendent of the First Methodist Sunday school, Memphis, Tenn., for a beautiful booklet, "The Evolution of a Sunday School," which traces the history and development of that famous school in Memphis from the beginning to the present. Mr. Pepper has been superintendent since Nov. 1, 1880. A new building, known as the "Pepper Memorial," has just been opened for the work of the school. The booklet is beautifully printed and illustrated.

STATEMENT ON PROHIBITION.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

(Delivered before the meeting of the Federal Council in Atlanta, Ga., in December.)

The American people, by an unprecedented vote, have adopted the Federal Amendment, branding the liquor traffic as an outlaw—as the enemy of the physical, the intellectual, the economic, the social, the political, the domestic, and the moral life of the Nation. This action was not taken hastily, but after more than half a century of education, of careful study of the effects of the traffic, and after testing out of results following the prohibition of the traffic in the limited areas by local option and State-wide prohibitory laws.

The unverified charge of those who have declared that the law was "put over" on the people by the zeal of a fanatical minority is shown by the results of the recent election to be unverifiable, for the roll of the new Congress indicates the largest "dry" membership ever recorded, being over two-thirds in the House of Representatives, and three-fourths in the Senate; among these are some notable outstsanding "dry" victors where the prohibition issue was distinctly drawn. And the reason for this increasing majority in Congress is that now, after five years, a balance sheet, prepared by any fair-minded body of men, showing the benefits and the damages resulting from the prohibition law, will indicate such a tremendous balance on the credit side of the ledger that the possibility of the repeal of the law is dwindling to the vanishing point.

The closing of 236 distilleries, of 1,100 breweries, of 80,000 saloons, where over two billion gallons of intoxicants were legally sold, at an expenditure of approixmately two and one-half billions of dollars, to say nothing of the thousands of gallons illegally sold by multiplied thousands of moonsiners and bootleggers—a fact which many to-day utterly ignore—such action could not be taken by any government without producing results. "Lest we forget! Lest we forget!" How easy it is to forget and to minify the brutal, domineering, lawless, diabolical, soul-destroying character of the legalized traffic of the old days, because we now are faced with the defiant, desperate lawlessness of the outlawed traffic of the present days. Then we had destructive lawlessness, operating behind the cloak of license; now we have the same lawless element obliged to operate confessedly as outlaws. But let us not ignore or forget that the brand of the outlaw is there, and steadily, certainly, it is building up a wall of cleavage which the outlaws cannot scale.

In other days, we ate meals in restaurants, or in dining-rooms of small or large hotels to the accompaniment of popping corks, clinking glasses, and too often of shrill and boisterous laughter of drinking men and women. Intoxicants were openly served on dining cars, and at meetings of clubs and at social functions, and our children were brought up to think such things not only to be legal but simply a matter of taste. Some men may get intoxicated illegally to-day, but public social drinking is practically at an end, and the cumulative effect of that fact is tremendous.

In other days, there were in the most conspicuous, convening street corners of our towns and cities, bar-rooms, beautifully furnished with plate-glass mirrors, with row upon row of colored bottles of sparkling liquors, with orchestra and song, shouting out their invitation to our young life to come to eat, drink and be merry; and that young life came, and we had an army of thousands, and steadily increasing thousands, marching down to drunkards' graves.

To-day, there are places where, by wink or by nod, by hook or by crook, men can get intoxicants, and can assemble behind closed doors, to "make a night of it;" but its wide-open doorways, alluring every passer-by to enter in, are no more. The cumulative effect of that fact upon the social, domestic life of the average man, single or married, is again, I say, tremendous. And no voice to-day is raised to demand the return of the saloons. Even those who are most violent in their opposition to prohibition do not dare to advocate the saloon, but fail to tell what substitutes they can offer without the same necessary attendant, destructive evils.

In those days, the average number of arrests for intoxication in the hundred cities was 32.2 per cent of the number of arrests for all causes. In these days in those same cities, the average number of arrests for intoxication is only 18.8 per cent of the number of all arrests—a reduction of 45 per cent. In those days, in those hundred cities, an average of 17 out of every 1,000 persons were arrested annually for drunkenness. In these days only nine out of every 1000 are arrested annually—again nearly 47 per cent. It has been estimated by a distinguished judge that in the five years since prohibition went into effect there have been two million fewer arrests for drunkenness than in the preceding five years. The cumulative effect of such results upon individual and family life is, again, I say, tremendous.

The American Bankers' Association reported on Monday, Dec. 1, that in the past twelve years, the report from 31 States shows an increase in savings deposits from eight and one-half billion to twenty and seven-eights billions, and an increase in depositors from twelve and one-half millions to thirty-eight and seven-eights millions in 1923, an increase of 118 per cent in deposits and 300 per cent in depositors, and other statistics show that the most of this great increase has been within the past five years. Thus it appears that the great aim of prohibition "to promote the general welfare" has been accomplished to a remarkable extent, fully justifying its continued advocacy by the churches of the United States.

Take one specific example: The United Charities of Chicago has recently published a report covering the past six years. Chicago is a city of three millions of people, with large foreign populations, with its leading morning newspapers intensely hostile to the prohibition law, and any figures from that city cannot be considered unduly favorable to prohibition. The report states that following the passage of the Volstead law, there has been a phenomenal drop in intemperance equal to 50%. This increase in ratio of intemperance was accompanied by the lowest count of general and industrial accidents, epilepsy, insanity, feeblemindedness, illegitimacy, imprisonment, non-support, immorality and unemployment (and the report gives the figures for the six years, year by year); the report further states that the number of families receiving major service before prohibition was 7,597; in 1923, 1,950, a decrease of 15 per cent. Crime statistics: Murders (1919), 330; in 1923, 270, a decrease of 18 per cent; burglaries (1919), 6,919; in 1923, 3,019; robberies (1919), 2,042; in 1923, 1,102, a decrease of 50 per cent in both items.

Bank deposits (1919), $1,785,000,000; 1923, $2,212,000,000, increase nearly 25 per cent; savings deposits (1919), $355,000,000; 1923, $613,000,000, an increase of 68 per cent; built in Chicago in 1919, 1,736 single family houses and 292 apartment houses, accommodating 1,091 families; in 1923, 7,531 single family houses and 9,952 apartment houses, accommodating 25,918 families, four times as many single houses, 33 times as many apartment houses, and 23 times as many families housed in 1923 as in 1922. Such results in a city like Chicago must indicate to any unprejudiced mind what has happened, and is happening, throughout the length and breadth of the United States to-day despite all the exaggerated reports of smuggling, home-brewing, and boot-legging.

What shall be the attitude and action of the Federal Council to-day toward this, the greatest social experiment ever made by any great nation?

1. We trust the Council will reiterate with fresh emphasis its positive unanimous agreement with the great underlying principle of the prohibition law, namely, that no individual has any right to perform any action or to enjoy any privilege which act or privilege is a menace to the comfort, the safety or life of other members of the social order of which, whether he likes it or not, he is a part.

2. Also to express the great satisfaction at the benefits which have come to our people by this new and powerful application of the law of Christian love and service to the destructive traffic in intoxicating liquor.

3. That we also trust the Council will emphasize the obligation resting upon the Christian citizenship of the nation to secure an increasingly effective enforcement of the law. And this is made necessary by the fact that the people who want to drink intoxicating liquors and the people who want to sell intoxicating liquors have never yet agreed to submit to the prohibition majority. When quarantine or speed or traffic regulations are enforced restricting the activities of individuals, while there are numerous and continuous violations of these regulations, there is no organized effort of resistance, no organized effort to repeal or to nullify those laws. But there is a definitely organized effort to defeat and to nullify the prohibition law. There are more than a dozen organizations that are openly fighting the enforcement of the law. Ceaseless propaganda is carried on against the law, in the press, on the train, in the clubs, in business and social conversation, and it is declared in influential newspapers, both in editorials and in contributed articles, that the law cannot be enforced; indeed that it ought not to be enforced; the police are exhorted to wink at violations of the law, and judges and juries to acquit or to impose merely nominal penalties upon acknowledged criminals. Emboldened by such victories, unpatriotic, lawless propaganda and such forcible law enforcement, the liquor outlaws (dram-drinkers and dram sellers alike) resort to larceny, assault, even murder itself—the same crimes which characterized the abominable traffic when licensed.

The Council has already recognized its obligations to the nation in this matter, and has headed up a great Citizenship Committee of one thousand which has delivered a sweeping message of law enforcement in many of the cities of our country. We trust that at this meeting there will go forth a ringing declaration of our determination as Christian citizens that our prohibition laws shall be enforced as well as any other social legislation on the statute books, and that organized liquor lawlessness shall be made to realize that no minority element in this country, inspired by covetousness or appetite, or both, will be permitted to nullify the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America. There must be no weakening, no wavering, no ignoring of this great issue. Almighty God will hold us responsible if, having won a great victory against the forces of evil, we fail to conserve the fruits of that victory for our children and our children's children, and to maintain our Law as a beacon of hope for other nations who are struggling to free themselves from bondage.

DEATH OF REV. J. M. WYATT.

We stop the press to insert the following sad news:

"December 20, 1924

"Dear Brother Carley: Rev. J. M. Wyatt went to Heaven yesterday. He had made a very fine beginning at Tchula, to which he was recently appointed. In the midst of the preparation of a Christmas sermon, he was called to 'The Higher Place.' There was no better, truer man among us.

"For the second time within a year lacking one week—Tchula has lost a beloved pastor.

PECULIARITIES OF GREAT PEOPLE.

Daniel Webster had a curious fancy for painting the faces of his cattle; sometimes their faces would be blue and again red or yellow, just as the notion struck Webster to change them.

George Washington's favorite diversion was training foxes.

Peter the Great had a peculiar fondness for riding in a wheelbarrow, and often made the round of a big city in this conveyance.

Napoleon's favorite pastime was making puzzles that his comrades could not solve.

James Fenimore Cooper couldn't write unless he had gumdrops to chew on.

Grover Cleveland, like Webster, had a fancy for painting, but he took his fancy out on his children's toys.

Francis Bacon's hobby was designing clothes, and sometimes he would hire men to don the garments which he had created and parade the public streets in them just for his own amusement.

Abraham Lincoln had a fondness for wood fires. He got the inspiration early in life, and the joy of it never left him as long as he lived.—Exchange.

The subject of this sketch, JOHN FLETCHER BAKER, was born in Claiborne Parish, La., in August, 1826, and died at Jena, La., Jan. 28, 1924. Thus he was nearly 98 years of age. He watched America grow from a wilderness to a world power. He joined the Methodist church at 21 years of age, and remained a Methodist till the day of his death. We have never known a man who had more reverence for the church and ministry than Brother Baker. No preacher ever suffered at his hand, for he "reverenced them for their works' sake." He married Miss Sallie Davis, who was born in Catahoula Parish, at the age of 26. She lived but a few years, and to them only one child was born, Mrs. W. D. Boddy, Jena, La. After the death of his first wife, he married her sister, Miss Jane Davis, and to this union eleven children were born, ten of whom are still living. She died in April, 1919. Brother Baker was of Scotch-Irish descent, and thus represented some of the best blood America ever had, and was true to type. He ordered his home after the manner of righteousness, and the result is enough to encourage others to do likewise. Those of us who knew Sister Boddy, Will and Oscar Baker, Sisters Teddley, and Mrs. Aiken, can testify to the fact that he taught them much of Jesus while they were "growing up." Surely our Father said, "Well done," to him when he finished his journey. It was a joy to come in contact with Brother Baker. His wrinkled face radiated with the very light of heaven. He never really grew feeble. It was remarkable how he could get about almost to the day of his death. To see him surrounded by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, reminded one of the patriarchs of old, and he seemed sublimely happy on such occasions. During his day, great events happened, among them, the Civil War, in which he served as a soldier. He helped rebuild the devastated South, and lived to bear the sorrows of the World War. He was an honest man, and wore a mantle of truth. He was loved by all who knew him, and never tired in doing good to his neighbors. He was spiritual as a Christian, true as a husband, and faithful as a father. What more can be said! May his prayers for his children and their children be answered! We are comforted in the hope we have of seeing him again.

His former pastor,
HENRY T. YOUNG.

MISS CARRIE GREEN was born Sept. 20, 1877, and died Oct. 29, 1924. She professed faith in Christ at about 13 years of age, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived a faithful Christian life. She was a dutiful and affectionate daughter, kind and loving sister. Her thoughtful care of her aged mother was beautiful. She was always ready at the call of duty to do anything she could for her Lord. It was the privilege of the writer to be her pastor for four years, and to know her faithful, consecrated life, and the service she rendered to the church she loved so well. Just a few days before she died she attended a meeting of the Missionary Society; her sisters tried to prevent her going, feeling that she was not able, but duty called and she felt that she must answer. On the morning of Oct. 29, the Death Angel came for her, and she was ready. The end was peaceful, and her pure spirit went into the Beautful Beyond ready to answer when the last roll is called. The funeral was held in the Methodist church at West, of which she was a member, and the service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. C. Newman, assisted by Brother Ford, the Presbyterian pastor, and the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at West beneath a bank of beautiful flowers. May the Lord bless and comfort the loved ones that are left to mourn her departure. She has gone to be with Christ, and will be at the beautiful gate to await your coming.

J. J. GARNER.
Baldwyn, Miss.

EMMA DORA HIVELEY, daughter of Peter C. and Margaret C. Hiveley, was born on March 28, 1873, in Drew County, Ark., and passed to her eternal reward in Jackson, Miss., Nov. 14, 1924. She was the eighth of a family of nine children. Her father and mother having died a number of years ago, she made her home most of the time since with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Foote, of Cayuga, Miss. She joined the Methodist church, and professed conversion at an early age, and ever thereafter lived a consistent Christian life, beautiful in its gentleness, purity, and faith. On account of bodily affliction she was not permitted to take an active part in the affairs of life, but she patiently endured her suffering, and thus bore witness to the all-sufficient grace of the blessed Master. While her sisters and other relatives and friends are in deep sorrow because of her removal, may they find comfort in the thought that to her death has brought sweet release from pain and sorrow and all the ills of life, and transported her to the heavenly home to be with the loved ones who have gone before. Her remains were tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery at Bethesda Church, Copiah County, Miss., there to await the resurrection morn. Some day we shall meet her again in the heavenly mansions.

MY SAVIOR.

By Dora Greenwell.

"I am not skilled to understand
What God hath willed, what God hath planned;
I only know at his right hand
Stands one who is my Savior.

"I take God at his word and deed;
Christ died to save me—this I read,
And in my heart I find a need
Of him to be my Savior.

"And was there then no other way
For God to take? I cannot say;
I only bless him day by day
Who saved me through my Savior.

"That he should leave his place on high,
And come for sinful man to die,
You count it strange? So do not I
Since I have known my Savior.

"And O that he fulfilled may see
The travail of his soul in me,
And with his work contented be,
As I with my dear Savior.

"Yea, living, dying, let me bring
My strength, my solace from this spring,
That he who lives to be my King,
Once died to be my Savior."

FROM STURGIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please allow me space in our Advocate for a short report.

Mrs. James and I came into the parsonage at Sturgis, Nov. 12, shortly after Conference closed at West Point.

The people gave us a warm reception, and said many nice things to us. (You see, we had been close to Sturgis the last two years.)

When we first came some gave us some valuable things. On last Saturday, late, while Mrs. James and I were out in town for a short while, a committee, Mmes. Marsalis, Roberts, and Adams, had waited on the good people, and placed in the parsonage a small cartload of the nicest things in the way of a pounding, such as sacks of fine flour, several sacks of fine sugar, buckets of lard (not 5-pound buckets), quite a number of packages of fine coffee, one 100-pound sack of chicken feed, and many smaller articles too numerous to mention. In short, we are well supplied. We had no more than placed this all away, when some parties called with small paper bags filled with money, in bills and silver. You know this made our hearts glad. Many thanks to this fine, hospitable people. We hope to be a real blessing to all of them.

RING THE BELLS!

By Mrs. Alma Pressley Wilson.

Ring the bells! Ring the bells!
Christmas is here.
The day most exalted
Of all the glad year.
The holly tree glistens,
Sweet carols are sung;
Affection grows stronger,
And old hearts are young.

Ring the bells! Ring the bells!
Christmas is here.
There's a throb in our hearts,
And joy everywhere.
Friends welcome each other
And presents are given.
Happiness brings us
A foretaste of heaven.

Ring the bells! Ring the bells!
Christmas is here.
Hope gloweth with fervor;
Love casteth out fear.
Peal forth, O ye organs!
Ring out, ye bells, ring!
A Saviour is born
To redeem us from sin.

FROM BOONEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Adyocate: I have been a reader of you for forty years, and you are a welcome visitor in my home.

Our new preacher, Brother E. E. McKeithen, came to us on the second Sunday in November, and has preached seven sermons. He has made a good beginning took ten into the church last Sunday. We are expecting a great year. Our Sunday school is alive—made an average of more than 300 during the month of November. We challenged New Albany for a contest for the largest attendance at Sunday school and preaching for the next twelve months, beginning with the second Sunday in December, and they have accepted the challenge.

Brother Holder preached two sermons for us last Sunday and raised our quota of $350 for Grenada College. Brother Holder is always a welcome visitor here, and we love him.

Our presiding elder, E. H. Cunningham, preached for us one time on the fifth Sunday, and made a fine impression. He is a Booneville boy, having been born and reared near here, and we are justly proud of his record, and we feel sure he will make good as a presiding elder, as he has in everything else.

HARDY W. REES.

FROM RANDOLPH, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We received a warm welcome on our arrival at Randolph, our new charge. The people have been very kind and thoughtful of us. I don't think I ever served a more spiritual people than are to be found at Randolph. The Lord is certainly good to us. I already feel that a great revival is in store for these people this year. I ask the prayers of all who read these lines that I may not only preach the gospel, but live it before these people.

Our presiding elder, Rev. L. P. Wasson, is entering upon his second year with faith and zeal. He keeps close to the heart of the preacher.

May God give the Advocate a gracious year.

Your friend and brother.

THE ALPINE GLOW.

By Margaret Snyder.

No one can gaze upon the towering peaks of the Swiss Alps without having a profound reverence of God. We stood on the shore of Lake Geneva, straining our eyes to pierce the veil of mist which almost always surrounds Mont Blanc, when lo! for one brief moment, the curtain parted as if drawn aside by the hand of God, revealing that giant peak of the Alps as it reared its majestic head heavenward, and we felt as if we had glimpsed the infinite beyond the mists.

Sublime and awe-inspiring as these gigantic peaks are, there comes a milder, softer beauty as the sun dies in the west and the quiet of evening draws apace. As the last rays strike the snowy summit of the mighty Jungfrau, the beautiful valley below is suffused with a rosy golden light unlike any other light "on land or sea."

As he sinks lower in the heaven, the golden light fades into a misty purple; then the rose and purple merge into a glorious ethereal softness, like the light of dawn, that seems to fall on Interlaken like a benediction. The scene is one of surpassing loveliness as the last ray lingers for a moment as if the eternal God himself flashed back a smile to the world.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

CHRISTMAS.

The Christmas chimes are pealing high
Beneath the solemn Christmas sky,
And blowing winds their notes prolong,
Like Echoes from an angel's song;
"Good-will and peace, peace and good-will,"
Ring out the carols glad and gay,
Telling the heavenly message still
That Christ the Child was born today.

In lowly hut and palace hall
Peasant and king keep festival,
And childhood wears a fairer guise,
And tenderer shine all mother-eyes,
The aged man forgets his years,
The mirthful heart is doubly gay,
The sad are cheated of their tears,
For Christ the Lord was born today.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORDLEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for [illegible] ments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE..

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We have a standard school scheduled for Greenwood, Jan. 19-23, 1925. The following courses will be offered: "Pupil Study," Rev. J. E. Stephens, instructor; "The School," Rev. J. C. Chambers, instructor; "Missionary Message of the Bible," Rev. W. W. Woollard, instructor; "Beginner Department Organization and Administration," Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor. Rev. J. E. Cunningham is the Educational Director.

We are to meet for organization, classification and assignment of lessons at the Methodist church, Saturday, Jan. 17, at 3 p. m. Textbooks can be had Saturday when we organize. Class work will begin Sunday, at 3 p. m. Every person working for credit will be expected to attend twelve class periods.

TEACHING MISSIONS.

By R. G. Lord, Superintendent of Missions.

I have recently mailed out to all the superintendents of the Conference a pamphlet, "Plans Which Promise Progress." Be sure to examine this leaflet, for it contains very helpful material for your Sunday school. If all the schools of this Conference would adopt this plan and follow it in its suggestions, it would bring into our church a new day in the matter of missions. We have tried high-pressure drives and spasmodic efforts in our missionary endeavors, and as far as creating a real missionary conscience we have failed because we have not educated the constituency of the church. It can never be done in this manner. Let us use the only real educational institution that we have that reaches the large part of the membership of our church, the Sunday school, and make our church really missionary in attitude, aspiration, and activity. We have reached a point to-day in our missioonary work where it is educate or retrench. The people will not accept and endure any more high-pressure drives. But Jesus said "Go teach," and he was right. We will have to come to his methods if we do successfully his work.

Study for a moment the aims of missions in the Sunday school as given below:

1. To make the church of the future truly missionary in attitude, aspiration, and activity.

2. To make the missionary giving of the church an expression of deep and abiding missionary conviction.

3. To make the missionary activity of the church an act of genuine missionary obedience.

4. To speed the publication to all the world of the best news that ever came into it.

ONE HUNDRED VISITORS!

"Me, too, Pete!" This is the expression we boys used when we were attending the country school at "recess" when some bravado would accomplish a sure enough feat. Some fellow would cry out, "Me, too, Pete," and dash away and follow the leader.

Well, it is mentioned a little often, and I would think it got a little old to the laymen especially, as we fellows tell about the "poundings," etc., we receive. It's the spirit of the occasion that really we intend to talk most about—that's the main thing in such a "downpour" (not just a "grocer shower") as the pastor and family at Pearl River Avenue, McComb, received after prayer meeting, Dec. 17. We haven't had time to find the exact value of the downpour, but it's decidedly the largest we've ever had, and the spirit of the occasion was so soul-inspiring! The Baptist pastor, Rev. W. A. Gill, of East McComb, with some of his flock, was with us, and he, with others of both churches, made genuine helpful talks as to what our "Home-like and Growing Church" has acocmplished in the last three years in East McComb in particular, and all over McComb in general. We were very sensitive of the Lord's presence during the whole service. You will have to travel several miles to find two churches getting along better than the two churches in East McComb. Both pastors and people, as a whole, are looking for the imminent approach of Jesus back to earth, and this, especially, with other things in common, causes the two churches to be to each other as real brothers.

Another visitor: Monday night, Dec. 15, the man I spoke of in these columns who came to the parsonage to report his conversion, came with another man, who was seeking the Lord, and we all three prayed, and he "went his way rejoicing" after prayer, and said he was going to wake his family and tell his wife she had a new husband, and tell his children they had a new dad! Thank God! the gospel of Christ is still the power (dynamics) of God! I am so glad it struck me!

Looking unto Jesus,

J. A. WELLS.

"FREELY YE HAVE RECEIVED."

Christmas is not merely the celebration of the birth of Christ, but is a recognition of God's greatest gift to humanity.

Throughout the ages God has been giving himself, but men would not understand him. They regarded him as a capricious tyrant rather than a father. In due time he revealed himself as a father through his Son, and by making his Son our Mediator and Saviour God gave to the limit of omnipotence and divine love.

Instructing his disciples, the Master said: "Freely ye have received, freely give." They had received power to bless others. They were to give freely. The Master is quoted by St. Paul as having said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Evidently Christ's spirit is the spirit of unselfish giving of that which is best in us. God gave his Son to the selfish world and set an example of supreme giving. Christ gave his life, and through it his spiritual power, and can give nothing greater. To be Christian is to be like Christ, to give our lives unselfishly for others, and to find our lives in losing them.

Surely, at Christmas time, that spirit should prevail. It should be an occasion of joy because of our personal salvation through Christ. It should be a time of peace because Christ seeks to bring peace to the individual and to the world. It should be a day of giving because it is a celebration of God's most precious gift to us. As the incarnation is a recognition of motherhood and brotherhood, Christmas should exalt the home and human brotherhood.

Clearly inconsistent with its spirit are dissipation and ostentation, folly and fire-crackers, anything that militates against the spiritual significance of the day. At Christmastide, let us remember the poor, the orphans, the bereaved, the outcast, the down-trodden, the helpless. In order to carry out Christ's purposes let us pay our Centenary and Christian Education pledges. Let us plan for larger benefactions. Let us make Christmas truly Christ's day.

"Freely ye have received, freely give."—Arkansas Methodist.

GENERAL EVANGELIST EARL B. MOLL.

Rev. Earl By Moll, recently appointed a general evangelist of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was born in Defiance, Ohio. Before coming South, he was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, but joined the M. E. Church, South, soon after coming to this section. He attended Centenary College, Shreveport, La., two years, and spent one year in the Candler School of Theology, Emory University. He has had experience as a pastor. He was engaged in evangelistic work as a local preacher until he joined the Mississippi Conference, when he was appointed Conference evangelist. As stated above, he has recently been appointed a general evangelist. He has been very successful in his evangelistic labors. His permanent address is Box 175, Jackson, Miss.

The Centenary has developed responsibility on the part of the native church, which has manifested itself by a steady march toward self-support.

BILLY SUNDAY'S TRIBUTE TO THE BIBLE.

Twenty-two years ago, with the Holy Spirit as my guide, I entered the wonderful temple of Christianity. I entered at the portico of Genesis, walked down through the Old Testament art galleries, where pictures of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, Isaac, Jacob and Daniel hung on the wall. I passed into the music room of Psalms, where the Spirit swept the keyboard of nature until it seemed that every reed and pipe of God's great organ responded to the tuneful harp of David, the sweet singer of Israel. I entered the chamber of Ecclesiastes, where the voice of the preacher was heard; and into the conservatory of Sharon, and the Lily of the Valley's sweet-scented spices filled and perfumed my life. I entered the business office of Proverbs, and then into the observatory room of the prophets, where I saw telescopes of various sizes, pointed to far-off events, but all concentrated upon the bright and morning star.

I entered the audience room of the King of kings, and caught a vision of his glory from the standpoint of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, passed into the Acts of the Apostles, where the Holy Spirit was doing his work in the formation of the infant church. Then into the correspondence room, where sat Paul, Peter, James and John, penning their epistles. I stepped into the throne room of Revelation, where towered the glittering peaks, and got a vision of the King sitting upon the throne in all his glory, and I cried:

"All hail the power of Jesus name,
Let angels prostrate fall.
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all!"

THE RAG MAN ON THE AVENUE.

One day walking down Fifth Avenue in New York, one of the richest and most famous streets in the world, we saw a rag man in a wagon looking for old rags. His wagon was well filled with rags and old clothes, but he was looking for more—and he was finding them on Fifth Avenue. Rags on Fifth Avenue! Yes, rags and cast-off clothes are everywhere, even on Fifth Avenue! All the rags are not in the alleys and the back streets. There are people on the boulevards in rags. Many fine clad people in mansions wear rags on their souls. And it is bad to see any soul clad in rags.

But all the regalia of the rich, and the poor, will one day turn to rags. What costumes the select shops sell to-day the rag man will buy to-morrow, for it is but a step from the rich man to the rag man. The rag man knows this, and he drives his old wagon out on Fifth Avenue, waiting until the robes of the rich turn to rags so he can get them. But, thank God, there are robes the soul can wear that will never turn to rags. Many people do not give as much attention to the way they robe their souls as to the way they deck their bodies. But there are some who are weaving garments for their souls by the lives they live and the deeds they do, garments the moths cannot eat, or the years decay: garments the rag man can never get.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

LISTENING IN.

By Rev. Frank B. Hill.

Wireless science is developing at a pace which almost takes one's breath away. The press informs us every few days or weeks of fresh records made in long distance reception by amateurs; will the churches be compelled to take more notice of this new science, which is broadcasting services of public worship—hymns, prayers, anthems, sermons, to my own knowledge—a great help and comfort to confirmed invalids, and a source of inspiration to the aged, infirm, and other classes?

Gipsy Smith has just concluded his wonderful mission in the Albert Hall, London; it has been the most wonderful mission he has ever conducted. Not only have the eight or ten thousands of persons who attended the Hall been gripped by his message, but some of his songs, prayers, and talks have been broadcast, with the result of many conversions.

A New Zealand amateur has heard violin and pinaforte solos and songs broadcast from California, 6,000 miles away, so that the same musical program can be heard in China. Pittsburgh picked up and retransmitted in England has been heard by an amateur in Calcutta, a distance of almost half-way round the world.

Cape Town, South Africa, has heard Schenectady in New York State, 7,880 miles off; 2LO, the London station of the British broadcasting, has been heard in and around Johannesburg, South Africa. Glasgow broadcasting has been picked up in South Dakota, 4,780 miles away. A New South Wales listener-in has heard California.

So the story goes on from week to week; what would this mean to the missionaries' souls, their wives, the teachers, nurses, if occasionally they hear "London or New York calling" and hear some familiar preacher's voice?

A powerful sermon on Social Service was heard here (Lecompte) last Sunday, preached in Kansas City, Mo. May I pass on three verses of some lines copied from an Australian paper?

"Listening in—are you listening in?
When does the broadcasting really begin?
God in his heaven is speaking, I know—
What is the message he is broadcasting now?

"All shall come true as your heart may believe;
What is the wave-length your heart can receive?
Can you receive any message from God?
Can you make out what he's casting abroad?

"Crystal receivers your head should install;
Aerials of Hope you can tune to the call;
Shut out the noise of earth's traffic and din—
God's speaking from heaven—Are you listening in?"

Lecompte, La.

FAITH.

A call came over the 'phone, asking if I would be in the office at noon. I replied that I would, and asked no further questions. At 12:30 a well dressed young woman called, and I invited her into the office. In response to my question as to how I could serve her, she said, "I want to be a real Christian. Can you tell me how?"

I said that I surely could. She was a woman of fine character, and I found that she knew her Bible well and could quote many passages on the way of salvation. After some questioning I discovered that she would not believe that salvation was for just one individual, and that one herself. I told her of the Father's love in Christ Jesus, and that it was hers for the asking, and that if she would give her life over to Him in surrender He would take it and bless it, sanctify it, and even glorify it.

At this point she arose, and falling on her knees by the chair, offered as best she knew how a beautiful prayer of dedication. I noticed that full victory had not yet come, however, and after we rose from our knees I said: "Isn't it great to have one's life taken over by such a dear friend as Jesus, who will guide, protect, save, and use it to save others?"

A smile of triumphant faith lit up her face. I then knew that the battle was over. D. L. Moody.

THE REDEMPTIVE LOVE.

It is written unmistakably upon the pages of history that whenever and wherever Christ is given his rightful place, the souls of men come forth from the bondage of sin into a glorious liberty as sons of God. The world ever marvels as it beholds the living Christ. Sinful men, who had never seen him before, left all they had and followed him. A man whose heart was burdened by the taint of money immediately changed his occupation upon coming in contact with him. Throngs of weary and hungry men and women followed him into desert places to listen to his matchless words. It was thus during the days of his earthly ministry and it has been so through the centuries as his messengers have pointed sin-sick hearts to the cross of Calvary. Through Christ men of all nations and in every age find God. It is cause for deep gratitude and thanksgiving that our missionaries in home and foreign lands have been privileged during the last five years to lead an increasing number of souls to acknowledge their allegiance to Christ as Lord and Master. Thus the ever-living Christ continues to bring the redemptive love of the Father to the hearts of those who will receive him. Such hearts he makes loving and lovable. To follow him is to learn that love is the greatest thing in life.—Exchange.

HOW MEN FALL.

Men never fall from a Christian life as a meteor falls through the sky, with a sudden flash. Men go down as stars do, gradually and quietly. The act of prayer is occasional. The reading of God's Word is casual. Nothing is extracted from it. Men read it because it is their duty to read it. It is not food to them. Still less is its fruit luscious to their taste. They backslide, step by step, falling upon lighter sins, as upon a boulder, and then upon more of them, till at last they slip and spiritual death overtakes them.—Beecher.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

A Fine Report from Tchula, Miss.

The Methodist Missionary auxiliaries of Tchula, Miss., are closing a busy, happy year of substantial achievement for the Master, as was indicated by their final reports for 1924, made by all officers and superintendents at the business meetings on the afternoon of Dec. 8.

The Senior Adult group, led by Mrs. J. M. Bedwell, is a standard society with an "honor roll" record. All departments have functioned effectively during the year. It has a membership of forty-six active, Christian workers; carries a liberal local budget for parsonage, church, charity and social service needs; maintains a teen-age girl in the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson; has credit for donations both to the Grenada College and the Superannuate Endowment funds; and carries a voluntary pledge of $150 to missions.

The following officers will "carry on" for this active auxiliary in 1925: Mrs. J. M. Bedwell, president; Mrs. W. W. Gwin, vice president; Mrs. P. Y. Miller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Vol Bailey, recording secretary, with Mrs. J. N. Meek, assistant; Mrs. E. C. Foose, treasurer; Mrs. O. W. Nixon, Superintendent Young People; Mrs. B. F. Whitehead, Superintendent Children's Work; Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Superintendent of Study and Publicity; Mrs. H. D. Cox, Superintendent of Supplies; Miss Tommie Foster, Superintendent Social Service; Mrs. P. L. Banks, agent for the "Voice."

The Young People's auxiliary, composed of twenty-two younger matrons and girls, is a fine, enthusiastic group of workers, thoroughly alive to the interests of the kingdom as projected by the Young People's division of the Missionary Council's work. Mrs. T. J. Bogue has been its capable president, and Miss Tommie Foster its capable superintendent during 1924. The following staff will direct activities for another year: Mrs. T. J. Bogue, president; Mrs. Henry McGee, vice president; Miss Tommie Foster, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Henry, recording secretary; Mrs. H. W. Anderson, treasurer; Mrs. Harvey Harris, Superintendent of Study; Miss Blanche E. Whitehead, Superintendent Social Service; Miss Nellie May Banks, Superintendent of Supplies.

A Junior division of forty members, under the leadership of Mrs. Bessie Foose Whitehead, rounds out a fine missionary working force in Tchula.

MRS. J. M. WYATT,
Publicity Superintendent.

CHRISTMAS IN CUBA.

By Clara Eola Chalmers.

Upon the arrival of December the fields of Cuba blossom with the pretty white aquinaldos, which are said to announce the coming of Christmas. Our Cuban children are very happy and good, for they know the Christmas month has come and shortly after Christmas the three Wise Men will arrive with gifts for all.

The typical Cuban Christmas begins at midnight of the 24th with a most bountiful supper. Midnight Christmas Eve is considered a very critical hour, and therefore quite poetic to await the birth of the Christmas day at a heavily laden board almost literally flowing with milk and honey.

The principal dish of this unique midnight meal is a fat, roasted pig, with plenty of Creole sauce; a large dish of black beans is never omitted, and a salad of lettuce and radishes is considered indispensable. Other favorite dishes are added to these required ones. The desserts are served in courses, and range from cakes, extremely rich in eggs and butter, to assorted nuts and various kinds of Cuban candy.

Christmas Day is always a happy one. True, there are no gifts, but that comes later. The natal day of our Lord is celebrated by visiting and receiving visitors or by indulging in favorite pastime. During Christmas week greetings are sent to all friends and visits exchanged.

Christmas with its many delicious feasts once over, the Cuban children begin to look forward to the coming of the three Wise Men on Jan. 6. These Wise Men are Melchor, Gaspar, and Baltasar. Each child chooses one as his special wise man. One week before the 6th the children begin writing their letters telling the Wise Men just what to bring. The night of the 5th each one goes to bed early, but no one fails to leave his shoe with the letter in an appropriate place, where the Wise Men will be sure to find it. But before the little ones go to sleep mother must tell the following story. Dear children, the three Wise Men are three very good, old men who live in Asia. They love to make good little children happy. They spend their time during the year making toys for good girls and boys. On the early morning of the 6th they go from house to house leaving their toys. These good old men come from Asia through the air and can make themselves quite invisible and can walk in the air whenever they so desire. They enter our home through the keyhole, but should they see a light or some one up in the house they will not come in. Therefore, my dears, we must all go to sleep early tonight."

All are up early the next morning to investigate the gifts left by the Wise Men. At the end of this happy day the children sing "Christmas time, Christmas time, when will you come again?"—Missionary Voice.

BRICKS OR BUBBLES.

Said the little, bent deacon: "In doing the work of the world we need more bricks and fewer bubbles!"

"You see you can't build a wall out of bubbles. A bubble is too transient, too uncertain. It collapses too quickly. It is very beautiful, but it does not last. It contributes little or nothing to the weal of the world.

"Now, a brick is not so spectacular, but it is more useful, more dependable. Put it in a wall and it stays there. Through rain and shine, storm and calm, it is there fulfilling its little niche and doing its work in a right brave little way.

"You can't build a church—the church—'the pillar and ground of truth'—out of bubbles. I have seen it tried, and always with a dismal failure. I have seen bubble Bible schools, Christian Endeavor societies, choirs, elders, deacons, church members, teachers, preachers—showy, mushroomy things—but they all lacked the element of permanency, utility, durability. They grew up in a night, and perished while the day was yet young. Always there was an explosion, and, when the noise and confusion were over, one would say: 'Well, there's nothing left!'

"But there was something left," and the little deacon was straight now, and his eyes shone splendidly, "for down in an obscure corner, a few patient builders, unmindful of the tumult, were, in their plodding, old-fashioned way, using bricks instead of bubbles. And the wall which they built stood, and thus saved the house of God from complete wreck.

"Brethren, let's be bricks, not bubbles," said the little deacon.—E. C. Baird, in Christian Standard.

NEW POWERS FROM WORSHIP.

The Psalmist wrote: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God." The church ministers to this longing primarily; that is her first concern.

The thrill that makes soldiers steadier and bolder when they touch shoulders magnifies and focuses the impulse to worship in every member of a congregation. You know how you have often gone into a place of worship in an ordinary frame of mind, but the singing of a noble hymn, the utterance of a great Scripture, the hush of a simple prayer, and the light of a text through which you could see God, has touched some weakness, some sorrow, some hope of your own. All these elements of worship have their cumulative effect upon you, and you are lifted into new powers, new appreciation, and new directions.

Worship is always potential in that it may become a walk to Emmaus, beginning with a faith that is cold and dim, and climaxing in the warmth and light of an eternal comradeship. Thomas, in all probability, was not alone in the temple when he saw the Lord, "seated upon his throne, high and lifted up," and it is from public worship that men most often go with a sense of God which might not have come had not their spirits been stirred by the massed needs of the congregation, and the proportionate outpouring of the mighty presence.

The church alone is able to do for men, and in the doing deserves the attendance and support of every living creature. "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."—Selected.

Makes Old Folks Feel Young Again

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets in Great Demand by Aged People.

Nowadays old folks are increasing their strength and vitality by the use of Cod Liver Oil, which according to medical men is full of vitamines and is the greatest body builder in the world.

Of course they don't take the nasty tasting, evil smelling, stomach upsetting oil itself. Few sensible people do that in these enlightened days, when McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—sugar coated and easy to take—are sold in every drug store in the land—60 tablets for 60 cents.

Old people who want to keep young and vigorous as long as they can will find that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are just what they need to keep in first class condition.

Scientists tell us that "Cod Liver Oil is useful during every stage and age of life" but at no time is its wonderful building power more clearly demonstrated than in old age.

Why not get a 60 cent box today and increase your already decreasing energy and strength. Take them for 30 days and note the pleasure you get from feeling younger again.

There is no question but what they will help you, but of that you must be the judge—if they don't help—your money will be returned by the druggist from whom you bought them—for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are rigidly guaranteed. Be sure, however, to get McCoy's—the original and genuine.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of Uric-Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv

A CHRISTMAS WISH.

By Belle M. Blair.

My Christmas wish for you is this,
That you may know the joy and bliss
That comes from righteous living,
The sweet content that virtue knows,
The blessedness that ever flows
From loving and from giving.

May the Christ Spirit fill your heart
And to your soul the peace impart
Which makes life worth the living;
The peace that is without alloy,
That comes to all who know the joy
Of loving and forgiving.

—Selected.

STRANGER NO MORE.

By Amelia M. Starkweather.

This is the glorious Christmas morn,
The day of days when Christ was born,
And cradled in a manger.
He came that all the world might know
How God the Father loved us so,
The blessed little stranger.

The Wise Men knelt around his bed,
With angels hov'ring overhead;
The heav'nly choir was singing:
The Babe of Bethlehem is born,
Let prayer and praise the day adorn;
All heaven with joy is ringing.

—Selected.

AT CHRISTMAS.

By Alix Thorn.

In childhood days we listened rapt, to hear the little feet
Of prancing reindeer on the roof, who bore a treasure sweet.
For smiling Saint, with burdened pack and beard all snowy white.
Flew swiftly o'er the sleeping town on blessed Christmas night.

And still when comes the season glad, and holly berries glow.
When fragrant wreaths in windows hang, we still can thrill, I know.
And though we've grown sadly wise, and from those dreams apart
I like to think still Santa rides, straight into each one's heart.

—Selected.

CHRISTMASTIDE.

O sad earth take heart once more.
Let the warmth of Christmas cheer
Gladden all the coming year
As it never has before.
Let the words the angels sung
Dwell on every heart and tongue.

—Margaret M. Levich.

TO-DAY!

All round about our feet shall shine
A light like that the Wise Men saw,
If we our willing feet incline
To that sweet life which is the law.
So shall we learn to understand
The simple faith of shepherds then,
And, kindly clasping hand in hand,
Sing: "Peace on earth, good-will to men."
For they who to their childhood cling,
And keep their natures fresh as morn,
Once more shall hear the angels sing:
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born."

—James Russell Lowell.
